borne our griefs, and carried our sorrows : yet we did esteem Him stricken, smitten of God, and afflicted. But He was wounded for our transgressions, He was bruised for our iniquities : the chastisement of our peace was upon Him ; and with His stripes we are healed. All we like sheep have gone astray . . . and the Lord hath laid on Him the iniquity of us all" (vv. 3-6).

In the days of Isaiah the human conception concerning suffering was that it was penal, the just reward for wrongdoing. Such was the verdict the people were disposed to pass upon the awful, unique sufferings of Jesus : "We did esteem Him stricken, smitten of God, and afflicted." There is this tremendous difference, however : Jesus was bearing the penalty not because of His sins but for those of mankind. He was making atonement for sinful humanity. This was God's conception of the Saviour's death.

The New Testament gives a wider, fuller picture of the astonishing Saviour. Three aspects are now considered.

Proclaiming the Truths of Pentecost

Astonished by His doctrine

"To astonish" means to strike with sudden surprise, to amaze, to cause to wonder. Jesus did this by what and how He taught the people during His ministry on earth. Matthew records: "When Jesus had ended these sayings, the people were astonished at His doctrine: for He taught them as one having authority, and not as the scribes" (7:28, 29). "And when He was come into His own country, He taught them in their synagogue, insomuch that they were astonished, and said, Whence hath this man this wisdom, and these mighty works?" (13:54). For many years (some commentators declare since Ezra's time) the Jewish people considered the Scribes to be men divinely appointed to teach and instruct them. After listening to Jesus authoritatively expound truth they were so amazed and impressed by Him that they preferred Him to the Scribes, so much so that the Scribes decided to have Him put to death and finally succeeded in doing so.

To His disciples Jesus said: "Neither be ye called masters: for one is your Master, even Christ" (Matthew 23:10, R.V.). The Greek word for "master" means teacher, in fact, the teacher. The Saviour claimed absolute authority and supremacy in the realm of their thinking. He does this in the Church by the Holy Spirit and through the Word of God. This is given pre-eminence and predominance in the New Testament.

It is a cause for great concern when people, religious leaders in particular, cast doubt upon the authenticity, inspiration and doctrine of any part of the Bible. Their so-called elucidation of certain parts of the Word is in reality mutilation of it. The tragic use of Jehoiakim's penknife by the higher critics is very evident today. The king cut out the parts of the roll of prophecy not convenient for him to accept (Jeremiah 36) and, figuratively speaking, so do the critics of the Bible. They piously put the revelation of God's Word at the bar and reason, mere intellectualism, on the bench as judge. They treat revelation as if it were only an expressed opinion and not given by the inspiration and authority of God. If the truths revealed commend themselves to the reason of the critics they are accepted as authentic and reliable. If, however, any part of the Bible does not appeal to their reason they dissent from it or only receive it with certain modifications and mental reservations. In this way, whether the higher critics are aware of it or not, they make their judgment the criterion of the truth of the Bible and set themselves up as the reliable propagators of doctrine instead of submitting their opinions to the authoritative judgment of the inspired Word of God.

How unlike the Lord Jesus these religious critics are and how evident it is that He is not in control of their thinking, for unhesitatingly He accepted and testified to the veracity of the prophecies concerning Himself as the Son of God and the Saviour of men. He permitted Himself to be tested by them, for He claimed that their predictions concerning Him were literally fulfilled in Himself, that they were the incontestable proof that He was the Son of God. In this way He witnessed to their Divine authority and reliability.

There are, thank God, numerous Christians who never cease to be astonished by the stupendous revelation of the Word of God and who are so mastered by Jesus in their thinking that they believe unreservedly in the supernatural character of its contents, its phenomenal unity, the literal fulfilment of its prophecies with such amazing accuracy to the minutest detail, and its Divine authority. They never fail to be moved by contemplating the magnitude of the accomplishments of the astonishing Saviour in the lives of countless men and women.

Poll of American youth

The outcome of the Louis Harris poll of American youth, fifteen to twenty-one, done for Life magazine, was:

1. Only ten per cent feel their parents had been too strict.
2. Ninety-three per cent expect a "good" future.
3. Sixty-three per cent believe that society stresses sex too much.
4. Ninety-six per cent believe in marriage fidelity.
5. Ninety-five per cent believe that young people should earn some of their own money.
6. Sixty-six per cent do not think that marijuana should be legalised.
7. Forty-nine per cent believe needed changes can be accomplished through the existing political parties.
8. Seventy-seven per cent of all youth (fifty-six per cent college students) believe that religion is important to them.

CHURCH REPORTS

GREAT YARMOUTH Pastor : J. Flowers

A crusade conducted by Pastor J. M. Cuthbert and team provoked our heartfelt gratitude for God's good measure of blessing. A fortnight of much prayer and effort started with a day of prayer and fasting in the church when God came among us in a wonderful way. On the Wednesday Pastor John Harrison commenced a children's campaign. About 120 children attended each night. Their attention was keen as they saw filmstrips with stories that led them to the Saviour. The Sunday morning Sunday school has shown a marked increase. A number of parents attended the prize-giving on the first Sunday of the adult campaign. Numbers increased as the week went by and there were inquirers about the way of salvation at each meeting. Five believers were filled with the Holy Spirit. A number testified to receiving healing.

The campaign is continuing under the ministry of our pastor. May God continue to work with us and to cause signs to follow the preaching of the Word!

BOGNOR REGIS Pastor : P. T. Niblett

Elim Pentecostal Church held a special service at Victoria Drive Baptist Church. The first part of the service was the dedication of Gareth Philip, the two-month-old son of Pastor and Mrs. Niblett, and this ceremony was conducted by Rev. Alan Braybrooks (minister of the Baptist church).

The emphasis of the meeting then changed to adult baptism. Following his testimony Arthur Hawkins was baptised by total immersion. The youth group from the Elim church sang two songs. The sermon was given by Mr. E. C. Davey.

Elim Pentecostal Church was packed to the doors for the farewell service for Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Davey and family. They are moving to Worthing, where Mr. Davey works in the area offices of the National Westminster Bank.

The service was a complete surprise to them. Many friends representing many denominations turned out to wish them God's richest blessing in the future. Those who had known the family since they moved to Bognor gave special words of thanks for their faithful labour here.

Mr. Davey was a faithful deacon and treasurer at the church. When the church was without a minister for a number of years he valiantly continued in the role of honorary pastor.

A letter from the secretary of the Bognor Regis Evangelical Fellowship was read. It expressed thanks for the work he had done for the fellowship.

The Daveys were presented with a clock by the members of the church. It turned out a nice coincidence that it was also the birthday of Mrs. Davey.

Two of their four children were present, the missing ones being at college in Southampton and teaching in Guildford. Ann, who was present, was given a gift from the youth fellowship at the church. She began nurse's training at St. Richard's, Chichester, last week. The youngest girl, Cathy, has changed schools to Worthing High.

Reports from The Bognor Post.

How grateful we have been for the faithful labour of our members over the years. It is one of the great points of our movement that the members are so involved in God's work and that everything is not left to the minister.

P. T. NIBLETT.

BELFAST, Apsley Street Pastor : D. M. Provan

Three men worked so hard for three years under the severest difficulties far into the early hours of the morning. One can imagine their going homeward through the city of Belfast at the present time. Pastor David Provan and Messrs. Fred English and Samuel Seeds are the men who have been mainly responsible for the transformation of our church from a mission hall into a fine church. Towards the completion many church members gave of their assistance, thus saving tremendous expense.

Recently we had the joy of having Pastor G. Jeffreys Williamson, the Principal of Assemblies of God Bible College, Kenley, to reopen our church. Pastor A. Wilson, the Irish Superintendent, also preached. A full church was thrilled as these two gifted men spoke under the anointing of the Holy Spirit. We rejoice that God abundantly blessed.

As we go forth, we are not unmindful of the dire need in the area where our church is situated. We feel that God will honour us by souls being won for His Kingdom as we seek His face in earnest prayer.

DAVID ANDERSON.

BLACKPOOL, Marton Pastor : R. Clarke

At the commencement of our four-day crusade no one expected that it would be extended by one day so that four young people could be baptised. Work on extensions to our building gave way for our short campaign.

We commenced on the Saturday with a meeting that proved to be most timely. The series of meetings were such that the needs of the church were met. The evangelist, Pastor Tony Williams, ministered each night in the power of the Spirit. On the Monday night the Spirit of the Lord bathed the meeting with His presence. What a thrill it was when a number of youths from a nearby remand home gave their hearts to Christ.

It was a great pleasure to have with us a former minister, Pastor A. J. Downes, who led the choruses. Musical items were provided by the church choir and by Ruth Downes.

Towards the end of the crusade four young people expressed their desire to be baptised. It was decided to extend the crusade for one night as further work on the building would have made it impracticable in future weeks. Facilities for conducting the service were far from adequate, but the candidates were so keen to be baptised that they refused to be discouraged. Pastor A. Newton gave a helpful word on water baptism and each candidate a personal testimony.

R. CLARKE.

BURTON-ON-TRENT Pastor : R. Morrell

Our youth weekend was a great success. The visiting speaker, Pastor J. J. Glass, of Llantrisant, is lively, a very suitable person for young folk's work. The visit of the Leicester Elim instrumentalists added greatly to the Saturday evening meeting. Their singing of Gospel pieces and their accompaniment were all that could be desired. The Sunday evening service included the giving out of the Sunday school prizes. Our timbrel band rendered two pieces before the message. Pastor Glass spoke on Elijah and the prophets of Baal. Two teenagers were baptised in the Holy Spirit on Sunday night.

B. GREENING.

THORNTON HEATH Pastor : W. G. Blackler

Pastor and Mrs. A. P. Johnston, Elizabeth and Roy bade farewell to us after a period of progress and challenge. Tribute was paid to them in the valedictory meeting. A cheque was presented to them on behalf of the church as well as gifts from the young people and the sisterhood. We were exhorted to be much in prayer for the campaign in South Shields, where Pastor and Mrs. Johnston have gone.

On the following Tuesday the Induction Service was held for Pastor W. G. Blackler, who, with his wife, Simon and Christopher, have taken up the ministry here. The District Superintendent, Pastor W. J. Maybin, convened the meeting and welcomes to the Presbytery by Pastor I. R. Moore and to the church by the Secretary, Mr. R. F. Hill, were expressed. Our speaker was Pastor G. W. Gilpin, who based his thoughts on Deuteronomy 1 : 6. A large group of our young people rendered a number of items in song, which brought blessing.

We thank God for the past ministry of God's servant. We look forward to the coming days of opportunity to serve the Lord together with our new minister and his wife and family.

Pastor : D. O. Ward

The theme chorus for our spring convention was : " Let the dew of heaven fall upon my thirsty soul "—and how God answered this prayer !

Prior to the convention our pastor conducted two baptismal services for six candidates. About twenty young people were brought to the second service through the testimony of their school teacher, Miss M. Templeton. Many of these returned to her home for fellowship and prayer and one received the baptism in the Holy Spirit. One called on our pastor next day for prayer and at 11 o'clock the same night this sister received the blessing and continued in prayer and praise until 5 a.m.

Expectation was high therefore as our pastor opened the first service of our convention, Pastor J. R. Brown being the speaker. Taking as his subject " The Challenge of Elijah " he preached with fervour. Prior to the message Pastor Ward sang " Lord, it is I who need Thy love."

On Sunday morning as we gathered around the Lord's Table our pastor spoke on " Preserved in Christ."

One outstanding feature of our convention was the ministry of God's Word recently presented by the pastor being confirmed by our visiting speakers—unknown, of course, to them.

On Sunday evening a warm welcome was given to Elim's President, T. W. Walker, and to the singing group from Newton Park College who sang four items with two guitar accompaniment. Our hearts were thrilled as Pastor Walker, with his wonderful command of the English language plus the wonderful anointing of the Holy Spirit, ministered to us. Preaching from Acts 1:1-8, he introduced a six-part outline and time passed so quickly that he had to continue on Monday night. When that great gathering arrived, it closed with the message still not finished—perhaps we shall have to wait until next year! Pastor Walker's closing appeal to churches and to individuals was that the need of Pentecost was the same in A.D. 1972 as it was in A.D. 72. He challenged young people to a modern witness even "to the uttermost parts of the earth."

On the Monday we had one of the largest congregations for years, supported by Pastors F. Lavender and B. L. T. Wall and friends from the West of England Presbytery.

Musical items were by Mrs. M. Wall, Swindon Elim Choir (conductor: Mr. D. Butler), and Mr. James McRoberts and Mr. J. Felstead. Miss Joan Garraway was at the Hammond organ. After a testimony by Mr. McRoberts, Pastor Ward led special prayer for revival in Ireland. Refreshments provided (as usual) by Mr. and Mrs. A. Day combined with sweet fellowship, as the blessings of the day were recalled.

HARLOW

Pastor: R. Mussared

The weather was kind and a good company of friends gathered for the opening of the new Harlow church building.

The well-appointed building seats over 100 persons. It stands in its own grounds and is the first phase of what will eventually become a combined larger church and minor hall.

Pastor John C. Smyth received the key from the builder, Mr. Howard Ward, and offered the dedicatory prayer.

The opening service was convened by the District Superintendent, Pastor F. H. Coleman. The minister of St. Paul's Church, Canon D. M. Knight, brought greetings from local churches. Mr. C. J. Pendrill, on behalf of the presbytery, paid tribute to the pastor, deacons and members whose enthusiasm and sacrificial giving had made the building possible. For six years they worshipped in a small British Legion hut under the leadership of Mr. Ron Mussared. Their patience and loyalty are now rewarded.

Mr. Ron Mussared gave an account of the work at Harlow from its humble beginnings with the meeting of two families and its growth through Sunday school activities. He paid tribute to the architect and to the high standard of workmanship in the building.

Pastor Smyth challenged the congregation from Matthew 5:13, 14: "Ye are the salt of the earth" and "Ye are the light of the world."

The evening service was convened by Pastor J. F. Hardman and Pastor John Smyth in his message clearly defined the preparation, participation and prize in the Christian race (1 Corinthians 9:24-26). Appropriate musical items were rendered by Mr. F. W. Harris and by a student trio from All Nations Christian College. Pastor Glyn Taylor conducted the services for the first Sunday in the new church.

To God be the glory!

HALIFAX

Pastor: G. H. Wallace

The Halifax church will miss the fellowship of Mrs. Clara Richardson, a founder trustee, who was a member of the Emmaus Mission under the ministry of Mrs. Walshaw before the work was passed over to Elim in 1931.

She opened our new church building in Hall Street on October 17th, 1970, and, though ill at the time, she stayed through the service. The trustees have met in her home several times during her long illness as for some time she had been confined to her bed. Looking to the Lord to take her home, she had the desire that this would be on a Sunday. The call came just before 10.30 a.m., the time when she usually entered the church for the Sunday morning service. Pastor H. Womersley reminded us in his address at the funeral service that it was on Whit-Sunday, the day we celebrate the birthday of the Church at Pentecost.

We all feel her loss, but her life of gentleness and patience will always be an inspiration to us and a challenge to our members. She was a lovely example of a disciple of Christ in these troublous times.

She leaves a son, three daughters, grandchildren and great-grandchildren. She was faithfully nursed through her long illness by her daughter, Mrs. Ruth Cloke. The writer has lost a very dear lifelong friend. The fragrance of her life will linger long in the lives of those of us who knew and loved her.

Dr. Billy Graham's visit to Ireland

by W. J. Maybin

IT was my privilege to represent the Editor at a press conference held at London airport on Billy Graham's return from Ireland. It was good to see him looking so well and to hear him deliberate with such caution and concern about his visit.

Among the Christian leaders in attendance were Bishop Goodwin Hudson, the Bishop of Norwich (Rev. Maurice Wood), Canon Livermore, Dr. Eric Hutchings, Sir Eric Richardson and representatives from the Evangelical Alliance and the World Council of Churches.

Dr. Graham said that he visited Ireland at the end of an extended visit by some of his colleagues in response to pressing invitations from both sides of the border, including Protestants and Roman Catholics. He conferred with religious leaders and leaders of nearly every faction, both in private and in semi-private meetings. His most significant confrontations were with working-class people in the streets of Belfast, following tragic explosions. He knelt with people and prayed. He talked with British soldiers and knelt and prayed with some of them while on sentry duty. Whatever public opinion may be about this visit, efforts of this nature bring untold good.

He had not gone to Ireland with any political solution, but to share his love and concern with the people. The distress in Ireland and elsewhere in the world is but symptomatic of the universal distress of nations preceding the Lord's return. I was glad to hear him declare his belief in the coming of Christ to earth to reign.

Dr. Graham stressed that what is happening in Ireland is not a religious war; political aims and objects predominate. He stressed that it would take time to heal wounds and that this could only come in a spiritual dimension. Past history had shown that God works in answer to prayer. He recalled that in 1858 Ireland was in turmoil and God granted a revival, and in the early 'twenties the same things happened under the late W. P. Nicholson. We could claim God's ancient promise to Israel in 2 Chronicles 7:14 that, in answer to the cries of His people, the land could be healed. As an Ulsterman I felt myself calling upon God that He would do it again.

Dr. Graham said that he left Belfast with a very urgent invitation to return for an immediate campaign and he was going back to America to put this on his priority list. His final evening in Dublin saw some 3,000 people in attendance and they, too, invited him to go back and hold meetings. When asked by a newspaper reporter if this invitation included the clergy of the Roman Catholic Church, he said that it would be giving a false impression to put it like that. He said that he left Ireland somewhat optimistic and hopeful.

I came away from this press conference glad to have heard what Dr. Graham thought of the situation and knowing that, while on both sides of the political divide there must be a variety of opinions concerning his visit, among true Christians there must be a growing desire for a great spiritual awakening that would win Ireland for Christ.

WITH P. S. BREWSTER IN NEW ZEALAND

In the first few services in New Zealand over 100 men and women found Christ as Saviour. They have kept me busy; all I do is preach and sleep. There are meetings, conferences and seminars, four times per day.

On arrival I met all the officials of the City of Wellington including the mayor, all the M.P.s and the governing officials. It was a very impressive service. I made a short speech and then I gave my testimony of salvation and how I received the Baptism of the Holy Spirit. The Catholic bishop, Anglican ministers and the dean of the cathedral asked questions. It was tremendous. Asked about our attitude to the World Council of Churches, I simply told them that we would not give up our doctrines and principles to link with groups who were denying so much that we regarded as sacred.

There is great expectancy over here and much inquiry about the Holy Spirit. I was interviewed on radio for half-an-hour about Pentecost and the World Pentecostal Conference. I have been invited to preach in the famous Presbyterian church in Dunedin. No Pentecostal man has ever been allowed to preach there. I think the present minister is a liberal.

I preached ten times in the first week, conducted three seminars for ministers, had two press conferences, spoke on the radio, lectured for two and a half hours in a Bible college, and spoke to students in the university.

Book reviews

Incredible, by John Nelson Parr. Published by the author. Price 40p, postage and packing 5p extra.

The autobiography of the man called John Nelson Parr could have no other title but Incredible. It is an amazing story of God's power and grace in the life of a newsboy who rose to be the Pastor of a large Pentecostal Church in Manchester and the founder of the Assemblies of God in Great Britain. This important book records a vital part of the history of the Pentecostal Movement in Great Britain. It also contains valuable information about methods of evangelism both here and on the Continent as well as about a splendid ministry in broadcasting. You can see Nelson Parr on every page. The book is forthright, challenging, even pugnacious in places, but the man has a heart, too, as seen when he refers to the girl he married in 1914 and who was his wife for forty-five years: "In every way she proved to be one of the most wonderful partners any evangelist or pastor ever had." There is no doubt that this great man gives all the glory to his Lord for what took place in his life. Read this book—it really is incredible.

Ring 31265 unfolds a story of an introvert named Ross, who, with the help of a school friend name Jeff and an immigrant ornithologist named Mr. Wilson, becomes the hero of an adventure.

Its purpose is to show any would-be predator that the well-worn adages are still relevant: "Crime does not pay" and the Scriptural expression: "Be sure your sin will find you out." It also teaches the Christian that, no matter how young in age or lacking in faith he may be, believing prayer can remedy the most difficult circumstances. It also demonstrates the total inadequacy and danger of attempting to assist the Almighty by illegitimate methods to achieve the same ends.

It is a noble effort to introduce Christian concepts with the bait of a secular story. In 119 pages, the first mention of church is on page 39, of God on page 41 and of prayer on page 69. I found it a splendid hour's reading; I just had to read it through at once.

FELLOWSHIP is expressed in many ways, but none is more wonderful than when a Christian is undergoing a time of trial and the support of fellow believers makes itself gloriously felt. Not a few have been enabled to triumph by the power and grace of God because that special sense that others cared and were praying has got through.

The lovely thing is that this awareness of the concern of others can be expressed in such apparently insignificant ways. Sometimes it is the grasp of a hand. It can be even a look of sympathy. An expression in public prayer can indicate it. A sentence in a letter otherwise preoccupied with lesser matters can unveil a depth of compassion.

We must look beyond the apparent, for at times the external looks can belie the true feeling of the heart. This works both ways. The sufferer can put on a cheerful countenance. A smile can hide a breaking heart. The helper can be a "hail-fellow-well-met" type whose hearty laugh rings out all the time, but deep down, waiting opportunity for expression, is a loving heart. An almost taciturn individual can be shown to be truly a companion in sorrow, a friend in need, when the problems arise.

Perhaps this is one aspect of Hebrews 12 which we miss. The earlier verses are in such glowing terms, using exciting illustrations. When we get to verse 11, however, a careful look is needed to get the full import. The glory of "nevertheless afterward" has to be experienced to be appreciated. The next verses are both introspective and prospective. They deal with the self and with others. Their very reality can only come to pass in the context of fellowship. "Wherefore lift up the hands which hang down, and the feeble knees; and make straight paths for your feet, lest that which is lame be turned out of the way; but let it rather be healed. Follow peace with all men, and holiness, without which no man shall see the Lord: looking diligently lest any man fail of the grace of God; lest any root of bitterness springing up trouble you" (vv. 12-15).

In the time of testing we need the family.

Elim Missionary Society feature

E.W.M.A. REPORT

by Gladys M. Gorton

(E.W.M.A. secretary)

THE Elim Women's Missionary Auxiliary was formed at the 1966 Conference after much prayer and a wonderful confirmation of God's will. In the succeeding six years E.W.M.A. has miraculously progressed, proving to be a true auxiliary of the Elim Missionary Society by ably assisting our missionary enterprise.

E.W.M.A. would like to see :

1. Every church with an active E.W.M.A. branch ;
2. Every member an intercessor ;
3. Every member a soul-winner ;
4. Every missionary or missionary family cared for ;
5. Every missionary and missionary family receive Christmas and birthday gifts ;
6. Every project and target from the Missionary Council receive whole-hearted support.

Each year Elim women unite in a financial project which should not affect existing commitments such as tithing, missionary box giving, etc. Members of E.W.M.A. have sacrificed beyond regular offerings. Church offerings and missionary box giving have actually increased where an E.W.M.A. branch has been established.

E.W.M.A. projects have made possible the purchasing of new church roofs, church buildings, a generator for the secondary school in Inyanga, adding machines, typewriters, air-conditioners, refrigerators, a jeep, vehicles, motor-cycles, furniture, projectors, literature, printing presses and equipment and seating for a marquee for evangelism—a remarkable achievement !

The LIGHT THROUGH LITERATURE project is the means by which a printing press is being purchased for Pastor J. H. Prentice in Madras, India. Thousands of tracts for the Indian people will be printed. The special evangelistic number of the EVANGEL was sent in bulk to Guyana and Ghana. At the Emmanuel Press in Transvaal, South Africa, Pastor Ron Gull is preparing a four-page newspaper entitled "T.E.L.L."

TRANSMITTING THE TRUTH project realised £5,400 this year—absolutely marvellous ! We propose to purchase time to broadcast from the Seychelles, Brazil and Ghana. We will send cassettes, tapes and recordings to our missionaries, teachers and evangelists and we will continue to send literature.

Our missionaries testify that E.W.M.A. has been of great help. This is being accomplished by women who have a burden for the lost, who meet for prayer and intercession for revival daily at twelve noon. God is moving upon and among us. What opportunities He has placed in our hands ! What potential there is in our ranks ! We long for the time when every Elim church has an E.W.M.A. branch.

Just three E.W.M.A. branches gave over £1,000. This past year we surpassed by over £600 the gifts of the year before. An average of nearly £4,000 annually has been given over the last six years.

If you are an EVANGEL reader with no Elim church in your vicinity, we invite you to start a branch in your home. Write to me and I will send you particulars.

Ministers' wives are urged to commence branches in their churches.

The prayer of Samuel Chadwick could be adopted for E.W.M.A. : "Lord keep me intensely spiritual, perfectly natural and thoroughly practical."

The Gift of Tongues

6. 1 Corinthians 13: "A more excellent way"

THE same verse (12:31) introduces "a more excellent way" and commands "covet earnestly the best gifts." Paul was unconscious of any division between the two. It is not either love or Gifts, but the union of both, together with service motivated by love, which constitutes "a more excellent way." Love alone provides the correct motivation for everything and gives value and quality to all gifts and service. Paul is not exalting love and excluding spiritual Gifts; his purpose is to balance one with the other. Love exhibits itself primarily in virtues like humility, longsuffering, and self-control; Paul is concerned about the presence of such graces along with spiritual Gifts. The "more excellent way" of Christian living is the combination of spiritual qualities, moral character, practical service, and spiritual Gifts. To remove any of these elements robs this way of its excellency. Those who eliminate spiritual Gifts, such as tongues, from Christian life are guilty of detracting from the "more excellent way," just as those who decry the necessity of holiness take away from it also.

It will not do to reduce "tongues" to human oratory or eloquence. Chapter 13 is obviously a continuation of chapter 12, so "tongues" must be taken as the charismatic Gift mentioned in 12:10, 28, 30.

Paul appears to suggest the possibility of men speaking in the language of angels, when speaking in tongues by the Spirit. It would be speculation to write about such languages, though it is reasonable to assume communication between angelic creatures in which language forms exist. Such a language spoken in tongues would preclude identification by men.

Languages used by men were clearly identified among the tongues spoken in Acts 2. There are some 2,500 languages. If dialects are taken into account the Encyclopaedia Britannica estimates that some 5,000 exist. Such multiplicity refutes the foolish idea that if tongues are a genuine language then a linguist will be able to identify them.

by JOHN HARRIS

PASTOR OF ELIM PENTECOSTAL CHURCH, LURGAN

To know six languages requires great proficiency; in relation to 2,000 or 3,000 the likelihood of recognition is very small indeed. Identification may take place, but absence of it does not rule out the use of an actual human language.

The cessation of tongues

The three things mentioned in v. 8 are charismatic Gifts brought forward from 12:8-10. No other interpretation is permissible; Paul's main theme is still spiritual Gifts, viewed here in relation to love. The three mentioned are probably representative of the whole and the comparatively temporary nature of spiritual Gifts in relation to the abiding nature of love is the point in question. The prophecies given by a pneumatic gift will cease, for it is not the written prophecies of Scripture which are meant here, for they can never fail. Knowledge imparted by "the word of knowledge," like tongues, will cease, but love abides for ever. The crux of the matter is the time factor. When does the cessation take effect and why?

The reason for the cessation

Spiritual Gifts do not possess perfection or completeness in themselves, nor do they imply it in their possessors—rather the opposite (vv. 9, 10). This incompleteness will give way to a perfection which will make idle the using of incomplete Gifts. Paul uses two illustrations (vv. 11, 12) to clarify the reason for the cessation. The things of childhood are put away when a person reaches a more complete state in maturity. Such things served a purpose for a time, but they are replaced by what is more suited to a developed personality. The difference between "seeing" things, even with the help of spiritual Gifts, compared with "that which is perfect," is likened to the difference between seeing through obscure glass and seeing face to face. Gifts will cease because they will not be suited to the state of perfection and because they will be replaced by something far better. This means that tongues will be as unsuited to perfection as the things of childhood to an adult. Tongues will cease, to be replaced by something better.

The time of cessation of tongues

On this crucial question the most common argument is the completion of the New Testament canon theory, i.e. that such Gifts were necessary while the New Testament was incomplete, but when the canon was completed a state of perfect revelation existed which made unnecessary the continuance of Gifts like prophecy and tongues, which were withdrawn. There are facts which completely overthrow this view.

There is no contextual reference to the Scriptures. A text must always be interpreted in the light of its context. This demolishes the argument with one blow. To introduce the written Word at this point is to add an element which the Spirit of inspiration has not authorised. The context deals with saints and the balance of love and Gifts in their lives. Paul even places himself in the two illustrations used to show the "in part" and "perfect" comparison he has in mind. He also states directly of himself: "Now I know in part, but then shall I know even as also I am known." The perfection and "in part" stages are of saints and not of Scripture and of the usage or cessation of tongues related to the state of the saint. Individual Christians, as to their soul, leave the imperfect and reach perfection when they join "the spirits of just men made perfect" at death. The Church as a whole will achieve perfection at the coming of Christ.

Paul writes in the first person, for example, "I know in part." Will anyone, even with the whole Bible in their possession, claim that their knowledge is now "perfect" and that by comparison Paul's was "in part"? To state the question is sufficient to show its utter foolishness. The evidence of the context sustains the continuance of tongues until Jesus comes; it has nothing to say about the written Word of God.

There is historical evidence of tongues continuing after the New Testament canon closed. The extent and strength of this evidence may be variously assessed, but some foundation in fact can hardly be denied. S. H. Frodsham's With Signs Following and George Jeffreys's Pentecostal Rays refer to tongues at different times in Church history. Within this century there has arisen what is commonly called "The Pentecostal Movement" within which millions of people claim to have spoken in tongues by the Spirit. During this generation many in other denominations claim to have received the same Gift. Irrespective of questions which might be raised as to the validity of some claims, it would be a very naïve historian who would deny any evidential value to such a volume of evidence. The weight of evidence now available is more than enough to disprove the claim that God withdrew tongues some 1,900 years ago. Yet even the absence of such evidence would prove nothing, for the non-manifestation of Divine power in a miraculous way may be due to human failure rather than to Divine purpose, see for example Judges 6:1-13; Matthew 13:58.

A further theory advanced is that tongues and such like Gifts were given by God to authenticate His servants in their foundation work of the Church. No support for this view can be gleaned from 1 Corinthians 13. It also overlooks the problem of modern pioneer evangelism. If the New Testament Church needed tongues and other Gifts to authenticate them in a pioneering situation should such Gifts not still be needed in similar work?

We conclude that as to spiritual Gifts in general and tongues in particular there are neither Scriptural grounds nor supporting historical evidence to uphold the contention of a long-past cessation. Instead there is every support for their continuance until perfection comes to the Church of Christ at Christ's coming. In the more direct communion between God and His people of the eternal state, the gift of Tongues will not be needed. Until such perfectness is reached the twofold command of 1 Corinthians 14:1 still applies to all Christians: "Follow after charity and desire spiritual Gifts."

*Words and drawing by

MRS. SMITH called down the garden to her two children: “Susan! David! Come here, please!”

“What can mummy want?” said Susan.

“I don’t know,” said David. “She would call us now, just when I wanted to ride my scooter.”

“And I am busy playing with my dolls,” said Susan.

“I know what we can do,” said David. “Let’s pretend we did not hear mummy call. I expect she wants us to go on an errand for her or something.”

“Let’s carry on playing,” said Susan. “We can see what mummy wants later.”

All through the afternoon the children played in the garden and each time their mother called them they pretended not to hear her. By now Susan was tired of playing with the dolls. She called to her brother: “I think I’ll go in now, David. I don’t want to play out here any longer.”

“Neither do I,” said David. “My legs are aching after riding on my scooter. We might as well see what mummy wants.”

“Where have you been?” asked Mrs. Smith, when the two children went into the kitchen. “I have been calling you for ages. You are very naughty not to come when I call.”

“We didn’t hear you, mummy,” Susan said. “What did you want us for?”

“On my way back from the shops I bought an ice cream for you, but you have come too late. The ice cream has melted,” explained their mother. “Now, go and wash your hands while I prepare your tea.”

“Oh dear,” sighed Susan. “I wish I had answered when mummy called. I would have liked that ice cream!”

“So would I,” said David. “Next time I won’t be late. We might miss another treat.”

Jesus calls us every minute of every day. He loves us very much. Even if we do not answer Him for a long time He will still welcome us and bless us, but it would make Jesus so much happier if we gave our hearts to Him early, when we are young. We miss so much if we come to Him later.

“I knew that I was healed!”

by Olive Garbutt

ELIM MISSIONARY, RHODESIA

ASCENSION DAY drew near and I thought of the annual convention at Eldorado. I had a great longing to be present, but I did not think it would be possible. I prayed that the Lord would pour out His blessing upon the folk who would be gathered there. As I did so, joy and blessing flooded my soul. Then suddenly the Lord opened the way for me to go.

Thursday was a great day of joy and the ministry of God’s Word brought deliverance to many. As Dr. Len Jones spoke about holding fast the confession of our faith, especially with regard to healing, I realised that, during recent months, I had been talking the wrong language—the language of unbelief. I trusted God for healing for spinal trouble. Since 1967 at least I have suffered from prolapsed discs (which the chiropractor said were now almost non-existent!) and the resulting nerve pressure often caused great pain and a variety of other symptoms.

On the Saturday, when brother C. Powell was ministering and telling of miracles of healing that he had witnessed and experienced, he asked if there was anyone present who had recently been suffering from spinal trouble. I raised my hand and he invited me to go forward for prayer. As I approached, he said: “Here is a lady whose right leg is shorter than the other. We are going to ask Jesus to lengthen it; if Jesus does not do

FROM T. H. STEVENSON

READERS may recollect my comments on the L.P. record Jesus Christ—Superstar. The chairman of the company, Mr. Stigwood, stated that it would make a fortune—and it has. For some months under the same title a rock musical has been running in New York. Soon it will be on the stage in London. As a recording and a show it has broken all records. There is no spoken word; it is all in lyrics and music. According to the twinkling sign perpetually running round the Broadway theatre it is “A triumph—reverent.” Wisely, Peter Hall, the director-designate of the British National Theatre, remarks: “Thus are religious sensibilities placated and titillated.”

How easily the religious people can be caught in a trap! One wonders whether Dr. Billy Graham has been as discerning when writing on this show in “My answer” in the Christian Herald. He has not seen the show, but has heard the lyrics (73p in Woolworth’s, I have noticed!) and read reviews. Dr. Graham describes some scenes as almost blasphemous, but, taking the line that while He was on earth, and always since, Christ has caused controversy and when He is presented He still attracts millions, adds: “In this sense Superstar may have done good. It has helped to arouse a new interest in Jesus—especially among youth.”

The two young English authors do not confess Christ. There is no evidence that any performer does. With the director of the infamous Hair directing this show, one thinks of Paul’s directions concerning “any other gospel.” Peter Hall referring to Jesus Christ—Superstar, Godspell and Pasolini’s screen Gospels, asks: “Is there a vogue?” and quotes a leading showman as saying: “All the old names are coming back.” We know that the name of Jesus is an everlasting name.

I write about this as Christians in London and our country may soon face this allurements. Save your sanctification, your time, your money! Mr.

Peter Hall, in his thorough, professional review, also reveals about this show: “The sound comes from a vast array of loudspeakers—the effect is startling. I did not hear one word from start to finish of the evening. The noise was too great. It was impossible to tell if the audience was ‘held’ or not. We were insulated from each other by noise. Noise is an addiction in our time. And perhaps the sound of Jesus Christ—Superstar had to be created to grab the deafened generation. Unless the lyrics and the music are very well known from the records, it is impossible to understand what is going on. Coming out on to the roar of Broadway late at night, my ears were grateful. It seemed like the peace of the country.”

PRAYER AND PRAISE

By F. H. COLEMAN

I WAS handed a church magazine recently and was interested to read a letter addressed to the minister from an old man for whom we had prayed. He was returning thanks to those who had prayed during a serious operation which he had undergone.

This letter contained two points: the writer thanked God for bringing him safely through the operation, and stated that he had heard that God answers prayer, now he had proved it for himself.

We should be grateful to God when He answers prayer and also thank those who prayed for us. This dear old man did the right thing in writing his letter of thanks. So often we take everything for granted. When we are in need we tell others, who kindly pray for us and then, when we become well again, we forget all about their kindness.

We live in an age when kindness, courtesy and gratitude seem to have fallen in the street. Christians should show these knightly characteristics.

This dear man, after many years of attendance at an evangelical church, had only then truly discovered that God answers prayer. We have seen this truth for many years, all because of the goodness of God to us. We have so much for which to be grateful. God has revealed truth to us by His Spirit. We rejoice in the knowledge of Jesus as Healer, as well as Saviour, the One who fills with the Spirit and is soon coming again. We have experienced by His grace and are enjoying so many things. Pentecostal people ought to be thankful!

Good or evil?

I READ in the daily newspaper that Malcolm Muggeridge is sponsoring support for Mother Teresa, of India, as a candidate for the Nobel Peace Prize. This saintly Albanian nun is tireless in her work for the poor and, in the widest concept of the award, can claim to have contributed towards the ideals of peace and of the welfare of nations and individuals.

Who was Alfred Nobel? Why are there prizes for which he donated 33,000,000 Swedish Kroner in his will? This remarkable Swedish financier was the inventor of dynamite. He spent his life amassing a fortune from the manufacture and sale of explosives. One morning in 1888 when he was fifty-five years old, Alfred Nobel awoke and was shocked to read his own obituary. As a result of a reporter's error Nobel's death was announced instead of that of his brother. He saw himself described as the "Dynamite King," the great industrialist who had made a fortune out of the weapons of destruction. He found that he was to be remembered only as a merchant of death. None of his true intentions—to break down the barriers that separate men—was recognised. As he read his obituary with horror he resolved to make clear to the world the true meaning and purpose of his life.

Alfred Nobel came of a family of inventors who were specially interested in the development of explosives for use in mining. These were days of pioneering in the building of railways and the opening of new waterways and canals throughout the world. The production of dynamite to replace costly, cumbersome gunpowder was a real boon.

Nobel felt that his momentous invention, which had cost much hard work, sacrifice and even loss of life, including that of his younger brother, must be used to benefit mankind, to assist industry and to improve communications by removing geographical barriers. Nobel was a lonely man, but he had one friend, a writer, Baroness Bertha von Suttner, who wrote an impassioned novel, Lay Down Your Arms, which was a plea to the world to abolish war. This noble lady invited Alfred to attend the International Peace Congress in Switzerland four years before his death and he was deeply moved by all he heard in the discussions. Moreover, Bertha von Suttner's friendship and influence were largely responsible for the establishment of the Nobel Peace Prize. They had many discussions on the need for peace and the longing that Alfred Nobel had to work for world peace. In a moment of sadness he said to her, "There is nothing in this world that evil cannot turn to its own purpose." Nitro-glycerine offered products for peaceful uses, but the military powers were greedy to use his inventions for waging war.

Man's propensity for evil is so evident in these days; we are almost overwhelmed by it. Love is taken by evil and turned into lust. Freedom of expression is replaced by complete lack of discipline. Helpful drugs and medicines become addictive and a snare to our youth. Music, which can give such joy and inspiration, becomes a vehicle for arousing the passions and exciting hysteria. Pride of race and love of country have been taken by evil and hatred; prejudice and violence have resulted. Genuine scientific endeavour has been sidetracked with disastrous effects. From earliest times, as Paul writes in Romans 1, man has changed the glory of almighty God into an image of a man or animal. The truth of God is changed into a lie and the Devil exploits man's desire for worship and turns him to idolatry. We are not ignorant of the Devil's devices. We should be continually on our guard against the subtle methods used by our enemy.

Looking at the problem from a positive angle,

Celestial tribute (from Psalm 19)

The heavens declare the glory of the Lord
In shining letters of celestial light,
Across their boundless spaces they record
The wonders of His wisdom and His might,
The radiant splendour of the rising sun
Awakes the mountain peak to ecstasy,
And on the new page of the day begun
Inscribes, with golden pen, God's majesty.
His greatness is with eloquence expressed
By all the grandeur of the sunset rays
And then the moon's pure silver beams invest
The night with beauty and reflect His praise, While countless stars show forth His wondrous skill
And move in perfect rhythm to His will.

don't you think it is time we beat the Devil at his own game? As Christians we should determine to use the inventions of this technological age for God's service. Instead of bemoaning the evil purposes at work, we must make radio, television, the printed word, modern transport, the tape recorder, the film and music reproduction work more than ever before to extend the kingdom of God.

it, it won't be done, but we believe that He will manifest His power here today."

I had never realised that the leg was shorter, but, as he prayed, I felt it lengthening under the power of God. I stood up and I realised just how much shorter it had been. What a difference in posture—all the strain and pain had vanished and I felt the power of God like a deep, warm glow of radiant heat spreading over my back, so gentle, yet penetrating right through the vertebrae. I knew that I was healed. I give all the praise and glory to Jesus who has done such wonderful things for me. It was a joy to return to my mission station with a testimony to give which has encouraged the faith of others.

The responsibilities of a husband

by Eldin R. Corsie, National Youth Director

YOUNG husbands take note—you really have responsibilities! It is not all honey and cream cake. Marriage demands the man in you. The Bible is the best textbook on marriage; there are clear guidelines which make for a happy union. Let us consider them in detail.

The first duty of a husband is to love his wife. This love is sacrificial. The Scripture says in Ephesians 5:25: "Husbands, love your wives, even as Christ also loved the church, and gave Himself for it." The cross of Christ is the standard of the love that a man should extend to his wife.

It is also a love that is selfless: "So ought men to love their wives as their own bodies. He that loveth his wife loveth himself" (v. 28). When one considers the time, thought and money that a man spends on himself, one will understand the significance of the apostle's statement. Such a love manifests itself in courtesy, politeness, a loving gentleness and concern toward her who walks by your side.

Secondly, the responsibility of a husband is to provide. Among many savage tribes the woman does the hard, manual labour while the man lives in comparative idleness. Christianity does not allow the woman to live in idleness, but it lays upon the man the task of providing for the support of the family. The Bible says: "If any provide not for his own, and especially for those of his own house, he hath denied the faith, and is worse than an atheist if you do not properly provide for your family."

The third responsibility of a husband is to be faithful to his wife. A man who is unfaithful to his wife in thought, word, or deed has committed one of the greatest crimes known to God and man. It was one of the few sins for which God demanded the death penalty in the Old Testament. You may not be what you think you are, but what you think—you are. God says that no adulterer will be in the kingdom of heaven. The wrath of God is waiting at the judgment day for any man who is unfaithful to his wife and guilty of this terrible, awful sin.

The fourth responsibility that a husband has to his wife is to give her his confidence. She is not a plaything, a mere ornament to your home. She is a helpmeet in all the affairs of life. There should be no permanent secret between you and her. Tell her your plans and talk them over together.

The fifth responsibility that a husband has is to lead the religious instruction in the home. The husband is to be a living example of all the things that are true, honest, just, pure, lovely, and of good report, according to the teaching of the Bible. The oldest, most important church in the world is the church of the household. The husband is the divinely ordained minister of that church. Let the husband take his ordination seriously. Ideal homes start with ideal husbands . . . and ideal wives for that matter!

So, if you are getting married, are just married or well on the way in married life, be a responsible husband!

*Parents of difficult children
May, if sufficiently vexed,
Apply to the seat of the problem
The book as well as the text!*

"Before I got married I had theories about bringing up children; now I have six children, and no theories."

Notes
by
D. C. Lewis

Monday, July 3rd Hebrews 10 : 11-25

"Having therefore, brethren, boldness to enter into the holiest by the blood of Jesus" (v. 19).

"A new and living way"—how complete is our confidence to enter in, to draw near (v. 22), to hold fast (v. 23). All these privileges were made possible by the shedding of the precious blood of Jesus. May we today appreciate more than ever His precious blood and all it secures for us: forgiveness, fellowship, pardon and peace. There is power in the precious blood, power to prevail and power to proclaim.

Tuesday, July 4th Hebrews 10 : 26-39

"Ye have in heaven a better and an enduring substance" (v. 34).

We are reminded of the transitory nature of our most desired earthly possessions. They are easily spoiled. They so quickly deteriorate and pass away. May we be willing joyfully to dispose of as many as possible of the things of lesser value so as to focus our vision on things of eternal worth, the things that abide. "Labour not for the meat which perisheth, but for that meat which endureth unto everlasting life" (John 6 : 27).

"The elders obtained a good report" (v. 2).

Here is presented the roll call of the heroes of faith. "Faith is the assurance of things hoped for, the proving of things not seen" (v. 1, R.V.). The nature of their faith is shown in verse 3—God as Creator. "Of old hast Thou laid the foundations of the earth; the heavens are the work of Thy hands" (Psalm 102 : 25). With this confidence, co-operating with Him and having implicit confidence in His ability, they were enabled to walk in harmony with Him—like Enoch (v. 5), to exercise a constant trust in Him and to prove Him at every level. This is the life well pleasing to God (v. 5).

Thursday, July 6th Hebrews 11 : 8-22

"By faith Abraham . . . was called . . . obeyed" (v. 8).

Here is presented for our encouragement and response the conduct of faith. God is calling today; He asks for a ready and willing response.

He will not tolerate our reservations and refusals. Are we willing to obey, to go forward, to go out and to be engaged in enterprises for Him? The need of the world is Jesus. Are we willing to forsake all, to obey His command: "Go ye into all the world, and preach the Gospel to every creature" (Mark 16 : 15)?

"Choosing rather to suffer . . . than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season" (v. 25).

The choice made by Moses was wise and deliberate. He refused the comfort of the palace, the prestige and all it involved, to go out and to be closely identified with the sufferings of his people. May the Lord forgive us because we cling so tenaciously to the treasures of Egypt and for our reluctance to suffer for His sake. If we are to reign with Him we must be prepared to suffer (2 Timothy 2 : 12).

"Through faith subdued kingdoms" (v. 33).

Faith's victory (vv. 33, 34) enabled them to subdue kingdoms, work righteousness, obtain promises, stop the mouths of lions, out of weakness to be made strong. Here then for us is the victory also—strength to subdue, to tread Satan under our feet, to live righteously, to prove the exceeding great and precious promises of our God (2 Peter 1 : 4), to overcome every opposition. "Be strong in the Lord, and in the power of His might" (Ephesians 6 : 10). "Thanks be to God which giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ" (1 Corinthians 15 : 57).

Sunday, July 9th Hebrews 12 : 1-11

"Looking unto Jesus the author and finisher of our faith" (v. 2).

Faith's triumphant Leader, our Lord Jesus, beckons us on. Success is assured and continuance along the heavenly road is provided for as we keep Him constantly in view—"Looking unto Jesus." How exacting the course, how strict the discipline, how many the trials, how numerous the obstacles, but we shall complete the course as we keep Him in view.

We express our gratitude to Pastor J. R. Brown, who wrote the notes for the Family Altar for the last quarter. We welcome this week our writer for the new quarter, ex-missionary Pastor D. C. Lewis, pastor of our Rugby church.—EDITOR.

Health, Wealth and Beauty

By A. S. F. Horne PASTOR OF ELIM PENTECOSTAL CHURCH, EALING, LONDON

MANY inherit health, but do not take care of it. Health is more contagious than disease because the principle of life in the body is stronger than disease. Doctors die of diseases which they profess to cure because they do not know how to operate the life principle.

The body is exceedingly flexible in youth. The circulation of the blood, stimulated by proper exercise, brings life-giving nourishment to every part of the body, improving every feature and strengthening voice and digestion. Life is lengthened and happiness is ensured. We hear much about healing; let us do all we can to keep God's great gift of health.

Those who are born into wealth do not, as a rule, know either how to retain it or to enjoy it. No man knows the value of a pound who has not suffered from the lack of it. The person born with a silver spoon in his mouth loses both spoon and appetite, for wealth and happiness are not gold-dust twins. The tragedy of inherited wealth is the possession of money with no idea of its value. Even the working man outspends his income, despite every wage increase.

Those who are born beautiful usually lose it at about fifty. Health is uncertain because of our ignorance. Beauty is vain and results in vanity because of our mental limitations. Riches are deceitful because of their effect on us and our unskilful handling of them. God is absolutely universal in all His great gifts, however. One of His greatest is thought power, something we share with and for all humanity. God help us to learn to think. Some think in narrow circles, others think backwards.

Mr. A and Mr. B were sentenced on the same day to ten years' imprisonment. Mr. A said to himself, "I am in for ten years. Good night!" Mr. B said, consciously and with determination, "I shall be out of prison in six months. Good morning!" He set his mind on every possible means of escape and one day he was out! We need progressive and positive thinking in the Church today. We can gain the victory, God helping us.

Florence Nightingale, the lady of the lamp, the sweet heroine of the Crimea, was an invalid for fifty years, but she had happy memories of services rich and rare for friend and foe. Those thrilling scenes revived her. The strains of martial music floating through the corridors of her soul glorified pain, enthroned suffering and spiritualised agony. She died victoriously.

George Matheson's youthful ambitions, his coveted love, his dream of usefulness were blighted by blindness, but not by despair. This singer of Scotland sang:

O Joy that seekest me through pain,
I cannot close my heart to Thee;
I trace the rainbow through the rain,
And feel the promise is not vain
That morn shall tearless be.

William Cowper, that man of doubt, fear, gloom, sadness, the emotions of a diseased brain, was lost in a London fog and wondered why he could not find the bridge from which to fling himself into the dark waters of the Thames. Finding himself back in his humble lodgings, he wrote a hymn for the storm-tossed of all ages:

God moves in a mysterious way
His wonders to perform;
He plants His footsteps in the sea
And rides upon the storm.

John Bunyan had a blind daughter. For the sake of truth, he chose to spend twelve long years in Bedford jail rather than make "a slaughter-house of his conscience." "By granite wall shut in," he dreamed of the shining ways of Pilgrim's Progress from the dark corridors of earth to the bright portals of the Eternal City.

Health, wealth and beauty are zealously sought, but they belong only to time. The great gifts last for eternity. Read James 5:10, 11; Psalm 103:8. To experience these realities is of far greater value than health, wealth and beauty. This is victory!

Proclaiming the Truths of Pentecost

The astonishing Saviour

2. Astonished by His demonstrations

by Samuel Gorman

In Christ's life and ministry there were numerous evidences of this; for instance, the mighty miracles wrought by Him, only one of which is considered here by way of illustrating the astonishment He caused on certain occasions.

Jesus caused tremendous astonishment when He raised from the dead the young daughter of Jairus, Matthew records: "While He was thus speaking to them, behold, a ruler came in before Him, saying 'My daughter has just died; but come lay your hand on her, and she will live.' And Jesus rose and followed him with His disciples . . . and when Jesus came to the ruler's house, and saw the flute players, and the crowd making a tumult, He said, 'Depart; for the girl is not dead but sleeping,' and they laughed at Him. But when the crowd had been put outside, He went in and took her by the hand, and the girl arose" (9: 18, 19, 23-25, R.S.V.). Mark highlighted the significant effect and impact upon the people by the raising of the little girl from the dead. He said they "were astonished with a great astonishment" (5: 42). "Astonished" and "great astonishment" suggest that they were startled (meaning "to start with surprise, to alarm") by this mighty demonstration of the authority and power of Jesus over death. Isaiah prophesied that Jesus would startle. He declared that "He shall sprinkle the nations" (52: 15); the Revised Version (marginal rendering) and the Revised Standard Version of "sprinkle" is "startle."

His mighty demonstration of strength as He died on the cross brought about a situation that startled: "Jesus, when He had cried with a loud voice, yielded up the ghost. And, behold, the veil of the temple was rent in twain from the top to the bottom; and the earth did quake, and the rocks rent . . . Now when the centurion and they that were with him, watching Jesus, saw the earthquake, and those things that were done, they feared greatly, saying, Truly this was the Son of God" (Matthew 27: 50, 51, 54). The Revised Standard Version says of the centurion and those with him that "they were filled with awe." They were astonished, startled, struck by a reverential fear or wonder concerning Jesus. The startling revelation to the hardened, well-disciplined soldier—the centurion—and those with him was that Jesus was the Son of God.

There was also the astonishing revelation of the Saviour's resurrection and its amazing impact upon the people. Matthew clearly shows the precautions taken by Pilate, as a result of being approached by the Pharisees, regarding the place where the Lord's body lay: "Pilate said unto them, Ye have a watch: go your way, make it as sure as you can. So they went and made the sepulchre sure, sealing the stone, and setting a watch . . . And, behold, there was a great earthquake: for the angel of the Lord descended from heaven, and came and rolled back the stone from the door, and sat upon it. His countenance was like lightning, and His raiment white as snow: and for fear of him the keepers did shake, and became as dead men" (Matthew 27: 65, 66; 28: 2-4). The blinding glory of the presence of the angel and the message he gave that Jesus was alive from the dead had a startling effect upon them. When they conveyed this news to the authorities, they too were alarmed and, in panic, instituted hasty, ill-conceived plans to try to hush the matter up lest the general public should feel the impact of it. The Saviour's resurrection verified in a way that they could not dispute His claim that He had power to lay down His life and take it again, for, without the aid of His disciples or angels, He had risen from the dead. The angel had not come to roll away the stone so that Jesus could come out of the grave; he did it in order to show that the tomb was empty, that Jesus was alive again.

Even some of the Master's followers were startled, for, on finding the stone removed and the tomb empty and being told by the angels of the Lord's resurrection, they were frightened and "fled from the sepulchre, for they trembled and were amazed [astonished]" (Mark 16: 1-8).

What astonishment there will be, and how startled and concerned people will become, when the Saviour gives that mighty shout that will summon the Church to meet Him in the air (1 Thessalonians 4: 16, 17; 1 Corinthians 15: 51, 52). How sad and tragic that the unconverted will persist in their indifference to and rejection of Jesus and find themselves startled into reality too late to do anything about accepting Him as Saviour!

Jesus referred to the Church as belonging to Him (Matthew 16:18), consisting of people governed by Himself as the Head, a people under His control carrying out a programme master-minded by Him, and demonstrating a character, power and authority that even the gates of hell could not withstand. The Church is not merely owned by Him, but indwelt and wholly possessed by Him—the ever-present Landlord of His property. May the Church be so yielded to His authority that it will, by its mighty ministry and miraculous manifestations, astonish and startle masses of people into acceptance of Jesus as Saviour and Lord!

INDUCTION SERVICE AT WESTON-SUPER-MARE

It was a great day for the new Elim Pentecostal Church when we welcomed J. B. D. Ritchie as our new pastor. There is an air of expectancy and an obvious sense of God's presence in the meetings and a number of friends have expressed a desire to come into membership, including several families.

We have a pressing need for a building of our own and would ask all the Elim family to pray that God will meet our need.

MOUNTAIN ASH

Pastor : S. C. Squire

Our Sunday school staff has felt the need for outreach work among the girls and boys of our town who have no contact with any church or Sunday school. We invited Pastor Leon Quest to hold a children's crusade. Arrangements were made by our pastor and Sunday school superintendent. Invitations were given out at four schools in the district.

On the first day about 200 children turned up, despite the high winds and torrential rain which continued all week. Good numbers were maintained. We were thrilled with the wonderful opportunities to minister at three schools. Pastor Quest was given complete charge of morning assembly at two schools, one of which invited him to return the next day, and at the other school he was invited to take a religious instruction lesson. On the following Sunday, a bank holiday, at least twenty new children were enrolled in our Sunday school. We thank God for our brother's ministry and pray that it will not only be new names on our Sunday school register, but new names in the Lamb's Book of Life.

G. J. HAWKINS.

SHEFFIELD

Pastor : A. V. Gorton

We are glad to report continued blessing. At our Easter convention under the ministry of B. J. Hayes, A. Lambie and L. E. Lambert, the air of expectation of the past months increased as the convention progressed and blessing mounted. For the first time in many years a mixed choir took part; it was trained and conducted by the pastor.

The Sisterhood weekend was outstanding with the delightful ministry of Mrs. Joan Morrison and the singing of the Sisterhood choir, conducted by the pastor's wife. The sum for the year of £445 for E.W.M.A. was presented to Mrs. Gorton by the treasurer, Miss Lidster.

The spring Bible week with Felix Lloyd-Smith brought a further quickening. His challenging ministry must have definite results.

At a baptismal service seven were immersed.

The central Sunday school anniversary had a thirteen-foot model of a factory, with chimneys, smoke, lights and taped machinery in action. The theme was "Pollution." Arthur D. Bull, our missionary from Tanzania, was the special speaker. The minor hall extension to the church was opened and well filled.

"GLORIOUS IS THY NAME"

A report on recent activities of the London Crusader Choir

In a delightful country church on the cliffs between Dover and Folkestone giving a distant view of the coastline of France, the choir attracted a company of local members and friends on a Sunday afternoon.

At Reading prison the choir received a moving welcome and intense interest throughout. At the close of the service a prisoner expressed thanks on behalf of the residents. He told of his conversion as a result of the choir's previous visit. An evening meeting in the Elim Pentecostal Church concluded a great day of worship and service.

Down in the West Country for a glorious weekend of fellowship at Exeter, excellent congregations gathered on both Saturday and Sunday in the attractive, newly decorated church.

At Maidstone prison the new chaplain welcomed the choir on their 137th visit. The lovely chapel resounded as the Gospel was heralded in simple musical settings. Pastor D. B. Gray in his usual relaxed manner held the attention of the men in the closing epilogue.

A number of other centres were visited including the annual meetings of The Christian Community, in the famous Wesley Chapel, London, D. B. Gray being a Vice-President of this fellowship. At an Anglican mission in North London the choir played a major part in the closing service. Canon Harry Sutton, known to many Elim friends, was the missionary. He and local clergy counselled many young and old.

To minister in one of the Cheshire Homes can be depressing, nevertheless the choir welcomes such opportunities. A return visit to such a home situated in the beautiful Mote Park, Maidstone, will long be remembered. Following the service members of the choir enjoyed great fellowship mingling with patients, staff and visiting friends.

BISHOP AUCKLAND Pastor : R. M. Kingsbury

God blessed our spring convention in a very special way. The ministries of Pastors Leslie W. Green and John Crimp encouraged and challenged us. Their contrasting ministries were blended by the Holy Spirit, whose presence dominated every meeting. We were thrilled by the articulate, anointed ministry of Pastor Green and the challenging, forthright preaching of Pastor Crimp. The Bradford Folk Four enriched our Monday meetings with their dedicated talents. We shall remember in particular their final piece which reminded us so vividly of Calvary.

It was encouraging to see how well we were supported both by our own members and by other denominations in the area.

R. M. KINGSBURY.

RYDE

Pastor : I. R. Hall

Elim Pentecostal Church, Albert Street, celebrated its forty-first anniversary at the weekend and welcomed the new President of the Elim Pentecostal Churches, Rev. T. W. Walker, of Cheltenham, as its guest preacher. The services were preceded by an anniversary tea, when the President was guest of honour and fifty-seven members and friends of the church were present. Tea was prepared by Mrs. S. Hall, the minister's wife, Misses F. Guy, P. Ashley, C. Gerring and Mrs. J. Rowe. Afterwards there was a united rally, when friends from Sandown and Northwood joined the congregation. The local minister, Rev. Ian Hall, was the chairman and the President gave an address. Mrs. M. Dean, who was the first church pianist, returned to play for the evening services, and her husband, Mr. R. Dean, gave his testimony, as did Mrs. O. Towers. Mrs. S. Hall sang "The Holy City." At Sunday morning Communion, the President spoke on "Remembrance" and at the evening revival meeting on "Triumph," when a congregation of over seventy gathered. Also taking part in the evening were Mr. B. Parkman and Mrs. Hall, who sang solos, Messrs. Mason and Weston, who gave their testimonies, and Mr. Wells, who conducted the choruses.

Isle of Wight Times.

SOUTHAMPTON

Pastor : J. C. Kennedy

It was the opinion of many that the spring holiday convention was the best for many years. The atmosphere betokened Divine blessing; it was free and charged with inspiration and power. "I have not felt so much freedom and power and blessing for years," was the testimony of a mature, experienced Christian. The fellowship was good, for the congregation was made up of those who were hungry for God's Word. It is easy to lead and to preach in such an atmosphere, as the preachers, Pastors Eldin R. Corsie and John H. Sainsbury, evidenced. Their messages were challenging, ranging from the outpouring of the Spirit on the Day of Pentecost to its practical application in holy living, passionate service and fruit-bearing in soul-winning.

The meetings were blessed by testimony and song from Pastor and Mrs. Corsie and a group of young people from Kensington Temple, London. The testimonies were from a London "Bobby," a social worker, a converted drug addict, and someone who had been miraculously healed. Sandra Corsie delighted the congregation by accompanying the singers on her tambourine.

The ladies of the church worked willingly and hard to see that all who gathered were well refreshed at tea-time.

J. CRAIG KENNEDY.

DEWSBURY

Pastor : N. G. N. Miller

A tea and fellowship meeting took place to celebrate our pastor's first anniversary. The visiting speaker was Pastor C. E. Lamb. Mrs. Lamb was the soloist.

A tribute was paid to Pastor Miller's faithful service by Mr. H. Codd (church treasurer) and Miss M. Thomason presented Pastor and Mrs. Miller with a gift from the church.

We were encouraged at the end of the meeting when four children accepted salvation.

During Pastor Miller's ministry we have received seven new members into fellowship, four people have been baptised in water and six people have been baptised in the Holy Spirit.

We rejoice to see the way God has blessed during the past year and we trust Him for His continued blessing in the future.

D. BIGGIN.

BOURNEMOUTH, Winton

Pastor : G. N. Backhouse

At the Sunday school anniversary and prize-giving the church was filled with parents and friends, who much enjoyed the singing items presented by the children. The most important part as far as the scholars were concerned was the presentation of prizes for attendance. The high level of attendances recorded reflected the keenness of the children and the hard work put in by the superintendent and teachers.

Another important part of the service was the dedication by our pastor of a baby, a toddler and two older children. Mr. R. Ballard, the Sunday school superintendent, used the opportunity to present the gospel clearly and effectively.

The Gift of Tongues

by JOHN HARRIS

PASTOR OF ELIM PENTECOSTAL CHURCH, LURGAN

7. "Not unto men, but unto God"

1 Corinthians 14 : 1-5

LOVE should be pursued and Spiritual Gifts desired (v. 1). Love is the chief spiritual grace from which all others flow. The Gifts are those under consideration in chapter 12, including the Gift of tongues. The union of graces and Gifts in a twofold command sustains our contention that the "excellent way" must embrace both. To desire Spiritual Gifts means to have an interest in them that will draw one toward them with a seeking heart.

The direction of tongues

Paul is writing about utterances in tongues by themselves, i.e. unaccompanied by any interpretation (vv. 2-4). Failure to observe this will lead to confusion and misinterpretation. In such cases, tongues are "not unto men, but unto God." The plain negation of the human objective and the positive identification of the upward direction of tongues are beyond dispute. In view of such a categorical statement it is surprising that some allege that "tongues were given to preach the gospel to the heathen." When a person preaches, he speaks not to God but to men—the opposite of the affirmation here concerning tongues, therefore preaching as a use for tongues is ruled out completely. This accords with our interpretation of Acts 2 and 10 where the disciples spoke of "the wonderful works of God" and magnified God. Men heard the tongues and, in one case, understood them, but they were not being addressed in tongues any more than preaching is addressed to God, though the preacher must never forget that he speaks before God.

The reason for this decisive statement is given : "for no man understandeth him." This did not apply in Acts 2, but recall the differing congregations referred to in Acts 2 and 1 Corinthians. In the latter context such a statement must obviously hold good, because of the linguistic contrast between a local church and the type of audience alluded to in Acts 2. Within the linguistic understanding of a local congregation it is reasonable and normal to state that "no man understandeth" the languages spoken in tongues. This agrees with the expressions of Peter and the accompanying disciples in Acts 10, who judged the tongues to "magnify God," though there is no suggestion of their understanding the tongues spoken.

The sphere of tongues

"In the Spirit" (v. 2) lifts tongues to the highest level of spirituality in things rendered to God, to that level of which "the Father seeketh such." We must use a capital "S," for "Spirit is not the higher spiritual powers of our nature, but the Holy Spirit" (C. Hodge Commentary on 1 Corinthians, p. 279). Tongues here, as in Acts 2, originate in the third Person of the Godhead and not in the human spirit. The importance of this is usually ignored by the adversaries of tongues and not sufficiently appreciated by its advocates. Tongues are a supernatural manifestation of the highest order and must not be belittled into a commonplace thing of human dimensions. The Holy Spirit is the environment in which the exercise of the Gift is located.

The carnality in the Corinthian church, though present, has been greatly exaggerated. The church was very young. Most members were Gentiles lately saved from heathenism. There would be few, if any, mature Christian leaders. Probably no New Testament writings, as we know them, were in existence. We must not therefore compare the Corinthian church with one, say, in the British Isles today. Any comparison made should be to a pioneer missionary situation. Any missionary will agree that Corinth would be typical as to the problems found in such circumstances. Church life in civilization, with a long history behind it, possessing a complete New Testament and mature leaders, often contends with carnality.

This puts the Corinthian carnality in perspective, while not condoning it in any way.

Such a situation emphasises the “grace-Gift” character of tongues and other Spiritual Gifts, which harmonises with Acts, where sometimes very immature and ignorant believers were yet endowed with tongues and prophecy, e.g. Acts 10 and 19. Tongues are not stated in the New Testament to be an infallible guide as to the measure of knowledge possessed or the degree of sanctification achieved. For friend or foe to use them in this way reveals ignorance of New Testament teaching. Paul condemned the Corinthian carnality and immaturity, but recognised their tongues as being “in the Spirit.”

“He speaketh mysteries” (v. 2) does not mean that there is something ghostly or unearthly about the utterances, nor does it authorise any weird form of utterance. “Mysteries” is the common New Testament word which means “secrets,” i.e. things previously hidden now being revealed. Thus tongues, though not understood by men, contain things revealed by God. It is striking that Paul ascribes such significance to tongues in the absence of human understanding. This does not detract from its genuineness or rob it of truly Scriptural content. This agrees with Acts 2 where the tongues spoke of “the wonderful works of God,” and Paul agrees with Peter, who believed that tongues, though not understood, magnified God (Acts 10).

The value of tongues

People often inquire as to the practical value of speaking in tongues when the words spoken are not understood. In general, tongues are beneficial as a means of edification. Any exercise “in the Spirit” could not be otherwise. This edification may be at a personal level, for “he that speaketh in an unknown tongue edifieth himself.” This refers to tongues without any interpretation; they edify the soul though the “understanding is unfruitful” (v. 14). The working of the Spirit, which gives rise to the tongues, brings blessing to the soul though the intellect is passive. This is a specific example of the principle that the presence and power of the Spirit make a direct contribution to the upbuilding of spiritual life, whereas truth makes its contribution via the understanding.

Due to the personal benefit derived from speaking in tongues Paul desired that they “all spake with tongues,” a remarkable wish, as some in Corinth overvalued tongues. His desire is relevant to all believers today, inasmuch as this Letter, primarily written to Corinth, is also to “all that in every place call upon the name of Jesus Christ our Lord” (1 : 2).

For edification the Gift of prophecy is superior to tongues in that it edifies the congregation and not just the individual. It is in this sense that he who prophesies is “greater” than the speaker in tongues. No moral or spiritual superiority is implied. For the upbuilding value of tongues to be extended from the personal to the congregational level it is necessary for another Gift to become operative: interpretation of tongues. This makes known to the understanding of the congregation the revelation contained in the tongues and through their understanding they too are edified. It is normally only by the exercise of this companion supernatural Gift that the content of the tongues becomes relevant to men and understood in the local church. Without interpretation tongues are “not unto men but unto God.” In other settings, e.g. Acts 2, tongues may be understood directly, but this is not the norm for a local church, hence the further Gift that the church may be edified.

To deny tongues any place in Christian experience today is to deny God a means of grace which He has ordained for Christians personally and the church congregationally. Who can tell how much the Church of Christ has been weakened throughout most of its history and is being weakened today by a traditional prejudice without theological basis, which rejects this Gift and consequently a means of grace from God to His people, specifically designed for their edification?

A NEWSPAPER recently featured on its front page a large photograph of a pop star on his wedding day. His bride is a model. Openly the caption pointed out that completing the picture was their three-year-old daughter. They were all shown outside a London register office where the ceremony had just taken place.

Why will they do this kind of thing? It is absolutely useless to bemoan the decline in moral standards, as this particular newspaper often does, if at the same time publicity is given to non-events of this nature. Apart from the weird, garish dress of bride and 'groom, a silly enough example in itself, there is the fundamental point that if such things are highlighted and headlined young people and children are surely going to be affected in their thinking. Whatever folk may say to the contrary such behaviour is wrong and it is not normal. We protest against this subtle propaganda in the guise of so-called news.

We could wish that there was some display of good and happy marriages in our news media. Why must all the so-called "society" gossip be so often retailed to us in our papers? Are there not many ordinary folk doing a good job of work and very happily married?

The amazing thing was that the same paper the same day carried another non-event in that a Herefordshire village was rejoicing in that, after saving for twenty-three years, they had actually managed to raise £30,000 so that a plastic (sic!) steeple could be imposed on their church. Really, the mind boggles at this whole ridiculous enterprise. The church building is centuries old and the addition of a twentieth-century plastic horror seems incongruous against many backgrounds, not least that the biggest problem facing our so-called civilisation is the disposal of plastic substances. It may be recalled that Thor Heyerdahl found plastic cartons and washing-up liquid containers bobbing about in the middle of the Atlantic.

We could think of a thousand better ways for the money to be spent. Your editor finds no joy at all in those dreary notices outside so many old-fashioned churches proclaiming things like "We only need £25,000 to get rid of the death-watch beetle. Help us." Does not there come a place where old buildings which have really outlived their usefulness ought to be pulled down and new ones built?

Mind you, we cannot take too much pride in some of our nonconformist barns. It is a good thing that the Church is the people and not the building!

Casting out demons

Pastor Joseph tells the story

"MY father is a sorcerer with a great reputation for casting out demons. When I was about fifteen years old he told me that I would be associated with him in his next case. A man came from a distant village. Help was needed for a young man who was possessed by a spirit of our tribal god.

I rejoiced as we set out, because I knew that, as the witch-doctor's assistant, I would get plenty to eat. I carried the mfuko [plaited bag containing charms, herbs, stones, magical writings, etc.] and my manyaga [rattles]. All night we rattled and drummed until my father was informed by his familiar spirit as to all the details of the patient. He told me that it was a Mzungu [a European demon], some of which are very unco-operative and need much persuasion before they will leave the victim. This one agreed to leave at a certain place at 12 noon after it had eaten. We took the patient to a broad path through the bush. There beside the road we began to prepare the food and build a table and chair from the branches of trees. I killed a cockerel and cooked it and maize and millet. We then began to drum and rattle, calling the spirits to our aid. When the spirit mounted to the patient's head, all was ready. The patient was seated by my father. The demon was thus honoured and a conversation with the demon began. At the commencement of our final drumming session, the patient had been in great distress, crying aloud tearfully, but now he was fairly quiet. My father said to the demon: 'It is now time as we agreed. It is twelve o'clock. The food is ready—meat and two kinds of corn flour. The servant is here. Will you eat? What will you eat?' The patient replied 'I will eat meat.' My father put a piece of meat on the table at which the patient was sitting. 'What else will you eat?' said my father. 'Millet,' said the patient. Father put a dumpling of millet on the table. The patient said 'I want maize.' A lump of maize was put on the table by my father. The patient said 'He is going out.' Then the demon said 'I am going out. I am going out.' 'You are going out?' my father asked. 'Yes,' replied the demon. 'He is going,' said the patient. 'Right,' said my father, 'Goodbye.' 'He is going to his own place,' said the patient.

"My father then took the patient by both hands and lifted him up and off the seat. When we returned to the village my father spent some time in discussion with his spirits as to the form of protection the patient needed. Finally, charms were made and tied on the patient; they would prevent the demon from returning. We went home very happy at having persuaded a mzungu to co-operate.

"Not very long after, when I was sent to Bulu's school, I heard him speak of Yesu. My heart was hot. Then Yesu came into my life because I asked him to.

"Now I am really casting out demons, not defrauding the people for profit. Before I respected the demons and we agreed with them and co-operated to deceive our patients. Now I cast them out in the name of Yesu, such a mighty name. I address them as 'foul spirits'! If they refuse to come out I invoke the precious blood. Some are very obstinate, but as long as the patient is seeking Yesu they come out finally."

Footnote. Pastor Joseph, a member of the Wakweli tribe of 40,000 to 50,000 people, Chairman of the E.M.S. in Tanzania, has been much used in casting out demons and praying for the sick.

Never so proud

JERUSALEM

IT is sad but honest to confess that in Jerusalem an exhibition of Pentecost has often made one ashamed to own a relationship, for Jerusalem seems magnetically attractive to spiritual cranks and religious "off-beats."

I recently had an experience which made me proud to be a Pentecostal and openly to declare it and associate myself with it.

This was when I met the survivors of the Tel Aviv massacre. There is no need for me to repeat the details of the terrorist machine-gunning of innocent tourists at Lod airport. The survivors came to Jerusalem. When it was learned that they were mostly an Evangelical Protestant group some local ministers arranged a service in the hotel where they were staying as an act of fellowship, prayer and encouragement from others in the household of faith. I was invited to take part. I discovered that the majority there were Pentecostal believers from Puerto Rico.

That service will live in my memory as a revelation of what Pentecostal Christianity really means. How they sang, prayed, praised and testified! With sixteen of their friends unexpectedly and brutally murdered, with more than twenty others still in hospital, these survivors—many of them bandaged and still suffering the after-effects, with broken hearts and tear-swollen eyes—showed the reality of their faith in Jesus and the power of the Holy Spirit in their lives to sustain in all circumstances. People from the West Indies and the Caribbean are by nature and temperament excitable, but what they showed was not emotionalism, tongues and noise. It was something that revealed a depth of character and life that gave joy, victory and triumph in circumstances that would normally depress and destroy. This was no light emotionalism or exhibitionist behaviour; this was the wealth of Christian reality in the face of terror, death, bereavement, sorrow and injury. It lifted them above circumstances to become a shining and living example to Jew, Arab and fellow Christians in a land that needs the example most.

This is the type of Pentecostal experience that transcends criticism, creates soul-hunger in others and brings true glory to Jesus the Messiah, Pentecost in precept and practice of which we can be proud.

Another Slant

PASTOR OF ELIM PENTECOSTAL CHURCH,
ERDINGTON, BIRMINGHAM

I INTERVIEW executives, consultants and the like at one end of the social scale, but a recent survey in the Winson Green area gave me an opportunity in a very different field. I met young men, unemployed and with no obvious intention of looking for work; it seemed such a waste of human life. As someone said, "A useless life is a living death." Thank God, for the Christian life means Christ.

At one house the person held an Alsatian dog firmly. In recording their answers to a number of questions I added the footnote that I had done so rather than become a victim!

The impact of the Gospel among extreme social levels seems to be negligible. Passing the prison at Winson Green reminded me that my church treasurer, a representative for a tools wholesaler, once called there with a view to selling files and hacksaw blades! He was politely told that there was no business, even in the prison workroom. I felt that he was an example of persistence!

In another far different area I was amazed at the superstition of prosperous pagans. I puzzled at number 12a and looked for number 13, which was missing. It is pathetic to see this in such sophisticated society.

One woman explained that she always read anything put through her door, except "religious stuff"; she would have none of mine either! People seem to become conditioned to door-to-door visitation and Gospel literature.

The number of houses where young children are left alone because their parents are both at work to keep up a high standard of living is surprising. Even children of pre-school age answered the doors, which to me is scandalous. I went to one house doing a crime prevention survey and the people were out. A note was displayed explaining where the key was left, which made nonsense of crime prevention publicity.

One's ministry is enriched by an understanding of human existence that is so vital in seeking to point sinners to Christ.

SUMMER HOLIDAY

Words and drawing by

1. The right way

SCHOOL had finished for the summer and Brian and Carol were helping their parents to prepare for their holiday. The two children were very excited. They were going camping; the first time that they would spend a holiday in a tent. Carol was busy helping her mother to pack clothes and Brian was helping his father to load the camping equipment into the car. They had an early dinner. As soon as Mrs. Brown had washed the dishes, they were ready.

The two children got into the car and waited while their father checked that all the windows and doors of their house were locked. "Did you remember to cancel the milk?" he asked Mrs. Brown. "Yes, dear," said his wife. "Right, now we can be on our way," said Mr. Brown. He started the car.

After they had been travelling for an hour or so Mr. Brown stopped the car. "Why are you stopping, daddy?" asked Carol. "Well, I'm not sure which road we take now," said Mr. Brown. "I'd better have a look at the map."

Mrs. Brown handed him the map and he opened it out. "Now, let me see. Ah," said Mr. Brown, pointing to a road marked on the map. "This is the way we go. It won't take us long now."

"It is a good thing that we remembered to bring the map with us, isn't it, daddy?" said

Brian. "We might have taken the wrong road and got lost."

"Quite true," replied Mr. Brown. "But we will not get lost as long as we follow the map."

"Do you know," asked Mrs. Brown, "that God has a map for us to follow, too. It is the Bible. God's perfect plan. It tells us how we should begin our journey—by giving our hearts to Him. It shows us which paths to take and gives us all the information we need for our journey through life. If we follow this map that God has prepared for us and ask Him to help and guide us on our way, we will never get lost."

Testimony time

I WAS in the Royal Albert Hall on Easter Monday. In the afternoon meeting I had a severe pain in my side which caused me to perspire. When the people went down for Divine healing I went with them. Hands were laid on me by Pastor A. Tee, who said "Look away to Jesus," which I did and my side was instantly healed.

On the Tuesday following I had to go for an X-ray for my chest, as my doctor was very concerned. The result was negative, but God's work was positive! So my healing on Easter Monday was twofold. My doctor looked at me as if some strange thing had happened to me. Well, of course, it had! I had already told him about prayer. To God be all the glory.

Under the shadow of the Otumfuo

GHANA

IN August 1971 we moved to the garden city of Kumasi, the capital of the Ashanti region, approximately 175 miles north of Accra. In this lovely city it is easy to forget that you are living in Africa, for "Africa" is presented to the western world as dense forests, mud houses and half-clad people. Kumasi is called "the garden city" because much time and money have been spent in cultivating tree-lined streets, parks and gardens in the centre of the shopping area. We can buy European foodstuffs more plentifully than in Koforidua and, because of the gold mines and modern factories in the surrounding area, quite a few expatriates live here, too. We feel very privileged to be here.

It was a delight to learn that our near-neighbour would be the Asantehene himself. The Otumfuo Opoku Ware II is the "king" of the most powerful of the tribes of Ghana—the Ashanti people. As I write he has come on to the veranda of his house to speak to some of his subjects. He is a very impressive man in appearance. The pageantry which surrounds him reflects the high position he holds.

Living next to the Asantehene has definite advantages. He has armed guards outside his house—one during the daytime and two through the night. The watchman who guards the church and mission house has a police whistle, so we feel pretty safe knowing that within "whistling distance" there is an armed guard to come to our rescue.

A few weeks ago when the sun was extremely hot at noon, the king's guard came and stood in the shade of our garage. He still stood to attention and looked as if he was guarding our property!

We have mains electricity in our home which we appreciate very much, but because this is a developing part of town and because the electricity board are installing street lighting, which means major operations on the existing plant, we often suffer blackouts. We duly light our bush light and candles, but we know that the inconvenience will be short-lived because, within minutes, a driver in a small blue car leaves the king's house to report the failure to the electricity authorities. Twenty minutes later the car returns and five minutes afterwards the lights blaze on.

In May 1970, the old Asantehene died and the people of Ashanti have just finished two weeks of customary funeral activities to mark the end of mourning. Kumasi was deluged with oranges, reds and blacks—the traditional funeral colours. The comings and goings at the house across the road were endless. Many important people came to pay their respects and to bring their traditional gifts (usually sheep) to the Asantehene. We were captivated by the splendour of the dress of the chiefs, who were shaded by enormous embroidered umbrellas, followed by a retinue of servants.

How powerful and revered the Asantehene is! A few weeks ago a car with a police escort drew up outside the house and we had the privilege of getting a glimpse of Dr. Busia, the former Prime Minister, and his wife. The people tell us that shortly the Asantehene will take up residence in the palace, now that the funeral rites are finished for the old king. We shall be sorry. We shall miss him very much.

Otomfuo Opoku Ware II gives us protection; his presence in our district means we share the privileges given to him as king; we are eye-witnesses of many splendid scenes and much pageantry which we would otherwise miss. As children of God through the precious blood of the Lord Jesus Christ, we have been "brought nigh." We have His protection (Psalm 121:5). We share the privileges which are His by sovereign right (Ephesians 2:6, 7), and we are "eye-witnesses of His majesty" (2 Peter 1:16).

The Christians in Ashanti often sing of Jesus as "Otumfuo Ohene," the all-powerful King. Knowing the greatness of the Asantehene in the lives of his subjects and in his kingdom they dance for joy when they realise the greatness of the all-powerful Jesus in the lives of His subjects and in His kingdom!

We have had the privilege of being received by the Asantehene. He said that he knows that we are near neighbours and that we should make his home our home. It reminded me of John 14:2, 3!

Bangladesh today

THE Evangelical Alliance, of which Elim is a member, has a relief organisation called "TEAR Fund." Its director, George Hoffman, recently visited Bangladesh and reported to a press conference on his return.

He told of the appalling conditions. In an area the size of Scotland there are 75,000,000 people. With more than 3,000 miles of navigable rivers occupying one-sixth of the country's 55,000 square miles, this newly born nation is the most densely populated area in the world. There are 1,300 persons for each square mile.

Prior to the recent war this area was one of the most under-developed in the world. Except for coal, there were almost no minerals. Apart from the jute industry and textile mills there was little more industry. The national income was about £25 per person—one of the lowest in the world—and nearly eighty per cent of the population could not read or write.

Since the war this area is the most devastated country in the world. Millions have returned from West Bengal to find their villages razed to the ground, their crops and fields ruined. They have no ploughs, no bullocks, no seed rice, no milk cows. They start from scratch and eighty per cent of the nation earn their living from working on the land. Bangladesh has lost very nearly her entire transportation and communication systems. Five hundred road and rail bridges were blown up during the fighting and 7,000 of the country's 8,000 trucks have been destroyed. Some 1,600,000 dwelling places, each housing, on average, a family of seven, have been wiped out. In village after village Mr. Hoffman found whole communities living on the stumps of their old houses. There are the pockets and camps of refugees herded together in a common struggle for survival, like the 160,000 Biharis he visited in their ruined village outside Dacca and the pathetic group of 1,000 Bengali refugees huddled together under the shadow of the sports stadium in the centre of Dacca in an area no bigger than half a football field, with no food, no shelter and no sanitation.

Very few communities in the country areas have not suffered loss. Bangladesh leaders claim that some 3,000,000 Bengalis were killed during the war and that 200,000 women were raped by soldiers. Because of their religious code, which regards them now as "defiled persons," many of these victims are outcasts.

The medical situation is the most horrifying. The country has no more than 5,200 Bengali doctors and only 696 trained registered nurses. Most of the doctors and 600 of these nurses work in urban centres. Forty per cent of the country's proposed rural health centres never started through lack of staff. Before the war, of the rural health centres that had been built, only twenty per cent were functioning and 205 of these centres were destroyed during the fighting. Only two per cent of the population are receiving regular medical care.

The director of the United Nations relief operations has stated: "There are no yardsticks for measuring this disaster. Previous relief operations around the world faced nothing so immense." As one government official put it: "We must hope that the world understands our need."

TEAR Fund are prepared to finance nurses who will go to Bangladesh for periods of six months or more. They have raised £50,000 and are well on the way to the next £50,000. Most of this has come from British young people. Undergraduates at Oxford, for example, raised £800 by fasting.

Bangladesh is wide open to the Gospel. Formerly a Moslem country, the people have turned away from this religion because the atrocities in the recent war were done in the name of Mohammed. The population now trust the word of Christian missionaries. They use the word "renewal" as a motto and the missionaries are able to tell them that true renewal is found only in Jesus Christ. The Bible is read every day from radio stations as part of the ordinary programmes. The government has given a hospital to missionaries and it is known to all as a Christian hospital.

The need is desperate. As many as six families live in one room as large as a small hall and some families have twelve children.

Pray for this land. Bangladesh is the eighth largest nation in the world. This is a day of great opportunity for Christian missionaries. May God send labourers into this great harvest field to reap while there is time.

Book review

Turned on to Jesus, by Arthur Blessitt with Walter Wagner. Published by Word Books. Price 50p, postage and packing 8p extra.

This autobiography deals with much of the life of Arthur Blessitt, but it centres mainly around how the gospel of Christ is brought to Sunset Strip and how the meeting-place known as "His Place" is established. This is described as "half-way between a church and a nightclub." It is a moving, gripping story of a man who is prepared to do, go, or be anything in order to win others for Christ—in his own words: "To cleave a soul to Christ I would go anywhere, do anything."

The methods used to reach young people who have been rejected by the main stream of society may seem unconventional, perhaps because we are not used to them, but one cannot deny the impact of the testimony and witness of "His Place" and those committed to it. Written in down-to-earth language with very vivid, true-to-life descriptions of the American scene, the book leaves many questions, which perhaps will be dealt with in another book by Mr. Blessitt. The gospel comes through clearly, however, and the challenge to spread the message of Christ through personal witnessing is very forceful.

There would be tremendous danger if anyone tried to copy the ministry of Arthur Blessitt without having received a similar call, but if this book causes its readers to witness more fervently and brings unsaved to Christ it will have accomplished its purpose and for this reason it should be read.

To the sick

I write these lines, beloved,
To assure you of my love,
Sealed by the blood of Jesus
HIS LOVE, not ours, unites us
In poverty or wealth,
In joy as well as sorrow,
In sickness as in health,
Bound with those who love Him
Whate'er their bondage be,
And, when deliverance frees them,
We share their liberty.
I pray that the Holy Spirit
Will quicken your mortal frame,
See Romans eight verse eleven
A promise for you to claim,
Stand upon God's promises
Which are for ever true,
Made and confirmed in Jesus
And every one for you!

“According to thy faith”

From Street Arab to Evangelist is the title of the life story of Albert Shakesby, one-time athlete and weight-lifter who was gloriously converted and became a gospel preacher, leading 25,000 people to Christ during his busy years of soul-winning. I must confess that I had not heard about this notable Yorkshire evangelist. I have enjoyed reading his story set mainly in the city of Hull, of which he was a native. At the end of the book I discovered a remarkable testimony to the healing power of God. Mr. Shakesby was conducting a mission in Beverley and, while resting, was called to a great fire at the Crathorne Flour Mill. While helping to fight the terrible blaze and waiting at the foot of a ladder to take a turn at the hose, he saw a man at the top of the ladder fall headlong towards the cobblestones. Albert Shakesby rushed to break the fall and took the full thirteen stones weight of the man. He was knocked unconscious and sustained severe internal injuries. The man whom he caught was not detained in hospital, but his rescuer had to endure long weeks of illness.

Eventually, when convalescent, the evangelist discovered that he could get about only by using crutches and that he had no feeling or strength in the lower part of his body. He persevered, recommenced his mission and had the joy of seeing Wilson, the man whom he had saved from certain death, in the crowded chapel night after night. All this took place in early January 1907 and, in the town of Sileby, near Leicester, during the month of May, Mr. Shakesby was able to take an evening off to travel to the famous Primitive Methodist Camp Meeting at Mow Cop. He went with the intention of enjoying the great meetings, but he was prevailed upon to speak, even though he had to be lifted to the platform in a bath-chair. Imagine his joy and his surprise when the Rev. Stephenson led the thousands of people there in a mighty prayer for his instantaneous healing. Shame overwhelmed the crippled preacher and he began to sob because of his lack of faith, for he had believed God only for a gradual deliverance. When called upon to speak, he broke off into prayer and cried, “Thou art going to heal me now.” Faith took possession of him and he recorded later that a strange sensation passed all through his body, just as though he were inhaling ether. He lifted his arms and exclaimed, “Thou hast done it, Lord, yes, Thou hast healed me!” He stood erect and let the crutches fall. A great volley of “amens” and “hallelujahs” went up to God from the crowd and the evangelist took off his collar, tie and coat and walked up and down throughout his address, which lasted for an hour and was crowned with the salvation of twenty souls. At the end of the service Shakesby closed his eyes and asked God to help him leave the platform. He took a mighty leap to the ground by faith, thus confounding the doubters who had said, “Oh! It’s all a farce! He’ll want the crutches when he gets off the dray!”

This glorious account of the power of God to heal thrilled me and quickened my own faith. It reads like those recorded in the New Testament and is Scriptural in its very essence.

I leave with you words from the handbook The Heart of Healing, by George Bennett, a fitting commentary on all I have shared with you: “Faith is a far more powerful quality than we shall ever know. But we can see that in the context of healing it is not simply the continuing faith of a Christian believer, however helpful that might be. It is a quality evoked for a specific occasion to meet a specific need. This quality, when present, provides the necessary environment for an incoming of creative energy. All life is the outward manifestation of God’s creative energies continuously flowing into and sustaining our created order. Where expectant faith is present the creative energies of God have free flow.”

WHY ?

THIS is the question asked by children and you are surprised by their ability to keep it up! When you have answered one "Why?"—as you think—to everybody's satisfaction, out it comes again, "Yes, but why?"!

They are not alone in this, however, and to help you answer some of the questions which arise during personal witnessing, door-to-door work, etc., we have prepared a series of pamphlets under the very title, "Why?"

Current titles are: "The Baptism in the Holy Spirit," "Church Membership," "Divine Healing," "Salvation," "Prayer," "Baptism," "The Second Advent," "Heaven," "Hell," "Infant Dedication" and "Marry in Church."

Order from Grenehurst Press, P.O. Box 38, Cheltenham, please, sending cash with order. Prices are: 100 for 50p (postage and packing 10p extra), 250 for £1.25 (p. and p. 25p). 500 for £2.25 (p. and p. 30p), and 1,000 for £4 (p. and p. 35p extra). You can order assorted titles in multiples of twenty-five.

Church report

BRIGHTON, The Lanes Pastor: F. A. Hodge

God is really moving among us here, increasing our numbers especially at the Sunday evening revival services. We have seen several souls drawn into the kingdom over the past few weeks.

The new Hammond organ is now installed and fully operative, adding great depth to the singing in our services. It also acts as a witness to all those who walk through The Lanes on Sundays, as the organ is plainly audible throughout the surrounding area.

On May 19th, the newly elected Mayor of Brighton, Mr. Packham, attended the church on his first day of office for a civic service, when he was presented with a Living Bible by our minister. The mayor gave a short speech and assured us that he and his wife would search into the Scriptures. Mrs. Packham was presented with a bouquet by a young church member on behalf of the Sunday schools.

Among recent events is the visit of the Swedish band and choir, "Team England '72," a party of sixty young people who are really on fire for God.

Shall I or shall I not?

by Eldin R. Corsie

NATIONAL YOUTH DIRECTOR

GOD will never leave us in any doubt regarding what is right and what is wrong in the Christian life. We ask the questions: "What may I do?"; "Where may I go?"; "What is right?"; "What is wrong?" The majority of Christians have asked these questions many times.

Perhaps the following will help you to decide for yourself what is fitting conduct for a child of God.

Is the activity in question definitely forbidden by the Lord for believers? Many things are stated in God's Word as wrong in no uncertain terms, so seek to know what the Scripture says. "Abstain from all appearance of evil" (1 Thessalonians 5:22).

Is there any glory for God in it? God's command is: "Whether therefore ye eat, or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God" (1 Corinthians 10:31). Never forget that we are not our own any more; we belong to the One who saved us from eternal death, therefore we are able to live only for His glory (Colossians 1:10).

Does it mar my fellowship with God? The price we must pay if we compromise with the world is the loss of fellowship with God. It is not possible to have fellowship with both at the one time (1 John 2:15-17).

Would the Lord have done it? "Christ... suffered for us, leaving us an example, that ye should follow His steps" (1 Peter 2:21). How different our lives would be if we walked in His steps in everything. Let us make it the rule of our lives always to ask the question, "What would Jesus do?" before we make a decision concerning our conduct.

Would I like to be found doing it when the Lord returns? "Abide in Him; that when He shall appear, we may have confidence, and not be ashamed before Him at His coming" (1 John 2:28). Someone has said, "Don't do anything, say anything or go anywhere that would cause you shame if the Lord should come."

Can I feel free to do it when I remember that the Holy Spirit dwells within? "What? know ye not that your body is the temple of the Holy Ghost which is in you?" (1 Corinthians 6:19). Read Ephesians 4:30. Remember that Christ is not only watching our actions from the heavenlies but we are actually taking Him—in the person of the Holy Spirit—everywhere we go. The body in which He dwells is being used for either evil or good at all times.

What effect will my conduct have upon others? "None of us liveth to himself" (Romans 14:7). Though we may not realise it, perhaps other, weaker, Christians are watching our lives. Will our actions cause fellow Christians to stumble or to be built up? See Romans 14:13; Philippians 1:10.

Is there the least bit of doubt in my mind about it? If, after you have asked yourself the preceding questions, you still cannot make up your mind as to whether the activity is right or wrong, don't do it, "for whatsoever is not of faith is sin" (Romans 14:23).

by
D. C. Lewis

Monday, July 10th Hebrews 12 : 12-29

"See that ye refuse not Him that speaketh" (v. 25).

God has spoken to us by His Son; the call is clear and the revelation is complete. How can we refuse the challenge? His appeal is surely to prove the effectiveness of faith and its boundless possibilities. "Faith, mighty faith, the promise sees and looks to God alone, laughs at impossibilities and cries, 'It shall be done'" (Wesley). To serve God acceptably (v. 28), faith must always be foremost.

"I will never leave thee, nor forsake thee" (v. 5).

This is surely one of the most precious of His wonderful promises; it pledges His presence and His provision for His people. Be content! What more can we desire than the assurance of His presence? Fullness of joy is guaranteed (Psalm 16 : 11) and pleasures for evermore. There is provision for our every need for each and every day.

"Jesus Christ the same yesterday, and today, and for ever" (v. 8).

The unchanging Lord and Saviour is ever present to meet our every need. Let us acclaim Him. Realise anew His willingness to presence Himself with us, to provide, to empower, to comfort, to guide, to sustain, to keep us firm in the faith so that we shall not be influenced or carried about with the doctrines that deny His all-sufficiency to save to the uttermost (v. 9).

Thursday, July 13th Nahum 1 : 1-15

"The Lord is good, a stronghold in the day of trouble; and He knoweth them that put their trust in Him" (v. 7).

God is good and God is great (v. 3). This was the testimony of Nahum; may we praise Him today. "The Lord hath His way" (v. 3). His power and authority are beyond dispute. He will over-rule in every situation. No opposition or power is too great for Him to overcome. "Who can stand before His indignation?" (v. 6). His knowledge is as great as His power: "He knoweth them that trust in Him." A mighty fortress is our God, a never-failing source of strength.

"Keep the munition, watch the way, make thy loins strong" (v. 1).

Fortify mightily, for the enemy is ever present. Here is the strategy with which we should oppose him. The Word should be, today as always, our strong weapon, kept in readiness for effective use in the conflict. "They overcame him . . . by the word" (Revelation 12 : 11). Like a roaring lion Satan seeks to devour; let us be alert, watching unto prayer. We can be fortified, for "the name of the Lord is a strong tower" (Proverbs 18 : 10; Psalm 61 : 3).

"Behold, I am against thee, saith the Lord of hosts" (v. 5).

The indictment was weighty. The judgment was against the moral pollution that prevailed: lies, robbery (v. 1), depravity, deceit, violence and witchcraft (v. 4). The child of God must always oppose these sins that are so apparent in the life of our nation today. Judgment will surely fall on those who continue in opposition to God's way. Nineveh was laid waste (v. 7). "Righteousness exalteth a nation."

Sunday, July 16th

Jeremiah 1 : 1-8

"To whom the word of the Lord came" (v. 2). "It came also" (v. 3).

The coming of the word of the Lord to Jeremiah was progressive and revealing: "I formed thee" (v. 5); "I knew thee"; "I sanctified thee"; "I ordained thee." This prophet was created and called of God at an express time, ordained for a special task.

What of my response? Do I say "I cannot speak"? The Lord will never be tolerant of our excuses. "Whatsoever I command thee thou shalt speak. Be not afraid . . . I am with thee" is our confidence too.

1972—International Book Year

WHY should it not be for us evangelical Christians the year of THE Book : the Bible ?

Have we not more or less neglected, forgotten it ? How many children of God content themselves with simply reading the Bible verses quoted daily on the tear-off slips of evangelical calendars ?

Could not we, during this year, repent with the psalmist (Psalm 119 : 20) ? Let us get back to the Bible, to the Book of books. Read it. Believe its message. Obey it without reserve and make it known. We often plead lack of time or fatigue for not reading it. Are we sincere ? Do we not need to awake (Nehemiah 8 : 1-3) ?

It is good, expedient, indispensable that we read the Word of God. Let us be pliable, full of good will, that the Book of God will not be a stranger to us (Colossians 3 : 16). Luther said : "May it dwell in you, not as a passing guest for a day or two, but as a member of the family who never departs."

In the domain of reading the world makes a considerable effort. In 1970 world production of books was in the order of 500,000 titles and of 7-8,000,000,000 copies a year. Between 1950 and 1970 world production of titles doubled and the number of copies tripled. At the same time, taking into account literate adults and school children, the reading population of the world doubled. The population of the U.S.S.R. represents 6.8 per cent of the world population and claims 15.6 per cent of the total production, i.e. more than 1,000,000,000 copies. In Cuba the production of books increased by 25 per cent between 1966 and 1968 (Unesco).

What are we going to do—retreat or progress ?

Let us read the Word of God (Psalm 1 : 1, 2).

Let us maintain or re-establish the family altar (Deuteronomy 6 : 6-9).

Let us believe the Word of God and obey its message (Romans 10 : 17 ; James 1 : 23).

Let us make the Bible known (2 Timothy 4 : 3).

Do not let the spirit of the world penetrate either our lives or our churches. Rather let us be true soul-winners by our example and by our love for the truth.

Book review

Bible Characters and Doctrines, published by Scripture Union. Price 10p, postage and packing 4p each extra.

Nadab to Boaz—the character of God

This book is one of a series of Scripture Union Bible study aids ; they are published quarterly. It is a volume of Bible characters and doctrines with appropriate Bible readings intended for daily use. The sections on Bible characters and the doctrinal sections dealing with the character of God alternate throughout the book. There are ninety-one sections, providing material for three months.

The character studies are well drawn and intensely interesting, bringing out details which throw fresh light on many well-known Old Testament incidents and the characters involved, e.g. Balaam, Joshua, Jephthah, and on many obscure characters like Nun, the father of Joshua, and the king of Jericho.

The doctrinal expositions on the character of God are excellent. He is holy, righteous, merciful and compassionate, as disclosed in Old Testament history, displayed in the Gospels and the Epistles and exhibited in Christ.

There are selected questions for further study at the end of each section.

This is volume 3 in a scheme to be completed over four years.

Proclaiming the Truths of Pentecost

The astonishing Saviour

by Samuel Gorman

Astonished by His deity

There was the case of a man (Acts 9) who was astonished, attracted and converted consequent upon a revelation of the Lord's deity: "And he trembling and astonished said, Lord, what wilt Thou have me to do?" (v. 6). This scholar and religious zealot, Saul of Tarsus, became known as Paul the great apostle to the Gentiles. Deeply, dogmatically committed to Hebraism, he had set out with determination and with letters of authority to stamp out the Christian witness in Damascus (Acts 9:1, 2). When Ananias was commissioned by the Lord to minister to Saul he said, "Lord, I have heard by many of this man, how much evil he hath done to Thy saints at Jerusalem: and here he hath authority from the chief priests to bind all that call on Thy name" (vv. 13, 14). Saul's reputation as a persecutor of the Church was well known and had preceded him to Damascus.

To Saul, Jesus was a Man disgraced and so hated by the people that they had Him put to death thinking that they had dispensed with Him for ever. Suddenly he was confronted with a stupendous revelation that challenged, revolutionised and altered the whole course of his life: "As he journeyed, he came near to Damascus: and suddenly there shined round about him a light from heaven: and he fell to the earth, and heard a voice saying unto him, Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou Me? And he said, Who art Thou, Lord? And the Lord said, I am Jesus"! Jesus was alive from the dead! No wonder Saul was so astonished and startled that he fell to the earth! As a result of this overwhelming revelation of the deity and Lordship of the risen Saviour, he was drawn to Him and became His devoted follower for life, preaching that Jesus was indeed the Son of God (v. 20).

It is the responsibility of the Church to confront men and women with the power and authority of the risen, exalted Son of God in an endeavour to bring them to realise their need of Jesus as Saviour and Lord of their lives (Romans 10: 9, 13).

There were people who were astonished, taken aback and repelled by a demonstration of the deity of Jesus. Judas had betrayed the Saviour to the rulers for thirty pieces of silver and was on his way with a band of officers and men (some commentators estimate hundreds of them) fully armed and determinedly intent on arresting Jesus. Courageously and calmly Jesus confronted them and inquired "Whom are you looking for?" and they answered "Jesus of Nazareth," to which He replied "I am He." Then an astonishing, startling thing happened, for, as they converged upon Him, He, figuratively speaking, drew aside the curtain of His flesh, giving them such a revelation and demonstration of His deity and Lordship that they fell back immobilised, unable to arrest Him (John 18: 6). Afterwards He went with them voluntarily, with the proviso that no harm came to the disciples who had accompanied Him into Gethsemane (vv. 7-13).

If necessary, Jesus could still give such repelling demonstrations of Himself, but the emphasis of His message to mankind, which the Church must implement and propagate, is, "When ye have lifted up the Son of Man, then shall ye know that I am He . . . And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto Me" (John 8: 28; 12: 32).

People will be filled with fear and dread by the awe-inspiring revelation of His deity at the Great White Throne judgment. The universal fear at the end time is revealed in the Revelation when people of different nationalities and varied social status will call upon the rocks and mountains to fall on them to hide them from the "face of Him that sitteth on the throne, and from the wrath of the Lamb" (Revelation 6: 15-17). Even this will pale into insignificance on that solemn day when all Christ-rejectors stand before Jesus at the Great White Throne judgment. His presence will be so expressive of Divine majesty, power and authority that even the earth and heaven will flee away (Revelation 20: 11), indicating that they will be suspended in space before Him. When Adam and Eve sinned, they tried to hide themselves from God, so will the people who called for the rocks and the mountains to fall upon them, but at the Great White Throne there will be no hiding place. What an astonishing and startling time it will be!

How vitally necessary it is in these days for the Church to go all out in an endeavour to impress upon people that it is imperative that they accept Jesus now, rather than be rejected by Him on that great day and be lost for ever. ☺

The view from the top of the Wenallt is breathtaking, but the most inspiring sight was well over 300 young people gathered around a camp fire for a barbecue outreach. Many were with us for the first time. Over forty cars and four mini-buses transported them to the site.

The music and testimonies were good and Pastor Ray Hughes gave a short, straight-to-the-point gospel message. Eight people responded, among them a young husband and wife, there for the first time.

J. H. DICK.

Some of the children then sang the story of Jonah, while others acted the various parts. The setting was complete with scenery and a boat out of which a very small "Jonah" was cast, only to be devoured by a big, black whale. All were happy to see Jonah back on the shore and making his way to Nineveh—"according to the Word of the Lord."

The speaker was Peter Wager, a London Assemblies of God pastor, who spoke to the children first on "Be sure your sin will find you out." He then gave a gospel address to the adults. Several children responded to the appeal. We thank God for His blessing on the meeting.

ANDREA WILLIAMS.

COVENTRY

Pastor : J. H. Newman

A modern musical rendering of "Jonah and the Whale" was the theme of the Sunday school anniversary. It was a pleasure to see the parents and friends of the children gathering with us and extra seating was brought in. The church was packed to capacity.

The children began by singing some choruses to the accompaniment of the tambourine band.

SOUTH SHIELDS

Pastor : A. P. Johnston

When I travelled north on Easter Monday, South Shields was little more than a name to me, but eleven weeks, 3,000 miles, hundreds of visits and nearly 100 services have changed all that! I feel as if I have been here for years!

It has been wonderful to see our Lord Jesus Christ confirming His Word with signs following—saving souls, healing bodies and leading many to the place of willingness to be baptised in water.

We had a blessed spring bank holiday weekend, when Mr. Kenneth Harrison, of Scarborough, presented the church with a lovely electronic organ. He, his wife and some friends ministered in song. Mr. Harrison was healed of diabetes in the Scarborough church some years ago.

We were particularly thrilled to welcome our Secretary-General recently. Pastor J. T. Bradley came to receive into fellowship the first members of the Elim family in South Shields. On the Saturday we had our first fellowship tea, one of the best I have ever been to, with about eighty people present. On Sunday, Mr. Bradley gave the right hand of fellowship to nearly forty people and ministered the Word in such a way that he left people in no doubt that they were joining a Pentecostal church.

One cannot be too grateful for the tremendous enthusiasm of the members and friends of the church here. Most of the rooms at the rear of the church have been transformed by the hard work of a faithful congregation.

Our great need at the moment is for young people with musical talent to assist in establishing youth departments in the church. We would appreciate the prayers of God's people in this matter.

A. P. JOHNSTON.

Ladies' day at Llantrisant

Each year in a different place is held the annual gathering of the ladies of the Welsh Presbytery. This year all roads led to Llantrisant. It was a great joy to see so many filling a church hired for the occasion. Although the weather was far from perfect, there was an atmosphere of great spiritual joy and blessing. The afternoon and evening programmes were filled with varied, talented items, various ministers' wives taking part, together with singing items from the churches in Swansea and Caerphilly. The services were ably convened by Mrs. Jean Hunston, the district superintendent's wife, and the congregation of several hundred ladies was thrilled with the glowing testimonies to Jesus Christ as Lord and Saviour.

The guest speaker for the day was Mrs. Mary Ward, of Bath, whose ministry enriched the lives of all who were present. The singing of Mrs.

Grace Wood (Cardiff) during the evening service added so much.

Mention should be made of the great effort of Pastor J. J. Glass and the church members at Llantrisant who so ably made arrangements for food.

THIRTY-NINE YEARS IN AND OUT!

A report of recent ministry by the London Crusader Choir (Director : Douglas B. Gray).

HUNDREDS of men gathered in the spacious, attractive chapel of Wormwood Scrubs prison on Sunday, June 11th, 1972. On Sunday, June 11th, 1933, the London Crusader Choir with their founder-conductor Douglas B. Gray commenced their national prison ministry in this very chapel. For thirty-nine years the London Crusader Choir have maintained an unbroken ministry of evangelistic outreach in areas almost prohibited to all with the exception of those of the Establishment. A senior chaplain, Rev. Meridith Davies, M.Th., B.Sc., M.B.E., welcomed the choir and in most glowing terms expressed on behalf of the authorities deep appreciation for a ministry pioneered by the choir and highly esteemed by the Home Office and Prison Commissioners. The high security precautions were in full view, but the choir are much experienced in these fields and were in their usual relaxed and confident mode.

D. B. Gray directed the service throughout and received a moving ovation. He was presented by an inmate on behalf of residents of the prison with an attractive piece of carpentry made within the walls. A great sense of the Spirit of God was apparent throughout the afternoon. Soloists were Marie Hamilton, Elizabeth Harland, Muriel Wright, John Crawley, Alfred Winnett and John Phillips. Accompanists were Colin Godfrey and Alan Amoss. Choral numbers included "What a lovely name," "Be still, my soul" and "Lord God, have mercy." A stirring instrumental item by Victor Johnson completed an afternoon of music with a message.

Our Pastor's sixth anniversary was celebrated recently. Norman Walker of Coventry, an old friend and an able speaker, took as his text on the Saturday evening: "Cast thy burden upon the Lord and He shall sustain thee." We were much blessed and refreshed the following day at both services. His talk taken from Psalm 22 : 6 at the Breaking of Bread was really a new viewpoint on this text. A powerful Gospel message on Paul and Silas in jail brought the day to a close.

On the Monday evening a baptismal service was held in conjunction with the Town Mission. Seventeen passed through the waters, fifteen of them from our church. The speaker was Pastor S. J. Reid. A duet was sung. Six guitars accompanied one piece. The timbrel group also played. Among those baptised were two mothers and their daughters and one grandmother and her granddaughter.

Pastor : B. J. Epton

A time of great blessing was experienced over the bank holiday weekend when we enjoyed the visit of Pastor T. J. Broomhall. Outstanding signs followed the preaching of the Word. Souls were blessed, believers were baptised with the Holy Spirit and miracles of healing took place.

In March, we had a Crusade conducted by our Pastor. The Lord greatly blessed the venture. More than twenty made decisions and some of these were added to the church. Mrs. Lester was brought in a wheel-chair, completely paralysed, the result of a spinal operation three and a half years ago in America. After prayer, no immediate change was noticeable, but on the following Sunday this lady walked into the church unaided and gave the following testimony to one of the stewards to be read to the church : "I would like to thank the Pastor and his wife for their sincere kindness and understanding when I came to the church for prayer. I was a stranger in this country, having emigrated to America some twenty-six years ago. About three and a half years ago I underwent major surgery on my spine, which left me paralysed down the left side of my body. I spent over a year in a wheel-chair and had to undergo more surgery just before my arrival in England four months ago. On being brought to the church, I was prayed over by the minister and his wife and during this time I felt as though something was passing through my whole body. Later the miracle became a reality. Life has taken on a whole new meaning. I give God all the glory."

A women's fellowship has been inaugurated by the Pastor's wife. Visiting speakers comment on the glorious anointing upon these meetings. The Pastor ministers the gospel over Radio Merseyside, reaching over 1,000,000 people at peak listening periods. Plans for evangelising Merseyside are before the Lord. God is honouring the expectancy of faith.

by Gilbert T. S. Dunk

At last came the long-awaited and planned-for arrival of Pastor and Mrs. P. S. Brewster in New Zealand to be guests at our Pentecostal jubilee celebrations. Our friends had their first sight of Wellington out on the ocean as their ship the Ocean Monarch heaved on stormy waters whipped up by a sudden storm and strong gale. By the time they stepped ashore the storm had abated and the sun broke through in welcome to these distant shores.

It was a special joy to my wife and myself to greet our dear friends from home and Elim. With us were Pastor and Mrs. J. E. Worsfold of the Apostolic Church, chairman of the co-ordinating committee planning the visit. This was the beginning of a great occasion, a nation-wide jubilee celebration of the great outpouring of the Holy Spirit under the ministry of Smith Wigglesworth in 1922.

The Brewsters arrived six days earlier than originally planned, so a united service in a local Pentecostal church was hurriedly arranged and Mr. and Mrs. Brewster ministered to a welcoming congregation in a matter of hours after their arrival, a great beginning to a nation-wide ministry to last almost five weeks, touching all the main centres.

The official welcome in Wellington was an historic event. Attending were a number of Pentecostal believers who attended the Smith Wigglesworth meetings, together with dignitaries from the civic authorities, parliament and the historic churches, among them the M.P. for Wellington, who brought personal good wishes from the Prime Minister, who was away from the city, the Mayor, who spoke of the need in the city for an active church, and the chairman of the national council of churches. This occasion presented a splendid opportunity for Mr. Brewster to speak of what God was doing within the Pentecostal movements of the world to people who would have heard very little of this.

In the evening the first public rally was held in the Wellington Concert Chamber, which was full, a grand public witness to the message of the Full Gospel as the four Pentecostal groups joined in a united stand.

The ministry of Mr. Brewster has made a powerful impact on the Pentecostal work in Wellington. He packed twelve preaching engagements into five days, including rallies, a seminar for ministers, visits to the university and a Bible college and united church services. Tremendous interest has been shown in what has been said about World Pentecost, which has resulted in stimulated faith and quickened expectations for a revival in New Zealand. A highlight for Elim folk was a meeting in the Elim Church in Wellington, when some of the other Pentecostal friends joined us to hear the Word of God.

During the week over 100 raised their hands for Christ in response to the message of God's Word, and this has stirred our hearts. Thank you all in Elim at home for helping us in these celebrations by your prayers.

It has been an added pleasure to have Mrs. Brewster with her husband and ministering in delightful words of encouragement in many of the gatherings. We returns thanks to God for sending these two servants of the Lord to our shores.

A further report from Malcolm J. Frith

The first centre the Brewsters visited was Nelson, an unscheduled meeting as they arrived early in New Zealand. Seventeen decisions were made from a congregation of some 200. This meeting set the pattern for those ahead.

After ten days' ministry in Nelson, Wellington and Palmerston North, where about 100 decisions were registered, the Brewsters arrived in Christchurch. The warm weather that day hid the fact that May was the coldest for sixty years. Soon it was bitterly cold again, nevertheless enthusiasm was high and attendance excellent throughout.

For us the Sunday was a day long looked forward to. What a joy to welcome our beloved visitors to the Elim church. Pastor Brewster ministered wonderfully at the communion service. In the afternoon the church was overflowing for a Divine healing service where several responded to the appeal. When the sick were prayed for the power of God fell, and various ones were instantly healed. The four Pentecostal churches in the city joined together for a great Sunday evening service attended by over 1,000. Thirty-five made their decision for Christ. It is a long time since I have seen such a response from one meeting.

The anointing of the Spirit was upon every meeting and it was a great thrill to see numbers baptised in the spirit as well, a young Jewish man whom I had baptised in water a few weeks previously and a lady from Elim who was once an Adventist among them.

Pastor Brewster spoke most acceptably at a ministers' luncheon attended by all denominations, at a gathering of university students, at the teachers' college and at each Pentecostal church, and attended a mayoral reception.

From Christchurch, the Brewsters went south to Dunedin and then north to the Auckland province and thence to Australia.

Thank you, Cardiff, for releasing them for this visit! Thank you, Elim friends everywhere, for praying for it. Rest assured that it did a tremendous good to the Pentecostal testimony here to have a visitor of such world status and of such power in the Holy Spirit. It was also wonderful to be so closely linked with the whole Elim movement, if only for a few days.

Mr. Brewster writes :

My area of service has been totally different from that I experienced in Korea. I am having the opportunity of introducing Pentecost to officials, M.P.s and ministers of many denominations as well as preaching in our Elim churches and in united Pentecostal gatherings. So far there have been over 250 decisions for Christ.

Up to now I have conducted seven seminars for ministers, explained Pentecost in four universities, answered telephone questions on Pentecost for half an hour on the radio, preached in the famous Burns First Presbyterian Church in Dunedin, the first Pentecostal minister ever to do so, had four civic receptions with mayors, M.P.s., ambassadors and the like, giving them my personal testimony to salvation and the Baptism, held four press conferences on the charismatic renewal, lectured in two colleges for two-hour sessions, conducted a forum in an Anglican church, preached in St. John's church to 1,000 people on Pentecost and then prayed for the sick—there have been five and six meetings per day!

The weather is freezing and the winds are icy!

YET another sterling crisis has overtaken us and we have become acquainted with the strange phenomenon of the floating pound.

Do you get the feeling nowadays that it is all getting to be too much for world leaders? Without making any party political point of any kind at all, do you think that statesmanship and oratory are not what they were? Novelists claim that they write what is, that is that their writings reflect the contemporary scene. Newsmen affirm that they, too, simply retail the situation as it exists—we will leave out the vexed question of bias for the moment and admit that there is at least some truth in what they assert. It may be supposed that world leaders are also products of their age. Strangely, at a time when communications are easier and more efficient than they have ever been, pronouncements from those in authority seem less true, less telling than ever they were.

Declarations by the Churchills, the Gladstones, the Roosevelts, the Asquiths, the De Gaulles of this world now appear to be part of history. Posturing before the cameras, the operators of which seem to be seeking ever new angles on the profile, the silhouette, the off-guard moment, the eyes of modern leaders seem to be on opinion polls rather than on people.

What should really cause us concern, however, is that world events are patently too much for our leaders. They do their best, but so many factors are against them. The rapidly increasing urbanisation has much to do with our problems. The world-wide knowledge of conditions almost everywhere spread by books, pamphlets, newspapers, radio and television has led to multiplied millions feeling deprived by comparison with others, at least as far as material things are concerned. Demands arise on an ever-increasing scale and people are not prepared either to wait or to be fobbed off.

Many of us see the signs of the times being very quickly fulfilled. There are clear, unmistakable evidences that the coming of our Lord cannot be far away. We believe that the day will come when He shall reign whose right it is. He who suffered, bled and died, rose again, ascended, lives to intercede and He will come. The world needs Him!

SUMMER HOLIDAY

Words and drawing by

2. The happy tent-maker

THE children were very excited when they reached the field on which they were to pitch their tent. "This is going to be a wonderful holiday," said Carol. "We are quite near the sea and I expect mummy and daddy will take us to the beach."

"I hope so," said Brian, "for I would like to build sand-castles."

"Come along, children!" called Mr. Brown. "I want you to help us to put up the tent."

"Where are we going to pitch it, daddy?" asked Brian.

"I think we will camp by that stream over there," said Mr. Brown, pointing to a nice spot near some trees.

Soon the tent was in place. While Mrs. Brown cooked some sausages on the little camping stove, Brian and Carol helped their father to carry the camping stools and sleeping bags from the car into the tent. When the meal was ready they all tucked into the sausages before going to bed. They curled up inside their sleeping bags. Mr. Brown lighted a little oil lamp that he had hung from one of the tent poles. The tent looked very cosy inside.

"Will you tell us a story before we go to sleep?" Carol asked her father.

"Very well," said Mr. Brown. "As we are in a tent I will tell you about Saul, a very famous tent-maker. Saul loved his work very much, and each morning as soon as he had eaten his breakfast he would run to work to make his tents. He spent hours and hours with needle and thread, sewing millions of stitches. He would sit on the floor cutting cloth, skin and hide into various shapes and sizes and then sew the pieces together. His hands would ache and he got very tired, but he was so happy in his work that he was always smiling and singing. Everyone, from shepherds to kings, came from miles around to buy his tents. Saul's tents were the best tents in all the land."

"Saul must have been very pleased when the kings came to buy his tents," said Brian.

Bible Characters and Doctrines, published by Scripture Union. Price 10p, postage and packing 4p each extra.

Elkanah to David—"The Holy Trinity"

Volume 4 is set out in identical manner to Volume 3. The doctrine of the Holy Trinity is dealt with ably. The writer makes clear that it is not the creation of theologians imposed upon the Scriptures, but it is derived from the Scriptures. Biblical evidence demands that we believe in one God eternally existent in three Persons. In the Old Testament, whether it be history, prophecy or poetry, its truth is stamped across its pages. In the New Testament it is pressed into the Gospels, the Epistles and the Book of Revelation. It is a mystery that baffles the intellect, but should we be surprised by this? As the closing paragraph of Lesson 55 states: "It would be a very great surprise if we could fully comprehend the Being of God! Could a Being without mystery really be God? Great is the mystery of Godliness!"

The lessons to be learned from the studies of Bible characters are many and varied: warning, encouragement, trust. For example, Lesson 58 well declares: "The Christian does well not to trust the world. He does well who insulates himself from the control of secular society. There are entanglements which turn to snares."

These volumes will be a great asset to systematic Bible reading.

The Gift of Tongues

by JOHN HARRIS

PASTOR OF ELIM PENTECOSTAL CHURCH, LURGAN

8. Paul : " I speak with tongues "

1 Corinthians 14 : 6-19

IN vv. 2-5 Paul pointed out the comparative value of tongues and prophecy, giving priority to the latter, unless the tongues are accompanied by interpretation. He developed this theme in the succeeding verses, presenting it mainly in personal terms in relation to tongues, speaking with the understanding, and the church.

The limited value of tongues

The ignorance of men as to the meaning of tongues, unless accompanied by an interpretation, lies behind Paul's question, " If I come unto you speaking with tongues, what shall I profit you ? " He did not say " What shall it profit me ? " for he had already noted personal edification from tongues (v. 4). He made no mention either of interpretation, so the question of profit to " you," i.e. to the Corinthian church, was just an application of the principle stated in v. 2. The church would not be edified by his speaking in tongues alone; that would require a prophetic message or doctrinal instruction. Paul illustrated what speaking in tongues alone would be like in the church, if it was not accompanied by interpretation or understandable instruction. It would be like musical sounds without a melody, a trumpet whose sounds were so unclear that no command was conveyed to the soldier, or a foreigner who could neither understand nor make himself understood.

The Corinthian zeal for spiritual Gifts was recognised, but such gifts should not be sought as an end in themselves, but as a means to a greater end : building up the local assembly. Gifts can make a contribution to this end, but for tongues to do so they must be linked with the Gift of interpretation of tongues. Thus the one endowed with tongues should pray for the Gift whereby tongues may be interpreted to the church for its edification. Interpretation is also a Gift of the Spirit (12 : 10) as implied in 14 : 13, which urges prayer for it. One does not pray for an academic ability to interpret. This Gift is bestowed by the Spirit in answer to prayer, for prayer for spiritual Gifts is both Scriptural and essential.

Speaking in tongues alone should therefore never become a dominating feature of a church's life. It should be linked with, or yield place to, other Gifts and ministries which build up the whole church. This needs to be recognised widely outside the Pentecostal movement and by some within it. Many outside are under the impression that " tongues people " major on this subject in every service and that tongues are exalted above all else. This is not so. The vast majority of Pentecostal churches give tongues its place, but recognise its limitations. Some need to learn that tongues alone will not help their church much and, even when linked with interpretation, tongues are not meant to displace the preaching of the Word of God. We must give all things their rightful places, giving practical recognition to the Scriptural order of things, thus producing a balanced ministry and a maturing church. Such an approach neither exalts tongues to a place of priority nor excludes tongues altogether : both these extreme views are unscriptural.

Specific uses of tongues

It is clear in vv. 14-16 that " with the spirit " is equivalent to " an unknown tongue." The general trend shows this as does the contrasting of both with " the understanding." When speaking in tongues the understanding is not being used and is therefore not increased in knowledge. To my mind we should interpret " spirit " in this passage in the sense of " spiritual Gift," i.e. " using my spiritual Gift." This is more in keeping with the context than if it is taken as the human spirit or the Holy Spirit. It is difficult to see how one's own spirit could pray without the understanding being involved. The person of the Holy Spirit could hardly be called " my Spirit," but His Gifts could be spoken of in this way as He has given them to individuals. To the objection that " Gift " is not found in the text we would reply that the same applies in 12 : 1 and 14:1, where it was added by the translators. We are simply advocating the same here. Paul wrote therefore about the use of the Gift of tongues in various exercises toward God. It is interesting to note that the first person was used; Paul wrote about his personal experience.

Praying in tongues may seem strange to many, but Paul affirms it as part of his spiritual life. He would "pray with the understanding," using his reasoning powers to formulate the expression of his desires, but he would also pray in tongues. His praying had not ceased when he spoke in tongues, but had assumed a new form. He and other men might not understand it, but God did. "I will sing with the spirit" is to "bless" and give "thanks" (v. 16), so a place was envisaged for tongues in the ministry of worship. Praise which others could understand and add their "amen" was not the only form recognised. There was praise in which others could not participate, but it was "well"—thanksgiving in other tongues which might even take the form of singing.

Therefore in devotional life, in communion with God through prayer and worship, the Scripture gives a place to unknown tongues as well as to understandable forms.

Thanksgiving for tongues

"I speak with tongues" was Paul's unashamed confession. This would make him unacceptable to some churches today and unwelcome on many convention platforms. Some seek to distort Pauline teaching on tongues as if he were opposed to this subject, when in fact he identified himself as a tongues-speaker and he identified himself with the tongues-speaking Corinthians, for the Gift to which he testified is clearly the same as the one they had. If he spoke of his own linguistic ability, as an educated person, there would be no point in making a comparison between himself and them regarding speaking in tongues. The specific point of comparison is regarding the degree of exercise of the Gift of tongues: "more than ye all." Irrespective of how we interpret "all," whether collectively, i.e. all of them together, or distributively, i.e. any one from among them all, which is most likely, the result is the same. Speaking in tongues was a familiar experience to Paul; no other conclusion is possible from the comparison made with the profuse tongues-speaking Corinthian Christians. Such abundance of tongues on Paul's part raises the question as to the location of all these tongues utterances, especially in view of the limited operation of this Gift in public life in the church. His prolific use of tongues must have included private as well as public devotions. In all his devotional life there was a definite place for, and extensive use of, the Gift of tongues. If the individuals in Corinth were extremists then Paul made himself even more so! The great difference lay in that he balanced his "extremism" in tongues with "extremism" in other directions, whereas theirs was in one direction only. They were in danger of degenerating into tongues fanatics instead of out-and-out Christians in every sense. There can be no doubt as to whom we should follow. For the bestowal of the Gift of tongues and the benefit derived from its often use Paul gives thanks to God. He was grateful to God for such a Gift as this. How strange that many who are far lesser members should not only be ungrateful for tongues, but even scornful, indifferent, or antagonistic.

The limitations of tongues

In v. 19 Paul applied a principle already made clear in vv. 2-13. He thanked God for his own abundant tongues-speaking experience, yet in the church a few words which could be understood and would instruct the hearers would be better than many in an unknown tongue which no one understood. We must emphasise that here again, as in vv. 2, 3, he meant tongues alone, without any interpretation, which have little edificatory value for the church body. It is abundantly clear from his testimony which precedes v. 19, and from the plea for maturity in understanding which follows it, that it was not a question of eliminating tongues, but of putting them in perspective: knowing them in experience, appreciating their value, and recognising their limitations. To interpret v. 19 as discrediting tongues entirely is to reveal a childishness in understanding which is not only lamentable in those who ought to be mature, but unjustifiable in any intelligent person who reads this chapter with a submissive mind. The church is built up by what is addressed to the mind as a means to strengthen the soul. Tongues do not do this unless they are accompanied by interpretation, hence in the church five understood words are better than ten thousand in an unknown tongue. This is simple reasoning. It is unreasoning childish caprice and prejudice which imposes any other meaning.

AN INCIDENT

A FOUNTAIN OF TEARS

Jeremiah 9 : 1

There he stood at the street corner, pleading with his hearers to turn to God. "I stood at the outside of the crowd," said David Garrick, the great Shakespearian actor, "but found I was imperceptibly working my way to where I eventually found myself, right under where he preached, and where I saw the hot tears flow down his cheeks as he spoke. A woman pointed a shaking finger at him and said, 'Sir, I have followed you since you preached this morning at seven o'clock. I have heard you preach five times in the streets of this city and five times I have been wet with your tears. Why do you weep?'"

The man who wept and preached was George Whitefield. Severely cross-eyed, he was burlesqued on the English stage, accused of immorality (though he was pure in heart and life), and denounced in almost every pulpit of the land, yet five times that day he preached in the streets and five times the woman beheld his eyes wet with tears of compassion for the lost ones.

David Garrick said, "I listened to George Whitefield and, as I listened, I saw his passion and his earnestness. I knew he meant that without Christ men would die. When he came to the place where he could say nothing more, he reached up those mighty arms, and his voice seemed almost like a thunderstorm as he yearned over that people and said, 'Oh!' Why, he would break an audience with that word! When George Whitefield said 'Oh!' men bowed before the Holy Ghost like corn bows before the wind. I would give my hand full of golden sovereigns if I could say 'Oh!' like George Whitefield!"

A QUOTATION

A MAYOR'S TESTIMONY

Lee Baxton, American businessman and civic leader, said, "While I served my city as mayor for two years it was my duty to preside over the mayor's court, during which time 2,400 cases came before me. I started asking those charged with violations of a criminal nature if they had been regular attendants at church or Sunday school and I made a standing offer that if any person with such a record were convicted I would pay the court costs and their fine for them out of my own pocket. Many of those I asked would say with some embarrassment and shame, 'Well, a long time ago I used to go,' or, 'I plan to go when I am released,' but NOT ONCE IN THE 2,400 CASES DID I HAVE TO PAY ANYONE'S FINE!"

Let Jesus walk beside you

Two sad perplexed disciples
Once trod the Emmaus road,
But Jesus came and joined them
And lifted sorrow's load ;
He changed their disappointment
To glad expectancy
As He revealed through Scripture
God's plan at Calvary.

Are you perplexed and troubled
As you walk along life's way ?
Let Jesus walk beside you
And lift your load today.
The glory of His presence
Will o'er your pathway shine,
And sweet will be communion
With the risen Lord Divine.

India

Behind the closing door

by Archie Nicolson

THE news that India had refused entry permits to new missionaries sent a shiver of regret through my body in anticipation of further restrictions.

The potential of present personnel. We have missionaries in India, a small but excellent group. There are others who are doing a good work for the Master. Church history is resplendent in her array of glittering triumphs wrought by individual men and women who, under the mighty hand of God, spread the glorious message of the Gospel in our own and other lands. Let us pray that a fresh, mighty anointing may come upon our missionaries who are inside the closing door.

The permanence of national workers. When I read the news that India had officially closed the door to new missionaries my mind turned to our Bible school in Madras. I thanked God for this vital work. Already we have heard of Indian Christians who have been trained there and have gone out to work in different areas as pastors and evangelists. If in the end all the missionaries have to go then there is a fighting force of men and women who belong to India and who by citizenship have the right to remain in the land of their birth. Let us pray for the increase of our Bible school and for those who have the responsibility of running it.

The power of the printing press. Literature is a powerful weapon in the hands of any force which is involved in the conquest of men's minds and hearts. India is no exception. The thousands of Gospels, New Testaments and Bibles sold in the huge fairs and markets present tremendous opportunities to missionaries and national workers. The Bible school in Madras has its own printing press which will be improved by our E.W.M.A. Light Through Literature Project. Pray about this too.

Penetrating the closed door. In the last war members of the Resistance Movement listened every night for . . . —, the V-sign which sent hope and courage surging through their veins as they plotted the overthrow of the common enemy. To-day radio is playing an ever-increasing part in our spiritual warfare. Lands closed to the Gospel are penetrated by the powerful beams sent out by large transmitters situated in strategic places. India is on target and hungry souls among India's millions will be reached by radio messages proclaiming the glorious Gospel of our Lord and Saviour Christ Jesus. Your prayers are urgently needed.

WRITE FOR BROCHURE

From T. H. Stevenson

IN a Church Missionary Society news letter, the General Secretary, Canon John N. Taylor, writes about Pentecostals. One is reminded of the curate's egg: good in parts.

Canon Taylor writes: "The whole weight of the New Testament evidence endorses the central affirmation of the Pentecostals that the gift of the Holy Spirit transforms and intensifies life and that this is a fact of experience in the lives of Christians. The longing of thousands of Christians to recover what they feel instinctively their FAITH promises them is what underlies the whole movement. Students of the N.T. differ in their exegesis; so far my own explanation of it convinces me that the Pentecostalist is justified in calling the bestowal of this gift 'Baptism in the Holy Spirit,' but I think he is twisting the scriptures when he teaches that this is something subsequent to and distinct from becoming a Christian. It is the transforming power of the Holy Spirit that makes a man a Christian. For anyone in Christ there is no further gift to be sought, though he may need to 'stir up the flame again,' the gift he has already received."

A hearty "Amen" say I to the Canon's words that the power of the Holy Spirit makes a man a Christian. Indeed the Holy Spirit convinces the sinner, converts him and gives the witness to his spirit that he is born of God. Canon Taylor is surely confused and inconsistent, however, in asserting that we are wrong in teaching that the Baptism of the Holy Spirit is subsequent to and distinct from becoming a Christian and that his view is right that "there is no further gift to be sought." How frequently during his ministry has the Canon held an infant in his arms and, baptising the babe with water, has in faith declared the babe "a member of the family of God and an inheritor of the Kingdom of God" and in subsequent years has prepared the same child, now adolescent or adult, for Confirmation (to be performed by the superior Bishop, the professed historical successor to the Apostles), that, by the imposition of the Bishop's hands, the candidate might receive the Holy Spirit? These ceremonies with the interval of years express a theology of two separate experiences, even if, in his heart, to the Canon they are chiefly ceremonies. Later, Canon Taylor, declaring that Pentecostals' doctrine strains the evidence when it insists that "speaking in tongues is the necessary evidence or normal sign of baptism in the Spirit," adds "This is its most divisive tenet." Many of us would concur with that final phrase, though even healing, with which he later deals, is, like almost every other doctrine we accept, widely accepted by many others. Perhaps none has been more surprised than Pentecostals themselves that what has been described as the most divisive has on a world scale caused the greatest addition, even the multiplying, of millions professing a Pentecostal experience. This is not really surprising: it is the way the Church of Christ began.

by F. H. COLEMAN

WE are always happy to print answers to prayer sent in to us from our readers. This week's is one which concerns receiving the baptism of the Spirit.

"For many years I sought the baptism in the Spirit—and the waiting period seemed long at times. I wondered if God intended to fulfil His promise to me. I had attended a Pentecostal church for at least five years. As I sought this initial infilling, others were praying for me.

"At the dedication of our new church building, the challenge of the surrendered life was emphasised. It was suggested that the prayer which God answers is, 'Lord, I am willing to be made willing.' I was exhorted to yield my will to Him as I prayed that prayer.

"The following weekend I had already planned to be in a meeting for receiving the baptism in the Spirit. Many received and the power of God fell upon me. I then went to stay with Christian friends who had received this baptism a few months earlier. We prayed together for some hours. The Lord brought to light hidden sins in my life. As I openly confessed and wept before the cross, the burden rolled away. This brought freedom within. Again I experienced the Spirit upon me, praise His wonderful name."

I trust that this letter may be of encouragement to all who have been seeking the baptism of the Spirit. Continue to seek, for God will bless you when your day of Pentecost fully comes. Two men who waited five years for their Pentecost were mightily used in the earlier days of the Pentecostal movement. One became a powerful evangelist and the other a great Bible teacher.

HE was lying snugly in the hospital bed, a tiny scrap of a man, thin and wiry with a cheerful smile on his face and bright, intelligent eyes. At the age of ninety-one years one can surely be permitted the luxury of reminiscing, so he began to tell of his boyhood in a Wiltshire village. His father was a farm labourer and his sons automatically went on the farm as they left school and each earned sixpence per week. Our friend sat his final school examination in the morning and, to the surprise of the farmer, he reported for work in the afternoon. He was just eleven years old! With a chuckle he told me how he was put to work with the big farm horses. He was so small that he could actually walk upright underneath the bellies of the great animals. "Hosses" became his life and his first and remaining love. Life on the farm was hard in those far-off days. Learning to plough with both horses and oxen newly broken in, he remembers getting stuck in the mud and shedding tears of frustration and fear. On an average day's work in the fields a ploughman walked sixteen miles, so he recalled. I asked about living conditions on the farm and if, as is popularly supposed, in lieu of small wages the family had other concessions. "Just free vegetables," he said, "but no free milk or eggs." He can never remember his father being able to afford milk in his tea. They received a gift of beef at Christmas, otherwise the only meat in their diet was salt pork. When our farmer's boy grew up and got married he was allowed to take only the morning off and had to return to work on the afternoon of his wedding day. Pitifully small wages for long hours of toil, facing all the rigours of the weather, yet there were compensations—the peace and beauty of the rolling countryside, the love of animals and a quiet way of life with a simple, contented outlook.

In his forties he was led to Jesus and together with his wife joined the Elim church, becoming an eager and enthusiastic worker from the beginning of his Christian life. He still laughs when he recounts how when working late on the farm he had time only for a quick wash and an even quicker bite of food and then away to church, his wife scolding him for daring to enter church or to stand in the open-air meeting in his shabby working clothes, but undaunted he sang and testified. He always used to say "I wor a wicked lad until Jesus saved me." The open-air meeting was an essential part of his life, no matter what the weather may have been or how busy he was at his work; he just had to be at the meeting even if it meant going without his evening meal in order to be there on time. His favourite hymn of witness was :

*I am not skilled to understand
What God hath willed, what God hath planned;
I only know at His right hand
Stands one who is my Saviour.*

If he did not get the opportunity to sing it he would certainly quote it when called upon to testify. He had a strong tenor voice in those days and even at the age of ninety on the Sunday following his birthday he came to the pulpit and sang two hymns, led in prayer and read the Scriptures as well. The other great love in the life of Mr. Ernest Keel, the farmer's boy, the oldest member of the Elim Pentecostal Church, Salisbury, is the prayer meeting. Until his recent illness had you visited the church on a Friday night you would have found him there to greet you and you would have heard him pray. That prayer would lift the whole company to the gates of heaven. He is very intimate with the Lord and is often heard to say in his prayer "Ain't you lovely, Lord!" When I arrive in heaven I shall not be surprised to see our dear little brother with an even more radiant face and with hands uplifted crying those very words with adoring wonder before the Lamb on the throne of God.

To the committed Christian

Psalm 138 : 8 ; Psalm 57 : 2

Philippians 1 : 6

That which concerneth thee thy God will perfect,

This is the promise given in His Word ;

And what He says He will perform. Then doubt not,

For is not He who speaketh God the Lord ?

And so He guideth thee in all things daily
If to His care all things committed be,

So trust Him, even if thou canst not trace Him,

For it is God who worketh now for thee.

Devoted is thy life to His blest service

And, as thou livest heart and soul for Him,

He will repay thee in the fullest measure

And fill thy offered vessel to the brim.

Yea, more than fill—for He will overflow it,

Until the fragrance of His mighty power

Is spread like perfume to the souls around thee,

And thou shalt live in Him each day, each hour.

Then in His name—for is His name not mighty?—

Thou shalt step forward, clothed upon with grace,

And when thy service has been fully rendered

law of parsimony, which states that, where evidence is contradictory, it is good science to accept the simplest and most direct. Evolutionary "evidence" is in too many small pieces to be convincing. There are too many leaps and gaps that have not been bridged. There is no real evidence in recorded history of the evolutionary theory.

Two of the great questions that evolutionists have never been able to answer are: When came the substance that formed the first cell? and What forces ordered the rearrangement of the molecule? Until they answer these there can be only one reply—evolution is highly impossible and is theory, not fact. From these and other scientific tests, we have come to believe that animals have always been animals and humans have always been human.

Evolution—fact or theory?

by Louise Brown—a Pentecostal schoolgirl aged twelve

JANE SCOTT wrote the following poem :

*Who taught the bee the way to build
An air-conditioned hive
With temperature at ninety-four,
To keep its brood alive ?*

*Who gave the bat a radar set
To guide it through the night
And miss the flying objects
And catch its food at night ?*

*Who placed computers in our heads,
With thermometer cells,
That far surpass the late designs
That I.B.M. now sells ?*

What is evolution ?

All creatures are members of one great family ; this idea is called " the theory of evolution." The lion, the giraffe, the worm, the eagle, the sparrow and the wasp are all cousins. One cell was supposed to have been floating around in space. Different gases went into it and it split and split and split again until there was not one, but many. These cells came together and formed some type of creature.

Who made the first cell, however ? If we developed from apes, who made the first ape ? Why are there apes today which are not turning into humans ? If it was a different species, why have not bones been found ?

Take three boys in a room. Two say that the world appeared by dust and cells. One sets a globe on the table and says, " The globe appeared there through dust and cells." The other two would say that he had flipped—someone had to design it. If we take a close look at a globe and see how it is put together we marvel. Take a look at the world and all the wonders of it. We marvel even more. If such a little thing as a globe had to have a designer, there must be Someone great who designed the world.

Creation has been proved

People often get a bad impression of scientists. They say that they are strong promoters of evolution, but not any more. A group of nuclear scientists agreed at a meeting that God was the Creator of the universe. A great scientist wrote a book on evolution in which he stated that it was not a scientific theory and cannot be tested in scientific ways. Ashley Monagu, a very important scientist, in his book Man Observed disagrees with the concept that man is brutish. Scientifically observed facts have said that evolution is highly impossible. Scientists say that only amateurs believe in the theory of evolution. Besides these evolution is a theory ; it has not been proven. Charles Darwin wrote a book on evolution, for he was the one who established the thought of evolution. At the close of his life he deeply regretted he had caused such confusion among men.

Evolutionists have found fossils which they think prove the theory of evolution. The first was the Neanderthal man. The back of the head was flat, suggesting a sub-human race. However, the Chocktaws of Oklahoma and Mississippi are known to be and are called " flat heads." They brought about the condition by mechanical device. It would seem this is as valid as any other for this skull condition.

Another was the Java man. His bones were found very far apart, so there is doubt among paleontologists. The skull seems to be that of an ape, whereas the bones are those of a human. It is too mixed up to be convincing.

Of the Heidelberg man, all that has been found is the lower jaw-bone. How can men frame from a bit of bone the whole creature of a man ? Intelligent people cannot accept something that is just a guess.

Notes
by
D. C. Lewis

Monday July 17th

Jeremiah 1 : 9-19

"The Lord . . . touched my mouth" (v. 9).

The touch came from the Lord's hand. The mouth of God's servant was no longer a medium for trembling inability and weak excuse: "I have put My words in thy mouth" (v. 9). The word of the Lord is the word of authority and power. Our response surely must be to gird up our loins, arise and speak all that He has commanded us (v. 17). Speak the Word; it is all-sufficient at all times.

Tuesday, July 18th

Jeremiah 2 : 1-19

"Hath a nation changed their gods, which are yet no gods?" (v. 11).

Israel had changed her gods and the Lord's voice called to them to recognise their foolishness and to return to Him. In forsaking Him, the Fountain of living waters, what a poor choice they had made, how disappointing, how unrewarding! Hewing out cisterns, broken cisterns, speaks of fruitless labour and vain endeavour. Our God is great. Our God is able. Let us always cleave to Him.

Wednesday, July 19th

Jeremiah 2 : 20-37

"Where are thy gods that thou hast made thee?" (v. 28).

"If they can save thee in the time of thy trouble" was the Divine challenge. Salvation is of the Lord; there is no satisfaction, safety or security in the gods that men create. "Arise and save us!" is man's cry to these gods in the time of extremity, but there is no response. "The Lord is my light and my salvation" is the confident cry of the believer. "In the time of trouble He shall hide me" (Psalm 27 : 5) is his assurance.

Thursday, July 20th

Jeremiah 3 : 1-18

"Thou hast polluted the land" (v. 2).

Here is revealed the moral pollution of Israel—a land greatly polluted (v. 1). In our land cannot we see a similar situation in these last days? Wedlock is no longer holy. Chastity is no longer a virtue. Murders are of almost daily occurrence. A sex-mad society tolerates drugs which destroy and blight many young lives. To our wayward nation God's voice still calls to repent, to return, to acknowledge our iniquity, for God is merciful (v. 12).

Friday, July 21st

"A voice was heard . . . weeping" (v. 21).

They had forgotten the Lord their God. The penitential cry was heard. New hope is born when men realise their folly and resolve to return to God: "Father, I have sinned, I am no more worthy." God's response is always the same: "I will heal" (v. 22). He will abundantly pardon.

Truth, judgment and righteousness, the true standards, are then restored, pollution gives place to purity and the nation blesses itself in Him.

Saturday, July 22nd

Jeremiah 5 : 1-5, 20-31

"Are not Thine eyes upon the truth?" (v. 3).

Jeremiah was instructed to search for a man who would conform to God's standards and requirements. Justice and truth were the qualities that were sought for. "Lord, do I qualify? Does my life come up to the standards that you require? Does my life reflect these qualities? Does my life have upon it Your approval in every part?" are our questions. False profession was the sin of many (v. 2). They said "The Lord liveth," but they refused to receive correction. Let us beware of mere lip service. May our lives in every part be subject to Him, for upon rebellion and revolt (v. 23) God will surely visit His wrath and be avenged against those who continue to defy Him.

Sunday, July 23rd

Jeremiah 6 : 1-21

"Stand ye in the ways, and see, and ask for the old path . . . the good way" (v. 16).

God's call is concise and clear: "Thus saith the Lord." Divine direction often comes. We need to survey our lives, to see exactly where we stand, to retrace our steps from the paths of sin and sorrow to those of righteousness and peace. These are the old, proved paths, the good way, the way of rest. Failure to pursue these pathways will cause us to perish (v. 21). How terrible are the consequences!

Heart-keeping

by Maureen Edmonds

"Keep your heart with all vigilance and above all that you guard, for out of it flow the springs of life" (Proverbs 4 : 23, Amplified Bible).

IT is of infinite importance that we be deeply convinced of our utter inability to do this ourselves without our unreserved dependence on the effectual aids of the Holy Spirit. Because we have not the sufficiency in ourselves to do the will of God, it does not mean that we have an excuse not to do our part in this matter. To keep our hearts in fellowship with God it is up to us to assist Him.

Here are four suggestions as to how we can do this.

Fortify our hearts with good principles

An unfortified city is open to assault on every side; so are our hearts if they are not fortified by the principles of true Christianity. As sinners redeemed by the precious blood of Christ and sanctified by His Spirit, we are the Lord's peculiar property. We live by Him and we must live for Him; having been "bought with a price," we are not our own, but His. When anything attempts to gain possession of our hearts, we must keep them for Him. Christians are furnished by God with armour for this very purpose (Ephesians 6 : 11-16).

Watch their most secret notions

However strong a city, if it is filled with traitors it is bound to fall. So it is with our hearts. Things allowed to reign there along with Christ which are not dealt with will soon rear their ugly heads and the Devil will see to it that we fall.

Combine all their energies in the service of God

This is what the psalmist said on the matter : "Unite my heart, O Lord, to fear Thy name." If our minds are occupied with heavenly, spiritual things, but our wills and affections are running after carnal things, it is little wonder that the enemy gains entrance. "A house divided against a house falleth" (Luke 11 : 17).

Call in the most effective Aid

What a hopeless plight ours would be if the previous three suggestions were all that we could do. Thank God, we are assisted by the "Captain of our salvation." We must look to Him to strengthen us "with might by His Spirit in the inner man," as David triumphed over Goliath—not in dependence on the arm of flesh, but in the name of the Lord. The Goliaths of sin may try to capture our hearts, but we can be "strong in the Lord and the power of His might."

We must keep our hearts with all diligence and our attention must be earnest, not superficial. A race is not won without straining every nerve. This contest is not with flesh and blood, but with the principalities and powers of hell. Christians today as never before are confronted by the powers of darkness.

It must be constant and persevering, not just at 11 a.m. and 6.30 p.m. on Sundays! God requires us to serve Him every moment of our lives. "Watch and pray, lest ye enter into temptation."

Why this emphasis on heart-keeping?

Grace is planted in the heart. Repentance flows from the heart. David was broken and contrite in heart. Here love combines and concentrates all its powers—we are to love God with all our hearts. Christ Himself dwells in our hearts by faith. The good man out of the good treasure of his heart brings forth that which is good.

"The heart is a lamp, which the Holy One has entrusted to your care. Keep it well trimmed. The heart is a ship. Look to the hull and the rudder, the masts, sails and rigging. Have an eye to the crew and take great care what merchandise you have on board. The heart is a temple—keep it pure and undefiled. The heart is a besieged city and liable to attacks on all sides. While you defend one part, keep a good 'look-out' on the other" (author unknown).

Ask the Lord to help you to keep your heart today!

Proclaiming the Truths of Pentecost

Who is He?

by R. Williams

PASTOR OF ELIM PENTECOSTAL CHURCH, ROCHESTER

"Whom do men say that I the Son of Man am?" (Matthew 16 : 13)

HAVE you ever been asked a penetrating question and wondered what sort of answer you should give?

This interview must have been one of the first-ever recorded opinion polls. I wonder how many people have not made up their minds on this vital question, "Whom do men say that I the Son of Man am?" Regardless of our feelings towards Christ, every person must form some opinion about Him.

The controversies which built up around Jesus were not of His making. The most provocative question was that of His origin.

Jesus was interested in what men thought of each other; He also wanted to know what they thought about Him.

There appears to have been no immediate reason for His inquiry about the disciples' conviction, but His response to their statement tells us much about ourselves. Some thought that He was John the Baptist. There might have been similarities, but such a suggestion did more for John than it did for Christ. Others suggested that He might be Elijah or even Jeremiah, or for that matter any one of the prophets. There was nothing profound in these statements; they showed how little they really knew the Lord. In their hearts they were not really convinced, as a comparison of the Old Testament records with Christ's life would soon have shown.

Turning the attention from the anonymous crowds who attended His preaching, Christ asked a direct question which required a personal answer: "But whom say ye that I am?" It was of no use trying to convince the pressing throng if those who were closest to Him and most involved with Him were undecided.

The spontaneous reply of Simon Peter must have rejoiced his Master's heart. His followers really did understand and accept Him for what He really was, "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God"—there was a ring about Peter's positive answer. How could Peter be so sure? Far more learned men had heard Christ preach. People who had a wider experience of life refused to be as emphatic, yet with an undisputed boldness Peter seemed almost to blurt out his answer: "Thou art the Christ."

Were there a few red faces and an embarrassed shuffling of feet? I would not suggest for one moment that the other disciples were undecided concerning Christ; I merely point out that, like us, they were hesitant in making known their faith in Christ.

What we discover about Christ depends largely on the source of our information. Christ said of Peter's answer "Flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but My Father which is in heaven." It is impossible to understand Christ without a Christian faith. Many people have sought an understanding of God and, sad to say, they have failed, probably because they looked in the wrong place.

Jesus Christ, through His death on the cross, provided an opportunity for people to get to know God. Christ came to offer a purposeful existence, but the fulfilment of it depends on our believing and receiving Him.

Scripture tells us much about the amazing life He lived and the influence He exercised over people. Those who sorrowed in bereavement sought comfort in Christ. The sick, if they were unable to make their own way, were brought to Him by burdened friends and loved ones. One man just stayed where he was and called until he was heard. They were all seeking the Christ.

Jesus Christ still asks the same question: "But whom say ye that I am?" What is your reply? Christ wants you to answer this question. He came to this world to be its Saviour, to take away from people the guilt of their wrong-doing and to provide them with a new life through a simple

United Pentecostal Youth Rally

Birmingham besieged

Report: Ivor Pepper

The open-air rally.

SATURDAY, June 24th, witnessed a siege of Birmingham for the first ever united Pentecostal youth rally sponsored by the Elim and Assemblies of God youth councils.

The siege began when a crowd of 3,000 gathered at 1.30 p.m. in the cathedral precincts for a united open-air witness. Over seventy banners clearly revealed what we stood for. "We are thrilled with Jesus" and "Fight truth decay" were samples of the slogans displayed. The banners also revealed distances travelled—Dundee, Barnstaple, Bishop Auckland, Luton, Liverpool, Manchester—to name a few.

Warwick Shenton led the witness, with Andrew Vaughan and Paul Newberry giving clear testimonies. Len Magee, Lifeline, and the Tonyrefail quartet sang before Wynne Lewis challenged bystanders with a clear message pointing out that complete satisfaction is in Jesus. A number responded to the appeal.

In the march of witness which followed, the column of marchers, four abreast and a mile long, caused shoppers in Birmingham's busiest streets to stand, to listen to the songs and to read the gospel placards. This orderly, happy, vibrant army bore positive witness that they had something worth having. They sang "I've got something the world can't give and the world can't take away." They revealed Jesus.

The march ended at the Bingley Hall in time for the afternoon rally. The meeting of almost 5,000-strong was convened by Ron Jones and included testimonies from Elaine Foster and Philip MacInnes. Singing was by The Harvesters and Ruth Coutts. Gerald Chamberlain challenged us by speaking from Daniel of "The ten times better teenagers." He testified that, forty-two years ago, he accepted Christ in this same hall under the ministry of George Jeffreys. He called for a personal encounter with Christ for salvation and power. Many publicly responded and a large group came forward seeking the baptism with the Holy Spirit. Several were gloriously filled.

In the evening rally, the choir, under the leadership of Eldin Corsie, brought blessing as did the singing of Lifeline, the Tonyrefail quartet and Eleanor Rhillman. Colin Whittaker led this tremendous meeting. "The tick-tack man who had gone to the dogs" was Andrew Colthart's self-description—but Jesus set him free! Alex Tee brought the final message and, like the afternoon speaker, centred his thoughts on Daniel 3. He called for us to "earnestly contend for the faith." Almost all the 5,500 congregation joined the speaker as he raised his right index finger to show his loyalty to Christ and his right hand to emphasise that he meant it as he publicly confessed "I choose Christ." The crowning moments saw over 100 answer the call to accept Christ as Saviour.

This was an historic day for Birmingham, a truly Pentecostal united witness for Christ, a great event when young people demonstrated that life with Jesus is great.

Personal impressions

"One's mind is packed with memories of thousands of Pentecostal youth massed into Bingley Hall, of outstanding ministry in music and word, of inspired congregational singing and worship, of the challenge in the evening message to young folk not to bend to the standards of this world, but particularly outstanding was the oneness of fellowship which made us proud to be part of this great united Pentecostal witness."

BARBARA JACOBS (Cradley Heath, Elim).

"The leaflets announced: 'We are the happiest people in Birmingham today,' and indeed we were. Taking part in this great witness gave one a wonderful feeling in sharing our joy that Jesus Christ is alive. Tremendous crowds of youth at the open-air, march and meetings built up a fabulous enthusiasm. Praise the Lord for a very tiring, but so happy day!"

DAVID SMALL (Chase Terrace, A.O.G.).

"I was thrilled to see the crowds of young people in the cathedral precinct. I thought the presentation of the gospel was rather cheapened by the shouting of "Give me a J-E-S-U-S," etc. I felt that the march of witness was something that could be repeated. I liked the way both brother Chamberlain and brother Tee spoke on characters from Daniel as examples to modern Pentecostal youth. It was a great day because we had witnessed to a great Saviour."

KEN SMITH (Erdington, Elim).

"The great event had finally arrived and what a tremendous occasion it was! How wonderful to see thousands of smiling, singing, Pentecostal young people marching as one. 'With one accord' best describes Assemblies of God and Elim folk walking side by side, banner to banner. Then came the great united rallies. The power of God was felt throughout. This event will not be remembered as A.O.G. or Elim, but as Pentecostal through and through."

ANDREW FISHER (Lichfield, A.O.G.).

Quotable quotes

"Better die in the sunshine than live in the shadows."

"We do not pray that God will change our circumstances, but that He will change us to face our circumstances."

GERALD CHAMBERLAIN.

"Never take promotion to go to a place where there is no Pentecostal church, unless you mean to start one!"

"Do not bend to the environment."

ROWLEY REGIS Pastor : D. W. Cartwright

Members and friends experienced a rich time of blessing at the Sunday school anniversary. The children gave a demonstration entitled "Life's Olympics" and a service of song in the evening called "Stories of Jesus," concluding with the stirring anthem "Peace, be still." Pastor D. W. Cartwright and Pastor K. G. Smith gave inspired messages to children and parents.

Mr. A. Mason, Sunday school superintendent, convened on both Sundays. He was presented with a retirement gift from the Sunday school to mark twenty-five years' work.

The models used in the demonstration were made by one of the Crusaders. The efforts of Mr. Potter and the Sunday school staff were well rewarded.

Our winter term of Sisterhood rallies was brought to a conclusion with a coach tour to the seaside resort of Portrush.

The average attendance during the year was fifty and we are thankful that as a result of our labours in Christ souls were saved.

Under the leadership of Mrs. S. Dempster we are now looking forward to yet another term of winter rallies.

WATCHMAN NEE

We have now had authentic confirmation that Watchman Nee (Nee To-sheng, of Foochow) passed into the presence of his Lord on June 1st.

We have no details of his death, but we know that when it occurred he was in An-hwei province. It is thought that he had been released from detention within the previous three months.

The Gift of Tongues

by JOHN HARRIS

PASTOR OF ELIM PENTECOSTAL CHURCH, LURGAN

9. "Forbid not"

1 Corinthians 14 : 26-28, 39, 40

PAUL now comes to practical matters relative to the exercise of the Gift of tongues when the saints come together in church services. Such gatherings were very different from the rigid, stereotyped, and unaltering order many know as church services today. Professor B. B. Warfield has said : "There were probably few churches in the apostolic age whose condition in knowledge and practice, or whose usages in church government and Christian worship would attract any modern denomination to seek to include them in its fellowship" (article on "True Church Unity" in Selected Shorter Writings). If allowed to substitute "many" for "any" we would agree, because there are some denominations which would have accepted the New Testament churches gladly, tongues and all. Verse 26 makes clear that the form of worship found in the Corinthian church was very flexible and provided opportunity for widespread participation, though this may have been due to the primitive state of the church rather than to a fixed policy regarding worship. "Everyone" must obviously be taken in the distributive sense, that there was freedom for individuals to participate in relation to the ability they possessed to contribute to public worship. The determining factor as to the individual's contribution would be what ability or Gift they possessed. Each one would not be able to propound a doctrine, or sing a psalm, probably as a solo. Capability must be considered before involvement was entered upon.

Tongues in church services

Among the contributions made by individuals to the worship of the church Paul leaves a place for tongues and interpretation in gatherings of a local church. An increasing number of modern Christians confess to having received the Gift of tongues and to exercising it in their spiritual lives, but often such exercise is confined to personal devotions or to gatherings which are identified as "having no connection with any church." Their non-use of the Gift of tongues in their local church may be due to opposition, indifference, or ignorance. Irrespective of the reason, such persons need to realise the unbalanced, unscriptural nature of their approach and to face up to church responsibilities regarding the Gift of tongues with which God has endowed them. In the use of this Gift, as with all others, we are to seek to excel to the edification of the church. Their silence in the church is highly reprehensible.

The linking of interpretation with tongues (v. 27) indicates that it is public utterances in the congregation which is in view. They may be given by "any man," "by two, or at the most by three," i.e. there may be one, two, or three such utterances, but no more. To go beyond even to four utterances is direct disobedience. To argue that there is no limitation on the number of persons, but only on the number of utterances by any one person, is to trifle with the plain meaning of the words used. Regarding utterances when in the plural, they must be "by course," i.e. in a regular order or rotation, without any competitiveness in concurrent utterances, which would be confusion. Following each utterance there should be opportunity for one to interpret. I take the "one" here as a pronoun and not as a numeral, i.e. "someone," in view of v. 26, which would seem to prohibit the idea of just one person to interpret. The limitation on utterances is surely practical wisdom in order to prevent tongues from monopolising church services. The insistence upon order is to check any carnal inclination to project self unnecessarily to the forefront, with the resultant competition and confusion.

A time for silence

Verse 28 envisages a situation in which no one with the supernatural Gift of interpretation is present in the church service. In this event the tongues speaker is to be silent "in the church," but may yet "speak to himself and to God." The silence is clearly comparative and not absolute. It is with reference to the congregation; he must not speak in such a way as would involve the church, though individual tongues speaking may be continued in a quiet way between the person and God, without intruding upon the worship of the church. This verse shows clearly that there is no difference between tongues with or without an interpreter. It is the same Gift, but it is used in relation to church or individual as determined by the absence or presence of an interpreter. Those who make a distinction between tongues in Acts and 1 Corinthians, on the grounds of no interpreter in the former but insisted on in the latter, ignore completely the implications of this verse. Interpretation is desirable but not essential to tongues speaking as dealt with in 1 Corinthians.

As the true Gift of tongues originates with and is energised in its exercise by the Spirit of God, some may wonder why there is any necessity for rules to govern its use. It is a Biblical principle that God has made man responsible for his actions. The possession of a spiritual Gift does not negative that responsibility. God not only bestows the Gift, He also indicates how the gifted one may responsibly exercise their Gift. The Gift is Divine in its origin and energisation, but the instrumentality used is human, and man has a control over the organs used. Therefore in the use of the Gift of tongues there is a responsibility to use it as God has directed. It is unscriptural to try to justify an undisciplined utterance with the excuse, "I could not help it." Control over the Gift of tongues as to usage is implied in the commands about it and is directly stated about prophecy. The "spirits" which are subject to the prophets (v. 32) are not the human spirits of the individual person, but literally the "spirituals," i.e. the "spiritual gifts" as the same word is translated in v. 12. It is therefore a question of recognising both aspects of the Gift: the Divine and the human. Properly balanced, there will be nothing to detract from the sovereign God, the supernatural Gift, or the responsible believer. The wisdom of clear-cut directions is obvious to anyone who is conscious of the difficulty in discerning the leading of the Spirit, especially in a situation, such as a church service, where there is no time for reflection. Where tongues are concerned God has given explicit directions on practical matters; all that must be done, therefore, is to obey. Some sincere people would save themselves concern and the church confusion if they would recognise their responsibility to use the Gift of tongues in the ordered way. This does not dictate to God in any way; it simply acknowledges that God has given them a Gift, but it is largely up to them as to how that ability is used under God.

Forbid not tongues

It is strange that Paul's last direct word on tongues should simply prohibit the negation of this Gift. In view of church history and of present-day attitudes in many quarters, we should probably see this as another case of Divine foresight. Foreknowing that the mind of fallen man, even when renewed in regeneration, is reluctant to allow what it cannot explain or understand, was not God seeking plainly to direct His church against a prohibition of speaking in tongues? The fact is strange, but indisputable, that speaking in tongues has been and still is, a forbidden exercise in many Christian circles. Such an attitude is utterly indefensible, especially in view of this plain direction, "forbid not to speak with tongues," which makes the prohibition plain disobedience to the Word of God. Neither will it do to take up a compromise position: "I do not forbid, neither do I encourage." The commands of Scripture make it obligatory to desire spiritual Gifts of which tongues is one.

All things decently and in order

This closing statement belongs to the realm of things "done," to the behaviour of Christians in the house of God. "Decently" simply means "with decorum." "In order" means in an orderly or dignified fashion. This places liberty in Christian worship in the context of cultural standards. Whatever is done must agree with the principles of decency and dignity as recognised in the society within which the church is located. This is not lowering Christian standards to worldly levels, but taking the noblest things of human culture and using them as the lowest limits for Christian behaviour in the church. Nothing done should violate the sense of decency and dignity

IT was said of the early Christians that they turned the world upside down. We could do with similar activity now—the world might then be the right way up!

We have often complained at news treatment and we have had another example of the disproportion of so-called news items recently. We would not doubt Sir Francis Chichester's bravery. He is no doubt an intrepid individual of the first order, but are we alone in becoming fed up with the continual references to him in his recent Atlantic adventure? Why did the news media become quite so hysterical? It seemed sheer lunacy for him to set out in the first place, but, having made his choice, why was it then thought necessary to spend an unrevealed sum on wouldbe rescuers chasing after him in naval vessels and Nimrod aircraft—and why did it seem all important that alleged news about him should take priority over everything else?

We recently published a news conference report on Bangladesh where hundreds, thousands, perhaps possibly millions are in danger of starvation. Have you read or seen anything about heroic efforts made to bring rescue? No one would have wanted to learn of Sir Francis Chichester losing his life in lonely, sea-girt sorrow, but where is the sense of proportion?

We see this in other ways, too. Those who were privileged to be at Birmingham for the Bingley Hall and open-air youth witness will surely agree that it was a noble, worthy effort. Was that considered newsworthy? As far as we know radio and television at least remained silent. If it had been a certain doctor in the area with his nauseating alleged sex "education" films they might have taken notice, but get over 5,000 Christians, many of them young people, demonstrating their love for the Lord Jesus Christ and no notice is taken at all.

One of the troubles is that so-called news is thrown at us in great piles every day. We are suffering too much of it. Our view of the world becomes jaundiced, unbalanced, if we are not careful.

Our job is to go on, to keep on, proclaiming the good news, the best news. By all sanctified means we must reach out with the gospel. We feel encouraged that there are hundreds of young people who are turning away from the much-publicised worldly attractions. There is hope in that many are turning to Christ. May there be many, many more and may we be privileged by all means to save some!

COPPERBELT CALLING

by Hilda Johnston

WELL over a century has passed since the British missionary, Dr. David Livingstone, heard and answered God's call to serve Him in central Africa. He discovered the Victoria Falls in 1855, being the first white man to set foot in the area, though, long before that time, the ancestors of the local natives knew the place as Mosi-oa-Tunya (the smoke that thunders), the name that best describes this magnificent spectacle of nature.

The falls are one mile wide and 60,000,000 gallons of water pour over the rock face every minute. The spray can be seen twenty miles away. This is the greatest curtain of falling water in the world.

We visited the falls last year when the Zambezi River was in full flood, and this vast sight served to remind us of the ever-flowing love of Jesus.

A few years ago during our furlough we went to Westminster Abbey and stood beside the resting place of Dr. Livingstone. With bowed heads we renewed our dedication to God's call to us to serve Him in Africa in the work of winning the people of this land to Christ.

Zambia, where we are now working for the Pastor and Mrs. Tom Johnston work for Elim Missionary Society in Zambia

Lord, is a land-locked country. The climate is hot. There are two seasons in the year, the rainy season and the dry season.

We are situated in Ndola, 200 miles from the capital, Lusaka, and eight miles from the Congo border. Ndola is one of a number of small towns in the copperbelt mining area; it is commonly known as "The Gateway to the Copperbelt." There is plenty of opportunity for mission work and we are glad to have an open door through which the thousands in the Copperbelt may be reached and saved for God's glory.

After only a few weeks in Ndola I was asked to teach Scripture in an African government secondary school, about five miles from here. I readily accepted. Each week I do three teaching periods. The work is entirely voluntary. Chifubu Secondary School is a mixed school, with about 600 students attending.

This is a tremendous opportunity to reach them with the Gospel. Many of them hear some of the Bible stories for the first time, and yet these are students between the ages of fourteen and eighteen years. Their knowledge of Scripture is extremely limited. Very few of them have a Bible, a Testament or even a Gospel portion. These are very difficult to obtain in Zambia and supplies take a long time to reach here. To help overcome this problem I make my own Bible posters and in this way they learn the Scripture texts. They apparently enjoy their lessons and some of them have accepted the Lord Jesus. I enjoy this work; it is difficult and challenging, but it is very rewarding.

Please remember these students in your prayers. The need is as great today as it was when Dr. Livingstone and his helpers trekked through the swamps of central Africa.

1972 Conference memories

L. E. Lambert makes a telling point.

"Muloko" pays a flying visit to Ghana

Reported by DAVID L. MILLS

THE big DC8 jet taxied to the end of the runway and, its crescendo of reverberating thunder filling the tropical night air, lifted into that same air in the direction of Abidjan. The Elim Missionary Secretary's flying visit to Ghana had ended.

About three weeks before we had waited at the same airport for Pastor Leslie Wigglesworth to arrive. To the excitement of a visit of someone from home we had the added pleasure that "Muloko" ("the young chief") was returning to African soil. Soon after his arrival we were driving at night in "Ermintrude" (our Green Shield stamps mini-bus) to Winneba.

The statue of Kwame Nkrumah, engraved with the words "Seek ye first the political kingdom and all these things shall be added unto you" used to stand in the grounds of the Ideological College, Winneba (Communist ideology, of course). The college is now the advanced teacher training college. We were to stay there for a week of Council meetings. Pastors and laymen of the Church of Pentecost from all over Ghana, Ivory Coast, Upper Volta, Togo, Dahomey and Liberia were to attend sessions. There was glorious irony in that the ministerial group photograph was taken on the steps of the plinth where Nkrumah's statue had once boastfully stood!

It was wonderful to hear this great college resound with the praises of God's people. The ministry of God's Word throughout was inspiring. Among the many encouraging reports it became clear that the number of assemblies had increased from 1,230 to 1,248, praise the Lord!

The Council meetings were to be followed by a great Easter convention. Preparations had been made for about 40-45,000 people. Then tragedy—cholera had broken out in the surrounding district, thirty-five cases suspected, five deaths. The convention was cancelled by the health authorities. Literally thousands were turned back, some after travelling more than 500 miles. The great convention was not to be!

On Good Friday we returned to Kumasi. It did not seem like Easter at all. Alternative plans were made. On Easter morning Pastor Wigglesworth ministered to a packed congregation at Asokwa, Kumasi. In spite of the great disappointment over the cancelled convention a deficit of about £3,000 incurred in preparations at Winneba, over £500 lost on non-returnable fares to Winneba from Kumasi alone, and the setbacks, frustrations and disappointments, the great congregation rose as one to praise the living Lord. It was a never-to-be forgotten meeting. A different venue for the evening meeting was also packed with people and with the presence of God.

The following days we were "in journeyings oft"—visiting assemblies, members and various centres. Everywhere we were welcomed with West African hospitality, surely among the best in the world. Large congregations and smaller ones gathered to hear the Word of God. Travelling was not without incidents. We were returning from Obuasi, a gold-mining town, at about 9.30 p.m. Incessant rain from 4 p.m. had decreased the number, but not the ardour, of the people. Now it was causing a real problem. Rain falling on roads in the tropics immediately becomes steam and a layer of mist perhaps six feet deep gathered in varying density obscuring the road. We were in the leading car—our spot-lights penetrating the mist. Suddenly the outline of a tree brought down in a storm was dimly visible halfway across the road. We manoeuvred round it and continued for some way before noticing that there were no lights from the following car. We stopped. Deciding to return to investigate we found that in trying to negotiate the fallen tree the other car, driven by the regional superintendent, had gone out of control. It had missed the tree, but had plunged off the embankment down some 15 feet into a bamboo grove. The bamboos had broken the fall of the car. The driver and passenger got out unharmed. On the following day the car, slightly dented and scratched, was retrieved.

Visas and other travel documents were obtained for a quick visit to Lome, the capital of Togo. Here Pastor Wigglesworth brushed up his French and preached in that language. Our visit to Togo revealed a great need for workers in the French-speaking West African countries, which have something like three times the population of Ghana.

Night after night the Word was preached. Rarely was a direct appeal made, but even more rarely were there no souls seeking the Saviour. There are no mass conversions in Ghana, no outstanding demonstrations of conviction as in the Welsh revival, but we are in the midst of a revival of spiritual life, for the church here is patiently, prayerfully and persistently sowing the good seed—and just as persistently reaping a harvest. The members are striving against great odds to keep the Church completely Scriptural and this generates a great hunger for the Word of God.

It was fascinating for a modern missionary to listen to the exploits of one who had been much more of a pioneer. Pastor Wigglesworth used to cycle forty miles a day through the bush. This week I flew to Accra from Kumasi for a Bible Society meeting—160 miles in twenty minutes. It was even more fascinating to watch my Ghanaian brethren listening with rapt attention to stories from the Congo that illustrated Bible truths. I could see them entering into the trials, temptations and triumphs of their brethren in Congo. The groans, sighs or hallelujahs of the congregations reinforced the message to each of our hearts. ✍

The HAMMOND ORGAN

- ★ Requires the minimum of maintenance and the tone wheel generator cannot go out of tune.
- ★ Remains unaffected by changes in temperature and humidity.
- ★ Provides extreme variety of tones with the simplest method of selection.
- ★ Has a specification to satisfy the accomplished organist.
- ★ Can be transported for trouble-free use on any location.
- ★ Represents a lifetime investment with a negligible depreciation factor.

The Hammond Organ has found an important place in the Pentecostal church with its unique tonal quality. The very nature of the harmonic tone registration allows the instrument to be played in direct keeping with the service without distracting from it.

We are therefore convinced that a Hammond can make an essential contribution which renders it a sound investment in the Lord's work, and to this end Sharon Music welcome your consultation as to the most suitable model for your church.

With experience gained from many church installations throughout the country we feel confident to select an instrument certain to meet your requirements.

Our showroom stock of ORGANS and PIANOS includes the entire range of Hammond Organs, consisting of 18 different models from £265 to £5,500. Special financial arrangements are available to your church and we shall be happy to supply further details relating to any specific model on request.

Sociology and Pentecost

By Valentine Cunningham, M.A., D.Phil.

Dr. Cunningham lives in Oxford and researches and teaches in the University, where he is Research Fellow in English Literature at St. John's College. His father is Pastor of the Rugby Assembly of God church. He is a deacon at the Oxford assembly. He previously spent three happy years, when he was an undergraduate at Keble College, in fellowship with the Oxford Elim Pentecostal Church. He was an early member of the Students' Pentecostal Fellowship and edited its Newsletter for several years. For several terms he attended Bryan Wilson's seminar on the sociology of religion.

THE sociologists have been interested in Pentecostals—they call us Pentecostals—for a longish while and I think that we can expect more and more books like M. J. C. Calley's God's People: West Indian Pentecostal Sects in England. No sociologist, notebook and tape recorder in hand, has arrived at any of the Pentecostal churches of which I have been a member (at least, he kept his equipment hidden if he did!), but I'm expecting one any day now.

Sociologists are sometimes just wrong, like this, in their generalisations. "Pentecostals are not primarily interested in doctrine . . . In general only the ministers of the Pentecostal movements know much about doctrine . . . the laity are doctrinally uninformed." Well, the author of Religious Sects should hear some of the laymen I've heard preach and pray. Often too little account is taken of the differences between Britain and America. The theory that the promise of Pentecostal power offered "compensation" to the otherwise "poor, neglected, uneducated and powerless" immigrant from Europe, or from rural areas to the towns, readily applies only to America. Attempts to discern this pattern in Britain rarely get anywhere, even in the case of West Indians—who usually bring their Pentecostal allegiance with them.

Sometimes sociological speculation (usually, though, offered confidently as fact) is interesting enough, even when misleading. The notion that the gift of tongues was attractive to European immigrants to America having language problems, or to tongue-tied country boys just arrived in town—it was "the supernatural acquisition of verbal facility"—is fascinating, but it misreads the nature of tongues, which are likely to make the new immigrant seem even more of a "barbarian" (to use Paul's word) and it sidesteps the issue of all those non-immigrants who speak in tongues.

On the other hand, the sociologist is occasionally extremely illuminating. Bryant Wilson's essay, "The Pentecostalist Minister: Role Conflicts and Contradiction of Status" (in Patterns of Sectarianism, edited by him) cast, for me, startlingly clear light on the recurrent dilemma of the Pentecostal pastor, who must foster in his church the life of the Spirit who gives spiritual authority to the congregation as prophets and so on and at the same time maintain his pastoral authority without many, or even without any, of the superficial grounds of authority, like education or social status, that ministers in other denominations might have.

Even when there is manifest truth in the sociologist of religion's propositions, however—for we can agree that the poor, the working classes, have heeded the Gospel more readily than other groups and that Pentecost is strong among immigrants in U.S. cities—he can only take us so far, for the informing spirit of all sociology is positivism. The legitimate range of sociological inquiry was effectively laid down by one of the founding fathers of this so-called science, Auguste Comte. And positivist inquiry limits itself only to those relations of social phenomena that can be rationally established and observed. Sociologists thus have no tools for measuring ultimate causes; they never take God or grace into account. This is the most crucial kind of handicap when you are discussing religious phenomena. The Gospel does have its appeal to the poor, there can be spiritual status in a democratic assembly, in a sect, for many who have no expectation of worldly honour, and so on, but that there is more to Christianity and to Pentecost than the simple correlations of the sociologist is shown by the fact that not all the poor, the working class, the immigrants, the underprivileged, come to our churches. There are at least some Pentecostals who do not fall into any of those categories, so there must be something that the sociologist's analysis is missing. What the sociologist leaves out of the account is even more important than what he includes: issues like grace and free will, the Divine sovereignty, the mystery of the faith. The sociologist's legitimate sphere of operation and inquiry stops far short of where theological knowledge and inquiry extend. We would locate the ultimate, the really primary, cause of a man's conversion, and his Baptism in the Spirit, where the New Testament locates it: in the Divine will. Any discussion of Christianity, of Pentecostals, that excludes the Divine aspect of things is obviously ignoring the central issue.

Many Christians shy away from the sociology of religion and evangelical sociology students, I have noticed, are often deeply troubled by what they feel to be the implications of their study for their faith. Many Pentecostals dismiss sociological investigations out of hand. They can occasionally be helpful, as far as they go, which, given the positivist, rationalist limitations, is by no means far enough for the Christian, let alone the Pentecostal Christian.

SUMMER HOLIDAY

By Sheila Price

3. The cave

"WHAT shall we do today, daddy?" asked Brian.

"I think we will go for a walk along the cliffs while your mother goes to the shops," said Mr. Brown.

Mrs. Brown packed some sandwiches and lemonade for them and off they went. They walked along the clifftops for a while and then Mr. Brown spotted a cave a little way below them.

"Hold my hands tightly, children," said Mr. Brown. "We will go down this path and have a look around the cave." They walked carefully down the path and soon got to the cave.

"It looks very dark inside," said Carol. "Isn't this exciting!"

"It is," said her brother. "Look how slippery it is; and look at those big rocks above us! This cave must be hundreds of years old!"

Mr. Brown saw a little ledge along one wall of the cave. "Let us sit here, children," he said. "We can eat our sandwiches while we have a rest."

"This would make a good hiding-place, wouldn't it, daddy?" said Brian.

"Yes," said Mr. Brown. "But you must never play hide-and-seek down here unless your mother or I are here with you; it is far too dangerous. Did you know that there are many caves mentioned in the Bible? One of them was used as a hiding-place."

"Do tell us about it, daddy," the children asked.

"Well," said Mr. Brown, "you know the story of David and Goliath, don't you?"

"Oh, yes," said Carol. "Our Sunday school teacher has told us."

"Well, when David had slain Goliath, King Saul grew very jealous of David and tried to kill him. To get out of King Saul's way David ran to the hills of Judea with his friends and followers and sought refuge in a cave. This cave was called the cave of Adullam. Other men got to hear of David's whereabouts and went in search of him. They were poor, clumsy people, not much to look at, but when they found David and offered to serve him, David at once accepted them as his friends and became their leader. Soon David turned these poor, clumsy men into fine soldiers who remained faithful and loyal to David their leader. Jesus, too, can take the poorest sinners and turn them into fine Christians. He is our heavenly Leader and we are His soldiers. I will tell you another story about caves later," said Mr. Brown. "It is time we were getting back now."

Letter to the Editor

DEAR MR. WALKER,

I believe that we ought to take a more positive stand against our entry into the Common Market. As believers, we should pray that our entry will be thwarted. I have a number of reasons for saying this.

The whole message of the prophets was to dissuade Israel and Judah from making alliances with or leaning for support upon other nations. The Common Market implies full economic, military and political union of all its member states. When Israel and Judah disobeyed God and joined other nations, they found themselves impoverished economically and militarily. This led them to disaster. Our nation was made what it was by our relationship with God. We will not be a voice to be reckoned with in the world by joining Europe, but by our nation returning to God (Isaiah 31 : 1).

Amos writes (3 : 3) : "Can two walk together, except they be agreed?" I am not ashamed of being British, with all that this entails, for our Protestant heritage has brought us benefits in abundance. Now we are being asked to join a Europe in which all present member countries have a hatred for, or a hostility toward, this Protestant heritage, because the majority of their peoples are either Roman Catholics or Communists. Although not now in question, the very fact that Common Market law will override our Parliament could mean our losing our Protestant liberty, for we are not joining like-minded people.

There would be a further breaking down of our Sunday. I believe it was Voltaire who said, "Whether Englishmen know it or not, it is the English Sunday that has made and kept England great." The Continental Sunday is well known and, through the free movement of workers, it would soon arrive here, so that Sunday as a day of rest and worship would become non-existent, with the further decline that this would entail.

A prominent member of the Lords has stated that membership of the Common Market is a stepping-stone to world government. Are we believers to encourage this when we know that only Jesus, our Saviour, is truly Lord and King?

Many argue that membership will enhance our opportunities for and will bring wide open doors for evangelism in Europe. "This is an uncertain, superficial conclusion which it would be difficult to substantiate. Such an attitude can only be regarded as irresponsible. For one thing, there is by no means any certainty that greater liberty or opportunity for evangelism would be the outcome; indeed, the very opposite effect might well be the result. Such a thoughtless attitude is mainly due to lack of consideration of the facts politically" (Into Europe—keep out! Lord's Day Observance Society).

With these reasons in mind, let us urge the necessity for prayer for Britain to remain outside Europe and that our nation will be visited by a God-given revival.

Yours sincerely,

D. A. LAMBELLE.

NO OTHER WAY

One night my Lord out from the Holy City
Across the brook and up the hillside went,
And in the Garden, sorrowful and lonely,
A time in prayer He with His Father spent.
He knew the cross was waiting on the morrow,

He knew the awful price He had to pay,
But, as He prayed, He found the strength
He needed

To face the cross—there was no other way;
No other way to purchase our salvation,
No other way to bring men back to God,
No other way to smash the Tempter's power,

No other way—except the way He trod.
Lord, we would ask that we may enter dark Gethsemane and with Thee learn to pray
The Father's will may be our only guidance
So that, like Thee, we walk the Father's way,

No other way, whatever paths may tempt us,

Whatever roads may dazzle day by day.
Teach us, oh Lord, to follow in Thy footsteps,

No other way for us—except Thy way.

RENE.

With Him

THE Lord Jesus was never a hermit; to use a modern expression He was not a "loner." From the commencement of His ministry He deliberately chose His disciples to become His constant companions and friends. On three occasions at least the Bible shows that He longed for human fellowship and did all He could to foster it. In Mark 3:14 we learn: "He ordained twelve, that they should be with Him, and that He might send them forth to preach." We read that when He faced His greatest trial in Gethsemane He went there with His disciples (Matthew 26:36). At the end of Mark's gospel the risen, ascended Lord is described as working with the eleven and Matthew records that one of the last promises that the Lord Jesus made to His disciples was: "Lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world" (Matthew 28:20), thus assuring them of His constant fellowship throughout the whole of their lives.

So we have very precious evidence that Jesus our Master sought fellowship with His followers. They were with Him in His earthly life, in His sufferings and in His work. Fellowship, sharing life's experiences, togetherness are integral parts of the life of the Church and can be an encouragement and a comfort to all of us.

On the Sunday of the spring holiday I was delighted to meet at our church many dear Christians from various places. An Australian Baptist brought us greetings. A Portsmouth sister, whose life has been saddened by the serious illness of her husband, told of how wonderful Jesus is to her. A deacon from Exeter shared with us his joy at being called to tell of the Pentecostal experience to a Methodist fellowship which many students attended. A young lady doctor, an Anglican from London, caused our hearts to rejoice as she recounted how the Lord Jesus was leading her in the path of service and of her visit to Nepal to work in a mission hospital there. A teacher, also from London, glorified God when telling of the outpouring of the Holy Spirit on the parish church of which she is a member and of the exercise of Spiritual Gifts in the regular services of this church. All this and so much more indicate that Jesus our Lord is working with His followers and that He is unifying His people, preparing His Bride, the Church, for the rapture. He desires us to have close fellowship with one another, but, more glorious still, He has willed that we who belong to Him shall be with Him for ever.

Doesn't your heart leap for joy when you read His prayer for us in John 17:24: "Father, I will that they also, whom Thou hast given Me, be with Me where I am; that they may behold My glory, which Thou hast given Me"? Surely the apostle of love, who enjoyed such wondrous fellowship with His Lord, summed up the completeness of this precious fellowship and revealed every facet of its beauty when he wrote "That which we have seen and heard declare we unto you, that ye also may have fellowship with us: and truly our fellowship is with the Father, and with his Son Jesus Christ."

"I saw a group of lovely ferns the other day in a grotto from the roof of which continually distilled a cool, clear, crystal rain: these ferns were perpetually fresh and beautiful, because their leaves were continually bathed in the refreshing drops. Although it was a season when verdure was scant, these lovely ferns were as verdant as possible. I observed to my friend that I would wish to live in the everlasting drip of grace, perpetually laved, and bathed, and baptised in the overflowing of Divine fellowship."

Common Market prospects

Shirley Williams, speaking at a Roman Catholic Socialist Guild meeting in London, said: "We will be joined to a Europe in which the Catholic religion will be the dominant faith and in which the application of Catholic social doctrine will be the major factor in every-day political and economic life."

Church report

CAERPHILLY Pastor: J. G. Cooper

At the Melvin Banks crusade in the 1,000-seater marquee in the famous Caerphilly Castle grounds large crowds were in attendance. On one night it was nearly full.

The church was packed on the first Sunday. The minor hall had to be used as well to contain one of the largest congregations in its history.

In the first week over 500 decisions were made and all have been given spiritual counsel.

Large numbers of unconverted folk have been attending and there have been some outstanding healings. Nearly 800 children attended one youth service alone.

held by society outside the church. This would exclude what is unbecoming and offensive from that section of society which should have the highest standards of all: the Church of Christ. The application of this principle may mean a variation between one culture and another, but it will always place the Church above its surrounding society. To relate this factor to speaking in tongues must mean that nothing unseemly or vulgar should be associated with it. Where such deviations appear, they are the work of the flesh and not the Fruit of the Spirit. The Gift of tongues must never be isolated from its proper, fitting context either in Scriptural exposition or practical experience. The life of the Church or the Christian which surrounds it should be of the highest order and commendable by human standards and by Divine law.

Monday, July 24th Jeremiah 7 : 1-20

"Proclaim . . . this word" (v. 2).

"Hear the word of the Lord"—may we never fail to obey this command! "Go ye into all the world, and preach" (Mark 16 : 15) was Christ's command.

"Amend your ways and your doings" (v. 3) was a call to repentance, to turn from formalism and empty profession.

The call to proclaim the Gospel is clear. Have we failed to do it? "Go ye" was Christ's order. We must obey.

Tuesday, July 25th Jeremiah 7 : 21-34 ; 8 : 1-3

"Obey My voice . . . that it may be well" (v. 23).

Implicit obedience to the voice of God was the demand and how rewarding were the promised consequences, "but they hearkened not." Disobedience always results in backsliding (v. 24). Backward, not forward, was the direction. "Death shall be chosen rather than life" (8 : 3) was the sad prophecy.

Wednesday, July 26th Jeremiah 8 : 4-22 ; 9 : 1-3

"I will surely consume them, saith the Lord" (v. 13).

Perpetual backsliding will surely result in the judgment of the Lord coming upon those who persist in this way. Despising God's word of correction and refusing to return will result in destitution and disappointment. "We looked for peace, but no good came; and for a time of health, and behold trouble!" (v. 15). The condition of these backsliding people moved the man of God. His was an abiding concern; he wept day and night for his nation, his people. Should our concern for our nation be any less than this? Our nation still proceeds on the downward path, "from evil to evil" (9 : 3). As Christ wept over Jerusalem, so must we weep over the condition of the world today.

Thursday, July 27th Jeremiah 9 : 23-26 ; 10 : 1-16

"Glory in this, that he . . . knoweth me, that I am the Lord" (v. 24).

Worldly wisdom, power, riches—how confident is the boast of those who put their trust in such and glory in their possessions, yet without the Lord how impoverished is their condition! The "more excellent wisdom" is to know Him, to understand His will, to be the continual recipient of His lovingkindness.

"There is none like unto thee, O Lord; Thou art great, and Thy name is great" (10 : 6). He is beyond compare—"the true God, He is the living God, and an everlasting King" (v. 10). "The Lord of hosts is His name" (v. 16).

Friday, July 28th Jeremiah 11 : 1-17

"I commanded them to do; but they did not" (v. 8).

"So be it, O Lord," is the ready response of the obedient heart (v. 5). "Faith shall cry a loud 'Amen' to every dear command of Thine." They were commanded to obey God in everything. Failure to obey His command brought the penalty that prayer would not be answered (v. 14).

Saturday, July 29th Jeremiah 11 : 18-23 ; 12 : 1-6

"The Lord hath given me knowledge . . . and I know" (v. 18).

Knowledge imparted by God is perfect. He is the Divine Teacher. May we always remain attentive students at His feet. The knowledge that He imparts by far exceeds and excels that from any other source; it is not worldly wisdom but the perfect wisdom that is from above, pure in its content (James 3 : 17) and profound, for in Him are hid all the treasures of wisdom (Colossians 2 : 3).

"Thou, O Lord, knowest me: Thou hast seen me, and tried my heart toward Thee" (12 : 3). His Divine searchlight penetrates into the deepest recesses of the heart; there is nothing hidden from Him.

Sunday, July 30th Jeremiah 13 : 1-17

"Good for nothing" (v. 10).

In God's estimation Israel were marred and profitable for nothing. The causes of their deterioration were their refusal to hear God's word and to walk in His ways and their serving and worshipping other gods. Israel were called to be a people to His praise and glory (v. 11), but how miserably they failed Him. They were unprofitable at every level—a strong but justifiable indictment.

May we always endeavour to be profitable servants, as Onesimus became: "In time past . . . unprofitable, but now profitable" (Philemon v. 11).

An interesting comment from FRANK BICKERTON quoted in Elim News of New Zealand. Pastor Bickerton is supported in his work in Japan by our churches in New Zealand.

The beautiful taste

"THERE is a saying in Japanese, although we are not aware of its origin, which reads Bimi Kyushin. It can literally be translated as 'to seek the beautiful taste is to seek the truth.' While the exact definition escapes us, we have the feeling that we know what is meant. To eat something which is satisfying—that is the simplest and most lovable image of man and the realisation of the truth . . . or words to that effect.

"We have the feeling of the meaning, but then the question may be raised: 'What is the beautiful taste?' In our so-called affluent society we can have anything we desire to eat if we pay for it. But are we really satisfied? The high-class Japanese and Western-style restaurants offer dishes at prices which make our eyes pop out. But do they really have the satisfying taste, the beautiful taste?

"Against these the taste of dried sardines or wild mountain vegetables may offer a much more satisfying taste. There is a popular trend at present among people of the younger ages to form groups which are bent on tasting 'the real thing.' It can be considered a fad for natural foods. This means, of course, good old country food. For city people the taste of natural food without all those additives which are now being used probably constitutes something different.

"Economic growth has led to the appearance of many fancy foods which are injurious to health. This in turn has resulted in a trek back to nature. This is also the Kyushin (seeking of the truth) contained in the old saying.

"The formation of groups seeking good food is not a bad idea, but we have to remember that such movements can lead only to temporary satisfaction. The beautiful taste must be developed in home kitchens to be really effective. The trend toward the popularisation of instant noodles and other foods has degenerated home cooking to a lamentable degree. It is important therefore to resurrect the skill of making good food at home."

The above article, in its entirety, appeared in a recent issue of the Mainichi Daily News, Tokyo.

If, as the writer suggests, "To find the beautiful taste is to find the truth," this places the search in the realm of the spiritual, far above the satisfying of natural cravings.

The Christian answer is to switch the direction of the search to God. The psalmist says: "O taste and see that the Lord is good; blessed is the man who trusteth in Him . . . they who seek Him with all their heart shall find Him."

faith in His cross, believing that it was endured on our behalf.

All kinds of people came to Christ—the wicked, the self-righteous, the destitute, the prosperous, the learned and the illiterate—in other words, ordinary people with problems, people just like ourselves. Now, as in the time of Christ, people find Him to be the answer to their need.

Perhaps you are unaccustomed to praying, but why not, just where you are, ask Christ in your own words to help you to understand how you can share the same emphasis as Simon Peter and say, "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God"?

Reaching for the depths

"That I may know Him . . . and the fellowship of His sufferings" (Philippians 3 : 10)

by Michael W. Carr, B.Sc.

I CAN know Him in the bloodwashed worth of a ransomed soul and the new-found joy of an endless life, in the victor's cry and the battle shout, in the radiant rays from the throne of grace, through the tears and pain of an hourless night when sorrows of life overwhelm within, when the panting heart seeks satiation and the fainting soul wants consolation, in the smarting rod from a loving hand and the living words of a written soul, by the grace that conquers every sigh and a peace that makes our passions die. In all these, and more, I know Him, yet do I know Him in the "FELLOWSHIP OF HIS SUFFERINGS" ?

The pains that pester our pathway are surely an Adamic legacy bequeathed to fallen souls. "Yet man is born to trouble as the sparks fly upward" said Job, and he should know! We grimace and grumble over the happenings of providence and think that we are thus fulfilling the Lord's will to bear our cross. When sickness lays us aside or a catastrophe rocks our faith, the temptation is to feel that we are entering into the "fellowship of His sufferings," but what does the Word say ?—"So far you have faced no trial beyond what man can bear. God keeps faith, and He will not allow you to be tested above your powers." To a committed soul these ordered events are but the prickings of God's goat-stick, sharp pointers to a rich spiritual maturity. It is an adding of virtue to our faith through trial. It is not, however, the "fellowship of His sufferings." Paul says that "Our troubles are slight and short-lived, and their outcome an eternal glory which outweighs them." They come and go like mayflies and serve to nudge us nearer God.

Christ's suffering was a CROSS and a cross which was chosen. Our Lord did not just die ;

Proclaiming the Truths of Pentecost

He laid down His life that He might take it again. The agonies that faced Christ did not march across His path in an indiscriminate way; they were the result of a bleeding heart that carried a stricken world. The New Testament writer echoed this, saying: "Whereof I am made a minister who rejoice in my suffering for you, and fill up that which is behind of the afflictions of Christ in my flesh for His body's sake, which is the church." It was a vicarious suffering, a bearing forth of the anguish of the Body: Paul need not have gone this far with God, for he had a free choice, but, like Jesus Christ in Gethsemane, "he went a little further." This was not a feeling that aligned itself with human kindness, but a deep likeness to our Saviour: being brought into the sorrows of others' afflictions.

"I would be like Jesus" is an oft-repeated prayer, but He was a Man of intense passion for wretches and a high feeling for damned sinners. So great was the love of God in Christ that Isaiah startles us with those immortal words that strike our souls: "He had no beauty, no majesty to draw our eyes; no grace to make us delight in Him; His form, disfigured, lost all the likeness of a man, His beauty changed beyond human semblance. He was despised, He shrank from the sight of men, tormented and humbled by suffering; we despised Him, we held Him of no account, a thing from which men turn away their eyes. Yet on Himself He bore our sufferings" (53: 2-4, N.E.B.).

Is it possible to know the "fellowship of His sufferings"? Dare we tread that path to Golgotha's mount?—for we cannot heal the hurt we do not feel. It is said of Jesus that "being in the garden He prayed more earnestly." He sipped the bitter cup and viewed the thankless world of wicked men, yet drained it all and bowed his heart into His Father's will. The royal blood, that pierced stream, that unrelenting fount of love, has dropped upon the guilt of earth a grace that covers sin's dark stain. Like Rachel, who cried "Give me children or I die," He has seen the travail of His soul and is satisfied.

No man suffered as He did: "In all their afflictions He was afflicted" and "I am pressed under you as a cart is pressed that is full of sheaves." The full weight of erring mankind bowed His shoulders into God's presence, but this was only the start of a new era. Luke writes:

"Of all that Jesus began both to do and teach." It has not ceased; in Matthew's commission the ministry of the riven heart of Calvary is continued. God has committed to us the "word of reconciliation" and all that this means. Listen to Paul: "Who is weak and I am not weak? Who is offended and I burn not?" A fellow-prisoner in a bond of love, nothing could daunt the stride of faith that took this eager missionary to the bounds of Asia. He was "filling up that which is behind," ready to face the stones at Lystra.

Having given ourselves to Him, we might indeed face "fightings without and fears within," yet are we "more than conquerors through Him that loved us"? We cannot complete the passion of Christ, nor does the Bible teach this, but we must perpetuate the message of the cross and carry as Christ did a dying race upon our hearts and plead for heedless men before the gate of mercy. A bleeding Lamb sits amid a blood-sprinkled throne and those who reign with Him must first know the "fellowship of His sufferings."

OXFORD

Pastor : J. Hyde

On Saturday, July 1st, we provided a farewell celebration for Pastor and Mrs. F. J. Slemming, who were not only leaving Oxford but also retiring after forty-three years' service in the Elim ministry. The occasion was both sad and happy. We enjoyed a salad meal and were afterwards entertained by a very amusing tape of snippets from church life over the last ten years, edited with immense skill and imagination by our organist, Roger Masterman. After this Pastor R. B. Chapman, the Field Superintendent, gave the first of many tributes to our pastor's work. He showed that the Bible was not very helpful in providing retirement messages—the only references to retirement being like Jeremiah 4 : 6. Perhaps the Bible has so little reference to this subject because, as so many reminded us, we may lay down office, but we never retire from the Lord's service.

Further tributes were given by members of the church and by local ministers, who made reference to Mr. Slemming's work as chaplain of a local hospital and on the committee of the Christian Book Centre.

Pastor Slemming and his wife received many cards and messages, including some from churches where they had previously ministered. The treasurer presented them with a handsome cheque. This occasion was brought to a close by a few words from the Secretary-General, Pastor J. T. Bradley. Long after many members and friends had left the pastor was found in the kitchen wiping up the dishes !

On the Sunday our pastor ministered to us for the last time. His work was not yet finished, for in the morning service two families brought their babies for dedication. The evening service was highlighted by two announcements, one being the arrival of a telegram from Pastor and Mrs. Slemming's son, Peter, reading "Congratulations on a job well done" and the other that gifts from members and friends made the sum total of Pastor Slemming's retirement gift more than enough to meet his needs. His final message was reminiscent of his ministry and of the testimony which he believes our church stands for in Oxford.

The members of the church would like to echo the words on one of the cards which our minister received :

May the new life you're beginning Hold a world of joy in store,
Because there's no one anywhere
Who deserves it more.

BRAINTREE

Pastor : A. P. Atkinson

At the twelfth Sisterhood anniversary rally both services were well attended. Representatives from many other churches and missions were present and added their contributions to the meetings.

During the afternoon service singing items, solos and recitations were rendered. Mrs. M. Warboys, wife of the vicar of St. Andrew's Church, Shalford, was the speaker. She testified to her baptism in the Holy Spirit. Tea was served by the ladies of the church at the close of the afternoon service.

At the evening service we had more musical items and Mrs. Warboys's message was a great blessing to us all. During the evening service a beautiful bouquet was presented by our pastor's wife, Mrs. Atkinson, to our secretary, Mrs. E.

Gowlett, as a token of our appreciation for all the hard work she has put into our Sisterhood over the past year.

Both services were convened by our president, Mrs. W. G. Turney, and Pastor A. P. Atkinson concluded a very happy and blessed day with prayer.

EVESHAM

Pastor : J. R. Brown

A feverish amount of work was done long before the recent crusade. Envelopes were addressed, leaflets were put into bundles and the willing band of helpers "blitzed" Evesham. Every house had a leaflet put through its letter-box, followed in the following week by a personally addressed invitation card.

One tragic note in all this work was that our brother George Walker died in the street while delivering leaflets. God called him to higher service in a way he would have wished to be called—while busy on the Lord's work, but what a loss to us!

There were 150 people at the first meeting, convened by our own pastor. The evangelist was Pastor John C. Smyth and he preached under the anointing of the Holy Ghost.

We had great support from surrounding Elim churches and their encouragement and help in providing items in song and witness were greatly appreciated. Mrs. Mary Smyth's anointed singing was a great blessing to all.

During the second week we had children's meetings at six o'clock every night and over 100 children attended each night. Pastor Smyth and Tony Austin held the attention of the boys and girls with their quizzes, object lessons and flannel-graphs. Tony Austin was also our nightwatchman and we are grateful to him for all his help.

Just over twenty folk made decisions for Christ. A lady was instantaneously healed of arthritis and others who came for prayer felt a definite touch of healing.

We are very encouraged and feel that the crusade was a success. They now surely know that there is an Elim church in Evesham.

Pray for us. We would love to have our own church building, but so far there is no land or building suitable for us. Our God is great and is well able to open a door for us.

JOHN A. WEIR.

From Evesham Journal

The canvas doors closed this week on an Evesham evangelical and divine healing crusade, which the organisers described yesterday as "thrilling and successful."

The crusade went on for two weeks in a big tent on Evesham Crown Meadow, and was organised by the Elim Pentecostal Church.

Rev. J. R. Brown said yesterday: "The weather quite literally threw everything at us. We even had to borrow two gas space heaters because the tent got so cold. Nevertheless, we were thrilled with the response we had from the people of Evesham, from the support we got from other churches, and from the decisions that people made.

"The real object of the crusade was not so much to expand our movement, but to get people to realise that the true New Testament Christianity is life.

"So many people today think that the Church is dead. We aim to portray it in such a way that people will enjoy it instead of enduring it.

"During the crusade we prayed for sick people and since then people have told us that they have been healed."

Children's meetings in the tent had also been a success. "We had over 100 in every night and the meetings were very enjoyable," Mr. Brown said.

PALMERS GREEN Pastor : J. G. Patterson

Ever since the day in Northern Ireland at the age of thirteen when I made my decision to follow Christ in a tent set up by the Faith Mission I have been drawn to many similar efforts. Knowing full well the potential of such a venture I was delighted when the Lord gave me a vision for a three-week tent crusade. We determined to step out in faith and trust the Lord to meet the need.

Many hectic days of preparation followed. The council refused to give me a site at first, but after prayer they relented and gave us the best site in the area, right by the main High Street, completely fenced off with iron railings and lockable gates, all free of charge.

Thanks to Elim Headquarters and Bible College we had the use of the 600-seater marquee free as well.

At the opening night I arrived on the platform aching all over from the strain of the previous few weeks. I shall never forget the joy of that first meeting. Four people came forward to accept Christ. These were the first of some two dozen, mostly young people, who were to find Christ during the crusade. Nightly more and more people came, despite rain, mud, bitter cold and the gaping holes in the tent roof section following vandalism. Some three dozen people rededicated their lives and there were at least five definite healings. Three people were led to the Lord on the tent site. The tent was so handy to the town centre and they needed to talk with someone. Many children found the Lord in the special children's meetings.

We shall never forget all the Lord's goodness. Of the £313 spent on the crusade not a penny remained outstanding at the final service.

At follow-up meetings in the church we saw up to 140 people present. A converts' tea and testimony time were arranged and a special film service for all those saved in the crusade. Some seventy came. To God be the glory!

J. G. PATTERSON.

CATERHAM

Pastor : R. Smith

Less than a week before the annual carnival we decided that we must not miss the opportunity to witness for Christ. Mrs. Sales made placards and tract bunting and, with the willing help of her family, her son's car was covered with text posters. The work was finished just in time for the Saturday afternoon. Crusaders and friends distributed over 1,000 Gospel tracts on the carnival ground and along the route of the procession.

Our eyes were opened to the indifference to the gospel of the people of Caterham. The words "Caterham for Christ" obviously disturbed many consciences. To our knowledge only one out of the many ciné cameras being used did not stop at the float in front of us and start again on the float behind.

We noticed several Christians in the crowd who looked glad that Christ was being proclaimed. As far as is known ours was the only Christian witness that day. How we need God's Spirit to move here, even among the Christians!

We hope to do better next year by planning earlier. Maybe by then Caterham will be Christ's—nothing is impossible with God!

The Gift of Tongues

by John Harris

PASTOR OF ELIM PENTECOSTAL CHURCH, LURGAN

10. "Tongues are for a sign"

1 Corinthians 14 : 21-23

IN the previous verses Paul spoke of ways in which the Gift of tongues may be used in the Christian's and the church's devotional life. A change of direction commences in v. 21, to a further use of tongues. Tongues are now considered in relation to a different class of people : unbelievers. It is the Gift of tongues alone which is mentioned : "tongues are a sign," not tongues and interpretation.

We are referred to an Old Testament situation in which languages were invested with a sign significance that was rejected (Isaiah 28 : 11). The context is of Israel being given partially into the hands of her enemies, whose strange languages will be heard in the land, yet Israel will persist in disobedience and will eventually be completely subjugated by her enemies. There are three points of contact between these tongues of the Old Testament and those of the New Testament : tongues are other than native ones ; the sign nature of the tongues ; the recipients of the signs are without faith.

Other tongues

In the Old Testament situation the other tongues were those of foreign invaders which the native Jews could not understand. The similarity implied with regard to New Testament tongues sustains our contention that Paul viewed tongues as being real languages, probably those of other people on earth. The parallel drawn between the two sets of other tongues would make any other interpretation inconsistent with the comparison being drawn. In each case other tongues means languages other than native.

The sign nature of the tongues

In the original New Testament statement by Jesus, tongues were classified with other things as being "signs" (Mark 16 : 17). The same value is attributed to them by Paul. In the Old Testament setting the sign was of Divine chastisement, a warning of more to follow if there was no return to God. Israel did not heed the warning, but continued until judgment overtook them. This shows that they were without faith, inasmuch as there was no work of obedience. Paul does not affirm that New Testament tongues are also a signification of judgment, although it may be that he implied this. He only mentions directly the "sign" parallel. If judgment is intended also, then it would mean that the sign could be rejected. This would lead to greater guiltiness in view of the special activity of God in confirming His word with a sign. This is a legitimate interpretation and may be compared, for example, with Matthew 11 : 20-24, where rejecting the preaching of Jesus confirmed by mighty works would bring greater punishment.

The recipients of the signs

In the Old Testament situation the people were disobedient and continued to be so in spite of the sign : "they would not hear." The New Testament parallel would seem to require the same type and the terms used indicate this conclusively. "Believe not" and "unbelievers" mean literally "without faith" : this is the meaning we accept. The sign is related to those who have not believed on Christ and who are therefore unregenerate, unjustified sinners. The distinction between "unlearned" and "unbelievers" would further bear this out, the former being possible of true Christians who are limited in knowledge and the latter applying to an entirely different class of persons—the unsaved.

Tongues alone are to be a sign. There is no justification for the use of tongues plus interpretation in an evangelistic setting with the idea that this constitutes a special sign from God, nor is there authorisation for widespread speaking in tongues in local church evangelism with the hope that it will impress unbelievers. Paul's commonsense judgment is "Will they not say ye are mad?" In view of the other ways in which the Gift of tongues may be used in personal and congregational life, it cannot be either that tongues are always a sign to unbelievers. It is just another use to which a sovereign God may put this amazing gift, under circumstances in which tongues clearly demonstrate that only God could be at work. Those circumstances require the presence of a non-native person, or one who at least understands languages other than the native one. If God chose in such circumstances for a native person to speak in a non-native language unknown to him, yet understood clearly by the non-native person or linguist, such a miracle would be a very impressive sign to the non-native or linguistic person. Testimonies of this have been given by various people, but we do not need to go outside Scripture for an illustration. Acts 2 is a classic example of tongues as a sign to unbelieving people. The crowd which gathered was composed of unbelievers and, as many were foreigners, they would know other languages. They heard these whom they knew to be natives speaking in languages which were non-native and unlearned. The foreigners heard their own languages being spoken fluently in declaring the wonderful works of God. That such a miracle was a sign to them is undeniable and evidenced by their inquiry: "What meaneth this?" They were anxious to know the significance of the miracle that they had heard with their own ears. In response Peter turned their minds toward Christ, affirming that the sign pointed to a living, exalted Lord who "hath shed forth this which ye now see and hear."

This miracle would not make the same impact upon native unbelieving Jews—was it they who mocked the disciples as drunk because what was being said was not understood?—as upon the foreign Jews. The native Jews had witnessed and rejected many miracles by Christ, including the sign of the resurrection, but God, in one miracle via tongues, was giving a sign to people representing a wide area of the then civilised world.

Some will point out that the sign was accepted and this differed from the Old Testament, where it was rejected. We read of 3,000 responding and we can only pray "Do it again, Lord!"; but this figure needs to be taken in perspective. In A.D. 70 when Titus besieged Jerusalem at a feast time, Josephus estimated the number in Jerusalem at 2,700,000 (Wars of the Jews, book 6, chapter 9). Three thousand was but a small fraction of the scores of thousands and must not be taken as a majority movement: it was just a remnant. Perhaps we should be surprised that so few responded after such a miraculous sign being granted to them! Among the nation as a whole there was no turning to God, but rather a turning against those who identified themselves with Jesus Christ (Acts 8:1; 11:19, 20).

We are aware of another interpretation in which the unbelief is taken in a partial and not in a complete sense. The people to whom the sign of tongues is given are those who are Christians, but who have doubts regarding a work of the Spirit. Some relate these doubts directly to the filling with the Spirit's power and affirm that tongues are a sign of this filling. Some will even make a distinction between the sign of tongues, given at the baptism with the Spirit, and the Gift of tongues, which is tongues operative in the church in conjunction with the Gift of interpretation.

Such an interpretation, in my opinion, does not do justice to the plain terminology used in 1 Corinthians 14:21-23 regarding the recipients of the sign of tongues. The persons are not just doubters, they are unbelievers, therefore this sign, as here mentioned, cannot be related to being filled with the Spirit, which is an experience for those who are believers. Moreover, the endowment of power by the Spirit is not in the Corinthian context at all, though we gladly acknowledge that tongues often accompanied the endowment in Acts. As to the sign and Gift distinction this disappears when we view tongues from different aspects. From God it is a gift of His manifold grace. To men it is a sign which points beyond itself to the miracle-working God who gave it, because the tongues have been such as to demonstrate their supernatural nature.

Tongues as a sign to unbelieving men will not be a normal use for the Gift, but would require special circumstances for it to be so. To those who deny this Gift this is another instance of their closing an avenue of miraculous activity by God. Though such a miraculous sign is exceptional there should be an openness toward God and recognition of His right to manifest Himself in this way if He so chooses. Even Pentecostal believers need to enlarge their understanding of this wonderful Gift and give it a place not only as a sign to follow those who believe, but also at times as a sign to those who believe not.

- * The Gift of tongues can be a means of grace to edify the believer personally.
- * Accompanied by interpretation it can edify the church congregationally.
- * It is possible also that it may serve as a confirmatory sign to those who are unbelievers.
- * There are, therefore, great potentialities deposited in this Gift by God, but potentials bring profit only when they become actual.

WE heartily commend the articles by Mrs. K. E. Toft and our National Youth Director, Eldin R. Corsie, which appear in this issue. We applaud Mr. Corsie's straightforward declarations and surely many, if not all, Christian young people will respond with a surge of the heart and a lift of the shoulder to such a firm, clear stand. Those many of us who knew Mrs. Toft's late and beloved husband will be delighted that she has taken up the pen and will discover many echoes of the ministry which they shared for so many years.

It must be seen that we appreciate the glory of grace and thoroughly experience it only as and when we realise the depths of sin. The almost terrifying statement in Romans 7:13 takes on new profundity against this backdrop: "Sin, that it might appear sin, working death in me by that which is good; that sin by the commandment might become exceeding sinful." As you read the articles mentioned you will also see a link with the advice to parents by Joseph Smith, our revered brother in Christ, which is also in this issue. Not a few workers have felt, when confronted with the tangled problems of teenagers, "Oh, if only someone had started sooner!" Without wishing to make comparisons or to give offence in any way, we would assert that Sunday school work is more essential than ever. We must start to teach the gospel ever earlier and seek to maintain the contact through as many years as possible.

John Burgan adds point by his statements herein regarding justification. As we think of sin and of what Christ has done through His death and resurrection we come to a personal knowledge of "the exceeding riches of His grace" and of "the riches of His goodness and forbearance and longsuffering" for "the goodness of God leadeth thee to repentance." The Letter to the Romans is rich in glorious statements of God's bounties. Here is another: "O the depth of the riches both of the wisdom and knowledge of God! how unsearchable are His judgments, and His ways past finding out!" We would mention that a series on this great Bible book will commence in our next issue. The writer is J. Alexander Wright.

The pressure and the privilege of the preaching of salvation are underlined by the revelation of the vocation of the Christian and of the ultimate compromise in Christ: "We are ambassadors for Christ, as though God did beseech you by us. . . . For He hath made Him to be sin for us, who knew no sin; that we might be made the righteousness of God in Him."

Jesus People Come Alive, by Walter L. Knight.

Published by Coverdale House Publishers Ltd.

Price 35p, postage and packing 5p extra.

No one reading this book can fail to acknowledge the vitality and reality of the experience which is gripping thousands of young people in the United States. At first the older reader will react against the "hippie language" applied to the glorious personal encounter with Jesus that results in salvation. If this is accepted as the expression of young people who have no evangelical background experiencing for the first time the thrills of peace, assurance and forgiveness in Christ, the book can challenge its readers to pray that this Jesucentric revolution will sweep across the world.

The book rightly asks "What next?" The concern that I feel is for the continuation of the work of grace after the first glorious feelings have settled. The book has convinced me that the Church, with much love and grace, must seek to lead these young people to a deeper experience with God without appearing or even attempting, to squeeze them into the mould of its set patterns.

Reading this book can only give you knowledge that will help you to pray with understanding that God will establish these converts in the faith and use their enthusiasm to influence others to accept Christ for themselves.

Today is a series of eight booklets which deal in a modern way with life situations and contemporary problems. I was asked to review No. 8, the final booklet of the series, and was told in this issue, "Be sure to read issues 1-7 before reading No. 8. You lose out badly by failing to start at the beginning of the series." Bearing in mind this serious handicap, I read thoroughly the issue sent to me. It deals with subjects like pain, worry, depression, anger, pride. It gives a situation with a character meeting such difficulties. It quotes from letters from people in similar situations and gives sound, helpful advice, including relevant Scriptures.

Today should be studied rather than just read.

Though set out in good journalistic style, it merits slow consideration rather than quick reading. The subjects could well become projects for Crusader or other group study. Perhaps the editors could have been helped by advice from sound Christian psychologists and thus have gone more deeply into some of the problems posed. This is a very helpful idea for private or group study into many of the results of the stresses and strains of our contemporary society.

Isaiah 40 : 31

How should I wait on God ?

With a quiet expectant heart, knowing that God

Will surely do His part.

If I will only wait for Him

He will reveal His perfect will to me,

Yes ! I must wait on God !

Why should I wait on God ?

Because the busy throng of daily duties

Press my soul along.

To listen for His voice Divine is the surest way

Heaven's peace and rest to find.

Yes ! I must wait on God !

When should I wait on God ?

Every moment, every hour ! This attitude brings

Life and joy and power.

The still small voice can only reach the heart

That lives its life for God apart,

Yes ! I must wait on God !

Where should I wait on God ?

Just where I am today. God's kingdom is within me

That is where I pray.

In every circumstance, in every place my heart

Shall turn to God and seek His face.

Yes ! I must wait on God !

TO ALL PARENTS

From Joseph Smith

ALL parents want their children to be happy and to prosper both in this life and in the next. All children are given an impressionable nature in order that they can learn and be trained, otherwise how could they acquire a language or learn to do the many things necessary to life? It is of the utmost importance that all parents impress upon their children's minds those things which are essential to their highest good, both in this life and in the next.

Putting first things first, Jesus Christ said: "But seek ye first the kingdom of God, and His righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you" (Matthew 6:33). Here is another direct command from God Almighty: "And thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thine heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy might. And these words, which I command thee this day, shall be in thine heart: and thou shalt teach them diligently unto thy children, and shalt talk of them when thou sittest in thine house, and when thou walkest by the way, and when thou liest down, and when thou risest up" (Deuteronomy 6:5-7).

The Roman Catholics used to say: "Give me a child until he is seven years of age and then you can do what you like with him." Jews and Moslems bring up their children in their respective faiths, and how few of them depart from them. Children can likewise be taught the good and the right way. Solomon said: "Train up a child in the way he should go: and when he is old he will not depart from it" (Proverbs 22:6).

The Bible tells us that we are to teach our children diligently. It is no use saying: "I just leave my children to choose for themselves." You might just as well talk of leaving your garden to choose for itself. Let us obey the Lord and do what He commands us. Let us talk to our children about the love of God, about the excellency of His character, why we should love Him, and the great proof of His love in His sending Jesus Christ into this world to suffer and to die for our sins as our Substitute that we might become the children of God.

When you go for a walk with your children do you talk to them about the things of God? Do you pray with your children every night? Do you teach them to pray? I thank God for a godly mother who taught me the things of God and prayed with me every night. I was so young that I do not now remember when she started me on this good way. I wonder how some parents will face their children on the judgment days.

All children are impressionable, therefore we can make a good impression on their hearts and minds concerning the things of God. Children's minds are like virgin soil and they should be sown with the choicest seed in order that they may bring forth a good harvest. You can create desires in the hearts of your children for the things of God by your conversation. Those desires will want to find realisation and your children will want to be saved. There is no need to bore them with your talk. People are bored only when we speak about a subject in which they have no interest, but this is not true of young children. Start when they are young and create an interest in their minds concerning the things of God. My son accepted Jesus Christ before he was five years of age, simply because his mind was alerted concerning the things of God. Of his own accord he wanted to be saved. You may ask whether a child of that age sufficiently understands the things of God in order to find salvation. If you and I had waited until we fully understood the things of God concerning salvation we might not have been saved yet. Of course they understand sufficiently if you have simply told them the story of Jesus and His love. Salvation is a matter of the will and a child at that age has a will.

Allowing children to choose for themselves in spiritual matters is most unfair to them. The trouble is that a child is not really left to himself to choose in these things; the ungodly children with whom your child has to mix will see to this. They will not hesitate to sow bad seed in your child's mind. Even teachers in school will not hesitate to sow in your child's mind evil doctrines like evolution (which is contrary to the plain teaching of the Bible). Are you going to stand aside and do nothing about it? Are you going to allow all this evil seed to grow in the mind of your child and influence his whole life and character? Will you not give your child what the Bible has to say on these matters? There are good books on the subject of evolution which you can purchase and thus acquaint yourself with the facts. You have a duty to perform and God requires you to do your duty or you must answer for it at the judgment seat of Christ. If you truly value the eternal welfare of your child you will not try to avoid doing your duty by him.

A young man was executed in the U.S.A. for murder. The night before his execution the warder knocked at his cell door and said, "Young man, your mother would like to speak to you." He replied: "You go and tell that woman that I have got to die tomorrow morning for her neglect. When she brought me up she allowed me to do what I liked. She never corrected me for anything, everything I did was right, and now I have to die for her neglect, and you tell her I don't want to see her."

Summer Holiday

4. The lighthouse

MR. BROWN and the two children climbed back up the path and made their way to the tent. When they had walked along the clifftop for a few minutes, Carol tugged her brother's sleeve.

"Guess what I can see, Brian," she said.

"What is it, Carol?"

"I can see a lighthouse," she said.

"Where is it?" asked Brian.

"Over there, by those big rocks. Can you see it?"

"Yes," said Brian. "Can we go over to see it, daddy?"

"We must get back for our tea now," said Mr. Brown. "Mummy will be wondering where we have got to. I will take you to see the lighthouse one day before we go home."

"All right, daddy. What are lighthouses for?"

"Well, said Mr. Brown, "around our coasts are many big, dangerous rocks and most of these are hidden by the sea. At night-time these rocks are invisible. If the ships were to get too close to the rocks they would crash into them and maybe sink. So, when it is dark, the light at the top of the lighthouse is switched on. This light can be seen for miles around. It warns shipping that there are dangerous rocks nearby."

"Do men live in the lighthouse all the time, daddy?" Carol asked.

"Oh, yes, said Mr. Brown. "They are always on hand to help any ship that gets into trouble."

"They must get very lonely, especially in stormy weather," said Carol.

"They probably do," said Mr. Brown. "But we could not do without the men who run the lighthouse. They do a very necessary and worthwhile job."

"I would not mind being a lighthouse-keeper," said Brian.

"I thought you wanted to be a pilot," said Carol.

"I have changed my mind," said Brian. "I think I would rather work in a lighthouse now."

"The Bible is rather like a lighthouse," said Mr. Brown.

"How is that?" the children asked.

"Well," replied Mr. Brown, "just as the lighthouse flashes out its warning light, the Bible, too, warns us of the dangers of sin. Like the lighthouse, the Bible is a guiding and saving light, for it guides us and shows us the way of salvation."

Justification

by John Burgan, Dip.Th.

PASTOR OF ELIM PENTECOSTAL CHURCH,
MASON STREET, HULL

"He was put to death for our sins and raised again for our justification."

IT is wonderful to know that, as Christians, we have our sins forgiven. Many at first find this hard to accept by faith alone, but eventually we see that God has not only forgiven our sins for His Son's sake, He has actually forgotten them completely. God has forgiven not only the small sins, but also the big sins as well, not only the sins that we feel that God can easily forgive, but also the sins that we think that God will find hard to forget.

If all we are is forgiven men and women, then we are only half-Christians; for the forgiveness of our sins is only half the great truth of the finished work of Jesus Christ. Many Christians live miserable Christian lives, because they are only half aware of what God has done on their behalf. The forgiveness of sins is in a sense negative, for if we are only forgiven our sins before almighty God, then we are empty-handed people indeed. We would stand before God with no sins against us, but we would be very poor indeed. Praise God, our sins are forgiven and cast for ever behind Him, but Christ not only died for our sins, He was raised for our justification!

We are indeed like Joshua—brands plucked from the burning (Zechariah 3:1-5). Joshua stands before the Lord clothed in filthy garments. This was our condition before we came to Jesus Christ—"But we are all as an unclean thing, and all our righteousnesses are as filthy rags" (Isaiah 64:6)—but there came a day when our wonderful Saviour forgave us every one of our sins and washed us clean. He removed our sins far away from us and left us clean in His sight. If this were all, however, we would be left just like Adam before he sinned, that is, having done no wrong but having done no good deeds either. Adam was not created as perfected, but only innocent of any wrong and without blemish. He had done no righteous acts even though he had done no wrong ones either.

Some, like Jehovah Witnesses, say that Jesus died to give us back what Adam lost, to give us a second chance. The Bible contradicts this view: "And the free gift is not like the effect of that one man's sin. For the judgment following one trespass brought condemnation, but the free gift following many trespasses brings justification." Justification is far more than forgiveness. In Zechariah 3:1-5, the Word goes on to say, "I will clothe you with rich apparel," and this is what justification means. Jesus Christ has clothed us in His own perfect, sinless righteousness. God sees us as perfect through Jesus Christ. As Christians we stand before God clothed in all the merits of Jesus Christ. How could we dare to stand there otherwise? Being perfect in His sight—of His only Son, of Him the Father says, "I am well pleased"—means that the matchless life that Jesus lived is reckoned to us.

This wonderfully positive side of our salvation is shown in what the angel says of Joshua the priest: "Let them put a clean turban on his head. So they put a clean turban on his head and clothed him with garments." Joshua was not only clean, but clothed with a new splendour, just as we are through what Jesus has done for us. All the goodness of Jesus is before God, for Jesus not only died as the perfect sacrifice, He also lived the perfect life on our behalf as well. He fulfilled all the demands of the law.

Christians often feel that they have little or nothing in the bank of heaven. We feel that God has cancelled our overdrafts, but we are still very poor. We have failed to grasp the great truth that not only was Jesus put to death for our sins, He was also raised again for our justification. The more that we realise all that God has done for us in Christ, the more we can thank and praise Him and the more we shall rejoice every day.

A firm booked a man aboard a rich liner to the United States along with another man from the same firm. Being somewhat cautious, the first man went into the third-class department and fed on cheap meals of cheese and biscuits for most of the trip. On arriving at his destination, he was surprised to see his friend for whom he had been looking. Asking his friend where he had been, he learned that he had travelled across first-class and had been having a wonderful time on the best of menus, since the firm after all had booked them both first-class. Isn't this something like the way we live our Christian lives? We live our lives on scanty fare, while God has a great spiritual feast awaiting men and women who are rich in Christ. We are sometimes like the prodigal son feeding on husks while, as sons of the King, there awaits us a fatted calf every day in God's goodness.

When we stand before God in Christ, God can say of us: "This is My beloved son in whom I am well pleased," for He not only sees us as without sin, but full of all the merits of Jesus Christ, as perfect as could be in Him.

All that Jesus is and has done is reckoned to my account. I have on me His holy garments. I can take a first-class trip through life.

PRAAYER AND PRAISE

by F. H. Coleman

"JESUS loves the little children" we sing—and how true it is. This week we have an answer to prayer concerning a baby whose parents gave him the lovely names of Matthew Henry, no doubt after the famous Puritan preacher. Here is the report:

"I gave birth to a son, Matthew Henry, on May 2nd. He seemed to be all right when he was born, but later he became very ill. A specialist thought that he might have heart disease. We prayed and so did the people at our assembly in Dudley after our pastor had told the people about Matthew. Two days later the hospital rang to say that the doctor had changed his mind and would keep the baby under observation. I was very upset, but tried to keep my faith.

"While reading a Christian magazine I came across the words from the Gospel of John: 'Whatsoever ye shall ask the Father in My name, He will give it you. Hitherto have ye asked nothing in My name: ask, and ye shall receive.' I prayed 'Lord, please heal baby Matthew.' On another page of the magazine I came across the quotation: 'If we want God to honour us we must take Him at His Word.' So I said, 'Thank you, Lord, for healing my baby! I have claimed Your promise.' Before this I had had such a great burden and headache, but, as soon as I prayed these words the burden seemed to be lifted. That night, when we rang the hospital, we were told that Matthew was satisfactory and a great change had come in his condition. Since that day he has continued to improve. When he came home he weighed six pounds two ounces. Two months later he weighed nearly eleven pounds. We have much to praise God for. I think that it is about time that we took God at His Word, which I shall try to do in future. Praise His name."

Book review

Seychelles Calling, by David Winter. Published by Far East Broadcasting Association. Price 20p, postage and packing 4p extra.

Seychelles Calling, excellently written by David Winter, is both inspiring and informative. It relates the birth and growth of F.E.B.A., the only British radio missionary station.

I quote: "There are now, after 2,000 years of Christian mission, more people in the world who have never heard the Gospel than at any time in church history." This startling realisation burdened the pioneers of F.E.B.A. to seek God about communicating the Gospel to the masses via radio. One cannot but be thrilled at how God guided them concerning place, personnel and procedure. It was not all easy—the will of God rarely is. They faced many difficulties and trials, but they had the faith and fortitude that translates vision into mission.

INTEREST in the Pentecostal movement by the press is widespread. Not only religious magazines, but secular papers, local and national, and magazines of world-wide circulation such as Life and Time find news and views of the Pentecostal or charismatic revival worthy of notice. Maybe the most interesting and in the end the most influential impression is when such local papers as parish magazines take up the theme from the pen of the vicar or minister. To illustrate, and without comment, I am reporting The Vicar's Letter of Holy Trinity, Malvern, a neighbouring town to Worcester. Rev. K. C. Parry writes :

"My dear friends,—What does it all mean? In Church newspapers, magazines and in the Church at large, we hear more and more each week about the renewed emphasis upon the power of the Holy Spirit in general and the Pentecostal movement in particular. What does it all mean? First, let me ask you a question: 'What is it that makes the Church tick?' Bishop Leslie Newbiggin in his book, The Household of God, states that historically there have been three major answers to this question: 1. The hearing of the Gospel with faith; 2. The participation sacramentally in the life of the historically continuous Church; 3. The reception of and abiding in the Holy Spirit. Bishop Newbiggin calls these answers, broadly, the Protestant, the Catholic and the Pentecostal. He is concerned that the Protestant and Catholic understandings of the Church are, or tend to be, static. He is persuaded that there is a lot to learn from the dynamic of the Church found in the Pentecostal movement. In the eighteenth century the Church of England refused to learn the very important lessons that J. and C. Wesley offered to their Church and the formation of the Methodist Church was the result.

Now the Pentecostal movement has grown at an astonishing speed during the last seventy years. Are we to ignore it and hope cheerfully that if we ignore it, it will go away? Or shall we recognise that it has been greatly blessed by God? You see, I feel sure that the average member of the Church of England knows little about the teaching of the Pentecostal Church. Most of us have a vague idea that Pentecostal services are a little wild, with people speaking in strange tongues and having unusual and ecstatic experiences. But, of course, this as you might imagine is only a fraction of the truth and has received far more attention than it warrants. Here are some facts that you might not know:

"1. At the turn of the century there was no Pentecostal movement. Today it consists of more than 10,000,000 souls (Commission Report in 1960).

"2. Pentecostals claim that they are the largest non-Roman Catholic community in France, Italy, Portugal, Brazil, Chile and El Savador.

"3. They have had success in cold countries, too. They are the largest free church in Norway and Finland.

"4. Russia's Pentecostalist and Baptist Union is the Christian Church with the highest growth rate.

"5. In China, Pentecostalists are the most virile and rapidly growing Protestant movement on the mainland today."

Mr. Parry deals with Great Britain and concludes his favourable résumé with: "What can we learn from them? For my own part I feel they set us very fine examples in three ways: 1. They have tremendous faith in the supernatural, extraordinary and visible work of the Holy Spirit today, as in the days of the apostles and at that first Pentecost; 2. They are sure that formalism can be more deadly to the Christian life than fanaticism; 3. For them the Church exists for mission as the fire does for burning; they are willing to stand up and be counted."

My thanks to Mr. Parry for the extracts I have used. God bless such men!

Musings of a Minister's wife

"While I was musing the fire burned: then spake I with my tongue" (Psalm 39:3).

by Mrs. Kathleen E. Toft

IT has been a great joy to attend meetings in a tent seating over 1,000 people, which has been packed night after night, with an estimated 400 to 500 outside, unable to get in. The gatherings consist of all age groups, with a preponderance of teens and twenties. The highlight of the meeting each night is the sight of crowds of people, particularly young people, responding to an appeal to repent of their sin and to give Christ an opportunity of making their lives anew.

The proclaimed message is the unadulterated Word of God. It is being preached in a reverent, solemn atmosphere, producing rapt attention. Each night the great Bible doctrines, which are not heard so loudly from some pulpits these days, are being thundered out, irrespective of what the audience thinks. No wonder the response is so great, for, "A faithful witness delivereth souls." Sin, repentance, wrath, judgment, hell, immortality, forgiveness, the new birth, deliverance, mercy, heaven and eternal life—every message brings these doctrines to the fore.

I could not help but make some contrast between the gospel message that the emboldened preacher was, and is, gravely declaring and the so-called gospel messages I have heard at times in recent years. These musings have been going on in my heart and mind for two or three years and I have often wanted to voice them. They began while entertaining a Christian worker in our home, then in Northern Ireland. Objection was taken to the strong position taken in Ulster in preaching the doctrines of sin, repentance, separation, eternal damnation, etc. The worker concluded: "It is too negative. I believe in positive thinking; all that is necessary to be saved is to believe in Christ." The Devil is an adept at half-truths; even he believes in Christ and trembles.

Later, returning to England, we discovered how prevalent and with what avidity this idea of positive thinking with regard to spiritual truths was being proclaimed and received. The old Bible doctrines of sin, repentance, the wrath of God on evil-doers, eternal damnation were spoken of by some as narrow, negative, distasteful.

"Positive thinking will bring results. It will get decisions for Christ, it will get people healed, it will produce confidence in yourself, and in the people you want to influence," say some. This doctrine may bring results in the world of commerce and materialism, but surely not in dealing with eternal verities. God has only one answer to the old Adamic nature, i.e. death and destruction; no amount of positive thinking will resuscitate it. It is already condemned.

The Bible says that you can be saved, but you must first repent or you perish. You can be healed, but first "confess your faults one to another, and pray for one another, that you may be healed." The Bible says that you can be fruitful, but not without being purged. Every truth has a counter truth. There is no positive without a negative, no blooming without pruning, no healing without wounding, no resurrection without a crucifixion.

Sin, disease, judgment, damnation cannot be annulled by positive thinking. The Ten Commandments are all "Thou shalt nots," but without them we would not have known sin. The law is our schoolmaster to bring us to Christ. Enoch Powell said: "The need of our nation is for the churches to preach again the Ten Commandments. They who are Christ's are not against the law or its declaration, in fact, the law is written on the tables of their hearts. They remember that Jesus said, 'Think not that I am come to destroy the law . . . I am not come to destroy, but to fulfil.'"

Most of the cults reason along this line of positive thinking, and sad to say, some who have sat under sound Biblical teaching have erred from the truth in this matter. The ratio of smooth preaching prophets is 400-1 (1 Kings 22:6), but the Micaiah-like prophets cannot but speak the Word of the Lord to the nation, even though they be smitten on the cheek.

FIGHT EVIL

This is the Last Will and Testament

WITH A WILL!

Do not leave the distribution of your estate to chance. Here are some reasons why you should make a will:

1. It prevents misunderstanding over your intentions about your estate.
2. It provides opportunity for you to continue to exercise Christian stewardship.
3. It helps to avoid heavy expenses, which can sometimes drain away valuable assets.
4. It gives you opportunity to designate who shall benefit from your possessions.

You can show your gratitude for blessings received and also continue the fight against evil by making a gift to the Elim work in your will.

The following wording can be incorporated in a will or codicil:

I bequeath to the Elim Pentecostal Church, of 117 St. George's Road, Cheltenham, Glos, the sum of £ free of duty for the general purpose of its work, and I declare that the receipt of the Secretary-General for the time being shall be a good discharge for the said legacy.

Is it not better to know that your possessions will be used for the Lord's work rather than be spent by those who have never honoured or revered His name?

A positive thinking gospel is a perversion of the gospel of Christ and those who pervert it are accursed (Galatians 1 : 8, 9). The flock of God must take heed how they hear! A positive thinking gospel will not lead them in at the strait gate and the narrow way which alone leads to life eternal.

The day is fast approaching when the wheat will be separated from the tares. The latter will be dealt with and be burned up as chaff, while the wheat will be gathered into the garner. Listen to God speaking from His inspired word: "I am against the prophets that steal My words"; "I am against the prophets that use their tongues and say, He saith . . . and cause My people to err by their lies and by their lightness" and "The prophet that hath a dream, let him tell a dream; and he that hath My Word, let him speak My Word faithfully."

It was delightful to be at the conference in Blackpool and to hear the whole counsel of God being firmly preached by all the speakers, and at the Thursday communion service to hear the newly elected President-elect state categorically that the message of the gospel is a message of judgment, but with overtones and undertones of mercy.

Do not regard those who warn of coming judgment and the wrath of God on unrepentant sinners as prophets of gloom, but rather "receive with meekness the engrafted word, which is able to save your soul." Let it be "mixed with faith that you may profit thereby." Then you will prove that the "Gospel is the power of God unto salvation." You will be positively saved and that for eternity.

INSTANCES of moral corruption are multiplying daily and have come to be so much a part of the scheme of things that there are some who dare to say that there is nothing wrong of itself.

"Honesty is the best policy" used to be a maxim of the copybook and there were many who tried to live accordingly. A man's word was as good as his bond.

Now things have radically changed and not for the better. This is the sorry day when the distinction between right and wrong has become blurred: "What's the difference, they all do it," they say. Politicians, public figures, pop stars, policemen, parsons—"they all do it." A sagging morality allows more and more people to join the ranks of doing what "everybody" does.

Are we to accept this new morality without protest? What does the Bible say? Peter tells us that the Lord knows how to reserve the unjust unto the day of judgment to be punished (2 Peter 2:9-15).

The corruption of the hearts of unregenerate men is as old as the history of the human family, but in this downward plunge wickedness is paraded more blatantly than ever before. The line that distinguishes between right and wrong is becoming ever less distinct until it is almost erased. The Church has abdicated its responsibilities in favour of psychiatrists, sociologists, novelists and playwrights. Thanks to them, no one is declared to be to blame for what he does. The delinquent's depredations are explained as stemming from a broken home or a disadvantaged neighbourhood. These new arbiters of our morals say that people do what they do because they are basically insecure or because they belong to some minority group which has been economically deprived or socially estranged. What is wrong with the old-fashioned words right, wrong, conscience?

What is the responsibility of young people in the Church when our philosophy has plummeted to this new low?

As Christians we must be sure that we do not allow the world to set our standards. As followers of Christ we can never excuse ourselves by saying, "Everybody does it." Peter has a word for us: "Beware lest ye also, being led away with the error of the wicked, fall from your own steadfastness" (2 Peter 3:17). We are to stand fast and look to God and His Word to keep us from being swept along by this torrent of wickedness. Our responsibility is to know the difference between right and wrong and then resolutely to choose the right and to stand committed to it without any reservations.

Let us be practical about the matter. The Bible still says very clearly "Thou shalt not steal." When a student puts down someone else's answer on his examination paper, he is stealing, he is doing wrong, he is committing sin. Christians must stand up and say "Everybody does not do it, and I am one who does not!"

In spite of the "moral freedom" (?) of the nineteen-seventies the Word of God says "Thou shalt not commit adultery." The reading of suggestive, impure literature and the harbouring of lustful thoughts are in direct violation of the seventh commandment. This is God's commandment against all relaxations of sexual morality which are glossed over, excused and even defended in our sex-ridden age.

God's standard for His children is set forth in His Word. He who created man in His own image has revealed the way of life that is His will and which gives the fullest expression of our personalities.

The Bible holds the standard high. To obey the commands: "Flee youthful lusts" and "Keep thyself pure" in word, thought and deed was never more difficult and never more necessary than in contemporary Great Britain.

Jeremiah 14: 1-16

"There was no rain in the earth" (v. 4).

The picture presented here is one of acute famine and distress. At the gates, where prosperity was once so evident, despondency and barrenness prevailed. "Black unto the ground" (v. 2), "the ground is chapt" (v. 4), the cry of mourning instead of the song of praise and rejoicing—such was the condition of God's people. Their cry was "Lord, leave us not."

Sin had caused this calamity (v. 7). Returning to Him was their only hope of salvation from despair and ultimate destruction.

Tuesday, August 1st

Jeremiah 15: 10-20

"O Lord, Thou knowest: remember me, and visit me" (v. 15).

"For thy sake I have suffered" was the prophet's plea. The Lord knows everything concerning us—our every problem, our every need. He will remember, He will visit us.

Do you tread the path of suffering today? If we suffer for His sake we shall also reign with Him (2 Timothy 2: 12).

Wednesday, August 2nd

Jeremiah 16: 1-21

"O Lord, my strength, and my fortress, and my refuge in the day of affliction" (v. 19).

This testimony of one who had proved the Lord is a source of encouragement for us all. In Him is our strength. "The Lord will give strength unto His people" (Psalm 29: 11). "The eternal God is thy refuge and underneath are the everlasting arms" (Deuteronomy 33: 27)—strong to uphold!

Thursday, August 3rd

Jeremiah 17: 1-13

"Blessed is the man that trusteth in the Lord, and whose hope the Lord is" (v. 7).

Trusting in the Lord assures us of blessing at so many levels. A tree planted by the rivers of water, drawing continually on hidden reserves, will spread out her roots (v. 8). Such ever-growing stability and increasing strength will secure a sufficiency of sustenance in the day of drought. Consistent fruitfulness and prosperity are portrayed here. "Whatsoever he doeth shall prosper" (Psalm 1: 3).

Friday, August 4th

Jeremiah 17: 14-27

"Where is the word of the Lord? Let it come now" (v. 15).

The cry of the critic and the scoffer is still heard. There is a famine of the Word (Amos 8: 11). How few are those who proclaim His Word! The command to us today is "Go stand in the gate . . . and in all the gates" and proclaim the Word of the Lord (v. 19). "Take heed to yourselves" was God's command (v. 21).

Have we failed to proclaim His Word in public places?

Saturday, August 5th

Jeremiah 18: 1-18

"Behold, as the clay is in the potter's hand, so are ye in Mine hand" (v. 6).

To be in the Master Potter's hand is a privilege. God's hand is tender. His pressures vary according to our needs. God's hand is powerful to keep. God's hand is gracious to soothe, comfort and bless. God's hand is a designing hand. He requires only our submission.

Sunday, August 6th

Jeremiah 19: 1-15

"So I will break this people and this city, as one breaketh a potter's vessel, that cannot be made whole again" (v. 11).

Why was this most drastic sentence passed? What contributed to this pronouncement of judgment so severe? Failure to hear and to respond to God's words was the cause. The hardening of their hearts, their rejection of Him, the worship of Baal, upon whose altars their children were sacrificed, all arose from this. God's standards remain. His judgments are sure. "Judge of the nations spare us yet, lest we forget, lest we forget."

"Righteousness exalteth a nation: but sin is a reproach to any people" (Proverbs 14: 34).

Keeping in with the crowd

Mark 15 : 15

by Frank Lavender

PASTOR OF ELIM PENTECOSTAL CHURCH,
GLOUCESTER

WE are witnessing a strange, ominous development today, one which could lead to anarchy and to the breakdown of government.

A government or authority makes known the policy by which it will meet a certain situation, then a comparatively small, disaffected group of people set out to wreck that policy. We have seen governments reverse their policies because of such opposition when it is accompanied by public violence or the threat of violence. This is an age of weak government which gives way before pressure groups to the advantage of a few and the disadvantage of the majority.

In Exodus 32 we read that Aaron, the high priest of Israel, was virtually second in command to his brother, Moses. When Moses went to receive the law from God, Aaron was left in charge. Some of the people quickly tired of waiting for Moses to return and they demanded that Aaron should make them gods of gold. Aaron was a good talker, but his faith was a poor thing; he quickly gave in to the pressure group. He knew what was right, but he wanted to keep in with the crowd. He was prepared to deny his faith rather than stand against the mob.

Pilate agreed with great reluctance to try Jesus of Nazareth (Mark 15 : 15). When he examined the case he soon found that Jesus was guiltless. Instead of setting Him free, however, this Roman judge tried to throw the responsibility on to others: first he sent Him to Herod; then he offered the crowd a choice between Jesus and Barabbas; then he told the Jews to try Him themselves; as a final, futile gesture he washed his hands in water. His conscience warned him to let Jesus go, his wife's dream strengthened the warnings of his conscience, but the cry of the Jews that Jesus should die because He claimed to be the Son of God (John 19 : 7) struck terror to his heart. In spite of all this, in the end he delivered the Lord Jesus to be crucified; he wanted to keep the crowd happy even at the risk of losing his eternal soul!

The Bible tells us that there were many of those who saw and heard the Lord Jesus who believed on Him, but they would not openly acknowledge Him as Lord because they feared the Jewish leaders. They loved the praise of men rather than the praise of God.

There are many today who are just like this; they know that they ought to become Christians, but they are afraid of others—family, friends, workmates, neighbours. To keep in with them, so that they will not be laughed at and mocked, they are prepared to deny the Lord Jesus.

Thank God, there have been those down the ages who have been ready to risk everything for Jesus Christ; once they knew the greatness of His love for them their hearts went out in love and devotion to Him.

This same message of the love of God in Christ comes again to your heart today, for He died on the cross to take away your sin and to give you eternal life. Will you give your life to Him now, whatever men may think of you? Will you begin to bear a faithful testimony for Him in the power that He will give? Jesus said: "Whosoever therefore shall confess Me before men, him will I confess also before My Father which is in heaven. But whosoever shall deny Me before men, him will I also deny before My Father which is in heaven" (Matthew 10 : 32, 33).

Which will you choose: the good will of men, with everlasting shame; or the favour of God, with eternal life? Are you going to keep in with the crowd or will you take your stand with and for Jesus Christ?

Proclaiming the Truths of Pentecost

By J. Alexander Wright

The letter to the Romans

1. Preface

DR. WILLIAM BARCLAY has said that William Tyndale's Prologue to Romans is one of the world's greatest pieces of theological writing. Here is a quotation from it: "Forasmuch as this epistle is a light and a way into Holy Scripture, I think it meet that every Christian man not only know it by rote and the book, but also exercise himself therein evermore continually, as the daily bread of the soul. No man can verily read it too oft, or study it too well."

"It is the most profound book ever written" (Samuel Coleridge).

"It opened the door to all the treasures of Scripture" (John Calvin).

"The chiefest book of the New Testament and the purest gospel" (Martin Luther).

"Whoever has mastered the theology of Romans has mastered Paul's gospel" (Dr. James Denny).

The great Chrysostom had it read to him once a week.

It was written from Corinth during Paul's third missionary journey, which Dr. F. F. Bruce places in the winter of A.D. 56, 57 and Dr. C. H. Dodds in the spring of A.D. 59—that is, near the end of his great career. Its place should be about at the middle of all Paul's writings, but in our Bibles it is placed at the beginning of them, as a foundation for all that follows. Compare 16 : 1, 21-23 ; Acts 19 : 21 ; 20 : 4 ; 1 Corinthians 1 : 14 ; 16 : 10, 11, 15 ; 2 Timothy 4 : 20. Presumably it was conveyed by Phebe, "Phebe carried under her robe the entire future of Christian theology!" (Ernest Renan).

It was addressed : "To all that be in Rome . . . called to be saints" (1 : 7). Roman Catholic tradition, dating from Jerome, A.D. 420, says that the church at Rome was founded by Peter in A.D. 41, and that he held the bishopric there until his martyrdom in A.D. 66. This is contradicted by the whole tenor of New Testament teaching. In A.D. 44 Peter was imprisoned in Jerusalem (Acts 12 : 4). In A.D. 46 he was at Jerusalem (Acts 15 : 7), a "pillar of the church" there, and an apostle to "the circumcision," the Jews (Galatians 2 : 9). Paul was conveyed to Rome as a prisoner in A.D. 61, and certain brethren from Rome met him ere he entered the city, but Peter is not mentioned as being among them (Acts 28 : 15). Paul's Letter to the Galatians, written from Rome, mentions him, but not as being present in the capital or of his having been pope for twenty years. Ephesians, Philippians, Colossians and Philemon were all written from Rome and, though many other names are mentioned, never once does he speak of Peter. In the last chapter of Romans he sends greetings to twenty-seven persons, but Peter is not among them. Finally, just before his death, he wrote to Timothy : "Only Luke is with me" (2 Timothy 4 : 11). Writing to Rome, living in Rome, and writing from Rome, Peter is not mentioned as being present there.

Peter did not found the church at Rome, nor did Paul, for, at the time of writing, he had not even seen them (1 : 13 ; 15 : 22, 23). Then who did ? Probably some of those returning "strangers from Rome" who were present at the great happenings in Jerusalem on the Day of Pentecost (Acts 2 : 10). Perhaps they were saved and filled with the Spirit while there. A few years later, when the Neronian persecution of Christians broke out, Clement of Alexandria reported that there were a large body of Christians in Rome and Tacitus, the Roman historian, said that there were "an immense multitude" of them.

Of this Epistle, the great Methodist Bible commentator, Dr. Adam Clarke, wrote : "Herein we find no popes, levys, dispensations, indulgences, excommunications, relics, crucifixes, monks, shrines, confessions, masses, prayers for the dead, holy water, images, crossing the body, nuns, inquisitions, racks, tortures—all these were added by men through time.”

“It is a superlative irony and tragedy that the church to which it was originally written is the one which has erred most grievously from it.

What a difference there is between the Church of Rome today and that first church at Rome to which Paul wrote! An honest facing up to the teachings of this letter would do more than anything else to cure papal Rome of its dark heresies and fond superstitions” (Sidlow Baxter, Explore the Book). S

NORWICH

We have just concluded a Festival of Light in the city, in co-operation with other evangelical Christians. It was a joy to see seventy to ninety teenagers attending church every night for a whole week. During coffee and conversation with gospel rhythm groups the young people were given sound teaching on the Word of God. Many found Christ as their Saviour.

The work for the Lord progresses here. Our annual convention was tremendously blessed. The Principal of Elim Bible College, G. Wesley Gilpin, and several students gave the message in word, music and song, with moving sincerity. We received over £500 in gifts and offerings during the convention, during which approximately 300 sat down to tea.

Recently we baptised fourteen candidates (see photograph). A sad note was registered in that one teenager was unable to go through the waters, as he sustained a motor-cycle accident the night before. However, this brave lad was in the service despite several stitches in his knee. Our prayers embrace the whole of our precious Elim family, both here and abroad.

Pastor : A. Newton

We had a very enjoyable weekend of ministry by the Secretary-General, Pastor J. T. Bradley. The Saturday evening was well attended. We had the support of Pastor L. E. Lambert, of Blackpool, and some of the members, Pastor Cain and his wife, of the A.O.G., and Pastor R. Clarke with a company from Marton, including the choir, who ministered in song. We were encouraged by the ministry of Pastor Bradley.

The Sunday services were just as greatly blessed. In the morning around the Lord's Table it was good to hear the people give God the glory for all His goodness. The weekend ministry came to an end all too soon.

PONTARDULAI

Pastor: G. J. Feasey

At our eight-day crusade Pastor R. C. Stacey preached under the anointing of the Holy Spirit. Pastor A. W. Leavesley convened the services. Different items each night came mainly from the local church.

The Lord was present to save, to heal and to fill with the Holy Spirit. The last night of the crusade emphasised God's blessing, for the church was full and the Holy Spirit had His way from beginning to end.

We are now over halfway through our year of evangelism. Projects still to come are: visitation of the whole area, our anniversary convention with Pastor F. H. Coleman, and our second crusade in October with Billy Graham films.

We praise Him for all that is past and trust Him for all that is to come ! G. J. FEASEY.

HIGH WYCOMBE

Pastor: T. G. Hills

After eight years of faithful, fruitful ministry at High Wycombe Pastor Brian Garrard and his wife and little Jonathan have bidden us farewell. In his valedictory address Pastor Garrard stressed his desire to close his ministry by preaching the Gospel, which he did to a large congregation. During the service a cheque was presented on behalf of the church and a gift from the young people—and a large teddy bear for Jonathan.

The church is much indebted to Pastor Garrard. He put much thought and energy into superintending the erection of its new building.

A good number of members and friends from High Wycombe attended their induction to the Worcester church.

Pastor T. Gordon Hills was inducted as our new minister by Pastor Eldin R. Corsie, the District Superintendent, supported by Pastors R. Rees, P. G. Parsons, F. J. Slemming and R. Jones (A.O.G.). A large congregation gathered. The President of the Free Church Council was present and gave an address of welcome. The dedicatory prayer was offered by Pastor Slemming with the laying on of hands. A time of happy fellowship was enjoyed after the service. K. H. IVES.

North-eastern Presbytery Youth Barbecue

All roads lead to Kilham—well, they did as far as 120 people were concerned ! They made the trek deep into the heart of East Yorkshire to congregate at this village. Having overcome the first obstacle—that of finding the place—another awaited them, the weather. "The rain came down in torrents," to quote a well-known chorus. This made it impossible to hold the barbecue at the intended farm, but fortunately the natives in this part of the world are friendly and a church hall was borrowed for the purpose.

The journeys from Grimsby, Hull, Harrogate, Scarborough, York, Malton, Driffield and Grange-town were more than worth while, however, for the Lord made His presence manifest in a very real way during a blessed time of fellowship. This time was marked by forceful, up-to-date testimonies and anointed singing, especially from our Malton and Grimsby churches.

The hot dogs and beefburgers were much appreciated and thanks must go to George Bower, who so ably worked over the hot stove, and to all the others who helped to make this new venture a huge success.

(MRS.) O. F. RICHARDSON.

STOCKTON

Pastor: R. Nugent

Another new building for the members of the Elim family was recently opened in Stockton-on-Tees. This marked the culmination of ten years of effort by the local assembly led by their pastor. All the glory for the success story of the assembly, which commenced its witness in a poor hall in the town and is now established in a fine, modern building, was ascribed to our Lord Jesus Christ.

The building, which cost only £9,500, is erected on a large site provided by the local authority.

The new Elim Pentecostal Church in Stockton, Teesside.

The building was erected by Stocks Bros., of Leeds, in a unique system-build method which produces a finish indistinguishable from that obtained by traditional methods. The main church seats about 250 people. There are a minor hall and other ancillary rooms.

The opening service saw the church full to capacity. Pastor J. C. Smyth, who opened the building, stressed the need for the church to take up the power and authority vested in it by the Lord Jesus and thereby to reach a difficult, sinful generation with the Gospel.

The church secretary writes :

After a week of feverish activity the day finally arrived for the opening of our new church. From two o'clock until four the building was open for people from the surrounding estate to come and have a look around. This was an experiment and we are pleased to report that many people came to view the building. We were able to introduce them to the church workers and to invite them to future meetings. Light refreshments were served.

At the official opening, after a hymn and a prayer, Pastor John C. Smyth turned the key and declared the building open. It was wonderful to see the new building full to overflowing for this service, which was convened by our own pastor. Pastor G. Fearn brought greetings from Darlington. Pastor Smyth paid tribute to the work done by our pastor in the years leading to the opening of the new church. Mr. Paul Nugent sang, accompanying himself on the guitar. Pastor Smyth encouraged us all with his powerful sermon.

The following day saw the first of our family services. We give thanks to God for the many new contacts that were made in that first service.

DAVID J. BELLETT.

KENNOWAY

Pastor : J. M. Hunter

We had been having our meetings in a little hall connected to our pastor's business premises in Leven prior to our coming to Kennoway. This came about through the visit of Pastors Barrett and Williams from Manchester. We had such wonderful blessings that we had to take over a large hall in Leven, because there were so many eager to hear the gospel and to come for healing. They were not disappointed, for we witnessed marvellous healings and saw many come to the Lord at these meetings. The campaign lasted for six weeks at that time, nearly ten years ago. After it was over our pastor felt led to start meetings in Kennoway and we acquired a two-storey house which we converted into a dwelling-house upstairs for our pastor, the lower part being our church. Willing helpers, both men and women, set to work with a will and soon we had a lovely hall. Our pastor, a carpenter by trade, made various articles including a little pulpit. The husband of one of our members did the decorating. When it was finished the effect was very gratifying.

We have added to our numbers since then. We cannot claim large numbers, but we are happy in the fellowship.

We have recently had a joint baptismal service in the Assembly of God church, Kirkcaldy, where the pastor kindly welcomed us to join with his congregation. Our pastor baptised three members. To see the shining faces of those who were baptised was indeed a joy.

Conference memories

G. W. Gilpin, Principal of Elim Bible College, giving his report.

Hiding from God

by Trevor Partington, Stafford

ALL over the world men and women are trying to hide from God. Some hoped that this scientific age would stamp out the last vestige of Christian thinking from our society. Others, while accepting the ethics of Christian belief, have soothed their consciences by reflecting that permissiveness and non-churchgoing are now the norm. Such strenuous efforts to get away from anything to do with God only lead to the discovery that they cannot hide from Him. His all-seeing eyes are upon them. They may deny the reality of this openly, but inwardly they cannot. The thought of God is still there.

Our first parents tried to hide from God because they had broken His law. Sin always brings guilt and separates us from God. It causes us to turn from Him. We try to flee from His presence. This is the real reason why men try to hide from God today: because of the presence of sin in their lives.

Men can try to hide from God by claiming that there is no God, that the world is a mass without meaning. The marvellous design and order of it, they say, is all chance; there is no Creator behind it. Every now and again, however, people who adopt this view find themselves in a very difficult position. One person has put it like this: "The atheist's most embarrassing moment is when he feels profoundly thankful for something, but can't think of anybody to thank for it." It is amazing how many times a so-called atheist will say "Thank God"!

Men also try to hide from God by saying that they cannot understand or accept the Christian faith. "I don't understand the Virgin Birth and what about the Deity of Christ—how could He be both God and man? Then there are the miracles—so hard to believe—and the cross, what does it mean?" they say. It is the same with the Bible, which records all these truths. People say that they cannot understand it, so they build an intellectual barrier behind which they try to hide from God. Paul made it clear that spiritual things could only be understood by spiritual people: "The spiritual man has insight into everything that bothers and baffles the men of the world" (1 Corinthians 2:15, Living New Testament). It takes a fish to understand a fish and it takes a Christian to understand Christian things. Men never come to an understanding of the Gospel by logical argument and reasoned theory, but when we surrender ourselves to Christ we become new persons and receive a new understanding. The things which seemed unreasonable before become just the opposite. "Through faith we understand that the worlds were framed by the Word of God" (Hebrews 11:3). Though true faith does not require it, statements in the Bible are seen to be more and more in line with scientific facts.

Men try to hide from God by involving themselves in church activities. Saul of Tarsus was very religious before he found Christ, but he was really hiding from God, trying to escape the inner convictions of His heart. At last he conceded victory to Jesus Christ in the battle for his soul, and said: "Lord, what wilt Thou have me to do?" (Acts 9:6). There is all the difference in the world between service which is an expression of our right relationship with the Lord and service which is really an attempt to evade a right relationship with the Lord.

The most common attempt to hide from God is by wearing the cloak of good works. Adam and Eve, when they sinned, made aprons for themselves out of fig leaves and hid themselves behind trees (Genesis 3:7, 8). Men wear "the apron" of good works and hide behind the trees of respectability. "I do the best I can. I am a good neighbour. I never do anyone any harm. I am honest," they declare. What God required, and later provided, for Adam and Eve was a coat of skins. To get that coat an animal had to be killed and its blood shed. The shedding of blood is what God has provided for us, too. "For Christ also hath once suffered for sins, the just for the unjust, that He might bring us to God" (1 Peter 3 : 18).

The moment God reveals this glorious truth to us we no longer have any desire to hide from God.

A mind at perfect peace with God—

Oh, what a world is this !

A sinner reconciled through blood,

This, this indeed is peace !

This is my story

LIKE David of old I must declare, "My soul shall make her boast in the Lord" (Psalm 34 : 2). All that I have been privileged to do for the Lord Jesus Christ is because of Him "who loved me and gave Himself for me."

I was dead in trespasses and sins (Ephesians 2 : 1). From 1910 to 1924 I did not know the Saviour as a personal friend, but God had His hand upon me. He blessed me with a praying grandmother and a godly Sunday school teacher. Grandma lived to the ripe old age of ninety-four years and saw the fulfilment of her prayers. The teacher, too, assisted in the work of bringing me into the blessing of salvation.

My father was dying with tuberculosis. Through the ministry of the two people mentioned he was led to the Lord before his death. Then my Sunday school teacher took an added interest in me and asked me if I would like to hear a gipsy proclaim the Gospel. Thinking that this was a novelty, I gladly agreed to accompany him to a revival gathering in London to hear the world-famous evangelist Gipsy Smith.

For the first time in my life I queued to get into a church meeting, but what a joy I experienced in that place! The gipsy with his lovely baritone voice sang a piece entitled "The song in the heart," the chorus of which consisted of these beautiful words :

Wonderful, wonderful Jesus,

In the heart He implanteth a song,

A song of deliverance, of courage, of strength,

In the heart He implanteth a song.

Then he preached the glorious gospel of a living Saviour who could cleanse the heart from sin and transform the life.

When the appeal was made I yielded to the claims of this wonderful Master. I stood to my feet and a decision card was handed to me. On

by Arthur Campbell

this card was printed these words : "Realising that I am a sinner, and believing that Christ died for me, I accept Him as my personal Saviour and decide by His help to live for Him." I signed the card—and the miracle happened. How it took place I cannot tell, but my filthy tongue was cleansed, my heart was made anew, my sins were washed away, my trespasses were pardoned, my iniquities were forgiven. I was a new person. I was so happy that it seemed that I was walking on air. Joy was thrilling my heart. When I arrived home I awakened my younger brother and said, "Stanley, I'm saved now ; if you kicked me I would not hit you." It was so real ; I was delivered. The power of God was demonstrated in my life (Romans 6 : 14). I wanted to tell others about this grand salvation and was informed that I could receive a new power from God to give an effective witness for Him. It was called the Baptism of the Holy Spirit. I desired this wondrous gift, so I dedicated my entire being to my Lord. I waited before Him and the blessed Holy Spirit empowered me, so that I "spoke with other tongues as the Spirit gave utterance" (Acts 2 : 4).

I have been privileged during these past forty-seven years to experience many glorious events in service for the Lord. Here is one of them. I was invited to take the first children's campaign in Portugal. Many children and a number of adults attended these gatherings each night, an average of 260 each weekday, and on the final Sunday over 1,400 came. Approximately 200 decisions were registered. To God be all the glory !

THE front cover photograph of the Gage family serves as a poignant reminder of Northern Ireland. Those who have experienced the great pleasure and blessing which derive from worshipping with our churches there will know that they have many fine young people who serve the Lord Jesus with fervour and devotion. We trust that the photograph will cause even more Christians to take the whole tragic situation in Ulster to their hearts in fervent, sacrificial prayer.

Two things have added point to the terrible tragedy. One was the absolutely inexplicable consultation between members of the British government and the I.R.A.—in London, of all places. When Hess landed in Scotland during the last war, apparently with messages from Nazi Germany, he was given short shrift, it seems, yet here was a British government holding truck with the very people who openly boast of their merciless killing of British soldiers, of whom over 100 have laid down their lives in Northern Ireland. It baffles the imagination of ordinary people.

The other item has been the truly dreadful aerial photograph of Londonderry which has been given wide publicity. It has been likened to a picture of areas of London after the Nazi blitz. How can one feel anything else but shattered when a group who loudly proclaim their desire to see Ireland united and prosperous wantonly destroy the commercial heart of a city which we believe to have a majority of Catholics in its population?

What worries us is that nobody seems to be doing anything about seeking and remedying the underlying causes of the Irish troubles. One gets the feeling of British government representatives earnestly seeking to meet the immediate situation seemingly by compromise with terrorists and their fellow-travellers, while doing but little to deal with unemployment difficulties and basic national needs.

We come back again to what many Irish Christians have said, namely that the answer to the problem is a spiritual one. The struggles in Ireland are highlighted as religious in origin, and there are certainly strong religious overtones and undertones, but Ireland is just one more of the world's battlefields on which the conflict against the godless forces of materialism is being fought out. God bless Ireland—and God save the people!

ELIM MISSIONARY IN GUYANA

"VAL, the septic tank's blocked up again!"

Before coming to Guyana I hardly knew one thing about a septic tank. Now I know that this cry means "Hurry up and find the wire so that I can poke it free!"

My education must have been quite limited, as I did not know what a cockroach was either. Spiders? They are everywhere—and all sizes, too! I remember the evening I saw one as big as my hand. It was no good screaming as I was alone in the house. I could not run out because it was night time. I sought refuge in bed, only to discover that I wasn't alone. A very big brown cockroach was right in beside me!

Another day I went to the kitchen to find Ian holding his thumb under the tap. "I've cut myself," he said. The tip of his thumb was almost far, death has claimed three of my dear ones since I came here. It seems that the valley is very long and deep, but I have seen the lily there.

What prompts me to write these things? Standing for a hymn I stopped to listen as about forty people sang with great gusto: "Just as I am without one plea, but that Thy blood was shed for me." Most were converted Hindus. We were not in a cathedral with an organ blending its notes with human voices; we were just underneath a house and we had no musical accompaniment. That singing was sweeter to me than any I have ever heard. The reality of the miracle swept over my soul; those young men and women were joyfully and truthfully singing the words. The light had shone in a very dark place and the miracle of conversion had taken place.

The joy of that moment alone could never be expressed, however adequate my vocabulary may become. That moment made everything worth while. Those fears and tears receded into the background and I felt that I stood on holy ground and that perhaps the veil had been drawn aside and I had glimpsed into eternity. Seen from that standpoint everything is different.

Are you living for now or for eternity? Do not be bogged down with your present circumstances, but be like your Master and look forward to the joy which is set before you!

Greetings from Europe!

by H. W. Greenway

AS I pen these words there still rings in my heart the enthusiastic acclamation of the thousands of European Pentecostals who stood in the great final meeting of the Pentecostal European Conference in the Festhalle, Berne, Switzerland, on Sunday afternoon, July 2nd, to send their greetings to all Pentecostal Christians associated in the European community outside the Swiss border. It was the conclusion of a wonderful week of spiritual fellowship among believers who spoke many languages, but who were one in spirit and testimony. It is a privilege to convey these warm feelings to the Pentecostals of Great Britain through the medium of THE ELIM EVANGEL. Large crowds attended every night, increasing from about 4,000 on the Monday night to about 8,000 on the Saturday.

Times of ecstatic worship, as the vast congregations stood with hands upraised and the Gifts of the Holy Spirit were exercised, will never be forgotten. The general atmosphere of friendliness, despite language barriers, was conveyed through the whole vast assembly by the one word—"Hallelujah!", which made it easy to communicate the warmth of our love. The forceful preaching overcame translation difficulties as every night people responded to the Gospel appeal and came forward for prayer and counselling.

EUROPEAN PENTECOSTAL

BERNE, SWITZERLAND

The organizing committee.

Musical items from groups, choirs, soloists, bands and instrumentalists added to the joyful singing of the crowds.

We felt deep satisfaction as we were greeted by many friends who had graduated from Elim Bible College through the years—and this not only from among the preachers but from many of the young people who were busy assisting with the organisation of the camp. Chief credit for the smooth working of the arrangements must go to Jakob Zopfi and his Swiss committee, who were gratefully applauded for their untiring efforts.

Among representatives present were brethren from Rumania, Yugoslavia and Hungary, who brought greetings from behind the Iron Curtain, and who testified of increasing blessing and progress among their people. David Wilkerson addressed the meeting on the opening Saturday and we were informed that a large number of young people responded to the appeal.

So great was the blessing on the conference that the decision was made to hold further such gatherings in Norway in 1975 and Holland in 1978. The committee will continue to function as constituted at present and Jacob Zopfi was elected to carry on secretarial duties. A declaration of belief and a number of resolutions were adopted by the final meeting. We hope to publish these when we have the English transcript.

Another Slant

PASTOR OF ELIM PENTECOSTAL CHURCH,
ERDINGTON, BIRMINGHAM

IF some officials were on piecework they would starve, was the conclusion to which a day going through various council departments led me. It was in relation to a register of building schemes being prepared on a national basis and I was doing a pilot study in Birmingham. One's time was spent being shunted by various officials between four or five departments, each passing the buck, and not really wanting to know. However, persistence pays—and looking through the thousands of applications for planning permission proved interesting.

One noted the number of times plans to convert premises into places of worship were rejected, especially when they were originally domestic dwelling-places. I realised that gone are days when our fellowship, or any other, could provide homes for congregations with little official involvement. The proportion of applicants for home improvement was overwhelming—for garages, porches, window alterations and the like. I wondered how many, if any, of them ever thought of an eternal home, for so much emphasis is placed on material possessions these days. Even in the domestic field one is faced with much form-filling, office queueing, and, to my mind, red tape. You seem to need as many forms for a storm porch over the front door as for an office, or a factory—even if the answer to most questions was no!

Deadlines seem to be unheard of in a local authority establishment. I wondered how any building ever got under way at all. The calendar, rather than the clock, seemed to be the judge of time!

I smiled when I saw the tea-trolley doing its rounds before 10 a.m.! Sorry if my slant this week is so slanted! The day presented no real opportunity for a word of witness, but it is all part of life.

I thought of the Bingley Hall when visiting the planning department, for, during the rallies there recently, I felt that if it was not pulled down or repaired soon it would fall down due to sheer neglect. I felt that we could not sing too lustily in case the roof fell in! The meetings and the open-air witness before then proved to be a great time. Few will forget Alexander Tee's evening message, with its special slant for young people. We were all moved by the testimony of the tictac man, who spoke of his life of gambling. I missed all the work of unloading and reloading the chairs; it was a tremendous task, one worthy of our appreciation. I trust that another rally will be arranged, for the witness and the fellowship were all to the good and to His glory!

FIRST BIBLE REFRESHER COURSE, GHANA

By DAVID L. MILLS

As I sit here preparing for the second refresher course my mind wanders back over the first course. I wonder whether the second course will bear any semblance to the first.

I HAVE the student group photograph in front of me. Each one is a distinct individual. Some are young men; others have more experience behind them. Nearly all have recently been called to the ministry. They have all left good jobs; there are no unemployed "job seekers" among them. Former bank clerks, government officers, a university student and stenographers are among those chosen for the first course.

The schedule was crowded. As someone put it: "If Bible study gives us the milk of the Word—this is condensed milk!" The first lecture commenced at 7.15 a.m. after morning devotions. The lunch break was at 12.30 p.m. and the afternoon and evening sessions started at 3.30 and 7 p.m. respectively. In spite of this, when the students had any time off they were eager to help in the evangelistic activities of the local assemblies.

The highlights of the first course are many. There was the time when we joined the pastors for a feast of delicious Ghanaian stew with rice, and we sat around the long table as a family. There was the time when, returning from Sunday evening preaching appointments in the mini-bus, the student body began to sing "Faith, mighty faith, the promise sees and looks to that alone; laughs at impossibilities and cries it shall be done." There was the time when God broke in upon the lectures and broke our hearts before the sufferings of His Son and that other occasion when the notes were confirmed by the Gift of prophecy. Perhaps the greatest blessing came at the end of the course when we gathered around the Lord's Table. I realised that we had all been drawn closer to the Master we serve because of our time together.

May God continue to equip us for His service! May course number two continue and extend the good work!

SUMMER HOLIDAY

5. The fisherman

by Sheila Price

THE sun was shining brightly and Mr. and Mrs. Brown were playing cricket on the field with Brian and Carol. Mr. Brown was the bowler, Brian was the batsman and Mrs. Brown and Carol were the fielders. Brian had scored six runs and had been batting for a long time. Carol was impatient to have her turn with the bat.

"Hurry up and get Brian out, daddy!" she called.

"I'll see what I can do," said Mr. Brown. He bowled a fast ball to Brian, but Brian was determined not to be bowled out. The ball came to him with great speed, but he managed to hit it and it sailed through the air before disappearing over some trees.

"Oh, dear," said Carol, as she ran after the ball. "I do hope it hasn't fallen into the stream."

Just then a man came walking towards them. "Is this your ball?" he asked.

"Oh, thank you so much," said Mr. Brown.

"That's all right," replied the man. "My name is Mr. Andrews. I was fishing in the stream when your ball landed near me."

"Have you caught any fish yet?" Brian asked.

"Not yet," said Mr. Andrews.

"Fancy your name being Mr. Andrews!" exclaimed Brian.

"Why is that?" asked Mr. Andrews.

"Well, our Sunday school teacher told us about two fishermen who became disciples of Jesus. One of them was called Andrew."

"Do you know the story, Mr. Andrews?" asked Carol.

"Indeed I do," said Mr. Andrews. "The two fishermen were named Simon and Andrew and they were brothers. They sailed their fishing boats in the lake of Galilee and toiled all day even in stormy weather catching fish. One day, when they were working as usual, Jesus came up to them. 'Follow Me,' He said. 'And I will make you fishers of men.' The two brothers left their boats and nets and immediately followed Jesus. Do you know what Jesus meant when He said that He would make them fishers of men?"

"I know," said Carol. "Instead of spending their time catching fish, Andrew and Simon could spend their time seeking men for Jesus."

"That's right," said Mr. Andrews. "And do you know, Jesus not only called Simon and Andrew to follow Him and to help Him in His work, but Jesus calls us, too."

Let's Talk About The Bible, by Ernest F. Kevan.
Published by Henry E. Walter Ltd. Price 35p, postage and packing 6p extra.

This book speaks about the Bible in general, then goes through the history of the Old and New Testaments. It is written in a style that most young people over the age of twelve would consider to be childish. For children, however, the presentation is good. The author is to be commended for the shortness of his chapters—called “talks.” The concentration level of children has obviously been a consideration here. Also to be commended is the fact that the book goes through the Bible in chronological order. Time order is a source of confusion to Sunday school scholars, who can hear about Abraham one week and a figurehead of 500 years later the next week.

Dr. Kevan has taken great pains to be simple throughout his book. His illustrations and opening remarks in each talk are excellent. Perhaps it would have been better if a modern version of the Bible had been used, particularly in chapter 32, which deals with the book of Romans.

TREVOR PARTINGTON.

The Climax of the Ages, by Dr. Frederick A. Tatford. Published by Prophetic Publishing House. Price 50p, postage and packing 8p extra.

First published in 1953, this work is now re-issued in paperback format. In this splendid verse-by-verse exposition, the author gives us, with masterly brevity, an extraordinary amount of information, not only of the life and times of Daniel, but of the succeeding centuries in which most of Daniel's great prophecies were so remarkably fulfilled. He lays many Christian scholars under tribute.

An appendix on chronology by Dr. F. F. Bruce adds to the value of the book.

Dr. Tatford follows the futurist interpretation of prophecy, i.e. that the whole of this present age, including the return of our Lord for His Church, comes between the sixty-ninth and seventieth week of Daniel 9:24, that there will be a revived Roman empire, that Palestine will have an apostate Jewish king, and that it will be invaded by 200,000,000 troops, from the north-east, besides armed forces from all over the world.

The reviewer notes, with sadness, how the most consistent prophetic expositors can at some points leave their consistency and give themselves to theory and speculation.

J. A. WRIGHT.

Contextual Interpretation of Scripture, by Joseph C. Hawkins. Published by the author, price 12p, postage and packing 3p extra.

Some of the interpretations contained in this little book will have already occurred to thoughtful Bible students, while some will obviously not meet with full acceptance, but the main purpose—that of commending careful consideration of both text and context—has always been dear to me.

The thoughts of the Red Sea crossing, the flaming sword of Genesis, and the ascension of Jesus, where the author develops his thought a little more fully, are interesting and may be helpful to some.

My verdict is: worth while as a prompter of thought and a reminder of the need to study both text and context.

Sheltered

How wonderful to know that I
May shelter in the Lord most high,
And as I seek to do His will
May feel His presence, calm and still.
No terror shall possess my life,
Although the days are filled with strife,
For He has said “My peace is thine
And in the darkness you must shine.”
Dark days, dark nights, but yet my God
Has sent His light into the world
And I who trust Him need not fear
The battle which is often near.

*For words without the heart
The Lord will never hear;
Nor will He to those lips attend
Whose prayers are not sincere.*

*Lord, teach me what I want
And teach me how to pray;
Nor let me ask Thee for Thy grace
Not feeling what I say.*

JOHN BURTON.

Margaret M. Laddow's page

Do I pray?

*Be not afraid to pray—to pray is right ;
Pray if thou canst with hope ; but ever pray,
Though hope be weak or sick with long delay ;
Pray in the darkness if there be no light.*

HARTLEY COLERIDGE.

IN the mayor's service, my husband was requested by the Canon of Salisbury Cathedral to lead prayer for the people, for our city and for all nations and to feel perfectly free to pray extempore. This he joyfully did ; being nonconformist in upbringing and Pentecostal in experience, he could do no other.

Prayer is the Christian's vital breath. Many earnest believers have spoken, written and compiled prayers, prayer lists and aids to prayer. For instance, how should we address God ? Archbishop Anthony Bloom in his latest book, Meditations on a Theme, defends the use of the prayer book. He writes, "So often we say why pray in words coined by others ? Do not my own words express adequately what is in my heart and mind ? No, this is not enough. . . . In the same way in which we learn from the great masters of music and of art what musical or artistic beauty is, so also do we learn from those masters of the spiritual life, who have achieved what we aim at, who have become real, live and worthy members of the body of Christ ; from them we must learn how to pray, to find those dispositions, those attitudes of mind, of will and of heart which make us Christians." Another advocating the use of read prayers defends it on the grounds that we are addressing the King, the sovereign Lord of heaven and earth, and surely we must use the language which is befitting. In complete contrast to this attitude we have the story of the down-to-earth Yorkshireman interrupting the long-winded prayer-warrior with the admonition, "Call Him Faither and axe Him summat !"

Mr. A. H. Bath, a veteran member of our church at Salisbury, tells of the time he was in hospital. An Anglican priest occupied the bed next to his. Before lights out on the first night on which the priest was admitted, he called for silence and said he wanted to lead them in prayer. Taking out his book of prayers, he read two or three of them and then said "Amen." This happened for the next few nights, but no one seemed impressed or blessed. So Mr. Bath said to him, "When you pray in private, do you always use your book, or do you express your feelings to God and make your requests in your own words ?" The priest admitted that he never used the book for private prayer and supplication, whereupon Mr. Bath suggested to him that his evening prayers in the ward might be more appreciated if prayed extempore. That night he prayed without his book and lovingly remembered the other patients in their needs. The next day many of the patients told him how much they appreciated his prayer. From then on this became the procedure. Patients told him of their problems and in the evening prayer he brought them all to God. His prayers became a ministry of blessing to them all. This continued until his own sickness deteriorated and the Lord took him home.

Prayer, whatever its expression, must be sincere and bring us close to God. Extempore prayer which is insincere is no better than a prayer read parrot fashion from a book.

*I often say my prayers,
But do I ever pray ?
And do the wishes of my heart
Go with the words I say ?*

MUNDESLEY HOLIDAY CAMP

Photograph by G. Thomas.

Report by PHILIP G. PARSONS, PASTOR OF ELIM PENTECOSTAL CHURCH, ROMSEY

THE staff of Mundesley Holiday Camp, Norfolk, saw an unprecedented influx of Pentecostal young people from various parts of the British Isles, for well over 200 booked in for this joint Elim and Assemblies of God youth holiday—the first of its kind.

The blessings received indicated the spiritual hunger and expectancy with which the people came and what great things God wanted to do if only we would let Him. The Spirit of the Lord was evident in great power in the very first meeting as Pastor Paul R. Newberry (A.O.G., Manchester) delivered a deeply penetrating message on "Spiritual honesty." This brief, anointed service set the marvellous spiritual tone for the following six days.

The Sunday was a very blessed day. A simple, wonderful Communion Service was held in the morning when Pastor L. E. Lambert's thoughts on being accepted in the Beloved led us into a beautiful spirit of worship.

The preacher for the week was Pastor Hans Koonstra. The Holy Ghost was mightily upon him on Sunday night when he preached on the healing of the woman with an issue of blood. Two knelt at the front of the hall to receive Christ as their Saviour. There were definite healings as the sick were prayed for. At this mighty service two and a half hours passed by unnoticed. When the meeting closed nobody wanted to go—it was so refreshing to relax in the presence of God.

Every morning scores of people attended the hour of prayer preceding breakfast. Later in the mornings there was an hour of Bible study led by various speakers. One such was Arthur Blessitt's assistant, Jim McPheeters, who talked about the Jesus Movement. It was thrilling to hear what God is doing among the young people both in Britain and America. Another visiting speaker was Peter Hill, one of the organisers of the Festival of Light. He told about the vision that God gave him, which, when translated into action, sparked off a series of effective demonstrations for Jesus Christ.

Pastors Alexander Tee and E. R. Corsie, our National Youth Director, ministered God's Word as well as members of the A.O.G. youth council. Pastor Koonstra also dealt with the Baptism in the Holy Spirit. Some wrong ideas were proved to be without foundation. The simplicity of receiving by faith was emphasised. After this Monday morning Bible study over twenty young people received their personal Pentecost. Further teaching on the Gifts of the Spirit was given by Pastor Koonstra as the week proceeded. Many campers provided singing items and testimonies in the meeting.

There was no lack of recreational activities on the camp site: croquet, putting, bowling, tennis, table tennis, netball, football and swimming.

Mundesley did not have the sunshine record for the first week of July, but the weather was favourable for the trip on the beautiful Norfolk Broads on the Wednesday afternoon. On Thursday night a barbecue was held on the beach. This proved to be a successful means of evangelism as four young people accepted Christ as their Saviour.

The camp drew to a close. There were a few tears as the time came to say "Goodbye" to old and new friends. Even on the morning when we left a member of the camp staff was led to the Lord!

Tape recordings of the meetings and photographs are available from: Mr. G. Thomas, 73 Queen Mary Avenue, Cleethorpes, Lincs.

THE FAMILY ALTAR

Scripture Union Portions

Notes
by
D. C. Lewis

Monday, August 7th Jeremiah 20 : 1-18

"But His word was in mine heart as a burning fire" (v. 9).

Jeremiah had suffered because he had been faithful in proclaiming the word of the Lord. He had been mocked, smitten and placed in the stocks as an open spectacle at the city gates and reproached because of his fidelity to God's Word. His first reaction was that the price was too heavy: "I will not make mention of Him, nor speak any more in His name. But His word was in mine heart" (v. 9). When God's Word burns in our hearts we cannot keep silent; we must proclaim it. Jeremiah did and he prevailed. He was encouraged by God's presence: "The Lord is with me" (v. 11).

Tuesday, August 8th Jeremiah 22 : 1-17

"I will build me a wide house and large chambers" (v. 14).

The house was to be magnificent and large in dimension. This plan did not meet with God's approval. It was to be built on the wrong foundations; dishonesty, unjust gain, extortion and oppression were the insecure cornerstones. We must build according to God's plan—on godliness, justice, compassion and truth. "Laying up in store for themselves a good foundation against the time to come, that they may lay hold on eternal life" (1 Timothy 6 : 19).

Wednesday, August 9th Jeremiah 22 : 18-30

"I spake unto thee in thy prosperity; but thou saidst, I will not hear" (v. 21).

Affluence had caused the hearts of the people to become unresponsive to God's appeal; they rejected His voice. They felt self-sufficient, yet how poor they were in the currency of heaven. "And when thy herds and thy flocks multiply, and thy silver and gold is multiplied, and all that thou hast is multiplied; Then thine heart be lifted up, and thou forget the Lord thy God" (Deuteronomy 8 : 13, 14). Beware of the influence that would separate us from the Lord, that would make our lives and witness less effective for Him. "A faithful man shall abound with blessings: but he that maketh haste to be rich shall not be innocent" (Proverbs 28 : 20). "The blessing of the Lord, it maketh rich, and He addeth no sorrow with it" (Proverbs 10 : 22).

Thursday, August 10th Jeremiah 23 : 1-15

"Mine heart within me is broken" (v. 9).

Amid a picture of the unfaithfulness of the shepherds of Israel, the promise is given of the coming of the Lord Jesus, the good and faithful Shepherd. The heart of the prophet was broken (v. 9) because of the degree of depravity that prevailed. Their course was evil (v. 10). In the very centre of the nation at Jerusalem conditions had deteriorated so much that they were compared with Sodom and Gomorrah. The "profaneness" of the prophets had penetrated into all the land (v. 15). The man of God trembled, for he still had a vision of the holiness of the Lord. How great is our concern in this day of moral pollution?

Friday, August 11th Jeremiah 23 : 16-32

"He that hath My word, let him speak My word faithfully" (v. 28).

"Is not My word like as a fire? saith the Lord" (v. 29). The message is clear; in the age of infidelity, of ever-increasing sin, preach the Word; when the people have forgotten the name of the Lord (v. 27), preach the Word. "Am I not a God at hand, saith the Lord, and not a God afar off? Do not I fill heaven and earth?" (vv. 23, 24). He is ever present. He is powerful (v. 29). His word faithfully preached will break down every opposition. "I will make My words in thy mouth fire" (5 : 14).

Saturday, August 12th Jeremiah 24 : 1-10

"I will give them a heart to know Me, that I am the Lord: and they shall be My people, and I will be their God" (v. 7).

Hearkening to the Word brings great blessing: recognition, "to know Me, that I am the Lord"; restoration, "they shall be My people"; renewal, "I will be their God."

God's eyes are ever upon us for good. The path of the penitent is strewn with many precious promises. "I will bring them again"—how willing God is to direct our steps anew. "I will build them . . . I will plant them" (v. 6).

Sunday, August 13th Jeremiah 26 : 1-24

A cure for boredom

by John Hyde

PASTOR OF ELIM PENTECOSTAL CHURCH, OXFORD

BOREDOM is a phenomenon of our age, something which is strikingly, dangerously modern, the outward, visible sign of a sickness.

A surgeon, talking to a friend, said: "The greatest of human miseries and the most deadly of diseases is one we cannot touch with the knife or save men from by drugs."

"Oh," said the friend to the surgeon, "you mean, of course, cancer."

"No," was the reply. "We will get to that persistent enemy yet. No, I mean boredom, for there is more real wretchedness and more torment driving men to sin than there is to anything else."

"Men and women will do almost anything to escape it. They drink, they drug themselves, prostitute their bodies, and sell their souls. They will take up mad causes, organise absurd crusades, fling themselves into lost hopes and crazy ventures, and torture themselves and other people to escape the misery of being bored."

The surgeon concluded by saying: "Anyone who discovered a cure for that would put an end to more tragedy and misery than all of us doctors and physicians put together."

That was uttered some years ago, yet, in a day such as ours, in which opportunity has opened so many doors to those of initiative to be of service, the bogey of boredom, so far from being laid, still stalks the land. Society remains on the sick list, like the woman in the Scripture who had suffered many things and, after seeing the physicians was not cured, but rather grew worse. Today, in spite of the many physicians, welfare workers, social scientists and psychiatrists, it is as much as we can do to contain the increasing growth of boredom, let alone eliminate it. If boredom is to be overcome and relieved, then the need of friends and the need of activities must be recognised.

Surely no one who has enjoyed the enriching experience of true friendship can doubt its value, nor was the Saviour Himself above the need of human friendship. "He ordained twelve that they should be with Him," just plain men, but Jesus Christ had need of them. I believe that their friendship was like a benediction. Jesus testified: "Ye are they which have continued with Me in My temptations."

Life demands an outlet for expression; this surely is basic to human nature. An ancient law of life is recorded in Genesis: "It is not good that man should be alone."

It is a good thing to be active, especially when we are involved in the service of taking interest in others, ready to give a helping hand to those who are unable to help themselves. To lose sight of self, get lost in meeting the needs of others.

What did our Lord find? He found the bored people of His day, for boredom is at least as old as that. Nothing moved them. There was a numbness inside them, insensitivity, an absence of responsiveness, as if they had lost the zest for life. They were not dead, for they still lived and breathed and had life of a kind, but they had not got the real, vital, abundant life that comes from God.

The Saviour offers today, just that—everlasting life. He said: "I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly." Life with Jesus Christ is the answer to boredom.

unto them, diminish not a word" (v. 2); "Thou shalt say . . . Thus saith the Lord" (v. 4).

God's servant was directed to make a nationwide appeal. He was to stand. Surely it is time for us today to stand, to lift up our voices against the prevailing sins of our land, to speak only words given of God in their entirety. "Diminish not a word"—it is God's Word in its completeness that will be effective. It may prove costly. Jeremiah encountered opposition and we must be prepared for it. The message is "Amend your ways and your doings, and obey the voice of the Lord your God" (v. 13).

Home for Rosemarie Aeschlimann for the last eight months has been Elim Bible College, Capel, seen bathed in the sunshine of a lovely evening recently. Rosemarie, from Berne, Switzerland, is one of many overseas students studying English at E.B.C. A Christian for three years, she received a wonderful blessing in one of the nightly prayer meetings in March when she was baptised in the Holy Spirit.

Proclaiming the Truths of Pentecost

The letter to the Romans

By J. Alexander Wright

2. Introduction

Salutation (1 : 1-7). "Paul" is Greek, "Saul" is Hebrew. There is no significance in the change from one to the other in the Acts of the Apostles. "Servant" means "slave," one who is the absolute property of his master. "Apostle" means "sent one, messenger, or delegate." He was "separated" from birth (Galatians 1 : 15). Notice the blending of humility and authority. The gospel is rooted in the Old Testament and is not, as dispensationalists say, "a mystery revealed to Paul alone" (v. 2). Son of David by human birth and lineage, Jesus was plainly Son of God since He rose from death. "Jesus Christ our Lord" embraces His personal, official and universal names. The "received grace" (v. 5) created an apostleship to the world! "Obedience" (v. 5) is imperative, for all men are summoned to hear, believe and obey. The Roman Christians were "called" even as Paul was (v. 1), and therefore they were "saints" or separated ones, as was he. "Grace to you and peace" combines the Greek and Hebrew forms of greeting.

Introduction (vv. 8-15). "I thank my God"; all Paul's Letters begin with thanksgiving and praise. "I serve" indicates priestly service. "In my spirit" (v. 9, margin)—Paul's spirit, the highest part of his faculties, was like a holy shrine, a sanctuary wherein he served his God by preaching the gospel. His preaching was an act of worship! Note "my prayers"—for those as yet unseen and unknown to him! "A prosperous journey"—prayer was answered (Acts chapters 27, 28). Our ideas of "prosperity" and God's sometimes differ. "Spiritual gift" (v. 11)—charisma—is the word often used for grace in Paul's writings. The river of God's grace carries many gifts on its bosom (1 Peter 4 : 10); it is "many-fold." "Established" indicates grace grounds. "Comforted" is not merely consoled; this old English word means strengthened together: the ministry is mutual. "Let" (v. 13) is another old word. It now means "permit"; then it meant "hinder" (compare 2 Thessalonians 2 : 7; Psalm 21 : 3; 1 Thessalonians 4 : 15 for the opposite idea). "Gentiles" includes all peoples except Israelites, "Greeks," natives, "Barbarians" other than Jews or Greeks, non-Greek speakers. The idea of cruelty associated with Barbarians came much later. The name "barbarians" was given by the superior Greeks to those who did not speak in their beautiful language. "Wise" and "unwise" suggests cultured and uncultured. Paul looked upon his ministry as the discharging of a debt—an obligation, not a charity (v. 14).

Proposition (vv. 16, 17). "The gospel of Christ" is not only the good news that He Himself proclaimed but Himself, Messiah, the Anointed One, for such is the meaning of "Christ." He is the essence of the gospel, which is not a theory as to how men may be saved but a Saviour! "The power of God"—"power" is dunamis. In John 1 : 12 "power" means authority, but with the authority of sonship God also gives the dynamic! "Salvation" is the great Bible word defined in the Authorised Version as "Thy saving health" (Psalm 67 : 2). It gathers up all the redemptive process of God from our initial regeneration to our perfection in glory. This Divine activity within human hearts is the great deliverance the Messiah came to bring—from sin. (Matthew 1 : 21), from wrath (Romans 5 : 9) and from death (Hebrews 2 : 15). "Everyone that believeth" embraces all who have faith, for salvation has no validity or meaning to anyone apart from this saving faith. A striking but meaningful omission from the New English Bible is the verb "to believe"; in its place the translators have "trust," "have faith," "yield Him allegiance," etc. This is true believing.

SOUTHPORT

Pastor : L. N. Knipe

Here is a photograph of some of the fifty young people who travelled from Southport to the great Birmingham youth rally. They showed great enthusiasm and eagerness to help and share.

We have as many as eight who go on to the famous Lord Street on Sunday evenings for personal work and who run a weekly coffee bar called "Oasis." They are doing a great work.

Pastor : J. G. Cooper

We praise the Lord for a real move of God during the two weeks' crusade conducted by evangelists Melvin Banks and Gerald Bean. Crowds of people came to the meetings in the 1,000-seater marquee in the first week and in our own church during the second week. One service saw the tent almost full. Between 400 and 600 came on most of the other nights and approximately 550 on Wednesday afternoon. In the second week our church was packed to capacity with about 300 to 450 nightly. People from Caerphilly and the valleys around formed the largest parts of the nightly crowds. From the hundreds who were counselled it was clear that many were non-churchgoers.

A strange sight was to see people queuing to get into church, in spite of torrential rain, cold winds and very bad weather almost every day.

People prayed for by our members for years made decisions for Christ. Many of our members saw people in the meetings whom they thought would never be seen in a Gospel meeting in our church. The answers to prayer were wonderful. As the evangelist preached, literally dozens in some meetings responded instantly. Everyone who came forward was personally dealt with by our workers. Some fine healings by the Lord were witnessed, including a woman who was partially blind.

Children's services were held in the marquee each night led by Gerald Bean. Attendances were from 250 to 800 per night. Seventy new young people came into Sunday school on the Sunday.

There were 780 decisions for Christ. A lady, aged sixty-six, with a paralysed hand returned to testify publicly to a wonderful healing. She is now perfectly well.

"Now I can see!"

There has not been a crusade in Caerphilly like this for many years.

J. G. COOPER.

BRECON

Pastor : G. H. Neale

A baptismal service was held in a local Baptist church so that we could accommodate a large congregation. Our hopes that this service would be an evangelistic event were fulfilled, as many unsaved were present.

Four young men gave testimony to the saving and keeping power of Christ and were then baptised by our pastor. Our guest preacher was Pastor P. N. MacInnes. We praise God for His blessing and for the contacts that were made.

RUGBY

Pastor : D. C. Lewis

A baptismal and dedication service was recently conducted by our minister. It was a joy to see six children from the same family from our Sunday school brought by their parents for dedication. The seventh and eldest girl was baptised. The church was full to witness this unique event. Five other candidates were baptised and testified to the saving grace of the Lord Jesus.

We are looking to God for future blessings as we are joining with other denominations for a united mission to Rugby in 1973.

SMETHWICK

Pastor : S. D. Huntly, B.D.

The induction service of our new pastor was a time of great blessing to all. We started with a welcome tea to which sixty people came, including Pastor and Mrs. S. D. Huntly and Mark, Pastor and Mrs. R. J. Morrison, Pastor E. F. Cole, Mr. and Mrs. Huntly (senior) and Mr. Hugh Tait (Mrs. Huntly's father).

The service was led by Pastor Morrison (D.S., Birmingham Presbytery). The church secretary, Mr. J. Riley, welcomed the new minister. Pastor E. F. Cole preached from Acts 11 : 5. Seven ministers laid hands on Pastor and Mrs. Huntly, committing them in prayer to the work of the Lord at Smethwick.

Smethwick church would like to thank those

CATERHAM

Pastor : R. Smith

When Pastor R. Smith was inducted as the pastor of our church the meeting was convened by the District Superintendent, Pastor W. J. Maybin, who welcomed the new pastor to the church and to the presbytery. Pastor Smith has recently finished his studies at the Elim Bible College and looks forward to his new ministry with enthusiasm. Pastor C. J. E. Kingston, a former pastor, led the meeting in prayer and Pastor I. R. Moore welcomed the new pastor to the presbytery, urging him to keep in touch with the other ministers in the presbytery and assuring him of their help and advice. Pastor Smith was welcomed by Mr. J. A. Ibbotson on behalf of the members of the church. Pastor Jack Shellard read from the Scriptures. Pastor W. G. Blackler, Thornton Heath, brought several young people, whose ministry in song was greatly blessed. Pastor Blackler preached on "The Shepherd and the Sheep." He appealed to members to rally round their new pastor.

J. A. IBBOTSON.

No fear of death

What if death should call tomorrow ?
What if death should call today ?
Would I dread oncoming torture
To this mortal piece of clay ?

Nay, no fear of death within me,
Satan cannot grip my soul
Christ has promised lasting blessing,
Peace while endless ages roll.

I know not what will come tomorrow,
Yet I'm free from every care ;
For I know that Christ is with me,
Everything in life we share.

So, come death, or come Lord Jesus,
I am waiting for Thy call ;
Then my soul shall see its Maker,
With no fear or dread at all.

RUTH WINDSOR.

WESTON-SUPER-MARE

Pastor : J. B. D. Ritchie

Over 200 people gathered in the Bristol Road Baptist Church to witness our first baptismal service. Six people were baptised, the youngest of whom was ten years old and the oldest a real saint of God aged eighty-two years. There was a real sense of the presence of God as we listened to young and old tell of what Christ had done for them. Pastors R. T. W. Cradock and J. B. D. Ritchie officiated. The preacher was Pastor W. R.

Pastor J. B. D. Ritchie baptising the first convert of his ministry at Weston-super-Mare.

Jones and our hearts were all challenged by the Word of God.

Another chapter was written in the history of our church when we held our first meeting to receive new members. Over sixty people packed into the little hall to witness thirty-two friends being received into the membership of the new church. We were aware of the mighty presence of the Lord from the very first hymn. The preacher was again Pastor W. R. Jones, who was the leader of the Weston crusade. He gave a challenging message and, when he called on the people of God to take up the challenge, a number rededicated their lives to the Master. Before the day came to a close we had received another four applications for membership. To God be the glory!

Veteran missionary receives her last call

Miss Marion Paint, one of our earliest Elim missionaries and sister of Miss Coralie Paint, who recently retired from India, has gone to higher service. On Sunday, July 9th, our sister passed into the presence of the Lord after over thirty years of missionary service. She will be missed by her many friends.

In 1929 a group of Christians—some of the early Elim founder members in Guernsey—waved Marion Paint away on her long journey to India. They sang on the quayside “Keep me true, Lord Jesus, keep me true.” The theme of her life has been faithfulness to the Lord and to His calling. Until 1966 she gave her life for the Indian people and the educating of the orphans at Gorakhpur, an exemplary service which will receive its acclaim in the glory. Marion was the first of ten children and became the first “tithes” in the Paint family. Later Coralie Paint went to India and the two sisters accomplished many years of Christian witness among Hindus and Muslims.

After her “retirement” Marion joined the staff at Elim Bible College and influenced many students’ lives for Christ. Her last four years were devoted to helping English language students. Many of our young ministers and many overseas friends will thank God for her gracious ministry.

meetings were wonderfully blessed. Forty came out for conversion at the end of one meeting. Mr. Brewster preached three times in one day, the mayor and the Anglican canon being present.

At Dunedin Mr. Brewster was interviewed by the press immediately on arrival. He and his wife then attended a luncheon supported by over ninety people, including the mayor. Mr. Brewster was able to tell of the rising interest in Pentecost throughout the world. He later spoke to over sixty women at a coffee morning. Mrs. Brewster also addressed them. At the university over 150 students listened to our evangelist in their common room. The New Zealand Broadcasting Corporation arranged an interview with the subject, "What are the chances of a religious revival?" Listeners telephoned in questions which were dealt with at once. A group of about 150 young people were addressed in Burns Hall.

On the Sunday morning the three Pentecostal churches combined for a Communion service. Mr. Brewster preached, as he did at a forum in St. Matthew's Church in the afternoon and at First Church, Otago, in the evening.

Nightly, the Secretary of the World Pentecostal Conference and the pastor of Cardiff City Temple preached salvation and the baptism of the Holy Spirit to a wide cross-section of people. The major thrust has been to people outside the Pentecostal denominations and an indelible impression was made.

In Auckland the deputy Prime Minister graced the civic reception in honour of Mr. Brewster, who had an amazing opportunity of speaking to government ministers and heads of the churches. Over 1,500 people attended a Sunday afternoon meeting in Auckland Town Hall and forty publicly accepted Christ as Saviour. In the first four weeks of his tour Mr. Brewster preached sixty times in addition to taking part in interviews and discussions of all kinds.

Pentecost certainly received a public display in New Zealand. The deputy Prime Minister, who is also the Finance Minister, said: "This is what people want—a live religion!" Singing in the Spirit during the civic reception was delightful and refreshing.

During the jubilee celebrations in New Zealand 600 people have surrendered to Christ and many have been filled with the Holy Spirit.

From New Zealand Mr. Brewster proceeded to Australia.

AN OUTLINE

LOVELY, BUT LACKING

The rich young ruler—Mark 10 : 15-27

1. He was eager : he “came running.”
2. He was humble : he “kneeled.”
3. He was courageous : another ruler came by night.
4. He had an interest in eternal things : “From my youth.”
5. He was teachable : “What shall I do ?”
6. He was morally upright : “all these have I observed.”
7. He had a hindrance : “one thing thou lackest.”

Our Lord did not let the many excellent qualities blind him to the one defect. The ruler was so near, yet so far, so good, yet not good enough, so wise, yet so foolish.

When surgeons perform surgery it is the assisting nurse's responsibility to keep a careful count of the number of swabs and sponges used, so that the incision is not closed until each item has been removed. A young nurse on her first day with this duty told the surgeon that he had used twelve sponges, but that she could account for eleven only. The doctor curtly replied that he had removed them all. The young nurse insisted that one was missing, but the doctor grimly declared that he would proceed with the suturing. With blazing eyes the young woman said : “You cannot do that ! Think of the patient !” The surgeon smiled and, lifting his foot, showed the nurse the twelfth sponge, which he had deliberately dropped to the floor. “You'll do !” he said.

LITTLE PLACES

“Master, where shall I work today ?”
(My love flowed warm and free)—
He pointed out a tiny plot, and said
“Tend that for Me.”
I answered quickly, “Oh, no, not there ;
Not anyone could see,

No matter how well my task was done—
Not that little place for me.”
His voice when He spoke it was not stern—
He answered tenderly :
“Little one, search that heart of thine,
Are you working for them or Me ?
Nazareth was just a little place
And so was Galilee.”

Reaching the Chinese with the Scriptures

A translation of the New Testament in a popular form of the Chinese language will be completed within three years, according to officials of the American Bible Society. The American Assemblies of God has agreed to provide two-thirds of the 75,000 dollars necessary for the new translation, which will be made from the original languages of the Bible.

Mandarin is the official language of China, but it is only one of six different dialects. These have been united by a simplified orthography, which will be used for the new Scripture translation.

Bible societies have published the Scriptures in all the major dialect-languages of China, but numerous requests have come for a modern translation, which would reflect the rapid developments in the Chinese language and the important strides made in biblical scholarship in recent years.

Key Chinese biblical scholars will collaborate with a leading specialist in Christian literature to develop a translation under the auspices of the Bible Society. Scripture portions are to be published as they are completed. The entire New Testament is expected to be available in 1974.

Family altar	19

WE found a pew at the back of the musty old church, the whole family of us feeling like fishes out of water. There was no welcome; no one tried to make us feel at home. Not being of the Anglican persuasion at any time in our lives, we did not succeed in finding the place in the Prayer Book even once. We did not know one of the hymns.

At long last I turned to my wife, saying "At least we shall hear someone preach the Word!"

Alas for fond hopes—we were harangued for fifteen minutes by a stout, pompous Colonel Blimp-type retired army major, fat and flourishing he was, on the needs of Dr. Barnardo's Homes! Fair enough, need there was and no doubt is, but we felt robbed. He did not look the part anyway, especially in his surplice, which must have been intended for Samson or someone, so huge was it.

You must have guessed.

We were on holiday . . . !

There was no Elim Pentecostal Church in the place and even an evangelical church could not be found. We make absolutely no point whatsoever against the Anglican Communion, for we all know that there are many fine, sound, keen, out-and-out Christians in their fellowship both ordained and not. We applaud the wonderful stand many take for Bible truth and we are delighted when we hear of many who are being baptised in the Holy Spirit.

It was just that we could not find somewhere congenial in which to worship in our accustomed manner.

Having ministered as the pastor of a seaside church, I well know that many visitors find real joy in the fellowship of churches in such areas. It is not unusual to be able to tell what week in the year it is by the various accents of folk who take part in public worship on the Lord's Day mornings. A year or two in a seaside church brings you friends whom you meet every year in the same week or fortnight.

The point we want to make is to encourage you to go to church when you are on holiday. Set an example to your children if you have a family and take them to the House of God at least on God's Day. Get to your nearest Elim Pentecostal Church if you can possibly manage it. You will be very welcome. Find a Pentecostal church if Elim has no centre of witness nearby, failing that an evangelical one. But do go to the House of the Lord.

PILLARS OF THE CHURCH

Pastor Paulo tells the story

DAUDI, a keen Christian in the Hanang area fifty miles from here, began to witness to the people near the large Roman Catholic mission. God opened the hearts of Paulo and Salina to His word. Soon they were joyfully worshipping with a few other recent converts in a small grass church. One afternoon they heard a voice outside their home say "Hodi? (may I come in?)." "Karibu (come in)," they replied. A Roman Catholic priest stalked in and seated himself without saying a word. Paulo and Salina gazed at his wrathful face, feeling astonished at his behaviour and fearful of what he would do. "What have you done, Paulo? What have you done, Salina? What have you done? What have you got—you who were pillars of the church?" he said.

Paulo took courage and brought his Bible and showed it to the priest. "What Bible is this?" asked the priest. Paulo answered that it was the Word of God. "What is the Word of God?" retorted the priest. Paulo said, "We have been with you for many years. Why did you not read the Word of God before the congregation?"

"Do you think that we do not have the Bible in our church?" asked the priest.

"If you had it, why did we not see it? You hid it, is that not so?" queried Salina.

"I did not hide the Bible. We have it. I will get you it," he replied.

Paulo said "We have it, Bwana. This is for all people—perhaps you have one for priests?"

"No, I will bring you it," said the priest.

"No," said Paulo, "this is the true word and we have believed it. It has caused us to leave your church and to follow Yesu and make Him our Saviour." They then began to testify to him with words taken from the Bible. Salina said, "I am astonished that I was never told the words of John 3:16." "What do you think Salina, that I am not saved?" answered the priest.

"I do not know of your salvation, I know Yesu has saved me. It is up to you to take the decision to be saved."

"I myself taught you over many years. Did you learn nothing?" asked the priest.

"I never understood a thing, nor did I know my Saviour, Yesu," was Salina's reply.

Paulo then said, "I praise God for saving my house. When I was with your church I never knew salvation or the light of Yesu, not even a little. I could never join with you again. I rejoice in Yesu. I am satisfied with Him. I have no need of your words because I hear the Word of God in my life.

Then the priest began in anger to curse them with fierce words: "This church will die. It cannot bring shame to us. It is not possible for another church to exist here. It will die, you will see. You will return to us. Do you think that I do not know God? This church will die and be lost to memory." The priest enjoined all his people to pray against the Elim church that it might perish. So they prayed in their church and in their homes that the church might be destroyed and the believers scattered.

Paulo and Salina did not regard him; they looked to Yesu. Many other Roman Catholics, both young and old, are being saved and are joining the Elim church. The building is now too small for the congregation.

Footnote. Pastor Paulo is a member of the Executive of Elim Missionary Society in Tanzania. He took over responsibility for the Kikilo area from Pastor R. Gull. In 1971, with the aid of a grant from E.W.M.A., a larger church was built. At the official opening local dignitaries were present. The only two Europeans there were myself and a young Irish priest, the delegate from the large Catholic mission nearby.

New World Symphony

by Douglas Christie

Douglas Christie, pastor of the Assemblies of God Church in Leamington Spa, was converted in 1940 and entered the ministry in 1944. Married to George Newsholme's daughter, Grace, he has one daughter, Jennifer, aged thirteen years. He has been pastor at Chase Terrace and Belvedere, and has spent sixteen years in his present assembly. He is the Free Church chaplain of the King Edward VII Hospital, Warwick, serves on the South Warwickshire Marriage Guidance Council, is a member of the Mid-Warwick Community Relations Council and a member of the Warwickshire Education Policy Committee. He serves on the Assemblies of God Court of Appeal and for over twenty-five years has been the organist at the Assemblies of God General Conferences.

"We, according to His promise, look for new heavens and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness" (2 Peter 3 : 13).

SON of a Bohemian innkeeper and child of extreme poverty, Antonin Dvorak became a composer of international repute. Always susceptible to outside influences, he found tuneful inspiration from many varied sources. In his New World Symphony typical features of the folk songs and plantation melodies of the Indian and Negro races of the U.S.A. influenced him. It became a growing habit of his to take the well-known and oft-sung slave music, break it up, and absorb its several motifs into his compositions, in which they jostle one with another in playful rivalry. He did this with rare accomplishment in his Symphony in E Minor, known under the title "From the New World." This work has achieved a popularity equalled by few of its kind.

The America in which Dvorak found himself in 1892 had been named the New World. New indeed it was in many ways, chiefly in its contradistinction to the known and old world. Certain states bear appellations like New York, New Jersey, New Orleans, etc. Many of its cities and areas are also styled thus : New Albany, New Bedford, New England, and so on. The new world was the outcome of adventure by one who with his team made the ultimate discovery of a vast, astonishing continent hitherto virtually unknown. Dvorak gathered his musical ideas and themes from this new world, from its lilting, captivating melodies which wormed their way into his busy mind and produced movements like the majestic Largo with its cor anglais solo. The New World inspired this strangely haunting masterpiece which has become admired for the warmth of its melodies, the rich, heart-moving harmonies, the brilliant orchestration, and the fiery Czech patriotism that expresses itself so vehemently through the rhythms of the varied folk ideas which reminded him so much of his own homeland.

The Christian, having tasted of the powers of "the world to come," has been deeply influenced in thought, word and deed by a new world wherein dwelleth righteousness (2 Peter 3 : 13). This new world, into which already he has made his entry (Colossians 1 : 13), is the true environment of the child of God, who by virtue of this miraculous "new creation" discovers and enjoys the "all things new" (2 Corinthians 5 : 17). He now serves its Ruler and Potentate in "newness of Spirit" (Romans 7 : 6) and walks in "newness of life" (Romans 6 : 4). The life of the Christian becomes motivated and inwardly conditioned by the powers and influences of this spiritual, though nevertheless real, world, and thus develops into a life of true, concordant tunefulness and harmony. The experience is an individual symphony of pleasing, agreeable tones. To live by the new commandment (John 13 : 34) is to submit to the rule of a new world in which hatred, greed, suspicion and jealousy have no place. "The kingdom of God is . . . righteousness, and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost" (Romans 14 : 17).

*Eye hath not seen it, my gentle boy ;
 Ear hath not heard its deep songs of joy ;
 Dreams cannot picture a world so fair—
 Sorrow and death may not enter there ;
 Time doth not breathe on its fadeless bloom,
 For beyond the clouds, and beyond the tomb,
 It is there, my child, it is there !*

The inward blessings of that world are like "new wine" in "new vessels" (Matthew 9 : 17). The new nature makes possible new, wholesome desires and provides the new fruit which unmistakably appears (Galatians 5 : 22, 23). The new covenant (Matthew 26 : 28, 29) pertains to the new world from which we derive our "glorious hope," an anchor of the soul which enters within the veil. Our earnest expectation finds its grand fulfilment there (Romans 8 : 19-21). Our present happy state is a prelude to the coming greater glory (1 John 3 : 2).

*We feel that heaven is now begun,
 It issues from th' eternal throne.*

Men of this present evil world cannot understand or appreciate the people whose chief interest is away from this decaying scene (Philippians 3 : 20). From this other direction the Christian increasingly feels the pull of a world as yet unseen, which does not come with observation. From the new world are sent forth ministering spirits to lay hold of those who shall become the heirs of eternal salvation and whose names will be found inscribed in the records laid up in that other world.

The new world to which the Christian belongs is an eternal order, a limitless state. The "new heavens and the new earth" (Revelation 21 : 1) are but the ultimate, glorious manifestation of that spiritual regeneration and resultant transformation (John 3 : 3) in the lives of God's new populace, "out of every kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation" (Revelation 5 : 9). The present arrangement is to be severely shaken and the wasting cosmic order is to pass away (2 Peter 3 : 10-12), but there is to be a golden age, a future state of overwhelming perfectness wherein everything is entirely new (Revelation 21 : 5) and which can never lose its appeal or satisfying power. Everything in the new world will be without blemish or defect. It is a new creation in which we shall move in new bodies, possessed of new names, singing new songs, living in a new atmosphere, controlled by a new form of government, and challenged by the ever-unfolding prospects of the inconceivable everlastingness. The paradise that man lost will be not only regained, but infinitely improved upon ; it will be a new paradise. We shall live and move and have our being in an all-new universe, translated out of time and geography. It will be supplied, for "there shall in no wise enter into it anything that defileth" (Revelation 21 : 27). Its central glory will be the holy city, the New Jerusalem, the mecca of indescribable grandeur, the masterpiece far exceeding that of any former worlds or spheres, the ne plus ultra in all its absolute finality (Revelation 21). Such supreme accomplishment recalls that, as music has long taught, it is impossible to end on a discord !

When Dvorak began his masterpiece, the new life, the new world, the numerous new impressions which surrounded him in his new sphere of activity demanded expression ; "I am now working on a new symphony," he wrote. This was his final work as a distinguished symphonist. He accomplished what he set out to do, having put it on manuscript with almost miraculous facility. He was able to write to his friend : "The symphony was a splendid success."

The object of the redeeming love and grace of God, through Christ, is to bring forth a work—a masterpiece—which will be to His eternal praise.

*He is the author, and not man ; he laid
 The keynote of all harmonies ; he planned
 All perfect combinations, and he made Us so that we could hear and understand.*

The new world will be peopled by those living in peace and harmony in themselves and with one another, "with one accord" (Acts 2 : 1). Their life-overtones and tunefulness have been brought about through their surrender to the One whose own life was balanced, harmonised, measured and superlatively agreeable in every way, whose life will be the "music of the spheres" for ever. He will be at the centre of all, occupying its throne (Revelation 22 : 3), the world's eternal light (Revelation 21 : 23).

This old world, so marred, blighted, evil and benighted, is to pass away (1 John 2 : 17). This present state is not the Christian's final habitat, for, like Abraham, we look for a new city whose builder and maker is God (Hebrews 11 : 10). The new world is surely promised, says our text. Even now, to a fair extent, it is mystically formed and unquestionably evolving in the hearts of its people (Luke 17 : 21). It awaits its final effectuation in

by Ken Smith

PASTOR OF ELIM PENTECOSTAL CHURCH,
ERDINGTON, BIRMINGHAM

THE appalling apathy one meets towards spiritual matters is also found in the political field. In a recent survey I discovered that very few knew the names of any Conservative Government ministers or Labour politicians, except for Ted Heath and Harold Wilson, although one suspected that later they would remember not a few. An amazing number felt that the nation would be in the same political state had a Labour Government been elected, showing, to me, their disillusionment with party politics and the attitude "a plague on both your houses." The image given of both Mr. Heath and Mr. Wilson was generally not very flattering. Their continual personal sniping at each other is viewed with annoyance by many. When asked which party they would vote for most people, in spite of their apathy, have one in mind. It seemed to me that with some, if a donkey put up for their party, be it Tory, Labour, or Liberal, they would give it their vote!

The older age group strongly leaned against entering the Common Market and the younger group looked forward to it, many of them with a sense of adventure. This division of attitude, I felt, was to be expected. An overwhelming number of people believed that outside agitators were to blame for the recent industrial disputes, while strikes, wage increases and the Common Market got the main blame for the increase in the cost of living.

Keeping prices and unemployment down became the dominant issues needing attention to most people. Few thought of Northern Ireland and only one mentioned Rhodesia as of immediate consequence. "The farther the distance" obviously has other interpretations! Relatively few knew anything of the decisions of the Industrial Relations Court and not a few had never even heard of its existence.

To some this may sound to be unconnected with spiritual things, but we are still "in the world," although not "of" it. One can at least draw lessons from the contemporary scene and each contact means an opportunity to witness for our cause.

There was an apparent alarm among older people at the rise in crimes of violence and the need for the Government to "take off the kid gloves" in dealing with offenders. I have some sympathy with their viewpoint, for the pendulum certainly has swung too far. Perhaps their expressions indicate that balance is beginning to be redressed. Judgment tempered with mercy ought to be the guiding principle, with the emphasis on remedial rather than retributive punishment, yet it should be punishment for all that—and let it fit the crime! For example, a fine of £5 for a traffic offence and also for a sexual assault seems ridiculous, when one is a mere technicality and the other may have lifelong consequences on a child's mind. In the case of the latter, if some weakness caused the crime then medical treatment is the answer. If wickedness could be proved then very severe punishment is demanded to prove to the criminal and to potential wrong-doers that this type of crime particularly does not pay.

Tossed about

"Neither be ye of doubtful mind," said our Lord in Luke 12:19. The root meaning is: "Do not toss about like boats in the offing." It is a metaphor for uneasiness and doubt. It fits many of us in moments when we forget His promises. An inordinate, anxious pursuit of the necessities of life ill becomes those who profess to take God at His Word. To toss about like a boat in the offing means that we are afflicting ourselves with perplexing cares. Matthew Henry's translation gives: "Be not as meteors in the air that rise and fall." In either case the lesson is that we should maintain a consistency with our profession that others may see that our hearts are really anchored to Him.

SUMMER HOLIDAY

Words and drawing by Sheila Price

6. The sandcastle

"I WANT to have a moat around my sandcastle," said Brian, "so I shall build my sandcastle right by the water."

"Well, I shall build mine near the wall," said Carol. "I shall have a moat, too, but I shall collect the water in my new bucket."

The two children spent an hour building their sandcastles. When Carol took her bucket to get some water Brian laughed at her. "You should have built your sandcastle down here with me," he said. "Then you wouldn't have so far to walk for water. Girls are silly!"

"You are the silly one," said Carol.

"No, I am not," said Brian. "My sandcastle is bigger and better than yours and I've already filled my moat with water."

"Maybe so," said Carol. "But my sandcastle will last longer than yours. You have made yours too near the sea. When the tide comes in your sandcastle will be washed away. By the time the tide reaches my sandcastle it will be time for bed."

"I never thought of that," said Brian.

"You've forgotten the story about Mr. Silly and Mr. Wise, haven't you, Brian?"

Mr. Silly wanted to build his house as quickly as possible. He did not want to waste time flattening the rocks with a tractor or calling the housing experts in for advice. That would mean too much time lost and too much money spent. So he built his house on the sand and very nice it looked too. It had a veranda, flowers in the garden, and big windows. Mr. Silly sat in his lounge, looking over to Mr. Wise, who was still building his house. "What a fool he is! It will soon be winter and he hasn't even put the roof on yet," he thought.

Mr. Wise worked hard and long, flattening the rocks and building a good, solid house on a firm foundation. He finished it just in time for the winter. Then it was Mr. Wise's turn to laugh, for some really bad storms came. The rain fell, the winds blew at gale force, the sea rose and the waves broke over the two houses. They washed away the sand under Mr. Silly's house and, with a terrific roar, the house fell to pieces and crashed into the raging sea. That was the end of Mr. Silly and his house!

The storms did no damage to Mr. Wise's house, because he had built on solid ground which the rains could not wash away.

There are many people like Mr. Silly. They carry on in their own way, thinking that they know all the answers. They do not think of the future, because they think that their good works will find favour with God.

Christians, like Mr. Wise, realise their need of a sure, safe refuge from the coming storms of judgment, so they turn to Jesus and put their trust in Him.

"I am sorry I laughed at you, Carol," said Brian.

"Never mind," said Carol. "I will let you play with my sandcastle. The next time you make a sandcastle don't forget to build it away from the sea. Remember Mr. Silly!"

MANY Northern Ireland readers express interest in comments I have made from time to time regarding their grave troubles. I sincerely regret that I cannot refer to literature I have received, which was printed by the Stormont Parliament, but was withdrawn by Mr. Whitelaw on his appointment to take over the reins. That literature presented a truer picture than do the press and many politicians.

Christians, and Northern Ireland believers particularly, must give thought and prayer daily to their situation. I admit that I wonder that these two aspects seem the limits of involvement. A verbatim report by H. B. Boyne of the Daily Telegraph on the eve of the loyalists' celebration of the battle of the Boyne concerned a specially prepared speech by Mr. Enoch Powell following the broken truce. It is solely the sensible content of the statement that causes me to write this, not the coincidences of the Boyne or admiration for all Mr. Powell's views. In Parliament Mr. Powell said: "We have now reached the point in the affairs of Northern Ireland where not only those who support the policies of the Secretary of State but those who do not publicly dissociate themselves from them cannot escape responsibility for the consequences. It was not enough to have voted against the Act which imposed direct rule in March, explicitly on the ground that the policies it represented would prove disastrous. It was necessary to point again to the cause of the violence and bloodshed. They stem from the fear on the one side and the hope on the other side that the British Government are not determined before all things to maintain the integrity of the United Kingdom and that a way may yet be found to override the will of the majority in Northern Ireland. That fear and that hope are being fostered by the attitudes and actions of H.M. Government, including most recently that of Mr. Whitelaw in meeting I.R.A. representatives. The only policy which can restore peace and reconcile all but the irreconcilable is one which proves to the world that Britain's object for the foreseeable future is to maintain the status of Northern Ireland as part of the United Kingdom." These seem to me to be mild words, not wild ones—and wise ones too!

BOOK REVIEWS

Pastor and People, by George B. Duncan. Published by Word Books, price 40p, postage and packing 4p extra.

Before I read this book I went right through 2 Corinthians on which it is based. The author, so well known as pastor and teacher, gives us the benefit of his ministry. It is a valuable, readable book. Though it is not a commentary as such on Paul's Letter, it contains much good theology. Use it for quiet studies at home and for adult Bible classes. The questionnaires at the end of the chapters are very useful. The pastor needs the co-operation of the people and the book notes the importance of this. Young ministers will be helped by chapter 7, while older ones will benefit from chapter 6. The trials and difficulties of pastors and the responsibilities of members to church and pastor are clearly shown, especially in chapter 10.

This is 40p worth of spiritual jewels. I recommend it.

Invitation to Live. Published by Scripture Union. Price 5p, postage and packing 3p extra.

As an introduction to daily Bible reading this pamphlet has much to recommend it. The language is clear and the style fresh. It neither baffles nor insults the intelligence. Like John's Gospel, on which it comments, it centres on Christ. The selected passages spotlight Him as Creator, Saviour and King. Four weeks' readings include basic instructions for new converts on witnessing, dwelling in Christ, and facing opposition. Brief but sound tuition on the sinfulness of human nature and the cleansing power of Jesus' blood is also presented.

The teaching of Jesus on the Holy Spirit is almost totally neglected in the booklet, consequently it may be thought advisable to use it in conjunction with a leaflet on the Holy Spirit.

Singing the Gospel

ENCOURAGEMENT in any form is most welcome and I receive a fair share, including some delightful letters. One arrived for me with a Bangor, Northern Ireland, postmark. It came from the wife of one of our senior ministers and evangelists, now retired, Pastor W. J. Martin. I have always held Pastor and Mrs. Martin in high esteem ever since they first visited my home during the early days of Elim's witness in Sheffield. Mrs. Martin was prompted to write to me because of my article, "The Spiritual Railway," which appeared in the ELIM EVANGEL of June 3rd. Here is an excerpt from her letter :

"I thought you may be interested to know that the poem you quoted appeared in one of the older editions of the Salvation Army book and was used as a hymn. Many times as a teenager, after I was saved, I sang 'The line to heaven by Christ was laid' to the tune 'Above the waves of earthly strife' and included the chorus, 'My beautiful home.' I remember seeing men weeping their way to Christ as the words were sung in a prayer meeting. I believe that if some of these old hymns were used today, and sung in the power of the Spirit, they would be used to bring conviction in our meetings."

Many of my readers will share my interest in Mrs. Martin's words. The older folk will, like myself, remember particular hymns which hold precious memories, and which will never be forgotten because of their spiritual worth and impact in former days. How we long for the conviction of sin which caused men to weep, instead of the studied indifference and absolute animosity to the Gospel today! We can take heart, for God has not changed, nor has His offer of salvation. The Holy Spirit is still doing His mighty work and is able to convict of personal sin. He is able to use every consecrated talent to bear His message.

To the up and coming gospel singers I would say—do not ignore or despise the so-called old-fashioned hymns and songs; they have stood the test of time and grown old in the service of the Lord. To those of my own generation I suggest that we become adaptable to the modern forms of singing which appeal to the youth of today. There is no cause to criticise and dismiss these simple melodies and more personal lyrics; they bear the message of God's love as well. The vital issue is, as it has ever been since the inception of the Christian Church, that true believers voice their faith and tell of the way of salvation. That first duet in the Philippian jail may not have been musically perfect, but it sparked off a tremendous chain reaction. The prisoner listened, the Almighty bent His ear, liked what He heard, laid on an earthquake and a whole family was soundly converted. Let us keep on singing from our hearts and in the power of the Spirit, just like Paul and Silas.

*Sing of love to you so precious,
Tell in song how Jesus died;
Let sweet music draw the millions
To the dear Redeemer's side.*

*Ye redeemed ones, sing the story!
Sing it o'er and o'er again,
Until every tribe and nation
Join to sing the glad refrain.*

*Sing, O sing, the love of Jesus, Sound His praises far and near,
Sing the wondrous story over,
'Til the whole wide world shall hear.*

its glorious, universal establishment in God's great plan for the aeons (2 Peter 3: 13). "Everywhere in the Bible," says Billy Graham, "it is assumed that there will be a new world. The Bible does not argue for its existence or elaborately explain it."

The new world in which God will be all and in all will be characterised by all that speaks of perfectness. There will be no night, death, disease, sorrow, tears, ignorance, disappointment, or war. It will be a new world of Divine life, the maximum health and vigour, the widest knowledge, the most extreme happiness, endless worship, the profoundest love—all crowned with transcendent glory.

*And when to that bright world I rise
And join the anthem of the skies,
Above the rest this note shall swell,
My Jesus hath done all things well!*

How to behave in the House of God

by Laurence E. Lambert

MEMBER OF THE ELIM YOUTH COMMITTEE

"That ye may know how to behave yourself in the house of God" (1 Timothy 3:15).

"My house shall be called a house of prayer."

VISITING a guest house recently I noticed a list of regulations pinned on the notice board. I mentioned this to the owner, who said "One must have rules of behaviour otherwise one would have chaos in the house."

We have no rules for our conduct in God's house, but there are surely guidelines to follow. We have to avoid the frigid atmosphere that prevents fellowship and the irreverence that borders on the sacrilegious. Here are some points that might help us know how to behave ourselves in the house of God.

Punctuality. Have you noticed that some folk are always punctually late. If the service is at eleven, they are there punctually at five past. If the service is at six-thirty, they arrive promptly at six-thirty-five. How tragic that often the congregation has to build up during the first two hymns. People are more aware of folk coming in than of God coming down. When Peter was to preach (Acts 10) the whole congregation awaited the arrival of the preacher. Isn't it right for everyone to be there to stand with a note of praise for the first hymn?

Noise before meetings. For those who do arrive early this is something to be avoided like the plague. A word of welcome certainly, a warm handshake, of course, but sometimes pre-service noise makes the church like a market-place. Why not bow in prayer for a while and read the Bible that you have taken with you!

Entering into the service. Nothing is more disconcerting to a convener than those who refuse to sing when he is leading the praise. "Let those refuse to sing who never knew our God, but children of the heavenly King must . . . must." It does not help the preacher either if you are looking at the floor or out of the window. Not all preachers are handsome and eloquent, but all give out God's Word and deserve your attention.

Talking during the service. This can ruin the service for others. During one of the great conference meetings this year my wife sat behind a man and his wife who nattered right through the meeting. It spoilt it for her and several others. Be considerate. Others want to hear even if you do not.

Eating sweets. Oh, those nerve-racking, tense moments as someone seeks to unwrap some sticky sweet from some reluctant cellophane paper—a little at a time—during the message! Everyone breathes a sigh of relief when, with one great surge of courage, they extricate the ghastly morsel from its covering and pop it into their mouth. No one has heard, they think. Everyone has heard, including the poor preacher! Surely we can sacrifice sweets during divine worship, but; if you must take them, please take unwrapped ones.

Children in church. I have always encouraged family worship. It is great to see whole families, including babies, in the house of God. There is need for understanding and patience on both sides. Those who have no small children should be understanding with those who have them and bring them to church. Parents with tiny tots in the meeting should be thoughtful, too, and if the children get too noisy the parents should retire with them to a suitable room in the church. This is especially helpful during a solo, the appeal or the message. The finest preacher will lose against a screaming baby.

Welcome to newcomers. After the benediction bow in prayer, thank God for His presence, then do not just greet friends, but specially welcome those who are there for the first time. They may remember your welcome more than the sermon. Speak to some of the older members of the church; they will be delighted.

At the end of the service may we say, "It was good for us to have been in the house of the Lord!"

Monday, August 14th

Jeremiah 27 : 1-22

"I have made the earth, the man and the beast . . . by My great power and by My outstretched arm, and have given it to whom it seemed meet unto Me" (v. 5).

The origin of the earth is beyond dispute. God is indisputably the great Creator. Let the evolutionist again take note: "By My great power." God is great; His power is beyond compare. His outstretched arm is still effective to hold the whole wide world in His hand. He still rules over kings and potentates and they occupy their positions only by His Divine permission.

Tuesday, August 15th

Jeremiah 28 : 1-17

"Even the prophet Jeremiah said Amen, the Lord do so" (v. 6).

The prophet was misled by a false prophecy. The sentiment expressed by Hananiah appeared to be sound and acceptable to the extent that even Jeremiah was deceived. Even the very elect can be deceived. Let us beware of false prophets, of so-called revelation that lacks inspiration. Ultimately, Jeremiah was able to discern the false content of the prophecy and to expose Hananiah: "Thou makest this people to trust in a lie." The false prophet was cast off: "Thou shalt die" (v. 16), a severe penalty. He died in the same year (v. 17).

Wednesday, August 16th

Jeremiah 29 : 1-14

"I will visit you, and perform My good toward you" (v. 10).

God's word is ever sure. It comes to us today to bring renewed hope in every situation: "He hath visited and redeemed His people" (Luke 1 : 68). He is still with us today, bringing new life and new dimensions of spiritual power, revealing, reviving, restoring. He will perform His good word. His promises are for ever sure—"yea and Amen." "The Lord hath declared and the Lord will perform."

Thursday, August 17th

Jeremiah 30 : 1-22

"I will restore health unto thee, and I will heal thee" (v. 17); "I am with thee . . . to save thee" (v. 11).

The promise to a nation is the precious possession of every true believer today: God's presence in saving power—"I am with thee . . . to save." He is the only Saviour. Trust Him today. Is your need for healing? Take Him at His word: "I will restore health . . . I will heal thee . . . I am with thee." Prove the all-sufficiency of the great I am: "I am the Lord that healeth thee." Prove it now!

Friday, August 18th

"Yea, I have loved thee with an everlasting love: therefore with lovingkindness I have drawn thee" (v. 3).

The Lord appeared to his servant as He had appeared to so many in days past. "They shall be My people" assured them of all the love of the Father's heart (v. 1). The love that He bestows is everlasting, it is beyond compare. "Behold, what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us" (1 John 3 : 1). It reaches out to all men everywhere (John 3 : 16). This love longs to bestow upon all who will believe the gift of eternal life. "In lovingkindness, Jesus came." He still loves and He always will.

Saturday, August 19th

"Weeping . . . bitter weeping; Rahel weeping for her children" (v. 15).

Here is expressed the almost unfathomable grief of a mother for her children separated from her maternal love. Who can adequately plumb its depths, its concern for her dear ones? Do you weep today for those who are separated from you? Keep praying for the prodigal's return! The Lord's counsel was "Refrain thy voice from weeping and thine eyes from tears." Weep not, for your travail in prayer will be rewarded. They will come back again. God's love is greater than the love of a mother. His love for you and yours is ever the same. He will answer your prayers.

Sunday, August 20th

"Know the Lord: for they shall all know Me, from the least . . . to the greatest" (v. 34).

"I will forgive . . . I will remember their sin no more," said God. To know the Lord is the greatest discovery that mortal man can ever make—to know of His tenderness, His grace, His willingness to forgive and to forget, His power to save from sin. Do you know the all-sufficient Saviour? To know Him means a bestowal of pardon and peace. "Seek ye the Lord while He may be found"!

Nuggets of gold

Overwhelmed

by H. Burton-Haynes

PASTOR OF ELIM PENTECOSTAL CHURCH, CLACTON-ON-SEA

"When my spirit was overwhelmed within me, then Thou knewest my path" (Psalm 142 : 3).

DAVID is sheltering in a cave, hiding from the bitter pursuit of King Saul. He pours out his soul unto the Lord. The cavern echoes with his cry of anguish. He has to be relieved of the worm-wood and the gall; he could not keep them in. So vivid is the experience that, in after years, he is to recall it and set it forth in this psalm which he heads: "Maschil of David," meaning "instruction." The vision is of a soul broken, crushed and on the point of collapse.

The bravest spirit is sometimes sorely put to it. Bereft of friends, surrounded by relentless enemies who are ever laying traps to catch him, he exclaims: "I am overwhelmed and desperate, and You alone know which way I ought to turn . . . No one gives me a passing thought. No one will help me; no one cares a bit what happens to me" (The Living Bible). His mind is enshrouded in a dark, heavy cloud of depression, crushed with a load, confused with difficulties, temporarily conquered by impossibilities. David bends beneath his burden like a sapling before the irresistible blast of the tempest. He could smite Goliath in valiant battle, but he could not keep himself up.

The psalm contains instruction for those who are bowed down beneath the burdens of life. Some of God's choicest saints have passed this way. Spurgeon passed through a period of great physical weakness and depression. Weary in mind and heart, he reflected on the Saviour's extremity of grief in Gethsemane: "My soul is exceeding sorrowful, even unto death" (Matthew 26 : 38). He expounded these words to his congregation the following Sunday. The service ended. A member of the congregation approached him and said how God had uplifted his heart through the preacher's personal experience and exposition of

The soul can be overwhelmed by some sudden, serious development of trouble. The trial may be aggravated by the absence of any known cause—there is nothing to show why the blow has fallen. If only it was something that could be explained, it could be borne. Human explanations as in the case of Job's friends, can often add sorrow to injury. "Do you see any special reason for this sore trial?" was the question put to a very afflicted man. "No, but I am as well satisfied as if I saw a thousand; for my Father's will is the perfection of reasons." Is not this the underlying instruction of Job's mysterious trial? Afflictions and trials are sometimes allowed to accumulate without intermission, until it seems as though one more ounce of pressure will cause our spirits to snap. Then, in the nick of time, a providential intervention transforms the whole picture.

Observe the psalmist's ground of comfort: "When my spirit was overwhelmed within me, then Thou knewest my path." "God was carefully regarding me in the hour of acutest crisis," he argues. "God saw all the struggle, all the desperate effort to withstand the forces that sought my overthrow. This means that my path must be Divinely ordained, that I am not the victim of cruel, capricious circumstances, that there are an order and a sequence in all that is transpiring. In the offing I have a vigilant, omnipotent Ally, One who will not suffer my destruction, One who is pledged to deliver me." Refuge had failed and no man cared for his soul, but he could say: "Thou art my refuge." If he was an exile, deprived of home and possessions, he could boldly affirm: "Thou art my portion."

In bereavement, failure of cherished plans, loss of material possessions, unfaithfulness of dear ones, set over against the darkness all the facts about God.

ALEXANDER TEE—AND FRIEND !

Proclaiming the Truths of Pentecost

The letter to the Romans

By J. ALEXANDER WRIGHT

3. Teaching

DR. NORMAN H. SNAITH, in his Distinctive Ideas of the Old Testament, lists six such: the holiness, the righteousness, the salvation, the covenant love, the electing love and the Spirit of God. As a summary of the teaching of Romans this could hardly be bettered. Romans is an exposition of these great themes of the Old Testament.

The Epistle falls naturally into three parts: the doctrinal (chapters 1-8); the dispensational (chapters 9-11); and the practical (chapters 12-16). Four main themes run through them all: condemnation, justification, sanctification and glorification.

Examine the theme of condemnation (1:18—3:20). Both Gentiles and Jews are under it, for the wrath of God has been revealed because of their great sinfulness (1:18). We are not to think of God's wrath in terms of human anger or vindictiveness from which men need to be brought around to peaceableness and love. Like the magnetic needle which attracts and repels at the same pole, wrath is the reaction of a loving God against sin. The two poles are God's love and God's wrath, the one holy attraction and the other holy repulsion: "The outgoing of His displeasure and the holy revulsion against the sin which contradicts His holiness" (John Murray, The Epistle to the Romans). This revealed wrath is "the revelation of the righteous judgment of God" (2:5), whenever it falls, in the past, present, or future (5:9; 13:4, 5; 1 Thessalonians 1:10; 5:2; Ephesians 5:8; Colossians 3:6). It is the inevitable law of sowing and reaping. Men flout the laws of the universe at their peril. Man, the creature, is a variant, God, the Creator, a constant, and His wrath is an element in His disposition towards the impenitent sinner: "The wrath of God abideth upon him" (John 3:36). Truly God loves the sinner, but hates his sin:

"Holding the truth in unrighteousness" (1:18) means holding down, suppressing the truth; as a living creature might be held down in a poisonous atmosphere until it is smothered and dies, so these suppress the truth within themselves. "Manifested in them" and the outward evidence "shewn unto them" (v. 19) underline that the knowledge of God is ever a hindrance to sinning: "This is the condemnation" (John 3:19, 20). "Ungodly" is their attitude and "unrighteous" their conduct. Though as yet they had not had the gospel, God had made Himself known in creation: "clearly seen" (vv. 19, 20); "The heavens declare" (Psalm 19:1). "He left not men without evidence of Himself" (Acts 14:15-17, Phillips). His omnipotence, wisdom, beauty and goodness are everywhere discernible. Despite the difficulties of "nature red in tooth and claw," there is enough revelation of God in creation to leave men "without excuse" (v. 20).

Paul has in mind the ancient civilisations of Egypt, Babylon and Greece, as well as Rome, with their "intellectualism and high-sounding nonsense" (Colossians 2:8).

Five downward steps from the original knowledge of God are seen in vv. 21-23; no responsive worship, unthankfulness, pride ("their misguided minds were plunged into darkness," N.E.B.), boastfulness and idolatry. Of the Greek and Roman philosophers, Plato, Socrates and Seneca, Dr. Adam Clarke wrote: "Who can read their works without being struck by the vanity of their reasonings, as well as the stupidity of their nonsense when speaking about God."

Note also five steps in the descending scale of that idolatry into which they fell. Beginning with the image of God as a man (like Nebuchadnezzar's image), they came to the worship of birds (as nearest the heavens?), then to that of beasts of the earth, and finally to creeping things that go under the earth, e.g. the scarab or sacred beetle of Egypt. The inevitable end of all idolatry is uncleanness and sexual perversity (vv. 24-32).

This is the birth of "religion," the fruit of the rejection of God, the inversion of Divine revelation, the great lie (v. 25, def. art.). Man's freedom in God becomes man's freedom from God, and man in turn becomes like a god, worshipping the work of his own hands. There is clear evidence that man has degenerated from monotheism, the worship of one God, through nature to polytheism, the worship of many gods. One has but to look at India for an example of this. There the great temple gateways are often covered with sculptures of indescribable obscenity.

ST. PETER PORT Pastor : P. E. Stormont

Rev. S. Penney conducted his farewell service after eight years of happy ministry in the island. Members and friends were present to wish Mr. and Mrs. Penney, and their daughter, Helen, happiness in their new work in Scarborough. On the following morning the family left Guernsey by mailboat.

During the service, which included special singing by the choir (two of the items being chosen by Mrs. Penney), there were speeches of appreciation and three presentations were made.

The first speaker was Mr. H. E. Bourgaize, the church secretary, who said that their pastor for eight years had preached the Word and declared the whole counsel of God faithfully and fearlessly.

Mr. Bourgaize said that now a ministry had come to its close they felt that as a church and diaconate an opportunity had been given them to express their sincere gratitude and pay tribute for the many years of work and ministry to a loved and honoured pastor with whom it had been a privilege to work.

Tribute was also paid to Mrs. Penney. They appreciated the way in which she had stood alongside her husband; her ministry in all the departments had not gone unnoticed, especially in connection with the Ladies' Bright Hour.

A framed photograph of St. Peter Port, featuring the harbour and the islands, was then presented to Mr. Penney and his family.

The next speaker was the church treasurer, Mr. E. Langlois, who said that all the members had rallied round and he was able to hand the departing pastor a substantial cheque.

Mr. Penney said he was quite overwhelmed with the kind words and the gifts. A little while ago, from their home at Clifton Villa, they had said how nice it would be to have a picture of St. Peter Port. They had no idea one would be coming and it would certainly always remind them of very happy years. They would think with gratitude of the gifts, given with loving hearts. Mrs. Penney added her words of thanks. The choir leader, Mr. G. Francis, made yet another presentation. Thanking Mrs. Penney for her contribution as a singer, he asked her to accept a handsome clock.

In his last words that evening the pastor had many people to thank. He mentioned the diaconate, the members, the choir, the musicians, those who had welcomed visitors at the door, the youth workers, the Sunday school staff, the Crusaders, those responsible for the Sunshine Corner and everyone who had been so gracious and so kind.

VAZON

The Channel Islands Presbytery gathered in an after-church rally at Vazon to bid farewell to Pastor and Mrs. Downes and Ruth. The crowded congregation of Christians from all parts of Guernsey was testimony in itself to the appreciation of their ministry in the island over the past seven and a half years.

Tributes were brought from the writer, who is the pastor of the Jersey church, and from the secretaries of all three churches in Guernsey. Items were rendered by Delancey and Eldad friends and the Vazon choir sang the appropriate piece, "Wherever He leads I'll go."

Ruth Downes sang a farewell solo, while Mrs.

Downes outlined the happiness that the family had experienced during their period of service in the island. Pastor A. J. Downes exhorted the congregation from the text 1 Corinthians 15 : 58. He hoped to hear of the future progress of the Vazon church. The accomplishments of the years had been the result of pastor and church walking hand in hand with God. He trusted to hear of their steadfastness in love toward God and toward one another. He wanted to know that they remained unmovable in their doctrine and witness for Jesus. He looked forward to the report of their abounding in the work of the Lord. Sometimes this very obedience brought partings such as these, but only for a season, for there would be a great meeting in the air. A new sphere of service was before them in Cheltenham, but they would never forget the islands and Vazon in particular.

Pastor A. Anstey led the meeting, which was closed in prayer by Pastor P. E. Stormont, of Eldad. A love offering was presented to Pastor and Mrs. Downes and Ruth. B. C. VIDAMOUR.

HULL, City Temple Pastor : C. J. Watkins

It was with joy and expectation that we welcomed Pastor Watkins to the pastorate of The City Temple on July 13th. The induction service was conducted by Pastor J. Woodhead and addresses were given by Pastor J. Hyde and by Mr. David Watson. Mrs. Dorothy Watson brought two items in song. Words of welcome were given by Mr. S. Sutton, the church secretary, and by Rev. R. Evans, secretary of the Evangelical Council in Hull. Pastor Watkins spoke a few words of acknowledgment and introduction. Refreshments were served to the many who had gathered.

It is our prayer that our new pastor will have a fruitful ministry in Hull. (MISS) A. FISHER.

BIRMINGHAM, Stirchley

Pastor : J. B. Coleman

The Lord has blessed us greatly in recent days. It was our privilege to take sixty-five Stirchley people to conduct a Saturday evening rally at Evesham. The people contributed items in words and song with great fervour and blessing.

Pastor T. H. Stevenson recently preached on the Baptism in the Holy Spirit and over thirty met to hear this important topic. Three received the precious experience of the fullness of the Spirit and spoke in other tongues.

Our Sunday evening congregation numbers around fifty adults besides children. We would request the prayer of EVANGEL readers that God will provide us with a building of our own.

J. B. COLEMAN.

CHELTENHAM

Pastor : A. J. Downes

About 120 members and friends and visitors from various parts of the West of England Presbytery gathered for the induction service of Pastor A. J. Downes. Earlier, about seventy had tea together at the church.

Pastor F. Lavender conducted the service and reminded us of the responsibilities of pastor to church and church to pastor. Pastor Downes spoke of the need to be "workers together with Him." Messages of welcome included telegrams from Pastor W. R. Jones, the District Superintendent, and others. Singing items were provided by The New Life from Gloucester and Mike Wopshott from Cheltenham. The meeting concluded as Pastor Downes and his wife, Pastor Lavender and the diaconate shared in an act of dedication. We were truly blessed at this our first service with our first full-time pastor. We are looking to God to do great things for us.

RAY FAIERS.

ABERDARE

Our conversion services were the best for a number of years. We welcomed as our speaker Pastor Geoffrey Harpin, a former minister. It was a thrill to meet him again. The informal fellowship we shared was a highlight of the weekend. The services were lively and the support was excellent. Pastor Harpin, a godly, sincere man, taught us a new chorus, "O, 'tis a great salvation." It will be sung here for many years.

On the following Sunday Pastor Gwilym Jones presented a transistor radio to the church secretary, Mr. Peter Brake, a gift from members and friends to mark his having recently gained an honours degree in Biblical studies, while continuing his work as church secretary.

LEIGH-ON-SEA

Pastor : D. E. Edmonds

On Tuesday, July 11th, a small party at South-end airport bade God-speed to Pastor P. E. Stormont and family as they left for Guernsey. On the previous Saturday seventy or so members invited them to a church tea, where members and friends met them to say their individual farewells. A cheque was presented to the pastor as a token of gratitude for his faithful ministry for more than nine years. The Women's Fellowship had knitted garments for each member of the Stormont family and these garments were handed to Mrs. Stormont, who was deeply moved by the gifts. An iced cake, provided by the church and inscribed "Numbers 6: 24-26," was cut by Mrs. Stormont. On the last Sunday of his ministry the church was filled for both morning and evening services.

God has honoured His servant here. During this year souls have been saved, bodies have been healed, the Lord has baptised in the Holy Spirit and there have been three baptismal services.

In a church almost filled to capacity Pastor Derek E. Edmonds, from Romsey, was inducted to the ministry here on Friday, July 21st. The service was ably convened by Pastor J. J. B. Hounscome, and was opened in prayer by Pastor A. Greaves. Pastor W. R. West sang and Pastor A. Nicolson gave the message. Also present were Pastors C. D. Stockdale, R. F. Stripp and P. J. Hill.

Pastor West welcomed Pastor Edmonds to the Eastern Presbytery and Mr. M. Spurling, the Leigh church treasurer, read telegrams of encouragement. The secretary greeted Pastor Edmonds, Mrs. Edmonds and children on behalf of the church, and said that it was felt God had answered prayer in sending them to Leigh. Subsequent to the message, the ministers laid hands on the new pastor and his wife and sought God's blessing on them in their service for Him here in this, the first Elim Pentecostal Church in England.

SUNDERLAND

Pastor : D. G. Holmes

Almost one glorious year has passed—how "precious time" does fly! Hearts were deeply moved by the sincerity of the crusade team under Pastor Alexander Tee during the campaign at the Sunderland Polytechnic a year ago. Thank you, Elim family, for your practical and prayerful support. The Lord has richly honoured everything "exceeding abundantly," praise His wonderful name!

Decorative and furnishing work is progressing and the church is gradually being transformed into a lovely spiritual home worthy of our Lord.

We are joyously privileged in having the continual anointed ministry of a dedicated, energetic and loving pastor. The Lord is indeed a rewarder of those who diligently seek His face.

We now have our own baptistry. A special thank you must go to John Taylor for all the work and time he has freely given. Fifteen candidates followed their Lord through the waters of baptism after giving clear-cut testimonies. Many have received the baptism of the Holy Spirit. Membership is increasing as the Lord adds to His church such as should be saved. We see new faces on most Sunday evenings.

Sunshine Corner and "Teen Time" midweek meetings are going well. The Sunday school demonstration, "Children of many lands," was a great success. Ninety recently enjoyed their outing to Bamburgh. The Women's Hour and the Ladies' Singing Group are coming on well under the talented guidance of Mrs. Holmes. The back to the Bible rallies on Wednesdays and the fellow-

Elim Bible College Open Day and Graduation Service

Report and photographs by Eddie Tait

Capacity crowd . . . Eric Gaudion, the head student, now the assistant pastor at Eastbourne, addresses a packed afternoon meeting in the marquee.

"OPERATION Combination successful" was the message at the end of the first joint open day and graduation service to be held at Elim Bible College. It was a day of real blessings in the sun for our many guests who travelled to Capel from far and wide. It was a fitting climax to all the preparations that had gone into this "prototype" event.

In previous years the graduation service has been held later in the year in a church away from the campus.

It was a great encouragement to see the big marquee packed for both afternoon and evening services with parents and relatives of students, ex-students and friends whom we had made during our wide travels from Capel.

The President, Tom W. Walker, capped the day with a thrilling message from the Word of God on being servants of the Lord. It was an uplifting, so relevant message for the second-year students going out into the ministry, as well as an encouragement to everyone else, particularly to other students going out into other fields of service for the Master, whether full-time or just for the summer vacation.

"Responsibility for ministry in the movement is falling more heavily on the shoulders of the younger men, due to the retirement of a number of men whose work began in the early days of Elim," the Principal, G. Wesley Gilpin, stressed. It was encouraging to see the way in which they were tackling the task and to observe the number of professional people who were training at E.B.C.

The Gospel in song from Jimmy Ritchie, now pastor of the newly established Weston-super-Mare church, Sue Grady, second-year student, and Thelma Thomson, the Principal's secretary.

The language school had grown and the college now housed around eighty theology and overseas students. The list of nationalities had grown, as had links with world missions from this section—

Together again . . . Margaret Ingle (left), home on furlough from serving the Lord in Mexico, visited E.B.C. with her sister and brother-in-law, Jo and Godfrey Fearn, and their son, Mark. Godfrey, former head student, is now the pastor of our Darlington church.

SUMMER HOLIDAY

Words and drawing by Sheila Price

7. The journey home

MR. and Mrs. Brown were busy taking down the tent and getting ready to leave for the journey home.

"Can Carol and I have a last look at the sea before we go?" asked Brian.

"Very well," said Mr. Brown. "But do not be too long."

Brian and his sister ran across the field, went down the steps by the beach wall and walked across the sand gathering some pretty pebbles and shells to take home with them.

Thailand and Ethiopia being quite recent additions. Another, Afghanistan, will be added in September when Pastor Erik Edin, who returned home to Sweden in June after spending three months at Capel, goes to serve the Lord in that Gospel-thirsty land.

A message of hope from another needy part of the world came from Margaret Ingle, an E.B.C. student two years ago, home on a short furlough from Mexico. In the afternoon meeting she told how, despite many difficulties, God had opened doors to preach the gospel there. Margaret returned to Mexico with a crowd of young people last month. Soon she will be on her own again and she would really value your prayers.

The college's considerable musical talent ministered at both services, which were convened by the President-elect, John Lancaster, a lecturer at the college. The prizes were presented by Mrs. Walker.

"Look at the sea," said Carol. "The waves are very big today."

"Yes, they are," said Brian. "I wonder how the waves are made."

"I'm not sure," said Carol. "I think it is to do with the wind or something. We will ask daddy when we get back."

"It could be," said Brian, "that God is brushing the sea ready for the holidays next year and perhaps the sand is dust from the sea!"

"Maybe," said Carol.

"I do wish we could stay here longer," said Brian. "I have enjoyed this holiday so much!"

"Me too, Brian, but I am sure we will be able to come again. Perhaps daddy and mummy will bring us next year."

"It's a long time to wait," said Brian sadly.

"Yes, but it's well worth waiting for, isn't it?" asked Carol. She went on: "Do you remember what Miss Jones, our Sunday school teacher, told us a few weeks ago when she said that Jesus would come again? No one knows when it will be, but it is well worth waiting for. We will all be so busy being kind and loving, and telling others of Jesus, that we will not notice the waiting part at all! If we do our very best to help mummy and daddy when we get back home we will not notice the days slipping by and soon it will be holiday-time again. I think we had better get back. Mummy and daddy will have finished packing by now."

"Goodbye sea," said Brian. "Goodbye holiday!"

NORTHERN Ireland must claim prior attention again. We write with the immediate aftermath of the clearing of the "no-go" areas in Belfast and Londonderry declared to be peaceful, but there are many doubts, fears and wonderings.

Elim friends will be glad to know that our Secretary-General, James T. Bradley, got back a few days ago from a week's visit to Ulster. Regular contacts are kept up between our Headquarters and Irish Headquarters and visits are made whenever possible. Three Headquarters brethren went over last October and shared fellowship with pastors and laymen from our churches in the province. Two members of the Executive Council were present at the Irish Conference in the spring. Our Secretary-General offered to visit Ulster for a week's ministry, an offer gladly and immediately accepted. It was felt good to make this personal contact to assure our dear friends in our churches in Northern Ireland of our continued, loving concern and interest. Those of us who have the honour and privilege of ministering in our churches up and down Great Britain know full well that this compassionate, involved concern is very widespread. We hear Ulster prayed for frequently. We regularly remember especially our own congregations and their pastors at our times of prayer at our Headquarters. We assure all our dear ones in Ireland that our thoughts are with them constantly. We appeal yet again for fervent intercession for that troubled land and particularly for our Irish Superintendent, the Executive, our pastors and elders and our churches.

We believe that God is on the throne and that He will have His way, despite every opposition.

Your editor had the privilege last month of visiting Guernsey. It is always a delight to go to that beautiful island. The three churches there are in good heart and it was a particular pleasure to see evidences of growth and blessing. As I have the duty and joy of writing every week in our magazine the series "From the President's pen" did not seem to be necessary. I would like to say, however, how greatly encouraged I am by the signs of blessing in so many places.

PASTOR OF ELIM PENTECOSTAL CHURCH, GOSPORT

"I WOULD rather see a sermon than hear one any day."

"Example is better than precept."

How often have you heard such statements? Usually they come from the lips of unbelievers. Perhaps they underline a need for more evidence of Christ in Christians. According to Paul the Church is "the pillar and bulwark of the truth" (1 Timothy 3:15). Individual Christians are members of His Church, His Body; they are His representatives here on earth. Do we represent or misrepresent Him? As Pentecostal Christians we rightly give due place to the Person of the Holy Spirit, "and He," said Jesus, "shall glorify Me."

One of the most outstanding attributes of Jesus' life was His cheerful willingness to forgo His rights for our sakes. "Counting not equality a thing to be grasped, He emptied Himself, taking the form of a servant" (Philippians 2:6,7). Heaven was His right, yet in order to win us He renounced that right and took human nature upon Himself. Earth and the fullness of it were His right by virtue of creation, but He sought nothing of earthly fame, honour or luxury. He said to a would-be disciple: "Foxes have holes, the birds of the air have nests, but the Son of Man has nowhere to lay His head." No right He had was ever allowed to interfere with His mission to rescue us from our sin and to transfer us to God's kingdom. His ultimate sacrifice was the laying down of His life for us and no one had more right to life than the sinless Son of God.

How contrary is the spirit of this world! On every hand the cry goes up for rights—sometimes justified, often not. We have disputes, strikes, feuds, court actions, broken hearts, broken homes, even wars. "Be not conformed," cries Paul, "to this world, but be ye transformed by the renewing of your minds." To the Philippians he proclaimed "Have this mind among yourselves which ye also have in Christ Jesus."

There are times when right is wrong—any time when our rights as Christians contradict the attitude and actions of Jesus Christ our Lord. How much better that for Christ's sake and for our brothers' sakes we forgo our rights and enhance the testimony of the Faith.

True discipleship involves losing of the life for Christ's sake, not necessarily in the sense of martyrdom, but involving the forgoing of many rights. John the Baptist grasped this principle and said: "I must decrease—He must increase."

Next time someone infringes your liberty, even deliberately, before you take the natural course and claim your rights, stop, ponder whether if you let that right go for Christ's sake it might not do more for His cause, and commit the matter to Him who judges justly. God will honour such a course of action.

Elim Missionary Society feature

The Light is shining in dark Botswana

by Elim missionary W. H. Francis

IN 1821 Robert Moffatt, of the London Missionary Society, founded a mission station at Kuruman, Cape Province, some 200 kilometres north-west of the Kimberley. He began at once to study the Thlaping dialect of the Tswana language. By 1830 Moffatt had transcribed the Gospel according to Luke in this difficult language. This Gospel was printed in Cape Town under the supervision of the missionary, who set every letter by hand. Moffatt's translation was the first in any South African Bantu language. By 1840 this indefatigable man of God had translated the entire New Testament into Tswana.

The first 500 copies of this Testament, printed in London, were brought on his first visit by the famous missionary-explorer David Livingstone. He travelled to Kuruman on an ox-wagon from Algoa Bay (Port Elizabeth) 1,000 kilometres away. Not content with this, Moffatt started to revise his translation. The first translation of the entire Bible in a Bantu language was completed by him in 1857. On September 13th, 1970, the latest revised Tswana Bible was published and officially received at the Lutheran Mission Church at Rustenburg, seventy miles from Pretoria.

By the grace of God and the untiring devotion of one of His intrepid servants the light is shining in dark Botswana today. How far has this heaven-sent light penetrated the dark, distant reaches of this vast territory?

Nine years after the completed Tswana Bible was published in 1857, a girl was born to a poor family in Botswana. She grew up in darkness to become a noted Tswana witch-doctor, without Christ and without hope. Not until she reached her death-bed recently, at the age of 105 years, did she call on the faithful evangelists near her home to pray for her at the last. Sixteen years after the same Bible was published a boy was born into another of the countless dark homes there. He, too, grew up in ignorance of the Saviour. When one of our leading Tswana ministers came upon him recently while evangelising in a remote area, he found that this man had no idea what the name of Jesus meant! Who can tell how many more will die without Christ unless we can reach them?

About fifteen years ago one of my African co-workers posed the question: "Teacher, why can you not visit and teach my people in Botswana too? The need there is great!" My reply was: "If God helps me and leads me there, I will go." At the time the possibility seemed remote, but God worked it out and, four years after that, a door opened. I preached in Botswana for the first time and have laboured there ever since.

You may recall photographs and reports of my ministry in Pondoland, Cape Province. The differences between the lush, fertile lands of the Transkei and the hot, arid independent Republic of Botswana could not be greater. Here regular annual rainfall cannot be relied upon, resulting in poor crops, poverty and famine. Some of our Christian members have died from lack of food.

How deep has been the appreciation of our Tswana co-workers for the kind financial aid rendered in the past by our Elim churches.

Poverty stems from Botswana's lack of sources of employment, but the inevitable march of progress has brought geologists and prospectors in search of gold and precious minerals.

Following a twelve-year search, costing more than one million rand, they discovered diamond-bearing soil on the edge of the Kalahari desert, at Orapa, some 225 kilometres west of Francistown in the far north. After another two years' effort, costing more than twenty-one million rand, at this former cattle-post in the middle of nowhere stands AK 1, the new mine officially opened on May 26th, 1972. The 600 Bantu workers so far employed there will doubtless be joined by thousands more in the future, thus giving much-needed financial aid to many homes. The winds of change are certainly blowing in dusty Botswana!

During the past eleven years, in the same trying climate, we have followed in the footsteps of the illustrious pioneers, Moffatt and Livingstone, labouring in our search not for precious stones but for precious "living stones" among the lost. Many men, women and children have been won from the depths of sin.

There stands in the African township of Lobatsi a neat African church built by their gifts and labours for Him. Adjoining the church stands a nearly-completed house for the pastor. The materials for this had to be carried on a wheelbarrow from a distant brickyard and precious water came in barrels—at a price—from the nearest water-point, all this in the scorching heat.

From this centre of light our earnest co-workers radiate in all directions for many hundreds of miles preaching and teaching old and young of the loving Saviour who came to seek and to save them.

Many souls have been won for Him. Demons have been cast out. Lives and homes have been changed. In revival meetings held last year near the border, the blind received physical sight in answer to believing prayer. During my quarterly district council meetings with the workers, and in our Easter Bible courses, I teach them more of the deeper truths of the Word.

One of the greatest needs of every African Christian is that he might know more of the deep truths to impart them to those around them. That this might be possible I have devoted the past forty years' hard work in needy Africa. If it were possible to devote twice that span with like purpose, it would only suffice to touch the fringe of the enormous spiritual need confronting Africa today!

These books complement each other and are not in competition. One is in a journalistic style that makes easy reading despite its American slang. The other is a compilation of the history of a current spiritual and social revolution plus prophetic theology indicating the end of the age. Both are Bible-based, non-sectarian and as inter-church as inter-racial.

Classic and neo-Pentecostals are called by both authors to testify with "prominent Protestant theologians." They are united in their witness to Jews coming to Jesus in a manner not known since the first century.

Both have the honesty to admit that their roses are not without thorns. Like all movements and revolutions there are freaks, faddists and fanatics among the Jesus people.

Eternity magazine says that Mr. Plowman's book "captures not only the facts but also the flavour of the Jesus Movement. Even as it analyses, it transmits the genuine excitement of youth turned on to Jesus Christ."

Dr. Graham's book is his best work yet. Here is the man in maturity, cramming into a paperback a powerful message to this sick generation with all the zest and drive of his vast crusades. He exposes, sometimes horrifyingly, the sham of youngsters hell-bent on ways that are the ways of death. As ever the true evangelist, he points the way clearly to the path of life now and eternally. In the area of personal relations, Graham makes a supremely significant contribution. His trenchant psychological observations about the old generation will make many think again.

The young generation will be the better able to stand up to Billy's barrage, because for all their pampered selfishness, reckless irresponsibility and consummate cheek they are less hypocritical than their elders.

If Dr. Graham's characterisation of Absalom were shortened to pamphlet size and his questions and answers translated into a multi-lingual tract they could possibly impact the third world as only communists are now doing.

R. Wilhel Meena Rani's testimony of healing

I FEEL very happy to write this witness to His glory. I was born a cripple twenty-five years ago and I bore all the difficulties with deep patience all these years. I could not walk properly like other people. At some special meetings in May 1970, in Madras, prayer for healing was made—I went to a meeting accompanied by my parents. I started from the house in the deep belief that I would be healed in the name of Jesus Christ.

As the evangelist started praying, the whole of my body started trembling and I felt as if someone was cutting my leg sharply.

As the word came, "Leave all your burdens to God and walk freely. Your God is standing by your side and giving you the promise," I walked automatically, the twisted leg turned straight and, to the glory of our living God, I am now walking without any difficulty or without any aid.

My Saviour has baptised me with the Holy Spirit and now I am growing spiritually with all blessings.

This young woman belongs to our church at Chromepet. She is the eldest of four girls, who, with their parents, are saved and baptised in the Holy Spirit. The pastor of this church was trained in our Bible school at Madras. In one year he has by the grace of God built up a good Pentecostal church, where many who have come to the experience of the Baptism of the Holy Spirit belong to non-Pentecostal denominations. This pastor has heard the call to North India and has gone to Rajasthan. Pray for Him and his wife, who is a school teacher, as this is one of the hardest areas in India to preach the Gospel.

About four years ago a young converted Roman Catholic came to our Maranatha Bible Training

John A. Prentice officiating at a baptismal service in Kolor Goldfields.

Institute, Madras, at the call of God for full-time ministry, to study the Word of God. At the end of one year's intensive training he went to assist a senior pastor at Bangalore. After a year there he

Now, after a couple of years of hard work and struggles, he has been able to construct a small Pandel (a building made of mud walls, with bamboo poles and coconut leaves interwoven to make the roof) capable of seating 100 people, situated in a very central spot of the city of Bangalore.

It is amazing how he was able to get the ground, as the owner, who is not a born-again Christian, has a testimony of loving money very much. She had previously taken over 300 rupees for three months from another group, but our pastor and members fasted and prayed, and were able to get it for sixty rupees. They happily accepted and put up their Pandel. They invited this lady to the opening service. Of her own accord she brought the rent down to forty rupees a month, to the astonishment of everyone.

I had the privilege of dedicating this building and of preaching for two days, in which we saw the blessing of God. The church was full of overflowing and precious souls decided for Christ.

Gifts for our missionary work should be sent to: Elim Missionary Society, P.O. Box 38, Cheltenham.

Our Strength

By KATH SMITH

Help us, Lord, to stand strong and true,
Daily to depend and rely upon You.
Our own strength is so feeble and vain,
From ourselves we have nothing, no, nothing to gain.

Lord, when we're feeling low and weak,
We must come to You—Your strength to seek.

Help us to know we are nothing at all,
But, strengthened by You, we never shall fall.

After all, Lord, what really is man?
He can struggle alone as much as he can.
Without you at his side, he struggles in vain,
At the end of it all, he has nothing to gain.

But from You, Lord, what blessings there are!

Thy strength can carry us, oh, so far—
As far as to heaven and Your precious side,
As long as we take You as Saviour and Guide.

The HAMMOND ORGAN

- * Requires the minimum of maintenance and the tone wheel generator cannot go out of tune.
- * Remains unaffected by changes in temperature and humidity.
- * Provides extreme variety of tones with the simplest method of selection.
- * Has a specification to satisfy the accomplished organist.
- * Can be transported for trouble-free use on any location.
- * Represents a lifetime investment with a negligible depreciation factor.

The Hammond Organ has found an important place in the Pentecostal church with its unique tonal quality. The very nature of the harmonic tone registration allows the instrument to be played in direct keeping with the service without distracting from it.

We are therefore convinced that a Hammond can make an essential contribution which renders it a sound investment in the Lord's work, and to this end Sharon Music welcome your consultation as to the most suitable model for your church.

With experience gained from many church installations throughout the country we feel confident to select an instrument certain to meet your requirements.

Our showroom stock of ORGANS and PIANOS includes the entire range of Hammond Organs, consisting of 18 different models from £265 to £5,500. Special financial arrangements are available to your church and we shall be happy to supply further details relating to any specific model on request.

The European Pentecostal Conference

Our reporter : F. H. Coleman

"KINDLY give our greetings to all the Pentecostal people in Great Britain," said the Chairman of the European Pentecostal Conference held in Berne, Switzerland. "Amen," said the thousands gathered in the Festival Hall, which seats 8,000.

People came from every country in Europe. Some came from Eastern Europe from places like Rumania and Hungary. Greece and Yugoslavia were represented. There were ninety-seven from France. Here were Pentecostals speaking a dozen languages, but all rejoicing in a full salvation in the Lord Jesus Christ.

Each day started with a prayer meeting, followed by a Bible study session. Lunch was succeeded by a rest period until 4 p.m. This gave people an opportunity to visit the huge marquee next to the Festival Hall, where were exhibition stands, many of them elaborate, showing what Pentecostal groups are doing at home and abroad. At many there was free literature. The most beautiful stand was that of the Swiss Pentecostal Mission, which displayed among other things pictures and models of the new youth centre at Emmaten, costing over £500,000. Why not spend a holiday there some time? The prices are no dearer than in Britain.

The great service each day was the preaching and evangelistic service at 8 p.m. The theme of the conference was "The Gospel in the power of the Holy Ghost" and night after night many came to Christ. Pastor H. W. Greenway preached on the Friday evening. When he made an appeal, a great sense of the presence of God was felt in that vast auditorium and young people came out from all parts of the building to stand at the front to receive salvation. Counsellors took them to a room and found among them a girl drug addict who was prayed for that she might be delivered from the awful habit.

Saturday and Sunday were the last days of the great feast. It was after ten o'clock when the Saturday night meeting finished and the young people in their hundreds—perhaps a thousand or more—hurried to the youth tent for a time of fellowship. I tried to get into the tent, but it was impossible because so many were standing in the entrance. One could hear singing, musical items and testimonies. This went on to 1.30 next morning. No one was disturbed as there are no houses nearby. One Swiss told me next day he would not have missed this opportunity of a lifetime.

The committee did much to make it possible for everyone, whatever their language, to understand the speakers and so enjoy the meetings. They went to the great trouble of installing a system of interpretation by the use of earphones as used in such buildings as the United Nations in New York.

Among the musical contributions were those from the united choir, the Oregon, U.S.A., youth choir, the talented group from Taiwan and the silver bands from Finland and Switzerland. The faces of the happy youth group from Holland told of a happiness they had in Christ. The violinist from Chicago thrilled us all with his solos.

Set in the beautiful land of mountains and lakes, the conference was a blessed time of spiritual fellowship. As a result invitations poured in for more conferences. It was decided that another will be held (D.V.) in Norway in three years' time.

Come

His grace is all you need,
Dear troubled soul,
If you will trust in Him
He'll make you whole.

He'll give you joy and peace,
He'll give you power
And strength to live for Him
From hour to hour.

He is the Way, the Truth,
He cannot lie
And those who trust in Him
Will never die.

Why do you turn away ?
Why do you doubt ?
For none who come to Him
Will be cast out.

RUTH WILSON.

"Wrought with needlework"

THE Medieval Hall in the Close of Salisbury Cathedral has been the scene of a glorious exhibition staged by the Embroiderers' Guild. It had to be seen to be believed, for the beauty and skill displayed were absolutely amazing. There were 117 articles on view: cushions, curtains, Bible covers, dresses, footstools, pictures, jewel-boxes, samplers, chair-seats, church furnishings, a christening robe, a lampshade and a shoulder bag.

Somehow it restores one's faith in human nature to gaze upon such loveliness of colour and richness of design. In this sad, bad world, I am glad that there are still people with creative ability. Many of them must, for sheer pleasure, spend hours in stitching and weaving with silk, wool, beads and golden thread, almost "painting" their tapestries with the needle. Beauty brings its own reward—in these days of restlessness and chaos there must surely be a therapy in embroidery, for it needs quietness and concentration.

Hebrew women in Bible days were known for their skill in spinning and weaving. The virtuous housewife of Proverbs 31 made coverlets, cushions and rugs of tapestry. She was apparently adept at making her own linen and woollen fabric, too. She also had a remunerative side-line, namely the weaving and embroidering of sashes to be sold to the merchants.

One thinks also of the choice hangings of the ancient tabernacle, which were directly designed and commissioned by the Almighty. They were skilfully embroidered with figures of cherubims. The entrance screens were also embroidered. The effect of the blue, scarlet and purple on white linen must have been breathtaking. It is interesting, too, to be reminded that the use of metal thread-work is not a modern innovation, for in Exodus 39:3 we read that fine gold wire was prepared and woven into the fabric of the high priest's ephod.

I do not propose to delve into the meaning of the prophecies in Psalm 45 regarding Christ's earthly reign and the homage to be given by the Gentile nations, but I must mention the Church, the Bride of Christ. When she is presented to her Lord, she will wear a raiment of finest needlework, inwrought with gold thread (Amplified Bible).

When we link this with Revelation 19:7,8, we have a glimpse of our position and privileges as believers. We shall stand in the presence of God clothed in garments of spiritual beauty provided by Him.

We may not aspire to be skilled in the art of embroidery, or have a flare for making lovely things, but, as surely as the Lord is coming again, so surely must we be ready to meet Him in appropriate dress. I wonder, have you got your wedding garment on?

*Jesus, Thy blood and righteousness,
My beauty are, my glorious dress;
'Midst flaming worlds, in these arrayed,
With joy shall I lift up my head.*

*This spotless robe the same appears,
When ruined nature sinks in years;
No age can change its glorious hue,
The robe of Christ is ever new.*

ship and prayer meetings on Fridays are enjoyed by all. The outreach visitation programme continues and we pray that Jesus will draw men and women to Himself.

As a new church we are thirsty for the living water and hungry for the Bread of Life. We are greatly conscious that God is going to manifest Himself in a wonderful way as we draw upon the vast resources of His inexhaustible treasure house.

A Nurse's twenty-third Psalm

by Gwyneth Pembury

based on the Japanese version of Psalm 23

by Toki Miyashiro

The Lord is my pace-setter, I shall not rush. The surgeon puts a pace-maker into the heart which is unable to regulate its own beating. I know that I am incapable of running my life. I must let the Lord take over and run it for me.

He makes me stop for quiet intervals. He provides me with an evening or a morning when there is nothing I must rush to do and all my friends are out. He reminds me of Himself, so that I spend time with Him and feel refreshed as if I had been off duty for two or three days.

He provides me with images of stillness which restore my serenity. A letter from home, a conversation with a patient, the prospect of a quiet evening, an encounter with another Christian nurse in the corridor—all these are sent to me just when they are needed.

He leads me in ways of efficiency through calmness of mind and His guidance is peace. Orders fly from all directions on a busy ward, but gradually during my training the Lord has shown me that a quick "telegram" prayer will show me what should be done first. He is not only in charge of world affairs, but of my moment-by-moment ones as well.

Even though I have a great many things to accomplish each day I will not fret, for His presence is here. Time is a gift from God, so it is bound to be adequate for all that I have to do. He proves to me in many small ways, like the steadying of my hand, that He is with me all the time.

His timelessness, His all-importance, will keep me in balance. Suffering and death are very real in a hospital. At times it seems as if the Devil has complete sway, but God has given me a wonderful assurance that He is in control and that His purposes will be fulfilled.

He prepares refreshment in the midst of my activity by anointing my mind with His oil of tranquillity. My cup of joyous energy overflows. "Nurse, wherever do you manage to get all your energy?" they ask. If only they knew the One who is the source of all strength! The battery of the pace-maker for the human heart has to be renewed at intervals. The Lord renews my energy moment by moment as I have need.

Surely harmony and effectiveness shall be the fruit of my hours. What else can I expect from a God who is perfect and desires the best for His children?

And I shall walk in the pace of the Lord and dwell in His house for ever. My chief source of joy throughout everything is that, when the Lord has led me through His work on this earth, He will lead me to heaven, there to live with Him for eternity.

Jeremiah 32 : 1-15

"The word of the Lord came unto me" (v. 6).

Jerusalem was held fast by the oppressor, besieged by invading armies. God's servant, Jeremiah, was shut up in the court of the prison, a situation that might be described as hopeless. Then "The word of the Lord came unto me" (v. 6) : God's Word breaks through into every situation. It came to Peter in prison, to Paul at Philippi, to John Bunyan at Bedford. That word, which brought guidance and inspiration to these servants imprisoned for their faith, brings new courage and hope for us today. The Word of the Lord will prevail !

Tuesday, August 22nd

Jeremiah 32 : 16-41

"I prayed unto the Lord" (v. 16).

Here is the answer. Wonderful revelations come to the seeking soul who prays—the greatness of our God, maker of heaven and earth, the mighty Creator by his great power and stretched out arm. God never fails : "there is nothing too hard for thee" (v. 17), a revelation of His never-failing ability, His love, His justice. The great, mighty God is with us today. Pray to Him in your difficult situation. Prove Him. The Lord of hosts is His name. Signs and wonders still follow those who fully trust Him, for He is great in counsel, mighty in work.

Wednesday, August 23rd

Jeremiah 33 : 1-18

"Thus saith the Lord the maker thereof" (v. 2).

The Lord communicates with the confined soul and brings to his remembrance His faithfulness. He is instructed to embark on a set course. "Call unto Me"—with this challenging invitation comes the assurance of an answer : "I will answer." Beyond this comes a revelation of great, mighty things : "I will . . . shew thee great and mighty things" (v. 3). Far beyond our appreciation at the present hour, God is able. Do you seek Divine healing ? "Behold, I will bring it health and cure, and I will cure them, and will reveal unto them the abundance of peace and truth" (v. 6). This promise for a community is surely a promise to every seeking soul in distress. "Call unto Me. I will cleanse, I will pardon, I will heal, I will bring peace," says God.

Thursday, August 24th

Jeremiah 35 : 1-19

"Because ye have obeyed the commandment" (v. 18).

"Go unto the house of the Rechabites . . . and give them wine to drink." These total abstainers were put to a severe test. Pots and cups of wine were set before them and they were commanded to drink. They said "We will drink no wine" (v. 6). They were resolved to keep faithful to the command given by their father. They refrained and they were commended by the Lord for so doing. We shall be tempted at many levels. May we also stand strong in the hour of temptation and honour the name of our heavenly Father.

Friday, August 25th

Jeremiah 36 : 1-19

"Reading in the book the words of the Lord in the Lord's house" (v. 8).

We should often be engaged in this most needful exercise. It was the inspired word, the Word of the Lord. It was a timely word, a word of exhortation to repentance : "That they may return every man from His evil way ; that I may forgive their iniquity and their sin" (v. 3). This word brought conviction to those who heard—they were afraid (v. 16). May we resolve faithfully to proclaim the Word of the Lord that those who hear may turn to Him.

Saturday, August 26th

Jeremiah 36 : 20-32

"Yet they were not afraid, nor rent their garments" (v. 24).

The response to the word before the king and the princes was not encouraging. The word was rejected—cast into the fire (v. 23). Opposers of God's Word have sought utterly to reject and often to destroy it, yet God's Word still prevails. It is eternal : "My words shall not pass away" (Matthew 24 : 35). Because of their rejection of God's Word, judgment fell on those involved (v. 31). May we ever revere, read and respond to the Word of the Lord.

Sunday, August 27th

Jeremiah 37 : 1-21

"Is there any word from the Lord ? And Jeremiah said, There is" (v. 17).

There will always be a word from the Lord, relevant to every situation. The Word of the Lord will bring comfort (Isaiah 40), but also

My testimony

The preaching was over, the day almost done,

A child asks a question, a challenging one—
“Are you a Christian?” my small child inquires,

“Mum, are you a Christian?” Her answer requires

A soul-searching statement and answer quite true:

“I hope so, I think so,” but doubt flooded through.

Then, soon after this, came the challenge again—

“Are you a Christian?” The preacher made plain

There are hopers and thinkers and blest ones who know—

They belong to the Saviour and by their lives show

The peace and the joy we are told to believe
Will be ours from the moment we Jesus receive.

And I did not know, only hoped, and I thought,

But the sweet seed was sown and my soul had been sought.

From then on by hearing the Word surely preached,

By seeking and finding, conviction was reached.

And at that glad moment joy flooded my heart—

The Saviour was mine and I knew every part.

Dear child, did you know that your question that day

Set your mum on the road to heaven's highway?

The Bible has something to say of a child
And a nature so humble, so meek and so mild.

God grant we be used as that child in that hour—

Seeking souls for the Saviour in His strength and power.

The man in the wire cage

Among those honoured at a luncheon inaugurating National Bible Week in the U.S.A. was Claude L. Fly, an American soils scientist from Fort Collins, Colorado, U.S.A. He had been kidnapped by rebels in Uruguay and held captive for seven months. Five men wrapped him up in a sack and carried him to an unknown location, where he was imprisoned in a wire cage roughly six feet by four feet, cut off from daylight and with no clock or radio. He lost all sense of time and feared that he was going insane. He begged his guards for books to read. He was given a small light. After some pleading they gave him a copy of the New Testament—Good News for Modern Man, published by the American Bible Society.

During the time he remained in confinement he analysed the Bible for directions about what people should do and what they should not do. He wrote down the verses under their different headings on pieces of paper and so divided them into categories dealing with family relationships, the Christian in business, and so on. He hopes to publish the result of his labours as a book, which will be entitled The Christian's Check Book, “because it will show a man what he is doing, where he is performing well, and where he is not.” His behaviour won for him the admiration of his captors and, when he suffered a heart attack, he was taken care of with great concern and finally released.

Among others honoured at the same luncheon was Dr. Kenneth N. Taylor, translator of The Living Bible.

condemnation. Zedekiah, his servants and his people did not hearken to the words of the Lord (v. 2). Now the words of condemnation and judgment were to come true: “Thou shalt be delivered into the hand of the king of Babylon” (v. 17). Judgment will surely fall if we reject the Word of the Lord.

Proclaiming the Truths of Pentecost

The letter to the Romans

by J. Alexander Wright

4. Teaching (continued)

AS to man's descent from monotheism to polytheism, the translator of the Egyptian Book of the Dead, Sir Peter le Page Renouf, wrote, "It is therefore more than 5,000 years since, in the valley of the Nile, the hymn began to the unity of God and the immortality of the soul. The belief in the unity of the supreme God and in His attributes as creator and lawgiver—these are primitive notions, encased like indestructible diamonds in the midst of mythological excretions accumulated in the centuries."

With man's spiritual degradation went his mental, moral and physical degradation, which is well attested by writers of those times. Read chapter 1 in one or more of the modern versions of the New Testament.

"God gave them up" (v. 26), but note the little word "as" in v. 28. God never gives men up until they first give Him up! These "reprobated" God, so God "reprobated" them. Tried and found worthless, they were cast away. Rulers look benignly on these "vile affections" today, witness our recent Parliamentary Bill on homosexuality. Such intercourse, once a crime, is now glorified as being a stage of love even higher than the natural intercourse of men and women! To "have pleasure" (v. 32) in this way, to glory in the ruin of other lives, shows complete victory over the conscience and is the most damning indictment of all!

Such was the state of the world in Paul's day, yet over all the glittering veneer of "civilisation" had spread itself. Is it not so in many lands today? Here are the origins of heathendom. The course of man has not been upward from the beast, as the evolutionists avow, but downward, lower than the beast, for what beasts would do the diabolical things that evil men do?

From the condemnation of the Gentile nations, Paul passes to the Jewish nation in particular (chapter 2), including all who, like them, were mere moralisers. In this chapter Paul changes from the third to the second person, to an imaginary dialogue with the Jew. The opening verse reminds of Nathan's terrific "Thou art the man!" (2 Samuel 12:7). It begins with the first of five great "therefores" in Romans, concerning which someone said that we should ponder what they are there for!

Paul tells these moralisers, who so heartily endorse God's judgments upon the dissolute Gentiles, that they are equally as guilty as the vilest of them. By condemning others, they condemn themselves—the criminal assumes the mantle of the judge (v. 1)! Such hypocrisy increases their guilt. Theirs was the sin of presumption, for which there was no mercy or forgiveness under their law. God's gracious providence, shown in His goodness, longsuffering and forbearance (v. 4), was meant to lead them to His feet in repentance. They missed the great lesson of His special care for them as His chosen people. They hardened their hearts (v. 5), just as Pharaoh did. Rejecting the true treasure (v. 4), they heaped up treasure of another kind—the wrath of God, the revelation of His righteous judgment.

That God "will render to every man according to his deeds" (v. 6) is not the preaching of salvation according to one's works, but the stating of a principle that is taught throughout the New Testament that hearers of the Word are not justified, but doers (v. 13). No good deeds are meritorious in themselves. Religious good works other than those inspired of God are "dead works" (Hebrews 6:1). "The justified by faith alone are never justified by a faith that is alone" (John Murray, The Epistle to the Romans).

These spoken of in verse 7 are seekers after God, His glory, His honour, His immortality, and

"he that seeketh findeth"—eternal life. Such a man was Cornelius (Acts 10 : 11 : 14). Dean Farrar wrote a book about those who lived in pre-Christian times and called it Seekers after God. There is no favouritism at God's bar (vv. 9-11).

How His judgment proceeds is revealed in verses 12-15. When "the law" is spoken of it usually means the law of Moses ; "law" without the definite article usually indicates the original law of man's creation, written in the human heart, and endorsed by the conscience. When men reject God's truth they repudiate the law of their being, they "hold down" the truth in unrighteousness (1 : 18). Neither Jew nor Gentile can claim exemption from this law. The Roman Cicero, who lived before Christ, wrote "There is a true law within, diffused among all men, constant, eternal. This law admits neither of addition, nor subtraction, nor abrogation. It is not one law for Rome and another for Athens, or one law for this date and another later on ; it is one law embracing all races over all time, eternal and immutable. There is one common Master and Commander of all—even God, who originated this law." S

CARDIFF

Pastor : P. S. Brewster

The photograph shows a group of young Canadians who came recently to the City Temple for a week of special outreach meetings. They are members of an Ambassadors in Mission team which has visited several of our churches. They come from various walks of life and during their holidays they pay their own fares to various parts of the world to work with local Christians in spreading the gospel.

While in Cardiff they worked alongside local Crusaders in street evangelism and a good number of people made decisions for Christ. The Saturday was set aside as a full day of evangelism, with a seminar on soul-winning in the morning followed by street work and open-air, and a youth rally in the evening.

Young people everywhere are getting the burden to go into the highways and byways to reach people for Christ, thus fulfilling the commission of Christ.

FELIXSTOWE

Pastor : H. C. O. Bawtree

A recent Sunday evening service was held at Maidstone Road Baptist Church, Felixstowe, by the kind permission of their minister, Rev. John Lawson. It took the form of a baptismal service.

Members of our own church and friends of Maidstone Road and Seaton Road churches were present to witness the baptism of two of our Elim members, Freda Fynn and Nellie Perry (who is over eighty years of age). The service was conducted by our pastor.

It was a wonderful experience and many felt the presence of the Lord.

ILFORD

Pastor : J. F. Hardman

During March of this year one of our members was suffering from a heart condition and high blood pressure. She requested prayer according to James 5 : 14 and received complete healing. Praise the Lord !

At the Sisterhood anniversary rally in April some 160 gathered, the highest number for some years. Representatives from other churches added their contributions to the meeting. Miss Hart from Leigh was the speaker and her inspired message presented a challenge to many hearts.

During May members and friends experienced a rich time of blessing at the Sunday school anniversary. Pastor W. R. West from Rayleigh was the speaker, and he made the stories of Jesus live.

The visit of our President, Pastor T. W. Walker, brought great blessing as he ministered on the theme "Jesus, the Son of God, was made flesh and dwelt among us."

On a recent Sunday students from Elim Bible College conducted a lively service with testimonies, ministry and singing items. Much blessing was derived from their visit.

A few weeks ago new members were received into fellowship and at the evening service there were three decisions for Christ, thus crowning a very blessed day.

On July 9th Pastor and Mrs. J. F. Hardman celebrated their fourth anniversary and appreciation of their work and ministry was expressed. May the Lord continue to use them in the future days.

The Crusaders feel the need for outreach work. A coffee bar is being held twice a month. The first effort was encouraging, when seven young people came to discuss spiritual matters.

ST. PETER PORT, GUERNSEY

Pastor : P. E. Stormont

Members and friends gathered in the school hall to welcome our new minister, his wife and two of their daughters.

Mr. H. E. Bourgaize, the church secretary, extended a warm welcome to Pastor and Mrs. Stormont, Pauline and Isobel. We were also happy to have with us our President, Pastor T. W. Walker, and his wife and daughter, Pastor R. D. Bradley, in charge at Vazon temporarily, and Mrs. Bradley, Pastor and Mrs. A. Anstey, and Pastor and Mrs. B. C. Vidamour, together with the secretaries and treasurers of the three churches on the island. Everyone partook of the sumptuous tea which had been prepared by the deacons' wives.

After tea Pastor Anstey voiced thanks for the invitations which had been extended to the visitors to attend the welcome tea on this special occasion and for all the good things which had been provided and then invited Pastor Stormont to say a few words. He said, "What shall be my first word to you on this special occasion ? I think it should be Hallelujah !"

The induction service was conducted by Pastor Anstey. From the commencement the presence and power of God were richly felt. Prayer was offered by Pastor Vidamour and Scripture was read by Pastor Bradley. The choir rendered the anthem "Let the whole world know." Pastor Anstey then extended a very warm welcome to Pastor and Mrs. Stormont and their family. Before Mrs. Stormont rendered a beautiful solo, "Lord, use me," she expressed appreciation for the warm welcome they had received. They felt sure that they were in the will of God in accepting the pastorate. The choir then sang again.

Mr. Bourgaize read a telegram from our former minister, Pastor S. Penney, and then reminded the congregation that Eldad was beginning a new period in its history. He introduced the new minister and his family. "We have prayed earnestly that God would send us the minister of His own choice, and we are confident that he has heard and answered prayer," said Mr. Bourgaize.

In reply, Pastor Stormont said that he and his wife and daughters had been deeply moved by the great kindness they had received since their arrival. "What is my desire for my ministry here? I want that the Lord Jesus Christ will be glorified," declared Pastor Stormont. The congregation joined in the chorus "Let me touch Him," and we were deeply touched by the presence and power of God. Pastor Anstey then offered a prayer.

Pastor Walker brought a very challenging message from Luke chapter 8. He urged us as a congregation to work together with the pastor. The service concluded with the singing of "Channels only."

"In deaths oft"

2 Corinthians 11 : 23

by R. Clarke

PASTOR OF ELIM PENTECOSTAL CHURCH,
MARTON, BLACKPOOL

IN order to repudiate his enemies (the false apostles) and as a means of testifying to his own apostleship, Paul found it necessary to "boast." This was not the common practice of the apostle, but one forced on him by the circumstances that prevailed at Corinth. One point of his discourse that clearly shows how he differed from them was that he often faced death.

Paul faced death through dangerous encounters. He wrote: "Of the Jews . . . received I forty stripes save one." In the law of Moses it was forbidden to inflict more than forty stripes, thus the Jews in their pedantic efforts to fulfil the law took the precaution of keeping within it.

"Once I was stoned" (Acts 14 : 9). Paul was left for dead. He also wrote: "A night and a day have I been in the deep (see Acts 27 : 4) . . . in perils of robbers . . . mine own countrymen . . . the heathen . . . in weariness and painfulness . . . in hunger and thirst . . . in cold and nakedness."

In Communist lands many Christians, because of their ardent desire to worship, have forfeited their lives. What a contrast with the many in the west who are unable to part with their beds on Sunday mornings!

Paul faced death through arduous labour. He stated: "Besides those things that are without, that which cometh upon me daily, the care of all the churches." Undoubtedly Paul was "in deaths oft" through his "labours more abundant."

Epaphroditus had been so ill that he had been on the point of death. The reason was not that he had sinned, nor was it through lack of faith to be healed; it was "because of the work of Christ" (Philippians 2 : 25, 30).

There are those who delight to point out that it is far better to burn on for God than to burn out, but when the flesh begins to die to people and possessions, when our old nature becomes crucified with Him, our excuses give way to a realisation that to drop from exhaustion is far better than to live a life of lethargy.

In an age where many "seek their own and not the things which are Jesus Christ's" we would do well to consider the examples of Paul and Epaphroditus.

Paul was dying daily to self. To Paul to bear these hardships was a privilege. For him his "light affliction" was securing eternal treasure. "I face death every day and die to self" (1 Corinthians 15 : 31, Amp.), he could write. If many believers knew through experience the apostle's inference here they would cease from weakening the Body of Christ, to which they profess to belong. Their lack of spiritual growth is such that they are like dead branches clinging to the vine. To suffer for Christ's sake is for them almost a new language. Could it be that they have never read Jesus' words, "Woe unto you, when all men shall speak well of you"? If God's people knew from experience what the apostle meant by "the power of His resurrection" after first having been "conformed to His death" through the "fellowship of His suffering" (Philippians 3 : 10), evangelism would be reinforced by visual evidence.

THE BEST PLACE

by Sheila Price

ON the way to Sunday school John and Susan noticed a spider spinning its web in one of the bushes near the church. They stopped to watch for a few minutes and were fascinated by the spider busily making its home among the leaves. Round and round it went, backwards and forwards, spinning and weaving its silky thread.

"You would not think that such a small creature could make such a beautiful, delicate thing, would you?" asked Susan.

"No," said John, "I could watch the spider all day!"

"So could I," said Susan, "but we must get to Sunday school now. I do not want to be late. We will have a look on our way home. Perhaps the spider will have finished its web by then."

"Miss Brown," said Susan to the Sunday school teacher, "we have been watching a spider making its web. It is working ever so hard, but the web does not look very safe to me."

"It may not look safe," said Miss Brown,

"but the spider will make sure that the web is fastened securely. Did you know that a spider's web can stand up to heavy winds and rain? It is not often that a web gets blown down or washed away."

The spider is a very wise creature (Proverbs 30: 28). It does not make its web anywhere, but it seeks out the best place it can find and takes a good look at the surroundings before it begins to spin. The spider wants the best home possible: that is why spiders are found even in castles and palaces.

We can learn from the spider. We can take a firm grip on the salvation that God offers us and we can be wise and seek out the best, safest places for ourselves by giving our hearts and lives to Jesus. When David wrote Psalm 23 he ended with these wonderful words: "I shall dwell in the house of the Lord for ever."

I think that is the best place of all, don't you?

PRAYER AND PRAISE

by F. H. Coleman

THE Bible tells us of great men and women of prayer. Sometimes we are given what they said in prayer, while of others we are simply told that they prayed.

It was the same with the Lord Jesus. After He prayed on one occasion His disciples asked Him to teach them to pray. No doubt what He prayed and how He prayed must have given them the desire to pray like Him. What He prayed we are not told, however, yet John in his Gospel uses a whole chapter to record in detail what Jesus prayed at another time. In the agony of Gethsemane's garden, we are told, Jesus prayed about His Father's will.

Jesus poured out His heart in prayer to God. He prayed in the garden of Gethsemane in such agony that sweat poured from His brow like drops of blood.

Hannah prayed and was mistaken for a drunken woman.

Some time ago I was talking to a man who is anti-Pentecostal (such a person is rare in these days). He told me that he did not believe that the fervent way in which Pentecostals pray is at all necessary. What about the men and women in Scripture who poured out their hearts to God in fervency and great emotion? Would this man condemn them as being too emotional?

I am sure you know what it means to pour out your heart to God. I heard the late Smith Wigglesworth relate an experience of how he had gone to pray for a man who was seriously ill. He spent the weekend at the sick man's home. Early on the Sunday morning he got up and went for a walk. He longed for a place to pray and he remembered that the Salvation Army had an early morning prayer meeting. He found the Army citadel and entered the meeting. He prayed out his heart to God and then hurriedly left the meeting. He came to the beach and saw the man he had come to pray for about to commit suicide. The name of Jesus used by this servant of God set the man free at once.

It is a good thing to pray out our hearts to God.

WHAT a wonderful thing it would be if we could recapture a sense of the glory of the Godhead. Preaching at our new church at Weston-super-Mare, the sheer resplendence of the ancient names of the Deity presented itself demandingly, awesomely. The passage being dealt with was Psalm 80 and part of the theme found expression through verses 3, 7 and 19, where there is something of a progressive revelation of God's majestic titles. The climax comes in that tremendous verse 19: "Turn us again, O Lord God of hosts," where the titles of God are an intermingling of Jehovah, Elohim and Sabaoth.

These thoughts returned during a perusal of Romans 11: 33-36. We are all for the splendid intimacy of much of our prayer. Both in private devotions and in public expressions the very wonder of our being so readily able to approach very God of very God through our Lord Jesus Christ causes ever deeper worship and contemplation. "Deigns to call me His beloved," carols a lovely old hymn, and this is just how it is. The unmitigated blessing of being able to use phraseology like "Dear Lord" and "Lovely name of Jesus" is satisfyingly symptomatic of the open door of prayer and of communion with God.

There are dangers, however, Perhaps the very way we are first taught to pray, many of us beginning with "Gentle Jesus, meek and mild," emphasises the pitfalls. The innocence of small children amply glosses over the unwitting bias. He is gentle Jesus, of course, but He is so much more. We can grow up with a meek and mild impression of the Lord Jesus Christ which belittles, if it does not actually almost deny, His deity and His ultimate prowess.

It would well repay us if we spent more time in meditation on the uniqueness of God. Beside Him there is none else. Nobody taught Him. He worked by no blueprint, for there was none. He is the great Original. His thoughts, His conception, were both ultimate and totally pioneer. Alpha, Omega, first, last, fount of wisdom, source of knowledge is He, yet He is love. "O the depths" proclaims Paul. Amen and Amen!

This generation has lost its way because it has lost its sense of God. He has become totally ignored, or else a mathematical formula, a philosophical conception, or vaguely something.

He is God. There is no other. "For of Him and through Him and to Him are all things: to Him be glory for ever. Amen."

Letters to the Editor

Dear Mr. Walker.

As a member of the Palmers Green Church and of the Royal Naval Auxiliary Service I feel I must protest at your recent remarks in the EVANGEL.

It may have been "sheer lunacy" for Sir Francis to set out in the first place, but the ships of the Royal Navy are always at sea and the planes of the Royal Air Force are always in the air for both your protection and mine.

They are in position to guard our shipping lanes and to give help to our merchant and fishing fleets when required in exactly the same way as our inshore lifeboat service.

I am sure we all trust in the Lord, but at the same time He expects us to help ourselves and to use our own common sense, as the Naval Christian Fellowship will testify.

H. J. BENTLEY.

Dear Pastor Walker.

I did appreciate your editorial in this week's EVANGEL (July 22nd).

I thoroughly endorse your sentiments about what makes news these days. I have often wondered why many miraculous healings that take place in and out of our churches never hit the national press. People would clearly rather read about an obscure vicar in an obscure church somewhere who elopes with a verger's wife than read about the 5,000 who marched through Birmingham with a message for mankind and who ably showed that a demonstration can be held without an aftermath of arrests and admissions to hospital. These must surely be signs of the age. The newspapers cover the subjects that people want to read about and unregenerate preachers preach what the people want to hear. Anything that will touch the conscience must be avoided at all costs.

I agree that it was ludicrous of a man of seventy to set out single-handed across the Atlantic as Sir Francis Chichester did. I believe, though, that every effort would have been made to rescue anyone thought to be in trouble during the race, regardless of cost. It certainly must have cost the country a lot to send out aircraft and ships to search and save him from the sea. I am glad though that when it came to you and me God in His mercy and love did not count the cost but paid the supreme price!

D. J. STUART.

Book reviews

The Covenantal Sabbath, by Francis Nigel Lee.
Published by the Lord's Day Observance Society. Price £2, postage and packing 16p extra.

This very scholarly treatise seeks to prove two main objectives, as expressed in the foreword: Is the Sabbath of perpetual application? and Was the historical change of the Sabbath day from Saturday to Sunday Scriptural?

The author provides an exhaustive study and concludes, giving a mountain of evidence, that his two objectives are proved. The study goes beyond the Scripture to show the validity of these conclusions by reference to Church history.

It is primarily a reference book for the serious student of the subject and not for the casual reader. It is not an easy book to read, probably because it was written originally as a thesis for a doctorate of theology, but it is of great value to those especially interested in the subject.

R. HUNSTON.

The Spirit of God, by Rev. G. Campbell Morgan.
Published by Henry E. Walter Ltd. Price 75p, postage and packing 7p extra.

This is a book with chapters of undoubted worth, as one would expect from such an author. It contains much confused opinion on the work of the Holy Spirit, however.

Conceding that the purpose of God right from the New Birth is the fullness of the Spirit, as the author declares, one is still amazed at the expositional confusion possible from an eminent Bible teacher seeking to explain away the Pentecostal position. To suppose the baptism of the Spirit to be regeneration exposes one to the inference that the 120 and Cornelius spoke with tongues as evidence of regeneration. He states that the Samaritan believers were not regenerate until Peter and John laid hands upon them and that they were baptised in water before being born again. Presumably the eunuch never was born again!

This forces the author to the conclusion that the filling of the Spirit is always given at the moment of regeneration and only has to be retained. Equally unscriptural is the view of a special fullness according to one's ministry.

In my opinion the book is of some worth to mature Bible students, but it will confuse young Christians.

Fruit-bearing Christians

This article was sent to us by Pastor D. L. Mills. It was written by one of the pastors of the Church of Pentecost, Ghana, during a refresher course conducted by Pastor Mills.

IN John 15 : 1-17 our Lord speaks of the true vine. God Himself is the vine-dresser. The branches are the followers of Christ. Every branch which fails to bear fruit He takes away. Every branch which bears fruit He maintains or prunes so that it will bear more fruit. Every branch which continues to abide in the vine bears much fruit. Without the vine the branches can do nothing; there is no fruit-bearing whatsoever.

Why should we bear fruit? How can the true and false vines be differentiated from each other unless by their fruit? The Bible says, "By their fruit you shall know them." You cannot gather grapes from fig trees. Bad trees cannot bear good fruit, nor do good trees bear bad fruit. The Lord insists on fruit-bearing so that men will know that the tree is good. If anyone bears bad fruit it gives witness that he is not in the true, good Vine, Jesus Christ. The Bible says that whoever does not do what is right or does not love his brother is not God's child (1 John 3 : 10). Doing bad things and hating are signs that one belongs not to God but to the Devil, for the Devil is the one who started to do evil.

The false vine can look just like the true vine. Remember the parable of the wheat and tares as told by the Master (Matthew 13 : 24-30). Paul wrote : "Having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof; from such turn away" (2 Timothy 3 : 5).

What of the branch which bears no fruit? Any branch that does not bear fruit is taken or cut off because it is of no use. Christians should show the world by their actions that Jesus Christ is the Fountain of righteousness, that He is the true Vine, the Tree of life. If we fail we become like the branch that failed to bear; we are fit for nothing but to be cast off. Christ cursed the barren fig tree (Mark 11 : 13). If you have not borne fruit hitherto, pray that you will bear fruit at once or you may be cut off. The fact that you are still there is a matter of God's mercy.

The branch which bears fruit glorifies the owner and satisfies him. God is glorified when we bear fruit through Christ. Every fruit has seeds, which produce new plants and then more fruit. Everyone who bears fruit in Christ becomes the means by which the kingdom of God is spread in the world—the kingdom of God is righteousness, peace and joy in the Holy Ghost (Romans 14 : 17).

Every branch that bears fruit is pruned so that it will bear more fruit. God prunes His people by opposition, adversity and suffering. David suffered adversity as Saul chased him, seeking to kill him. God used that to prune David so that He could do more through him to establish His kingdom in the hearts of men. Job was pruned through suffering and he bore twice as much fruit as before.

Christ said : "He who abides in Me and I in Him, he it is that bears much fruit; for apart from Me you can do nothing." When the sower went to sow some bore thirty, some sixty and some a hundredfold (Matthew 13 : 1-8). The more yield the farmer gets the more wealthy he becomes. Farmer Kofi, of Oworobon village, planted ten acres of cocoa. When the farm began to yield he got twenty bags in the first year, the next year he got forty bags, and a couple of years later the farm was yielding over 100 bags of fine cocoa beans. Farmer Kofi is very happy now. He can buy anything he wants. His children are in good schools and have plenty to eat and wear. He is now wealthy and respected by all in the village of Oworobon and its neighbourhood. If we continue bearing more fruit until we bear much fruit, fruit in abundance, then our heavenly Father is greatly glorified (Matthew 5 : 16).

What is the fruit that God wants us to bear? Christ told the disciples that they were clean (John 13 : 10), so it is not the negative fruit of refraining from sin. There is something positive that He desires from His followers.

The roots run deep into the soil and draw up food. Take a knife and cut deeply into the bark of a tree and there flows out something in liquid form—the sap, the food that is carried to all parts of the branches and leaves. This makes fruit-bearing possible. Christ is the stem, we are the branches, the Holy Spirit flows from Christ to us and through this we bear fruit.

What kind of fruit should we bear as the Holy Spirit flows through Christ to us? "The fruit of the Spirit is love" (Galatians 5:22). The Master said: "A new commandment I leave you, that you love one another as I have loved you." The Bible says that God is love and anyone who loves truly is of God. Love will not do evil to his neighbour. We must grow in love, for our Lord set an example for us. He said: "Greater love has no man than this, that he lay down his life for his friends." Christ Himself laid down His life because of love. When He was reviled, He reviled not again; He turned the other cheek. God loved us so much that He gave His only begotten Son. Christ loved us and died for our sins. We must learn to be more like Him.

The Lord said, "I must do the works of Him who sent Me while it is day; the night comes when no man can work" (John 9:4). We must show love while there is time. Do not wait till the corpse of your wife lies cold in the casket before you try to show love by weeping; love your wife and be kind to her. Show love to the poor man you meet by a word of love and kindness. Think of the orphan and comfort that child in the Lord. Think of your brother, destitute, having nothing other to wear than the one cloth he has on; you can show love to him by giving him one of your many cloths. 1 John 3:14-18 says that if we love the brethren we have passed from death unto life. Whoever has this world's gifts and sees his brother in need, yet shuts up the bowels of compassion from him, how does the love of God abide in him?

Your brother is the one near you, the one you sit with in the car. Remember the good Samaritan. Do not pass by when the cry of distress is sounding. There are souls and bodies of men to save and to help. The Lord may tell you in the judgment day that He was hungry and you fed Him, He was naked and you clothed Him, He was sick and you went to look after Him, He was in prison and you went to see Him, and you will get your everlasting reward. The Master may be forced to pronounce the bitter words: "I was thirsty and you gave me no drink, naked and you did not bother to clothe me, sick and you neglected me, in prison and you did not come to me—depart from Me into the everlasting fire prepared for the devil and his angels." God forbid that this becomes our lot! Let us be up and doing. Look at the saints who have gone before us. Follow in their steps of love and self-forgetfulness. They laid down their lives that others might see the light of the glorious Gospel.

Start doing little deeds of love today. Speak kindly to the one who has erred against you. You can do this by abiding in Christ. His love is inexhaustible. Look at the nail-pierced hand and you can love the vilest, for He died for them all.

Book review

The Singing Pines, by Norah Freed. Published by Word Books, price 40p, postage and packing 4p extra.

Norah Freed is the wife of Dr. Ralph Freed, general director of Trans World Radio. The Singing Pines is a collection of talks taken from her many series of broadcasts.

The author reveals a very real understanding of the problems and frustrations peculiar to women. I was greatly impressed by her homely illustrations and down-to-earth approach, which makes one feel that here is someone who knows what life is all about.

Norah Freed has the ability to share the everyday situations of other people and then, in quite a remarkable way, to show that the Word of God is relevant to every such situation.

This book is very easy to read and I am sure that many Christian women will benefit from reading it. It could also be put to good use among the unconverted, since it includes two excellent talks which clearly show the way of salvation.

I wholeheartedly recommend this book.

From T. H. Stevenson

SITTING to read in the local library reference room, I noticed beside me two books very neatly lying one on top of the other. The title of the first book was International Youth Hostel Handbook, while the other was Arrangements for Old Age!

It appeared that the same person had been perusing such contrasting subjects. It could have been that some seriously minded young person was planning an adventurous holiday with all the world to choose from in the youth handbook and a few necessary phrases for any country he was passing through, and then somehow he began to think of the ever-increasing older section of our own country less adventurous than Sir Francis Chichester.

On the other hand, it could have been that an older reader found Arrangements for Old Age rather too realistic and, thinking of how to remain feeling young, thought that a vigorous, energetic holiday was the answer.

Two things intrigued me in the book Arrangements for Old Age. One page had not been read, for it remained uncut. When I cut it I found that it dealt with the need for exercise—that might have helped the older reader. The other interesting feature was the section with information about the state death grant! The question of this provision was skilfully dealt with without reference to death or arranging for it.

This reminded me of a story told by Dr. A. E. Hunt related in Redemption Tidings some time ago. He told of a young girl, an only child, who discovered that she was dying, and said to her mother: "Mother, you have taught me how to dance, how to dress well, how to behave myself in the world, but one thing you have failed to teach me, and that is how to die." There is one book for young and old, a book which I have been reading daily for forty-six years. It is always appropriate, irrespective of age, and has an application for every stage and intended arrangement for life, for death and for eternity.

Let the heart ever be thankful to God for the Bible, a library of sixty-six books!

Serving the Lord

By love serve

Christ has no hands but our hands to do His work today ;

He has no feet but our feet to seek out those that stray ;

He has no eyes but our eyes to shine with God's great love ;

He has no lips but our lips to lift men's thoughts above.

"Father, where shall I work today ?"

And my love flowed warm and free.

Then He pointed me out a tiny spot,

And He said "Tend that for Me."

I answered quickly, "Oh, no, not that ;

Why, no one would ever see,

No matter how well my work was done—

Not that little place for me."

And the word He spoke it was not stern,

He answered me tenderly,

"Ah, little one, search that heart of thine—

Art thou working for them or Me ?

Nazareth was just a little place

And so was Galilee !"

It matters not what place it be that we are called to fill,

How much there is of seeming good, how much of seeming ill ;

'Tis ours to bend the energies and consecrate the will,

ANON.

There are plenty of ways of serving God and some will fit you exactly as a key fits a lock. Don't hold back because you can't preach in St. Paul's, be content to talk to one or two in a cottage. Very good wheat grows in little fields. You may cook in small pots as well as big ones. Little pigeons can carry great messages. A spark is fire. A sentence of truth has heaven in it. Do what you do right thoroughly, pray over it heartily and leave the results to God.

C. H. SPURGEON in John Ploughman's Talk.

CATHERINE BOOTH said of Christian service :
"What the Lord wants is that you shall go about the business to which He sets you, not asking for an easy post or grumbling at a hard one." When she was dying she could say triumphantly, "I have no vain regrets about the past. As far as my strength allowed I have finished the work I had to do as I went along ; now I leave it, all imperfect as it has been, in His hands."

A prayer offered at the thanksgiving service for Joseph Edward Fison, the late Bishop of Salisbury, went : "We give Thee thanks, O Lord our God, for the fire of Thy Spirit burning in the life and work of Joseph Fison ; for the humanity of the pastor, pouring out his life for others, for the hope of the prophet, proclaiming Thy truth, for the zest of the pioneer, taking Thy kingdom by force, for the humility of the scholar, searching and weighing the Scriptures, for the imagination of the artist, sensitive to Thy revelation, for the gaiety of the child, finding wonder in Thy whole creation, for the friendship of clergy and laity, which in giving he received, we thank Thee, O God."

From a wall plaque comes :

Matthew left his place of toil, and Christ as Lord confessed, Zaccheus left his wayside tree, and entertained his guest.

Then gladly will I leave my all to follow Christ my Lord.

THE NATIONAL YOUTH RALLY 1972

"In praise of Jesus"

The National Youth Director, E. R. Corsie, introduces this important event

"Hallelujah! Yes, praise the Lord! Praise him in his temple, and in the heavens he made with mighty power. Praise him for his mighty works. Praise him for his unequalled greatness. Praise him with the trumpet and with lute and harp. Praise him with the tambourines and processional. Praise him with stringed instruments and horns. Praise him with the cymbals, yes, loud clanging cymbals. Let everything alive give praises to the Lord! You praise him! Hallelujah!" (Psalm 150, Living Bible).

What if we took the Bible literally?

Why not? Youth meetings and demonstrations are opportunities for young people to express their faith in a free, spontaneous way. The Jesus Movement has encouraged uninhibited worship and praise.

This began 2,000 years ago in a manger at Bethlehem. We belong to a long tradition which makes Jesus the centre of praise and adoration. Currently, many things are happening that seem unorthodox. Banners, badges and stickers proclaim the truth that this Jesus is alive! The recent festivals for Jesus affirm the desire of the young to present the Lord Jesus clearly, dynamically, effectively. There can be no better objective for a company of people than to lift up the name of Jesus Christ.

Our National Youth Rally on Saturday, September 23rd, is planned with this in mind both in the open-air meeting in Trafalgar Square at 3.30 p.m. and in the evening meeting at Westminster Central Hall, London, at 7 p.m. The two meetings will be "In praise of Jesus!" We want you to be there with your banners and flags. London is full of young people who are serious and searching. There is plenty of evidence in the area of Trafalgar Square of our sub-culture of street-corner commandos. There are restless youths probing sleeplessly for new sensations but who endure more frustrations than ever before. Within a few hundred yards of the West End's attempt to introduce Jesus through the medium of "Jesus Christ Superstar" and "Godspell" Pentecostal youth can set forth His glorious person, not in the synthetic, superficial theatrical fashion of the world but in personal flesh-and-blood realism. With your full support it may be possible to demonstrate outside the theatres where these shows are being presented. Please pray about this.

The open-air rally will be as representative as possible; we plan to bring together on the plinth as many nationalities as can be mustered.

The programmes for the two meetings will be varied, with the Rugby Tambourine Band, the Glory Singers (a group from a teachers' training college), the Elim Bible College students and some sparkling up-to-date testimonies. The preaching is in the capable and experienced hands of Pastor W. M. E. Plowright.

W. M. E. Plowright

Admission to the evening service will be by ticket only; the price of each ticket is 10p. This will be an occasion for young people to introduce their unsaved friends to a challenging gospel programme. We want the presentation to be vital and vibrant with plenty of congregational participation. Come prepared to sing heartily, to lift up your voice and heart. Bring whatever musical instrument you can carry.

"Let . . . young men and maidens, old men and children all praise the Lord together. For he is worthy" (Psalm 148: 12, 13, Living Bible).

Write for tickets to the Secretary, Kensington Temple, Kensington Park Road, Notting Hill Gate, London, W.11. Tel. 01-727 4495 or 01-997 5502.

Jeremiah 38 : 1-13

"So Jeremiah sunk in the mire" (v. 6).

God's faithful servant was in a place of utter darkness, discomfort and absolute distress, yet not a word of complaint is recorded. God's servant remembered His promise when he had been called to proclaim His word: "Be not afraid . . . I am with thee to deliver thee" (1 : 8). Faced with death from exposure and hunger (v. 9), Jeremiah looked to the Lord and was delivered in an unexpected way through thirty-one men with the aid of cast-off garments. God delivers by using different materials, methods and men at different times, but God's way will always be successful. He is still the great Deliverer.

Tuesday, August 29th

Jeremiah 38 : 14-28

"Obey, I beseech thee, the voice of the Lord" (v. 20).

The counsel given by Jeremiah to the king to obey the voice of the Lord was invaluable. It meant prosperity, safety and life. So God exhorts us today (Psalm 95 : 7). Obedience to His voice is demanded. "Behold, I stand at the door, and knock: if any man hear My voice, and open the door, I will come in to him" (Revelation 3 : 20).

Wednesday, August 30th

Jeremiah 39 : 1-18

"I will deliver thee in that day" (v. 17).

Shut up in the court of the prison, Jeremiah was still in constant communication with his Lord. "The word of the Lord came unto Jeremiah" (v. 15), the word of the Lord of hosts (v. 16), a word of deliverance, a precious promise: "I will surely deliver." How positive and powerful this was. "Because thou hast put thy trust in Me" (v. 18) was the reason. "Blessed is the man that trusteth in the Lord" (17 : 7). Today, as we trust in Him, there is sure deliverance.

Thursday, August 31st

Jeremiah 40 : 1-16

"Behold, I loose thee this day from the chains which were upon thy hand" (v. 4).

"Fettered yet unafraid" describes the condition of God's servant at this time. Restricted yet still rejoicing, he looked for the absolute freedom that would be his.

Today can be a day of absolute deliverance from every restriction for you. You can enter a new dimension of the Lord's power. "All the land is before thee" (v. 4). There are unlimited opportunities, wider spheres of service. "Thither go" (v. 4)!

Friday, September 1st

Jeremiah 41 : 1-18

"There came certain from Shechem, from Shiloh, and from Samaria, even fourscore men . . . with offerings and incense" (v. 5).

They sought for a greater revelation of God. They came near to the house of the Lord. They met one who might have helped and who should have instructed them regarding the true nature of God and how He should be worshipped—not with rent garments, but with rent hearts.

There are still seekers after the living God. May we sincerely seek to help such and head them into the pathway of life in the Lord Jesus.

These men were deceived by Ishmael (v. 6) and led to death and destruction (v. 7).

Saturday, September 2nd

Jeremiah 42 : 1-22

"Let . . . our supplication be accepted before thee, and pray for us . . . we are . . . but a few" (v. 2).

This request for prayer came from the least to the greatest (v. 1). They inquired from God's servant and requested that He might pray for them. Beset by many cares, trembling for their very existence, they needed guidance. "Shew us the way . . . the thing that we may do," they said (v. 3). Jeremiah's response was a ready one: "I will pray unto the Lord" (v. 4). He gladly took upon himself the role of intercessor. The people were encouraged to obey the Lord: "We will obey the voice of the Lord our God." Intercessors are the need of the hour.

Sunday, September 3rd

Jeremiah 43 : 1-13

"When Jeremiah had made an end of speaking unto all the people all the words of the Lord . . . for which God had sent him" (v. 1).

Here is a picture of God's true messenger, sent of God to proclaim the whole counsel of God, without fear, without partiality. He was faithful to his God-given commission: "Thou shalt go to all that I shall send thee, and whatsoever I command thee thou shalt speak" (1 : 7). May we be faithful and fearless to proclaim all the words of the Lord. His word is powerful and all-sufficient in every situation.

Three things about sin that you should know

by A. R. Williams

PASTOR OF ELIM PENTECOSTAL CHURCH,
WEST BROMWICH, BIRMINGHAM

IT has been said that there is no need to touch soot to know that it is dirty. In the same way it is possible to know about sin without having to commit sin.

The Bible has a great deal to say about sin. It is by no means the in thing to talk about the subjects in this day and age. People go to great lengths to use every other word they can think of to describe human error, but not the word sin. No fancy word can improve the heart, the mind and the ways of man.

The cause

Everything has a cause. Sin entered the world because Adam and Eve handed over the title deeds of a wonderful God-fearing life to Satan. Pride and disobedience played their part in bringing mankind down.

The curse

Sin is no joke. There is nothing to laugh about when sin is considered anywhere, anyhow, and at any time. It is a grim fact, a titanic force contesting all the good that men try to accomplish. This dark shadow is ever ready to blot out whatever light may reach us from above. All men know and feel this every day.

This is the curse of sin. Sin has put every wheel out of action. Sin has put a stigma on people all of its own. Sin rushes at humanity like a great river in flood. It blinds the reason, sears the conscience, paralyses the will.

All humanity is condemned by its nature and deeds. Sin's curse has caused man to lose his spiritual, moral and natural way back to God. There is no hope whatsoever until that way is found.

Sin's curse has dethroned man's reason and things are seen in the wrong perspective. Man's thinking has become unbalanced. Instead of seeing sin as a major threat, man thinks of sin as some fairy tale. Bondage is freedom, darkness is light, and wrong is right. Millions delight in wickedness that is bound to destroy them. They are slaves to habits that always win the day, prisoners of their own circumstances, masters of nothing.

The curse of sin has degraded man and put a high price on low living. Ours is a sin-sick world where want, worry, wickedness and war are part of life. Sin has affected the physical side of man as well as the spiritual. Sin dims the eye, stoops the shoulders, paints the hair a hoary white and brings man to the door of death. All the madness, sadness and badness of life stems from the curse of sin. Every time you see a mainline drug addict, an alcoholic, a pervert, a prison, a detention centre, don't laugh—you are looking at the curse of sin. No one ever gets away with sin. The Bible says: "The wages of sin is death."

We live in an age when people protest. God looked down upon this earth and saw man's own efforts to master his sin. They never worked. God sent His only Son, Jesus, to die for the sin of mankind. When Christ died on the cross He made a Divine protest to Satan. The day Christ died all hell heard His protest. God challenged all the powers of evil and of darkness. Three days later Jesus left the garden tomb empty.

Almost 2,000 years have come and gone since that great moment, but there is an answer to sin and it does not lie in man trying to do his best but in his trusting in God's best.

Christ paid sin's awful price and offers a free pardon to all who believe on His name. This means forgiveness for all that is past and power for all that is to come.

The cause and the curse are known by us all.
Do you know the cure?

ELIM EVANGELISM '72 . . . EPPING CRUSADE

Report by GLYN L. TAYLOR

IT is many years since Epping and the surrounding villages in the Epping Forest district witnessed the Holy Ghost inspired ministry of Gipsy Smith. It is reported that on one occasion he preached to a congregation of 10,000 in the open air, with many souls turning to Christ.

For many months God has laid the burden of needy souls in Epping on the hearts of the brethren of the East London Presbytery. It has been wonderful to witness God going before us in the necessary work of pre-crusade preparation. To tell of all the wonderful ways in which God has undertaken would take far too much space. Here are but a few details.

Despite the fact that there was no hall available for Sunday meetings, we have been able to hire the Epping public hall for the crusade, which is planned for October 7th—22nd, 1972, and also for the follow-up meetings. It really is an excellent hall. It is situated in the centre of Epping.

The local press have been most helpful in providing as much advertising space as we require at greatly reduced rates and have assured us of their fullest co-operation during the crusade. Already in Epping and in the outlying villages great interest is being shown in the message of Pentecost. Recent reports tell of Christians who have been baptised in the Holy Ghost. We are trusting God for an even greater visitation.

The churches of the East London Presbytery are rising splendidly to the challenge. They are praying much. They are giving sacrificially—at a recent presbytery rally £48.89 was given in response to an appeal for the Epping crusade. Many have undertaken to pay the postage for thousands of invitation cards. We earnestly ask that the whole of the great Elim family will join us in this great venture for Christ and for souls.

Please pray for the crusade leaders, Pastors John G. Cooper and Robin Rees, and for the other members of the team. Why not write or telephone them and assure them of your prayers?

Pray for the people of Epping and district, that souls will be saved and a Pentecostal witness be established.

Pray above all that our Saviour will be glorified. May Epping flourish by the preaching of the Word and the praising of His name!

The letter to the Romans

5. Justification

THIS great theme is dealt with in 3:21—5:11.

The ground of our justification (3:21-26) is in the grace of God (v. 24).

“But now” (v. 21): a new day dawns! This is like the dramatic arrival of a royal pardon on the very steps of the scaffold! It is “the righteousness of God without [outside] the law,” better “a righteousness of God,” since there is no definite article here. “Outside” the law, for it existed before the law (4:3) and was attested by the law. By “the righteousness of God” Paul does not mean the great attribute of God which is everywhere proclaimed in the Old Testament, but that particular revelation which the gospel brings: “therein is the righteousness of God revealed” (1:17). A new way of being right with God is made known, yet it is not wholly new, since it was ever the only way—“by faith” (Habakkuk 2:4; Hebrews 11).

At this point Paul begins the exposition of his chosen texts (1:16, 17), the great theme of Romans—the righteousness of God as revealed in the gospel.

By J. Alexander Wright

The terms “righteousness” and “justification” and their correlates, which we find frequently in Romans, are from a single Greek root. To justify is at one and the same time to make righteous. In point of time there is no difference between imputed righteousness and imparted righteousness. It is impossible to possess imputed righteousness and not to have imparted righteousness. To be declared righteous is also to be made righteous in character. We labour the explanation because grave abuses have come from not understanding it. Actually the different words arise from the familiarity of the old 1611 translators with the Saxon and Latin tongues. “Justification,” etc., are Latin and “righteousness,” etc., are Saxon.

“Manifested” (3:21): the crucified becomes the object of faith for justification (vv. 21-25). The law, with its wonderful types and ceremonies, and the prophets, with their amazing foresight, foretold the forgiving grace of God which was to

Pastor : F. G. Evans

It was with regret that we had to say farewell to Ralph and Elizabeth Bolland on their departure to Evesham with their children, Ruth and Andrew. Ralph came to work at the Royal Air Force, Valley, seven and a half years ago and joined our church during Pastor Dawson's ministry. Soon after he married Elizabeth. They have both been faithful members and keen workers in our church.

They have been in charge of the Junior Crusader meetings and have held open-air meetings in Holyhead and in the villages of Anglesey. They will continue this work in Evesham and surrounding district in their spare time. Ralph hopes to do full-time work in evangelism, as the Lord has laid this work on his heart.

At their farewell meeting Ralph and Elizabeth rendered a duet and were presented with gifts on behalf of the pastor and members of the church.

May the Lord bless and use them in their new sphere of service for the Master.

Signs of revival in New Zealand and Australia

by P. S. Brewster

EIGHT hundred people found Christ, many were healed of their sicknesses and groups of hungry people were baptised in the Holy Spirit during the jubilee Pentecostal celebrations in New Zealand and Australia. Hundreds of ministers from all denominations attended the ministers' sessions and it seemed almost impossible to satisfy the strong spiritual urge that these people have for knowledge and experience of the Holy Spirit. In one meeting 300 ministers and leaders sat for two hours. In another I spoke for three hours on Pentecostal evangelism to students, faculty and executive ministers. In one town five meetings were held in one afternoon, culminating in a public revival service in a public hall, where many people accepted Jesus as Saviour.

A great series of charismatic services took place in Sydney, Australia. In the town hall 1,200 people gathered and sixty people found Christ. Catholics came to the front and so easily and quickly received the baptism of the Holy Spirit following their conversion.

Maoris in New Zealand and Aborigines in Australia were among the converts.

These meetings have been the occasion for civic authorities and heads of government departments to come under the sound of the Gospel. All types of churches were visited — large independent Pentecostal centres, Assemblies of God churches, Apostolic charismatic rallies and our own loyal Elim churches under the leadership of Pastor Gilbert T. S. Dunk. It was thrilling to meet many Elim members from Scotland, Ireland, Birmingham, Croydon, London, Wales, etc. They all seemed happy in their new environment but longing for Elim-type services.

Two outstanding ministers I met in Australia and New Zealand were Ralph Read, General Superintendent of the Assemblies of God, Australia, and James Worsfold, executive member of the Apostolic Church of New Zealand. Ralph Read is a deeply spiritual man anxious for revival in his country and for that revival to be of God. James Worsfold, an unusual spiritual leader, is anxious to be a bridge between the Pentecostal movements and those who are being baptised in the Holy Spirit from the traditional churches.

In these comparatively new countries, with all the atmosphere of the early pioneer spirit, scores of Pentecostal ministers both young and old are anxious to fan the flame of revival that is now among them. It cannot be denied that both countries are on the verge of a great move of God's Holy Spirit. It is obvious, as has always been the case in history, that Satan will seek to divide them on doctrine and procedure. The Gifts of the Holy Spirit are not for charlatans to imitate, nor are they the toys for the shallow and confused, or the symbols of status for any travelling evangelist; they are the endowment of power for evangelism. The great need in the coming outpouring of God's Spirit upon New Zealand and Australia will be for mature, spiritual men to display statesmanship, deep understanding, love for each other, a desire to keep as close as possible to the Scriptures and wariness of anything or anyone who does not support their claims from the Word of God. On the other hand, it will be necessary to keep wide open minds so as not to confine the moving of God's Holy Spirit to set ways and methods formed over the years. In the final acts of restoration and renewal and times of refreshing God will do a new thing. No one movement or country has the full wisdom of God or the whole nine Gifts of the Holy Spirit. The wisdom of God is poured through His Church, the Body of Christ, which is scattered throughout all nations.

Fiji is also having a share of the revival and under the leadership of Pastor Cetha huge meetings are being held.

After work

Lord, when Thou seest that my work is done,
Let me not linger on,
With failing powers,
Adown the weary hours—
A workless worker in a world of work,
But, with a word,
Just bid me home,
And I will come Right gladly—Yea, right gladly
Will I come.

JOHN OXENHAM.

Serve the Lord with gladness !

Thank God for CAMPAIGNS !

IN 1933 a large marquee was erected on the fair ground in the Humberside city of Kingston-upon-Hull and a gospel campaign was conducted in it. The meetings were later transferred to the building now known as the City Temple, Hull.

As a result of this crusade many found the Lord Jesus Christ as Saviour, one of them being the writer of this feature.

Along with me there must be many, many readers who throughout their days will thank God constantly for the pioneering vision of the Elim Movement. Apart from this, would we have partaken of the glorious gospel? Would we have entered into the full experience in the Spirit which has come our way? Would we be rejoicing in the hope of heaven? Who can tell?

One thing is certain. What we have received we long to share with others. The good news which has wrought effectually within our own lives we long to see operative in the multitudes around us. This zealous desire within all our hearts causes us, as a movement, to seek to pursue as urgently as possible the campaign aspect of evangelism. Sometimes we are restricted by lack of suitable facilities, sometimes by limitation of personnel, sometimes by other restraints, but we are convinced that we can rely upon the prayer backing and support of our loyal readers. We ask for your constant intercession as we handle our evangelistic plans.

Are you receiving our bi-monthly "Partners in Evangelism" prayer letter? If not, please write to me at Headquarters for one. God bless you and thank you!

Value

Read Matthew 10 : 29 (Living Bible)

By Betty Clark

GOD is concerned for the sparrow. He knows its worth. According to man, two were worth a penny, yet the sparrow's worth and God's concern for it were shown by God saying, "If I am concerned for a sparrow which men unfeelingly sold—two for a penny—how much more is the worth of a soul?"

A few weeks ago the Trident aircraft "Pa Pa India" was on its journey to Brussels. It crashed only a few miles from London's Heathrow airport, from where it took off. It contained 118 people, all of whom died as a result of the crash. Some of these passengers were known to the writer.

A passer-by witnessing the tragedy said: "It fell from the sky like a stone." It fell from the sky like a sparrow, because of the worth of its cargo.

There will be people who have crossed our path during this life who will stand before the Great White Throne and before God as their Judge. They will stand there, an agonising rebuke of our failure to tell them of their need of Jesus Christ as Saviour.

Our lives should be epistles known and read of all men. We must fulfil the responsibility of proclamation of preaching the Gospel. The Christian presence is not enough!

Even in these days, when sin abounds on every hand, we still come into contact with nice, good people. They are sincere, kind, warm personalities and, unfortunately, by their living and behaviour they are a rebuke to some professing Christians. When we are in contact with such as these do they merely appraise us as being nice, kind, harmless? Is their testimony of us: "We could do with more of your sort in this dismal world!" or are we such a challenge to them that they feel compelled to make a decision for or against accepting Christ as Saviour?

This world is certainly a better place because of the presence of the Christian Church, but it is not merely good citizenship for which God has redeemed us by the blood of His own Son. We must be a challenge to a world that is lost and without hope outside the redeeming love and blood of Jesus Christ. Public acknowledgment of Christ on earth means public acknowledgment by Christ in heaven (Matthew 10 : 32, 33).

The response from our side to God is a small cost in comparison to the eternal regret of wishing that we could turn the clock back to when we had the opportunity of speaking to that nun, or to our next-door neighbour, or to that teenager who came to us troubled about the question of eternity and to whom we gave only good advice.

The Christian presence is only half a Gospel. If the Christian does not try to move his fellow man to a decision both by Christ-like example and by vocal appeal it comes short of God's ideal of "witness" (Proverbs 14 : 25 ; Acts 22 : 15).

Imagine a witness in court on the witness stand dressed in his immaculate best with an air of innocence or piety on his face which those looking on could not gainsay—yet his lips are sealed!

We should be as wise as serpents and as harmless as doves. Is it possible that we have used this wonderful verse as an excuse for evading our responsibilities? God may never rebuke us for overzealousness, but He will rebuke us for apathy and indifference. One translation of Mark 3 : 5 brings out this point so well: "Jesus was deeply disturbed and angry by their indifference to human need."

*The cries of those who are in hell
May never reach our ears.
We will never know of those who are gone,
Whose sin has cost them tears.
But today is ours and preach we shall,
Though small our effort or vain,
For God will remember—yes, God will reward
A cup of water given in His name.*

“When thou passest through the waters, I will be with you” (Isaiah 43 : 2).

YOU MUST : “when”

THE chapter opens with “But.” You can be sure that the boot is soon to follow! Israel, for the primary message was to them, had acted in a mischievous manner that had brought God’s judgment upon them (42 : 24), but, for all this, their Redeemer (43 : 1) planned for their return to former glory and He would bear with them because of His name (43 : 7).

The darting flames and swirling waters of adversity would enwrap them—this they must expect—but He would not be very far away, if at all (43 : 2). He was bringing them to purity and faithfulness by a love that stretched beyond the bounds of reason (43 : 4).

As early as in Deuteronomy God said : “For a fire is kindled in Mine anger” (32 : 22). Because of disobedience, Israel was to tread a rigorous path edged with severe persecutions from hostile nations. God not only allowed it to happen, but, in His providential purpose, arranged this inevitable outcome.

The secondary application is also evident : God must lead all His children in the way of discipline. Notice that Isaiah uses the conjunction “when,” not “if.” God is very explicit in His will for us ; He never wastes words on certainties. We cannot side-step the gauntlet run of trial. We cannot miss the flood and flames. This salvation so freely given must bring us through the “all things” of God to full maturity.

It need not be the result of rebellion, as with Israel, that turns our feet this way. It can be a test of faith that develops patience and the image of His Son in the mirror of our lives. Was not the “Captain of our salvation made perfect through suffering” ? Can the servant be above his Master ?

The essential message of Christianity is that, in the midst of life, we can overcome the world and all tangible things that conspire to disrupt the peace from God. The emotional variations that are characteristic of many believers all too often suggest the want of settled trust. Trial can bring fluctuating faith to heel in submissive rest in invisible strength. Faith and patience are inseparable twins both born of the same womb on Calvary. They should be the mark of a crucified life. There is a “highway” laid for those who are “called according to His purpose,” a royal route that leads into the heart of God, tinged with the likeness of His pain.

YOU WILL : “through”

There is a limit to encroaching trial. Isaiah records (8 : 7-10) that Assyria was as many waters overflowing until they reach the neck. As the waters lick around your chin you can shout “Hallelujah !” through the spray. Jaw height is a Divine boundary : as adversity reaches that point you begin to rise and the element that appeared as a liquid grave becomes the floating place of praise.

David the psalmist slouched off into the temple scowling at vile rich men. He came to a point where “his steps had almost gone.” God got past the self pity and he “remembered their end.” The prosperity of the wicked was like the lapping flood at shoulder level, but, praise be to God, the psalmist came “through” it.

Peter was startled by the Lord walking on the sea and, bidden to do likewise, he saw the surf and sank. The Apostle was about neck-low when Jesus lifted him up !

Three times in chapter 43 Israel is said to be “formed.” In the Divine economy that word has a past, present and future meaning. It is very suitable to describe the “passing throughness” of that nation.

Jacob was “created” (43 : 1), but God chased him “through” fire and water for twenty years until he reached the brook Kidron and then poked his thigh so that he could limp into blessing. The almighty Hand was moulding this rascally supplanter into a nation. To do this meant decades of throat-high misfortunes that sapped his scheming brilliance. He came to a place where he finally rested in God and in coming “through” his greatest hour he became a prince “with God and man.”

HE WILL : “with”

Was there ever written a greater promise than this? The whimpering of weakness from a fire-stalked soul is a formula for Divine help. When sevenfold flames lick hungrily at the gospel-shod feet of tramping saints, the Lord stands amidst the heat as if in honour to steadfast faith. “Nothing can separate us from the love of God which is in Christ Jesus our Lord.”

When I feel most alone, the Lord of the waves is standing with me. The unseen, undergirding Hand of love, that holds not only the saint but the circumstance, is spanning the gulf of despair and giving purpose to providence.

Only Jesus died alone, shut in with sin and shame, with no Father, friend or fellowship in His darkest hour. He bore it all, all in the solitude of the Passion. None need cry as He did : “Eloi, Eloi, lama sabachthani”—for God is quick to journey in the hearts of pilgrim sinners. I may come within scorching distance and drowning depth, but He will “never leave me nor forsake me,” for I am “precious” in His sight (43 : 4).

Changing the metaphor, Amos states : “I will sift the house of Israel among all nations, like as corn is sifted in a sieve, yet shall not the least grain fall upon the earth” (Amos 9 : 8, 9). The one answer to explain the enigma of Israel is that God has been with them from Genesis 12 until this present time. Will He not therefore be with those who gladly ascribe praise to His holy name?

There is a certain ring of confidence in a life partnered by God. The shaking sieve of life may throw us into many painful experiences, but there is always an elbow Friend “that sticketh closer than a brother.” The command is to take His “yoke upon you”; we are not only neck-high but neck-linked as we walk in harmony. There is Someone with you in the furrow of fear and frustration.

come through the great sacrifice, so the new has its basis in the old. This gift of God’s righteousness comes to us as we believe in Jesus (v. 22). It is unto all in its reach and, in terms of experience, upon all who believe. Let us not limit the obvious meaning of the word “all” by doctrinal preferences. Here it is, in the next verse, in its undoubted universality : “for all have sinned” (v. 23). When Paul says “and come short of the glory of God” he is not adding but defining, i.e. “and thus come short.” The great sin of all men is to fail the glory of God, to “come short of the glorious likeness of God” (Conybeare and Howson), which man originally bore (1 Corinthians 11 : 7). To respond to the gospel is to obtain “the glory of our Lord Jesus Christ” (2 Thessalonians 2 : 14). The Holy Spirit’s sanctifying work within us is that we might be “changed into the same image, from glory to glory” (2 Corinthians 3 : 18). “Sinned” indicates to come short, like an archer who fails to reach his target, or even shoots beyond it.

“Through the redemption” (Romans 3 : 24) : redemption is one of the rich words of the New Testament. It is used in Matthew 20 : 28 : “ransom.” It carries the meaning of “purchase in the slave market,” “purchase out of the slave market” and “set free from slavery”—bondage, deliverance and payment ; the sin, the salvation and the sacrifice !

“Whom God hath set forth . . . a propitiation” (Romans 3 : 25). Of all the great theological terms in the New Testament this is the most loaded, hence its disappearance from the New English Bible, where “expiation” takes its place. To say the least, it is a cumbersome Latinism. It derives from one of the most beautiful of all Bible symbols, the golden mercy seat (Exodus 25 : 22). Both the mercy seat and the offering upon it are indicated by the word (see also 1 John 2 : 2 ; 4 : 10). Read mercy seat instead of propitiation. In the New Testament God is never the object but always the subject of propitiation. God is not propitiated ; God propitiates ! The concept of appeasing an angry God is heathen, not Christian. “Propitiation never occurs in the English Old Testament because the idea is alien to Hebrew thought and language” (Bishop Westcott). The word “atonement” is used instead.

A FAMOUS writer is said to have advised that the best way in which to commence conversation among a gathering of tight-lipped British men is to say commiseratingly, "How's the pain, old chap?"

We would have thought that one of the now ancient gags about summer falling on a Tuesday afternoon this year or some other quip about the weather would have worked as well or even better.

It is a fascinating study to contemplate how the emotions and the deep knowledge and experience of the personality are equated with the parts and the functions of the body in so many parts of the Scripture. "Give your heart to Jesus" has become so commonplace to us that we hardly stop to consider seriously what we mean. The oft-repeated mannerism or gesture of the preacher saying "Not here [pointing to his head], but here [laying his hand on his heart]" is now a cliché.

How apt and apposite these references are, however, is shown with startling clarity by our Lord Jesus Christ in Mark 7:14-23, especially against our modern preoccupation with ecology, pollution and the like.

The distinguishing of the source of trouble is often a problem. Things are frequently not what they seem. Anyone who has counselled a number of people over the years will tell you that a great deal of verbiage has sometimes to be endured before at long last the real difficulty or shortcoming is even hinted at.

Our Lord went straight to the point, as always, and in language homely, familiar and down to earth uncovered the core of the challenge facing mankind. It was not what went into a man via his digestive system that was the worry, hence ceremonial cleansing of hands and so on was largely a waste of time. The true centre of the whole scheme of things was the heart, the very centre of the person, in too many the dead centre. From this came horrors of sin, listed by Christ without fear or favour.

His words are modern and completely right today. Some folk have sins just as other folk have accents. Jesus directed attention to the heart of every individual. The physical system has a built-in cleansing apparatus. The spiritual "system" needs the cleansing of an outside agent. As the great old hymn says, "Nothing but Thy blood can save me."

The Cross leads Home

By W. Crawford

PASTOR OF ELIM PENTECOSTAL CHURCH, ABERDEEN

TO the little lad lost among the towering buildings and scurrying shoppers, Glasgow was a terrifying place. Fear blanked off memory. He was unable to give a clue as to where his home was. Then a familiar name flashed to his mind—Glasgow Cross! “Take me to the Cross. I can get home from there,” he told the policeman.

Many have lost their way in the chaos of modern life. In the business of gathering belongings the sense of belonging has gone. Men, women and teenagers are adrift.

Come to the cross; you can get home from there!

When reading of Jesus one question persists above all others: why the cross? Even a hasty reading of the Bible reveals a Person of unique powers. In His frequent encounters with the diseased or distraught Jesus invariably healed and helped. On three occasions He came into contact with death. Each time He banished it and renewed the victim to life. If He could save others, why not Himself?

Why the cross?

Think of what a cross was. It was a place of defeat. There lives without achievement came to an end. Unsuccessful freedom-fighters died on crosses. Captured criminals were executed in this way. On the cross Jesus found the failure.

A cross certainly meant pain. Agony of mind was combined with total destruction of personal pride and decency. It was designed to inflict the ultimate in grief. On the cross Jesus found the suffering.

Death was the end of a cross. It meant the end of a husband, a son, a father. There the greatest tyrant made its callous conquest. On the cross Jesus found the dying.

The cross was the place where a loving God found the lost. From Calvary drifting lives may find the way. Failure, suffering and death were taken voluntarily by Jesus and you can be free of them as a result.

No more need you ask, “Does God care?”

Consider God’s Son dying—and know that it was for you.

Reflect that Jesus has “put away sin by the sacrifice of Himself.”

Listen to Christ’s own words: “I lay down My life for My sheep.”

Here then is why the miracle-worker died. We could not cope with sin and “everyone who commits sin is the servant of sin.” Jesus died to take our failure. Our suffering and death were endured by Him. He went to the cross to find you. You can come home to a loving Father.

He has invited you “Come unto Me” and has given the assurance: “Him that cometh to me I will in no wise cast out.”

Bring Him your guilt and suffering. Accept that He died for you and trust Him to forgive you. Pray now. Ask Him to take your failure, suffering and death, and give you peace. He will do it. He has promised that He will.

“The way of the cross leads home.”

He is precious

1 Peter 2 : 7

Precious! Indeed He is precious—
No language ever known
Can express the beauty of Jesus Revealed unto His own.

I will sing of my wonderful Saviour,
Thanksgiving and praise I will give
To the One who came to redeem me
And died that I might live.

I will speak of my wonderful Saviour,
For how can I silent be?
No one else would have loved me
Enough to die for me.

I will think of my wonderful Saviour,
For that is the only way
To keep out the thoughts that would harm me
And hinder Him having full sway.

I will give Him my heart’s adoration
And ever will seek to be True to my wonderful Saviour
Until His face I see.

“The nations shall see!”

Micah 7:16

by George Canty

Notes of a sermon preached at Elim Pentecostal Church, Sparkbrook, Birmingham

ELIM minister Ken Smith told us of the woman who “reads everything that comes through the letter-box, except the religious stuff.” All the exaggerated claims for products, with pictures of people made as radiant as neon street signs through using Sizzler’s sausages or Swirler’s washing machines, not to mention such dehumanising comments as that somebody’s booze is “what your right arm’s for”—which must hit rock bottom in viewing the public for the sole purposes of shareholders’ dividends—she reads all this, but not the religious stuff! What blind intransigence!

She’s not alone. The empty churches are a sermon. They are the world’s sermon to the Church, telling the Church not to preach. Micah, in glory, must smile wryly and sadly. More than 700 years before Christ he expressed the world’s attitude: “‘Do not preach’—they preach!”

Am I alone in feeling a deep disquiet about Britain, not because of the strikes merely or the transparent communist plot to wreck the country by endless labour disputes—every country has its betrayers and foreign-inspired agitation—or because I cannot now afford the food I would like to put before my family, or because of political bitterness in high places? I sense a rumbling in the foundations which starts these cracks in the walls.

How uncanny that Micah should have referred to the open scandal of land speculation—“They covet fields, and seize them, and houses . . . they oppress a man and his house”—as if he knew of the millions of little people carrying enormous mortgage debts for a lifetime, while numerous exploiters laugh all the way to the bank!

You feel no disquiet? You hear no coming of judgment? What about this from Micah: “If a man should go about and utter lies, saying, ‘I will preach to you of wine and strong drink,’ he would be the preacher for this people!” With nothing but encouragement for an industry that is creating the ruin of 1,000,000 lives by compulsive drinking. You are still not troubled—when swilling liquid down men’s gullets is more favoured than the worship of God?

Micah again: “You hate the good and love the evil”—he knew us, this man of God. Morals, purity—these are considered to be harmful, repressive, today. “Discipline? Psychologically bad for children! Desire for clean television? Mary Whitehouse? How funny—and wrong!” the pundits say. Doesn’t this disturb you?

Micah again: “The priests teach for hire, its prophets divine for money.” We don’t have much in the way of priests, but the prophets, the fortune tellers, are busy—for money—and the army of healers, astrologers and wealthy leaders of cash-collecting cults. Are you still smiling?

Money is all that they think about, from the left to the right, from the top to the underdog, from the bosses (trade union and otherwise) to the shirkers. They have their reward—and they’re welcome to it.

All the time we hear of Christ on a cross, bleeding, done to death for thirty pieces of silver. Money did for Christ. It’ll do for all of us if we don’t mind, this vulgar, fiendish, feverish grabbing for money and the things it will buy, as if there was nothing else in all human experience—no love, goodness, joy, fullness of peace, no Spirit of God and no Jesus! This pathetic race feeds on wind and pretends it is rich! Underneath it all I feel Britain’s foundations creaking, like rotten joists in a condemned house.

Micah reads our times. “You shall sow, but not reap; tread olives but not anoint yourselves with oil.” We’ve done enough sowing. British ingenuity has outstripped the world in social design, but we don’t reap much.

Our splendid welfare system ought to work. We’ve decided to abolish poverty, but we’ve created an army of spongers and never-works, boosting our unemployment figures into deceitful significance. The great idea has spilled over the community at large, who think that whether they play, work or strike they own a natural right to a good living. The social security system itself is insecure.

We’ve the best health service in the world. We must have—everybody comes here to use it. So absenteeism has leaped upwards. Be ill if you've too many problems at work! The Health Service has been near total collapse through abuse.

Micah says: "Your inhabitants speak lies." He can say that again! They carry lies hidden in slogans in their demos through the public streets. They lie in their political speeches. They lie in their businesses and take it as a truism that you can't be honest in business. "Men with wicked scales and a bag of deceitful weights" is how Micah puts it. Evasion of questions is the hallmark of statesmanship. Agility in equivocation stamps a man as great in the eyes of the world. Lies are plastered on our walls as advertisements. We know it all—but who trembles at the inevitable end of such wickedness?

One thing strikes fear into me more than any other. Micah said: "There is no answer from God." Night, no vision, and nobody worries about it! People boast that they have no certainty of God. They know that they have sins, but they don't know where to find cleansing. They know that all their spiritual senses are dead, that the entire dimension of things Christian is blank to them, but they are content to let it be so. As Micah put it: "They do not know the thoughts of the Lord."

How can men be content to live like this when they need not? Surrounded by thousands of people who rejoice in the opening of their eyes and the wonders of Divine revelation—what inconceivable madness keeps them back from at least seeking, inquiring? If they don't believe what we say don't they at least wish it was true—enough to try to find out? Apparently not.

"O my people, what have I done to you? In what have I wearied you? Answer me!" so spoke Micah of God. People reject a God whom they don't even know and deny their faith in doctrines they have never heard. What has God done to them? They've never given Him a chance to do good or evil to them—they've kept out of His way. Then they say that they're fed up with the Church and God. How can they be fed up with somebody whom they've never met?

As Micah said, "You may know the saving acts of the Lord." The stubborn refusal of a generation to listen is coming to an end with their senility. As they drift on towards a hopeless grave, into an eternity which is dark but which could have been bright with the Redeemer's face, a new generation is beginning to seek the Lord and find Him. They find that their fathers' unbelief was a tragedy after all.

"The nations shall see and be ashamed," Micah declared, and swept on into that tremendous passage, "Who is a God like thee, pardoning iniquity, and passing over transgression for the remnant of his heritage? . . . He will again have compassion on us. Thou wilt cast all our sins into the depth of the sea."

The disquiet in Britain arises from its loss of God. Without God all standards, principles and sanctions cease to exist. We drift, fall, grope, flounder. That is fact, not evangelistic hot air. Here's the "something wrong"—God's gone! Soon everything will go. We have no other rock or shield.

The Christ on the cross bleeds, but His blood spells salvation. Micah points forward to Him, shows us our disgrace, and calls us in his plain farmer's tongue to repent. Our sins are crippling and frustrating every effort. We must turn or burn. Call off the phoney game of make-believe life! Get serious, weep, confess, change your ways! God will show faithfulness and steadfast love as He has sworn to our fathers from the days of old!

DAVID G. HATHAWAY

We write in response to inquiries about David G. Hathaway, who, as readers will know through our circular requesting prayer for him sent out some six weeks ago, is in prison in Czechoslovakia. David was arrested at the border when it was found that there were Bibles in the coach he was taking into Czechoslovakia. The driver of the coach, the passengers and the coach were not detained, but David was arrested.

The only sure news we have at present is that David is awaiting trial. No date of the trial has yet been decided, but it is thought that it will be some time between now and the end of the year.

We urge our readers to continue in prayer for David that God will intervene for our brother's deliverance. All that can be done is being done through diplomatic channels. Please remember also his dear wife and family at this anxious time.

SALLY'S BIRTHDAY PRESENT

By Sheila Price

WHEN Sally came home from school she hung up her coat, and as she did so she noticed a box on top of the cupboard in the hall. "I wonder what's in there," she thought. "Is that you, Sally?" Mrs. Brown called from the kitchen. "Wash your hands, then come and sit down to tea and you can tell me what you learned in school today."

After Sally had eaten her tea she went out to play in the garden until it was time for bed.

Sally just couldn't get to sleep at all. She kept thinking about the box. "It wasn't there when I went to school this morning," she thought. "I would have seen it." Sally tried ever so hard to keep her eyes closed, but curiosity got the better of her. She just couldn't settle down until she found out what was in the box!

Sally got out of bed and crept downstairs. She stood on tip-toe, but she couldn't reach the top of the cupboard. "I'll get a chair from the kitchen," she said. She placed the chair against the cupboard, stood on top of it and managed to lift the lid off the box. "Oh," she gasped as she looked inside, for there in the box was the prettiest doll she'd ever seen. "If I just lean over a little I'll be able to get the doll out and have a good look at it," she thought. But Sally leaned over a bit too far! The chair slipped from under her and her hand knocked the box on to the floor with a crash. Her mother came running up. "Whatever are you doing, Sally? You are a naughty girl. You could have hurt yourself," she said.

"I'm very sorry, mummy," said Sally. "I only wanted to see what was in the box."

"Your father and I bought the doll for you this morning," said Mrs. Brown. "We were keeping it for your birthday next week. We were not hiding it from you, but waiting for the right moment."

Sally learned a lesson. She knew that the best thing to do was to leave things in her mother's care, for her mother knew what was best for her.

We can learn to leave things in God's hands. All through our life He alone knows what is best for us. God knows our needs. He will never keep anything from those who love and trust Him.

An ordination service at Clapham, Easter 1929. How many of the ministers can you identify? For example, Samuel Gorman is on the right of Principal George Jeffreys and James T. Bradley, our Secretary-General, is on his right.

Do not forget the ordination service at our Clapham Church on October 28th, at 7 p.m.— an event of great importance !

Car engineer finds Christ

The Christian faith of Harold C. MacDonald, Ford Motor Company's vice-president in charge of the product development group, is told in God had a Better Idea, a twenty-four-page booklet. MacDonald told radio evangelist C. M. Ward, "As a trained engineer my most difficult step to believing was to accept something for nothing. I thought I had to do something to merit God's favour. I discovered Ephesians 2 : 8, 9. Until I found that it worked, that offer didn't seem like a proper mathematical formula. I wanted to see all the components."

In MacDonald's office at Dearborn, Michigan, U.S.A., hang full-colour action shots of racers powered by Ford engines which have triumphed in the Indianapolis 500. Equally prominent is a handsome wall motto with the words "What shall it profit a man, if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul?" (Mark 8 : 36).

A study in contrasts

A SNIPPET of news from the Daily Express reads as follows : "The West End musical role of the year has gone to twenty-six-year-old Paul Nicholas, who will play Christ in the London production of Jesus Christ Superstar. Paul, son of a London lawyer, made his stage debut in the principal role of Claude in the rock musical Hair." What a contrast this is, Claude of Hair of infamous reputation, to Christ, the spotless Son of God !

I heard an excellent message recently contrasting Saul, first king of Israel, with Saul of Tarsus. The difference was very marked. The first Saul was weak, prone to jealous rages and diabolical treachery and was disobedient to God in a number of ways. Paul, the Saul who met Jesus on the Damascus road, was strong in the Lord, blameless in his treatment of others and gladly became an obedient servant of God. Saul the king was afraid of death and of the conflict with the enemies of Israel and resorted to the despicable practice of spiritism. Paul could say triumphantly, "For to me to live is Christ, to die is gain" and with confidence, "I have fought a good fight."

Another unusual talk I enjoyed was woven round the contrasting response to the Lord Jesus by Philip and Nathanael. Philip announced with joy : "We have found him of whom Moses in the law, and the prophets did write" ! Nathanael cautiously hazarded his doubt : "Can there any good thing come out of Nazareth ?" Life is full of contrasts which in many ways give colour and spice to what could otherwise be dull and dreary. Sameness tends to monotony.

When we come to matters of faith and practice, however, broad lines are laid down for our guidance.

The Lord Jesus stated : "Ye cannot serve God and mammon" and "No man can serve two masters." We may be shocked at the young actor who can play in Hair and then attempt to portray the Christ of God, but the Devil is very subtle and he will play down any contrast in our behaviour and minimise our sin and inconsistencies. King Saul, when first called to sudden leadership, knew the anointing of the Spirit of God. It was exclaimed in wonder "Is Saul also among the prophets ?"—yet he failed miserably. Paul began quietly and humbly and went on growing in strength to live a Spirit-filled life. Some folk are brilliant starters and easy stoppers ; it is far better to be steady starters and non-stoppers. Philip the disciple, with ready faith, accepted Jesus as Messiah and said with assurance : "Come and see," whereas Nathanael was hesitant and needed convincing. Are you quick and eager to respond to the claims of Jesus or are you reluctant of heart ? Light or darkness, heaven or hell, faith or unbelief, holiness or worldliness, righteousness or sin, love or fear, peace or conflict—the Bible abounds with vital and important contrasts. Check and get your priorities right.

O think !

To step on shore,

And that shore heaven !

To take hold of a hand,

And that God's hand !

To breathe a new air

And feel it celestial air !

To feel invigorated

And know it immortality !

O think !

To pass from the storm and the tempest

To one unbroken calm !

To wake up

And find it glory !

Vocal gifts and silent youth

"Thy people shall be willing in the day of Thy power" (Psalm 110 : 3).

ONE of the glad privileges in Pentecostal churches is the operation of the Gifts of the Spirit. There are nine Gifts, but I am thinking of the vocal Gifts: tongues, interpretation and prophecy.

One of the sad things regarding these Gifts is that so few young folk seek to take part. It is left to the older ones, who perhaps have been doing it for years, to manifest these wondrous ministries.

One of the bad things in this matter is that most of us seem content for this condition to continue. It is like the dew of heaven when someone new is used in the ministry of the Gifts. We want that dew!

Present situation. In many, so many, too many churches the same one or two give messages in tongues, and the same person, often the pastor, interprets. The blessed Gift of prophecy is seldom heard in our land, yet the Bible clearly says that we might all prophesy. The fact that so few are used in the ministry of the Gifts in no way invalidates the Gift; it simply means that only a few are willing to be used by God in this way. I am sure that this situation is missing God's best. I am sure that the Holy Spirit wants to use many in the Gifts. I am sure, because the Scripture teaches this.

Possible source. How is it then that this situation is prevalent, not only here but in many parts of the world? Why is it that scores of young people who get gloriously filled with the Holy Ghost fail to go in and possess the land of the Gifts? Why is it that hundreds of Crusaders who have been baptised in the Spirit have never given an interpretation or a prophecy? I think the cause is threefold.

1. Fear. Fear that if one gives a message there will be no interpretation, fear that if one prophesies one will break down half-way through or start speaking to God, not for God—fear brings a snare, and snares bind.

2. Frustration. When the Gifts are manifest and a young person feels that he has the interpretation the usual interpreter steps in and he does not get an opportunity. Those more experienced in the Gifts should often be encouraged to hold their peace and give God a chance to use someone else. In prophecy this is not so, so covet to prophesy.

3. Failure on the part of ministers and teachers to instruct young folk on how to use the Gifts is a cause of their non-use. We tell them often to use the Gifts, but we do not tell them how.

Proffered solution. It is my earnest desire that hundreds of young people should seek to be used by God in the beautiful ministry of the Gifts. I offer three suggestions.

1. Seek. The Bible says, "Desire spiritual gifts"; it's the same Greek word as the one for zeal. Be enthusiastic about seeking God—pleading, desperate. Remember also that when you ask you receive. Jesus said so.

2. Start. When the Spirit of God is on you, step out in faith. You will never walk on the water until you get out of the boat. In faith, by faith, with faith, speak out for God. The whole church will rejoice.

3. Stay. You will make some mistakes. Your utterances might not always be eloquent, but who says that eloquence is a sign of inspiration?

Desire spiritual Gifts.

THE FAMILY ALTAR

Scripture Union Portions

Notes
by
D. C. Lewis

Monday, September 4th Jeremiah 44: 1-14

"I sent unto you all My servants the prophets . . . saying, Oh, do not this abominable thing that I hate. But they hearkened not" (vv. 4, 5).

"They provoke Me to anger" (v. 3), God said. An unresponsive, rebellious generation is here described. Note how patient God had been. He pleaded continually. How unresponsive were the people to God's pleading to turn from their sins: "the thing that I hate" (v. 4). They burned incense to other gods, so judgment would surely fall. "I will punish them . . . by the sword, by the famine, and by the pestilence" (v. 13).

God still speaks. May we hearken to His voice. To obey is life and peace. To reject His call to repentance will result in disillusionment and death.

Tuesday, September 5th Jeremiah 44: 15-30

"We will not hearken unto thee" (v. 16).

A stubborn refusal to obey God's word revealed a deliberate choice, a preference for superstition rather than obedience to God's Word. Many superstitions prevail today and people prefer to worship the gods of this age.

Idolatry had become established. Whole families were polluted because of worship at heathen altars. Tribute was paid to the queen of heaven.

"Choose ye this day whom ye will serve" (Joshua 24: 15). God's demands are still the same: "Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and Him only shalt thou serve." He is the King of kings.

Judgment overtook those who transgressed: "I will punish you . . . that ye may know My words" (Jeremiah 44: 29).

"As for me and my house, we will serve the Lord." Let this be our decision always.

Wednesday, September 6th Jeremiah 51: 47-64

"Thus shall Babylon sink, and shall not rise" (v. 64).

The doom of proud Babylon, the opposer of God's Word and persecutor of God's prophets, is pronounced. The walls will be broken, the high gates will be burned with fire, none shall remain in it, and it will be desolate for ever (vv. 57, 62). Her wise men and her mighty men will "sleep a perpetual sleep, and not wake, saith the King, whose name is the Lord of hosts" (v. 57).

His kingdom is an everlasting kingdom. Babylon perished. The Word of our God will stand for ever!

Thursday, September 7th Matthew 3: 1-17

"He shall baptise you with the Holy Ghost" (v. 11).

The preaching of John the Baptist was powerful. He used plainness of speech. He made a direct appeal to his hearers. "Repent" was the clarion call. The response was great from Jerusalem, all Judaea and all the region round Jordan (v. 5). "Repent and receive the coming One, the mighty One! He shall baptise you with the Holy Ghost, and with fire" was John's call. The dawning of a new dispensation was at hand. This promise was marvellously fulfilled (Acts 2). Jesus is still the great Baptiser in the Holy Spirit. The promise is to you.

Friday, September 8th Matthew 4: 1-11

"The tempter came to Him" (v. 3).

The enemy of our souls is still in pursuit and often in close attendance. Even Christ was not immune from his endeavours. The Devil is not a mere influence, as some would assert: he is a person. Christ had a personal confrontation with Satan. He was challenged: "If Thou be the Son of God" (v. 3). He challenged the Divinity of the Son of God (v. 6). Christ resisted every temptation and gave Satan marching orders: "Get thee hence, Satan: for it is written" (v. 10). God's powerful Word will prevail when we are in combat with the evil one. Satan was defeated. Let us put him to flight today!

Saturday, September 9th Matthew 4: 12-25

"Follow Me, and I will make you fishers of men" (v. 19).

This challenging call from Christ on the shores of Galilee to Peter and Andrew met with an immediate response. Christ calls us to leave all and to follow Him. This is His insistent call. How will you respond? What hinders you? Do you feel inadequate for the task to win men for the Lord Jesus? "Follow Me, and I will make you," He said. He will give the grace to follow, the strength to continue and the enablement to become a successful winner of souls. Others will be encouraged to follow. James and John soon joined the ranks. You are needed. Follow now! Preaching, teaching and healing make a rewarding ministry.

Sunday, September 10th Matthew 5: 1-12

"Blessed" (v. 3).

Truly the state of the disciple who has decided to follow Christ is a blessed one. Following Him, we find that the more we practise and live out the teachings of the Lord the more we are blessed. Here is presented for us how to find out in daily life and experience the secret of the blessed ones. "Blessed" indicates "happy," happy because we walk in harmony with Him in humility (v. 3), in purity (v. 8), in peace (v. 9). We are happy also in persecution—reviled yet rejoicing, persecuted yet always praising (v. 12).

Christ who is our peace

by Maldwyn Jones

PASTOR OF ELIM PENTECOSTAL CHURCH, EASTLEIGH

SOME time ago our newspapers carried reports of the death of the star who vowed: "I will never grow old." George Sanders, self-styled professional cad, dreaded the day when the charm for which he was famous would wither with age. He once said to a reporter: "The thought of old age continues to horrify me. I find all old people ridiculous and, as I don't ever want to become ridiculous, I don't want to become old." He suggested that at an agreed age, say seventy, people should be given a cup of hemlock and bow out. George Sanders bowed out, alone in a hotel bedroom. Aged sixty-five, he committed suicide.

He lived a life of arrogance and self-sufficiency. He was consumed with thoughts of his own importance. Recalling his birth in St. Petersburg, Russia, he said: "That night a son of dazzling beauty and infinite charm was born. It was I."

He was referred to by one reporter as "Mr. Utterly — utterly bored, utterly lazy, utterly superior and utterly condescending." Journalist Brian Wesley wrote: "In 1970 George married Magda Gabor. It was a disaster. The marriage lasted only for a month. More and more his thoughts turned to death. Of hemlock. Or just a quiet walk by the sea. Even of a drive in a car packed with dynamite. His final epitaph was found in his own suicide note—'I am bored and have lived enough.'" After experiencing the pleasures of this world, having lived in the lap of luxury, having gained and lost a fortune, all he could say was "I'm bored."

At the end of the book of Judges we read, "Every man did that which was right in his own eyes" (Judges 21:25). The downfall of Israel arose from disobedience. It caused their defeats by the Philistines, the division of the kingdom and their captivity and exile at the hands of the Assyrians and Babylonians. They learned the hard way that they would have to bear the consequence of their desire to do what was right in their own eyes.

In our generation the world hovers on the brink of anarchy and chaos. Permissiveness has gone mad. People seem to think that they can do as they please, never mind whom they offend. Students align themselves with anarchists, who are convinced that past generations have betrayed humanity. The legacy that has been left to us, so they claim, is war, starvation and misery. The only way, they feel, that this situation can be put right is to destroy community life as we know it and to start all over again.

This generation has reason to feel disgruntled. Older folk say, "You've never had it so good!" Young people of today have never had it so bad. It is bad enough to live under the perpetual threat of the annihilation of civilisation which would result from the next world war, to live under the shadow of the nuclear bomb, but these are not all. Never has a generation been exploited like this one. Pornographers peddle their filth and rich men become richer by illegally trafficking in drugs. Sex is screamed from cinemas, television, newspapers, glossy magazines, literature and advertising. Which section of our society is being exploited by all this? The young people of our community are the special targets.

The answer to war, despotism, misery and social injustice is not permissiveness. The result of this would be chaos and anarchy. We must have discipline; we cannot exist without it.

The answer is found in the words of Jesus: "Peace I leave with you, My peace I give unto you: not as the world giveth, give I unto you. Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid" (John 14:27). Man cannot be truly at peace with his fellow man until he is at peace with God. When the turmoil in the hearts of men is quelled by the Spirit of God, then the turmoil in the world will cease. If you have the peace of God in your heart you will be able to go through life with the assurance that the turmoil that is within the world cannot disturb you.

Why not accept Christ now?

The Barrier of Unbelief

by Ruth Wilson

"They could not enter into rest Because of unbelief,"
'Twas lack of faith which hindered them
And yet today it is the same—
Men doubt the Prince of peace.

They will not trust the One who said
"Come unto Me and rest,"
Their eyes are blind, they cannot see
The Saviour who could set them free
From guilt of sin and death.

Dear Lord, in this poor troubled world
I long to live for Thee,
To tell the wonder of the love
That brought Thee from Thy throne above
To die at Calvary.

To die but yet to rise again,
Triumphant o'er the grave.
O wondrous victory gained for man—
According to the Father's plan,
He died the lost to save!

Give faith instead of unbelief
And peace in place of fear.
May souls be cleansed from sin and shame,
That they may magnify Thy name
And feel Thy presence near.

Proclaiming the Truths of Pentecost

The letter to the Romans

By J. Alexander Wright

6. Justification

GOD'S setting forth of the crucified is a declaration of His righteousness (Romans 3 : 25, 26), which removes any misconception that might have arisen regarding past transgressions. The guilt of those "sins that are past" was not wiped out, dismissed or forgotten, for this could never be (Ecclesiastes 3 : 15); rather they were "suspended" in His great forbearance, that with all the sins of all men everywhere and in all time they might be dealt with once and for all in Christ's great redeeming sacrifice. The "justice that slept" has been vindicated (read Acts 14 : 16 ; 17 : 30). The death and resurrection of our Lord provide a mercy-seat whereat the sinner may meet his God and find forgiveness and deliverance, demonstrate the righteousness of God, and justify and make righteous the believer (Romans 3 : 24-26 ; 4 : 25). In all this, Jewish pride of race, place and face has no part (vv. 29, 30).

The doctrine of justification by faith is older than the law, older than even the Israel nation (though some Roman Catholics think that it came in with Martin Luther!). Paul goes back to father Abraham for his illustration of this truth (chapter 4). Indeed the doctrine, rather than emptying the Mosaic law of meaning, adds a new sacredness to "every dear command of Thine" (3 : 31). Abraham's righteousness was wholly of faith and independent of his works (v. 3). The reference is to the matter of his unborn seed (Genesis 15 : 6), the first occurrence of the word "believe." When James wrote that Abraham was "justified by works" he was referring to a specific act which took place about twenty years after he was "justified by faith." Paul speaks of Abraham's life-attitude, James of an act arising out of that attitude. There is no contradiction.

"Counted" (v. 3) is a merchant's word—"put to his credit," "imputed" (vv. 6, 8). By contrast in verse 4 the rights of a workman are mentioned, but Abraham had no works, goodness or privilege to commend him. Mention of the "un-godly" (v. 5) leads the apostle to illustrate the truth in the case of their great king, David. What dastardly deeds he committed—adultery in such shameful circumstances, then murder to cover it up. How were the guilty monarch's forgiveness secured and his peace of mind and heart restored? In all the law there was no sacrifice or offering which might avail for him, for "Thou desirest not sacrifice; else would I give it" (Psalm 51 : 16), yet through faith in God's mercy this man of blood became the "blessed man" of Psalm 32 : 1, whose great sin was not laid to his account. (Romans 4 : 7, 8).

If perchance David's circumcision be thought to have availed him anything, Abraham's righteousness was quite independent of his circumcision, for at the time of his "acceptance" he had not been circumcised (vv. 10, 11). Abraham is the father of the faithful uncircumcised—the believing Gentiles—as well as the faithful circumcised—the believing Israelites. Circumcision was but a seal and a sign and had no virtue of itself. It was meaningless without the presence of faith (vv. 9-12).

His righteousness was also wholly independent of the Mosaic law, since that came over 400 years after his justification by faith (v. 16). "Heir of the world," a tremendous phrase (v. 13), is an inspired expansion of the original promise that in him all nations would be blessed (Genesis 22 : 18). Implicit in that promise (Galatians 3 : 16), Paul sees the universal reign of Christ and His Church. How real that faith of Abraham's was is shown by his marvellous "faithfulness" in the matter of the birth, "death" and "resurrection" of Isaac (Romans 4 : 17-22 ; Hebrews 11 : 19).

The Genesis story is not a mere historical record, but is for us, too, 4,000 years on (vv. 23, 24). One man's life can have significance for far future ages and generations. Our Isaac was offered for our transgressions. God our Father spared not His only begotten, but He also raised Him from the dead. Truly believing this, we too are "justified by faith" (vv. 24, 25).

SHEFFIELD

Pastor : A. V. Gorton

The feature of spring bank holiday Monday in Sheffield is the participation of all the Sunday schools in a march of witness. At 8.30 a.m. an enthusiastic crowd of scholars, teachers and church members leaves our church in procession to join thousands of others who gather in parks throughout the city to sing hymns of witness. En route we stop in the grounds of a local hospital and sing to patients, who are brought out on to the surrounding balconies.

Each year our Sunday school presents the Gospel by means of a tableau. This creates great interest, particularly as we are the only Sunday school to do this. Our theme for 1972 was "Pollution" and this was portrayed by means of a thirteen-foot model of a steel foundry complete with chimneys. Wording on the model depicted pollution of atmosphere, sea and earth, and, more insidious than all these, pollution of the mind, heart and soul. We urged : "In times like these you need a Saviour," and added the prayer "Create in me a clean heart, O God, filled with clean thoughts and right desires."

On the following Sunday at our anniversary the model was used again and the theme was carried through in verse and song by the children.

SOUTH SHIELDS

Pastor : A. P. Johnston

This church was opened by Pastor A. Tee after a wonderful campaign held in the local Bolingbroke Hall, where we witnessed many souls being saved and many people being healed after prayer. We are all enjoying the ministry of Pastor and Mrs. Johnston, whom we all love. We are still getting a good number at all our meetings.

We held a fellowship tea in June, enjoying a visit from Pastor J. T. Bradley. About seventy people had tea and supper on the Saturday evening. On the Sunday about forty were accepted into membership of this new church. Pastor Bradley gave the right hand of fellowship to them all.

Later twenty-two believers were baptised by our pastor at Sunderland, with the kind and willing help of Pastor and Mrs. D. G. Holmes, as we have not as yet installed a baptistry at our church. This service was a great encouragement to us. Many of the candidates have been born again during and after the campaign.

We have also had a visit from Pastor Tee, who preached during the weekend to a full church and handed baptism certificates to those who had been baptised. Much blessing was felt at these meetings.

The work is going on, numbers are increasing, and we are looking to God for great things. "Brethren, pray for us."

EASTBOURNE

Pastor : J. Lancaster

The annual visit of the London Crusader Choir had a new feature this year in that the afternoon meeting was held on the Wish Tower slope on the Promenade. Ideal weather conditions provided a marvellous opportunity to present the Gospel and a crowd estimated at 400 to 500 people sat on deck chairs or stood to hear the hour-long programme. Community hymn singing led by Pastors J. Lancaster and E. Gaudion was interspersed with items by the choir, including solos by Marie Hamilton and John Crawley. One of the most popular items of the programme was "Amazing grace," which was taken up by the large audience and which provided the theme for the closing address by our pastor. It was impressive to see this great crowd stand in complete stillness as we offered prayer for the national situation. A visitor from a Belfast Baptist church commented afterwards that it was worth coming to Eastbourne on holiday just to hear prayers for Ulster and to know that people cared. Another encouraging thing was that a man sitting on the balcony of his flat in a luxury block on the sea front was so impressed by the singing that he attended the evening service in the church.

The church was packed to capacity for the evening service, holiday visitors joining local people for what has become an annual August event in the town. The choir, under Pastor Douglas B. Gray's splendid leadership, was in good form and presented a well-balanced programme of music new and old, with testimonies and solos. One of the deacons was able to lead a man to the Lord after the service and we learned of other people who were greatly challenged by the service. Our thanks go to the choir for a splendid day.

IRISH CRUSADER CAMP

During the year a number of our churches take advantage of the facilities of the Elim Youth Centre at Annahinchago in the heart of the Mourne countryside. On July 29th it was the turn of a group of Crusaders from several of our churches to meet for a week's fellowship under the leadership of Pastor A. F. Seeman.

A programme of spiritual and recreational values had been planned. On the Sunday we supported the meetings at our church at Moneyslane. Pastor W. McCandless, our padre for the week, took a series on the life of Paul and morning and evening we followed Paul's life and learned many lessons on the need of salvation, obedience, consecration and service for the Lord. Pastor and Mrs. T. Burns helped in the meeting of our recreational needs. In the afternoons we visited Newcastle (where the mountains of Mourne sweep down to the sea) and other local beauty spots.

A testimony meeting on the last evening revealed just how the Lord had been speaking to us. Some of the young people came back to the Lord. For all of us the week passed too quickly. We went back to our churches determined to follow the Lord more closely.

Some of these young people came from troubled areas in Belfast and Armagh and we would covet your prayers for them.

A. SEEMAN.

BEAUTIFUL HANDS

By Constance V. Bradbury

Beautiful hands of my Saviour, reaching to all mankind,
Sensitive hands of my Jesus, healing the sick and blind,
Tending and cleansing the leper, taking the child on His knee, Making Him our example, saying, "Come, follow Me."

Beautiful hands of my Saviour, ministering to the crowds,
Breaking the loaves and the fishes for those who sat around.
Bountiful, wondrous compassion meeting
my every need,
Winning the love of sinners, proving a Friend indeed.

Beautiful hands of my Saviour, expression of love Divine,
Bearing the load of the weary, for He is so true and kind,
Speaking hands, raised in petition, praying for you and me,
Jesus my Lord interceding — wonderful!
How can it be?

Beautiful hands of my Saviour cruelly pierced on the tree, Suffering hands of my Jesus wounded for you and me.
Hands that have lifted the fallen, hands that provide their needs,
Hands that are strong and precious, hands of a Saviour indeed.

Pentecostals to meet in Toronto, Canada

THE Pentecostal Fellowship of North America, consisting of nineteen member bodies, will hold its twenty-fifth annual convention in Evangel Temple, Toronto, on October 30th to November 1st.

Toronto, a striking city for the delegates who will come from all parts of the United States and Canada, is the tenth largest city in North America and the second largest in Canada. The Evangelical and Pentecostal segments are a strong, viable force amid a galloping secularised community. The Toronto chapter of the P.F.N.A. has thirty congregations in the Toronto metropolitan area.

The city boasts a futuristic city hall so architecturally daring that it has to be seen to be believed. Equally arresting are the new Ontario Place, built on a land-filled site in Lake Ontario, and the Ontario Science Centre, a Canadian rival of the famed Smithsonian Institute in Washington, D.C., U.S.A.

Host of the Toronto convention will be Robert W. Taitinger, chairman of the P.F.N.A. and general superintendent of the Pentecostal Assemblies in Canada. He was a speaker at the 1972 Elim Conference.

Built around the theme "In the light of His coming," the Toronto conference will feature seven daily programme items on Tuesday and Wednesday, beginning with the Bible hour at 9 o'clock, with Dr. Frank G. Tunstall, of the Pentecostal Holiness Church of Oklahoma City, and three public rallies on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday nights with prophetic addresses. Also taking part will be Dr. George L. Britt, of the Church of God, Cleveland, Tenn.; Dr. Charles A. Anderson, of the Assemblies of God, Springfield, Mo.; Dr. Howard P. Courtney, of the International Church of the Foursquare Gospel; Dr. Leslie Hunt, Principal of Wycliffe College, Toronto; Dr. T. F. Zimmerman, of Springfield, Mo.; Mrs. R. Smith (Open Bible Standard Churches), R. M. Argue (the Pentecostal Assemblies of Canada), Dr. B. E. Underwood (Pentecostal Holiness Church), Robert C. Cunningham (Assemblies of God), Dr. Hollis Gause (Church of God), Norm Correll (Assemblies of God), S. D. Feltmate (the Pentecostal Assemblies of Canada), Dr. Ray E. Smith (Open Bible Standard Churches), Albert Pinset (Pentecostal Assemblies of Newfoundland) and Tom Grinder (International Pentecostal Assemblies of Atlanta, Georgia).

The George Canty Viewpoint

... on the undesired Privilege

THE toffee-nosed distinction of my childhood was “a house with a room.” This is north country English for what estate agents advertise as “2 recep.”—two ground-floor rooms. The front one was “the room,” kept for best. On weekdays as forbidden as Lhasa or even the Jokang temple itself, limited access was permitted on Sundays with the necessary passport of our newest clothes and clean boots, but only when accompanied by an adult, like an “A” film.

At the season when, I imagine, other planets observe the annual dust-storm on earth—spring-cleaning—our parlour was usually “papered.” Then we actually lived in “the room.” In this awesome chamber, containing the American reed organ and the plush-framed mirror, we sat on chairs so stylish that their discomfort was more virtuous than a hair shirt and had our meals there. Ate—there ! It was like camping in Westminster Abbey. My young sister left it one day saying “I’m going home.”

Grandma successfully pounded it into us that we were grace-and-favour occupants—“the room’s not for kids.” Our small sensibilities recognised that we were being indulged, but somehow sitting there terribly impressed, afraid to touch anything, the privilege palled, and we invented excuses to get out. I’d never been to church, but that is what “the room” reminded me of. It was the last marvel on earth to enter God’s house, but my family admitted it without enduring such joy.

From the moment I entered a Pentecostal assembly, however, it locked in my mind with our comfortable parlour, not “the room.” Some years ago the house was bulldozed, but I snatched a brick from the parlour floor. This I keep on my pulpit. It establishes where my home is. In a Pentecostal meeting I’m as contented as a boy on the hearthrug and the clock hands move too quickly. Hurry to get home ? I am home.

Church should be the parlour, not “the room” to be visited once a week in an attitude of unrelaxed tedium. It should not be an undesired advantage like being able to go to the dentist. “I love the place, O God, wherein Thine honour dwells” but, remember, I like to get away early !

What is a church ? A place for an act of worship ? Or for preaching ? Just “where two or three are gathered in Christ’s name” ? A huddle of people who think they understand the Bible better than others ? “The room” open only on Sundays ?

It is my Father’s house, where I meet my real brothers and sisters, breathe the atmosphere of the Spirit, and feast at the table our Parent has prepared. It is home with the family present. Any definition of the Church which empties it of home-like joy is a false one. Any attitude of mine which invents excuses to be absent condemns me as having lost the family spirit. Any place which claims my interests more than home is suspect. "Love one another" doesn't mean to see one another as little as you decently can get away with and still pretend to have brotherly affection.

The word "Church" can't be explained except by the entire New Testament. There, from the time when the apostles and disciples began this unique community "with one accord . . . breaking bread from house to house," to the profoundly affectionate communications of Paul to his "beloved," and his exhortations to "the household of God," and to the staggering revelation of this New Creation of Christ's passion—only in that total picture is the Church described. "Christ loved the church and gave Himself for it." What do we give for it? One and a half hours on Sunday and a coin in the plate?

"Members one of another," "baptised by the Spirit into one body," "fellowship through Christ's blood," "partakers of the divine nature," "one in Christ"—these phrases permit of only one response—family involvement to the hilt in the household of faith.

Church is not the Sunday room; it is daily life together in the parlour.

CRAWLEY, SUSSEX

BACK in 1965 a very limited four-day campaign was held in this new town in Sussex. The results from this brief effort were small, as one would anticipate, but those concerned were an enthusiastic company. Students from Elim Bible College at nearby Capel then gave of their time and energy to develop the witness.

The nucleus met in a hired wooden hut which was used for many other purposes and oft-times reeked with the beer smells of the previous night's function.

Eventually the present minister was appointed and gave his able services in an honorary capacity, facing with considerable zeal the responsibility of nurturing this infant cause. The congregation grew steadily. There were converts. There were healings. There was vision. The obvious necessity was a building of their own, a house of God wherein to worship freely. In 1971 the formidable task was tackled.

The congregation, headed by their pastor, began to level out and prepare the site. The basic structure was erected by the Reema firm and then it was a case of "back to the local assembly" for all the elaborate and intricate finishing processes. The above picture reveals the completed task, which is of the highest credit to all concerned.

The average Sunday attendances are now forty-five to fifty in the mornings and sixty to seventy in the evenings, with weekly offerings between £30 and £40. Converts are still being added to the congregation and we have heard recently of an outstanding case of healing from cancer.

We say "thank you" to pastor and people for this magnificent evangelistic effort through local initiative and we would add why not another Crawley somewhere else?

IT WAS my privilege recently to share with my colleague Philip Parsons, pastor of our Romsey church, in a convention in our church in St. Helier, Jersey, Channel Islands. The theme, chosen by the local minister, Bryan C. Vidamour, who is a contributor to our columns from time to time, was "Revival." We rejoiced to see decisions for Christ and some baptised in the Holy Spirit.

While speaking during this precious week of meetings, I recalled a visit I made some months ago to Loughor in South Wales, to the chapel where the Welsh Revival started. We shared in recalling that the apparent commencement of this great awakening was the prayer of a girl.

We need a real moving of God's power today. There are some very encouraging signs here and there, but our basic necessity is a deluge of Holy Ghost power. We are among those who believe that these are the days of the Latter Rain outpouring. Should we not expect, therefore, that Early Rain signs should accompany the preaching of the Word? Indeed we should and we do!

Our Jersey convention brought us face to face with the plain, undeniable fact that the Church must return to first principles if it is to know such a visitation. The primary urge, the primeval stimulus, of the Body of Christ is not so much self-ministry, though mutual fellowship and ministry are essential to spiritual growth, but the preaching of the Gospel. Unfortunately some are being side-tracked into an inward-turning, introspective self-seeking even in the realm of spiritual things. Our eyes must always be towards the regions beyond in the true Gospel sense. The mission field begins at our doorsteps—if we have unsaved loved ones it begins even in the home.

"These signs shall follow them that believe" we are assured by the Gospel. We must always remember the tremendous comment: "And they went forth, and preached everywhere, the Lord working with them, and confirming the word with signs following. Amen." (Mark 16: 20.)

Other things have their rightful places, but the going and the preaching bring the confirming!

Mzee Bull, Tanzania

After many days

THE church at Msata in Udoe country is having a business meeting. Pastor Joseph announces our decision to relieve Mzee Kabua of his position as church leader. He then asks for nominations for the position.

The church started with a handful of Wadoe believers. When I asked for a church site right in the chief's village the elders were embarrassed. Being Moslems, they had no desire for Christianity in their midst. "But," said they to one another, "how can we refuse Bwana Bulu? Did he not help so many of our people in the bad famine year?"

The chief had heard how the Wakweli tribe were receiving help and had sent me an urgent appeal. We fed the old people and children and helped the able-bodied to till their fields. "Give him the cursed ground," said one of the elders. To this they all agreed.

We built the church knowing nothing of the curse and Kabua, the oldest convert, began to oversee the church. The curse was very real. The last man who had attempted to occupy the site had been struck dead by lightning while building his house. The unpropitiated spirits were angry, the people said.

Now we are hemmed in on all sides. The chief built a house right next to us. One of his daughters has become a Christian. Her mother put into words what the people were thinking: "Bulu took the curse off," she said.

Kabua is old and, while he was selling snippets of roast meat in the market place, he was enticed into the beer shop by old cronies. "He needs advice," said Joseph.

Kabua has often given me advice. Here is some of his wisdom: "In times of scarcity you may need to go far in search of maize flour. When returning home, hide some of the food in two different places in the bush. When you arrive call your wives and their children and divide your load equally between them. Then when one wife has gone, to draw water tell the remaining one that you have kept back some extra food for her because you love her best. Take a suitable opportunity to tell the other one the same. Then they will both love you." "Will they not tell each other?" said I. "Never," he replied. I wonder why he gave me that advice. I am still learning how to manage one wife!

Many Masai now worship in the church. Their testimonies as to what Yesu has done for them are an inspiration to us all. The church chose three of them to oversee the work.

Here are two of the recent testimonies. Rebeca is on her feet. "Praise Yesu!" she says. "My cow [she named it] was lost three months ago. We searched for it for miles around without any result. Every day I prayed 'Bwana Yesu, watch over my cow and bring her home.' Yesterday she came back to me." "Praise God," say the congregation, knowing that the animal had escaped lions, wild dogs, hyenas and meat-hungry tribesmen.

Another Masai is on her feet. "Yesu Arifiwe!" she says, "I was sick. My child was sick. Two of my cows were sick. We prayed and now we are all well. Nothing is impossible with Yesu."

Ghana revisited

by Gerald L. W. Ladlow

PASTOR OF ELIM PENTECOSTAL CHURCH, SALISBURY

IT is not often that a servant of the Lord is privileged to visit an overseas mission field at the expense of a commercial concern. Not only did Swissair provide me with a free return ticket to Ghana, they also gave me V.I.P. treatment as their guest as a first-class passenger. As I travelled homeward relaxed in the comfort of the D.C.8 my mind travelled backwards over the past month. As I recalled all the events that had been crowded into those days it seemed like a dream.

My first joy was to greet our missionaries, David and Margaret Mills, and to travel to Kumasi, capital of Ashanti, and share the fellowship of their home and family. Here in the auxiliary rooms of the spacious, beautiful church at Asokwa, they conduct the Bible school of the Church of Pentecost, which is now in fellowship with the Elim Pentecostal Church. It was the beginning of a new refresher course and on my first night I attended the welcome service to the fourteen students and listened to them testify of their salvation and call to the ministry before I brought to them the message from the Word of God. I was deeply moved as some related the story of their heathen upbringing and the tremendous change that Christ had wrought in them.

One afternoon I went with Mrs. Mills to the Pentecostal secondary school, where she teaches religious knowledge, to speak to the Christian Union. There are over 100 students in residence and forty or more came to the meeting. I wish that I could portray the picture of that crowded little classroom with the shining faces of these young men and women who know the Saviour and that I could let you hear their enthusiastic singing.

Shall I ever forget the meetings in the Bompata assembly? Every night for one week the people came to hear the Word of God, many bringing their Bibles along with them. Each night at six o'clock they began to gather for prayer and by 6.45 the building was full with almost 500 people. The sound that greeted us was like that of many waters, for the people stood with hands upraised praying aloud or praising and worshipping God. When the time to preach arrived the latecomers filled every available space and were crowded around the windows and the doors. With what rapt attention they listened to the Word of God! On the final night, after I had preached the gospel, about twenty came forward seeking salvation, among them the principal of a teacher training college.

Whether in the city churches or under the palm-leaf canopies in the bush or rural towns, the response was just the same. The zeal and exuberance of these African Christians knows no bounds. In one place the people had attended a prayer meeting from 4 to 6 a.m., but at 8.30 a.m. several hundreds of them were back in their places seated on backless benches ready for the start of the convention service, which lasted until 1.45 p.m.!

Wherever we held services crowds of children gathered around to watch and listen. I have always been charmed by the friendliness and obvious cheerfulness of Ghanaian children and I was delighted to see how Mrs. Mills's vision for child evangelism is already bearing fruit. Those who have attended the Bible school have returned to their districts and commenced Sunday schools and children's meetings in accordance with the training she has given them.

At Jacobu we met for convention under a palm-leaf canopy. On Sunday morning believers from the surrounding villages made their way to this little shanty town and some 500 or more joined in our worship. Hundreds of children stood on the market stalls and tables and any other vantage point to watch the proceedings. The children from the newly formed Sunday school of the Jacobu assembly sat in the congregation and obviously enjoyed the worship of the Lord.

I really must mention the blessed communion service on the Sunday morning at the conclusion of my week of Bible study in the Kaneshie assembly in Accra. Right from the commencement of the service there was a real sense of the presence of the living Christ. In contrast to the noisy, exuberant singing with the loud clapping and shaking of the akasers experienced in the great convention services there was a solemn hush. There were periods of corporate prayer and praise, but also times of living silence occurred when the only sounds came from the neighbours' sheep and goats. The Holy Spirit ministered to us in prophetic utterance and in tongues and interpretation. As the congregation of 250 reverently filed out to receive the emblems from the ministering elders the people quietly sang words of Scripture or hummed the tune of a worship chorus. I can only describe it as a heavenly atmosphere.

I have received the following letter from a member of the Kaneshie assembly, a brother unknown to me, which I would like to share with you:

Hello, Pastor.

Mercy unto you, and peace and love be multiplied.

I thank my God that you have reached safely at home.

It is nice of my writing to you today. Since you left here for Kumasi and back to United Kingdom I have always been thinking of you and the teachings you gave us. The most remarkable of all is of your telling us that Jesus never ceased praying for me. This news has built a great interest in me, because wherever I am, I only think Jesus is praying for me. O! thank you, Pastor.

I know Jesus would allow you to come to us again.

Extend my greetings to my fellow Christians under you.

Yours in Christ,

Joseph Nyarko,

Consider your verdict

(Matthew 22 : 42)

by H. W. Greenway

"What think ye of Christ?"

THE Jesus revolution is upon us with an impact that has awakened not only the professing Church but also the sophisticated society in which we live. This is the phenomenon of our mixed-up twentieth century. Jesus is presented among the drug addicts, the charismatics, the high churchmen and the Pentecostals. He is even provided with a place on the vaudeville bandwagon to help increase the financial profit margins of commercialised religion. You can find the stickers of this new religious outcrop plastered in all kinds of places; on staid old men, for instance, and happy little kids; on business briefcases and women's handbags; in dining rooms and drawing rooms, and even in unmentionable places, with the happy advice, "Smile, Jesus loves you." A new kind of religious journalism has emerged to remind us that the young generation is "turned on to Jesus." This provides us with startling stories and vital testimonies of changed lives, of young men and women saved from misery and crime and self-destruction. All of which is an occasion for gratification.

On the credit side there is much for which to give thanks to God. Any move toward the central Figure of all history is to be encouraged, for "His teaching was unsurpassed; His character was a miracle." Of His resurrection there can be no doubt and this great fact makes Him our contemporary. The news of His victory over death exploded upon the world with a force that has sent waves of Divine proof radiating to all quarters of the earth down through the centuries of Church witness to our own day.

In all the publicity now given to this widespread upsurge of the new faith we must add a word of caution. Let us not forget that the Son of God is given a full title in the Scriptures and, while we rejoice in the wonderful name of Jesus, which, of course, is His saving name and vital in our experience, He is also the Lord Jesus Christ. When He saves us He must take His place on the throne of our hearts and have as His residence the citadel of our beings.

Christianity is both subjective and objective. Between those two experiences there is a great gulf—the gulf between the nominal and the committed Christian. It is the difference between what Jesus does for me and how far I am able to glorify Him: between an easy take-it-all religion, with its emotional euphoria and guarantee of material benefits, and the dedicated life of devotion to Him as Lord. The emphasis in the assessment of the faith of so many Christians is the blessing I receive, my salvation, my healing, my good job, my mansion in the sky. What I cannot achieve by talent or design He will give me without any effort on my part. God through Jesus becomes our heavenly Benefactor, a super spiritual Super-market with no cash registers to make claims on our meagre resources.

Peter in the first sermon of the Christian Church terminated his defence with this significant reminder: "Therefore let all the house of Israel know assuredly that God hath made that same Jesus, whom ye have crucified, both Lord and Christ" (Acts 2 : 36). Here Peter through the Holy Spirit brings His title into one: Lord, Master of our lives; Jesus, Saviour of our souls; Christ, the anointed Messiah of God. Never let us lose any facet of that scintillating title. Here is the norm of the Christian life. We must make Him Lord of every department of our lives. As someone has remarked: "He must be Lord of all, or He is not Lord at all." This will mean submerging our personalities, needs and blessings within the glorious greatness of Christ. He must be the one and only object of all our religious exercises. If we fail here we head for disillusionment, for the life of Christ in which we find our true environment is one of self-sacrifice and not self-service. Is this not the reason some easy-come believers bitterly renounce their religion as a cruel hoax when they face persecution, or suffering, or personal frustrations? Too many Christians have mistaken the kingdom of comfort for the kingdom of God.

So much that goes for Christianity in the professing Church is nothing but mercenary time-serving. Many pipe-sucking parsons in pulpits and hypochondriacs in pews are driving our puzzled generation from the churches. There is a lack of stamina that so often is to be found among worldlings as we tinker with non-essentials at the expense of the down-to-earth fundamentals we teach. C. S. Lewis in Surprised by Joy tells of his early opinions of the Church: "Though I liked clergymen as I liked bears, I had as little wish to be in church as in the zoo. It was to begin with . . . a wearisome 'get-together' affair . . . the fussy time-wasting botheration of it all! The bells, the crowds, the umbrellas, the notices, the bustle, the perpetual arranging and organising."

We so often judge the merits of a Divine service by the blessing we get out of the meeting: it may be through the type of singing, which tends more and more to be of the "with-it" mood; it may be through the stimulus of a brilliant sermon, which is too often forgotten by idle gossip ere we reach the gate outside; it may even be in the assurances that our prayers have been heard as we have drawn near to Him. All of which exercises have their virtue. Singing is good; sermons are good; prayers are good. They are good in so far as they help us to recognise the wonders of the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ and equip us for the rough-and-tumble of real life.

If we turn our eyes from Christ in our endeavours to serve Him we will slip into empty formalism. David C. K. Watson, who has had such success in his church in York, writes in My God is Real: "Much of our church life today is certainly a travesty of the teaching of Jesus Christ: full of formality, snobbery and hypocrisy; rejecting the commandments of God in favour of the traditions of men; petty minded, and often ignoring the real needs of the world. This is just what Christ said of the religious leaders of His day. To be disillusioned about these things, however, is no reason for doubting the truth and reality of Christ Himself."

We believe that Christ was sent from God to be the Saviour of the world. We believe that God was in Christ reconciling the world to Himself. As such He demands our devotion without the personal self intruding into our worship. It is when we turn the high idealism of our faith into a pleading for whatever our Lord can dish out in profits and doles that we debase the nature of Christianity. We must love and worship the Lord Jesus Christ for Himself and Himself alone and keep our eyes upon Him in every phase of our lives. Only by contemplation of His holiness and glory can we fulfil our function in the body of Christ, the Church. Thus we become the living representatives of our Master: "But we all, with open face beholding as in a glass the glory of the Lord, are changed into the same image from glory to glory, even as by the Spirit of the Lord" (2 Corinthians 3:18).

IMITATION PEOPLE

By Sheila Price

JIMMY and his parents went to London. It was Jimmy's very first visit to the city and he was very excited when the train pulled into Paddington station. He wanted very much to feed the pigeons in Trafalgar Square and he was looking forward to seeing the statues, the historic buildings and the famous landmarks.

"We will go to Madame Tussaud's first," said Jimmy's father.

"What is that, daddy?"

"It is a very famous waxworks, Jimmy."

"But what is a waxworks, daddy?"

"Well, Jimmy, inside Madame Tussaud's is a wonderful collection of men and women, people who have played important parts in history, or who have become famous in some way. These people, Jimmy, are represented in wax."

"I would love to see them, daddy," said Jimmy.

"Come along then," said Jimmy's father, and in they went.

Jimmy's eyes shone. He had never seen anything like it before. The figures looked so real and lifelike. Jimmy found it hard to believe that they were only wax models.

"Aren't they wonderful, daddy?" he said.

"They look so real, don't they?"

"Yes, they certainly do, Jimmy."

"Do you know," said Jimmy's mother, "there are some people who think and act like Christians at times, but like these waxwork models they have no life in their hearts. They do not know Jesus as their Saviour and Friend. He has promised that when we ask Him into our hearts He will give us new life, heavenly life, so that we can truly live for Him."

"I am glad I asked Jesus into my heart," said Jimmy. "I wouldn't want to be like those waxwork models!"

From T. H. Stevenson

QUITE a few well-meaning friends and relatives suggested that I should not visit N. Ireland this year. My reply has been that, knowing so many friends who live there the year round, I felt I could visit this land for a few weeks. My experiences and impressions might almost occupy a book.

There are two Irelands! I do not mean Eire and N. Ireland, or Irish Republicans and British Loyalists. There is Northern Ireland that is to the fore every day in the news media, with its continuing, seemingly increasingly confusing political and military situation, but there is another Northern Ireland little known or referred to: the active evangelical Christians who zealously witness for Christ.

As I write, the forty-fifth Worldwide Missionary Convention is being held in Bangor. Despite depleted numbers because of the situation, last year £11,388 was received for missionary societies (including Elim Missions on my recommendation to a Presbyterian friend who sought my advice!). In this same town a three-week tent crusade has just ended, attended by 1,200 on many nights. Open-air services were held at 10 p.m. on the promenade.

With Bangor Elim members, I spent several hours in Newcastle, Co. Down, a small resort of some 3,000 people, probably shared equally by Catholics and Protestants. Here "the Mountains of Mourne sweep down to the sea." However incredible it may seem, I can report that nightly several open-air meetings are conducted and on Saturday evenings five successive such services run almost continuously from 6.30 to 10.30. I heard the latter part of the first meeting and the early part of the second. Several hundred people gathered at each meeting with the ruined municipal offices in the foreground and the modern but also bomb-blasted post office as a background.

In perhaps almost the most troubled danger area of Belfast, the "peace" line between the Protestant Shankill Road and the notorious Unity Flats (defended from the flat roof by British military posts and used extensively in the flats below by snipers), members of Elim's oldest church—now housed in a lovely new building—conduct open-air services on Sunday nights.

How sincere these people are was obvious to me, for while I was preaching at the Sunday night service I could plainly hear the momentary crescendo cry of a riotous mob from the Unity Flats.

PRAYER AND PRAISE

by F. H. Coleman

JACOB had two great experiences in his life. The first was after he had obtained the family birthright and blessing. He fled from his elder brother. That night when he lay down to sleep God gave him a wonderful revelation in a dream. Jacob made a covenant with God that if He blessed him with earthly things he would give a tenth to God: most generous—ten per cent for God, ninety per cent for Jacob—and all because of God's blessing!

The second great experience was twenty years and more later. God had indeed blessed him. He had wives, children, flocks, herds and servants. Of his flocks and herds he reserved a present for Esau, who was on his way to meet him. Leaving his family, Jacob crossed the ford at Jabbok and that night a man wrestled with him. Was this a physical wrestling? I do not think so. See Hosea. The wrestling continued all night until the day began to break. The angel asked him his name. Jacob told him. He was given a new name and today we have descendants with the same name—Israel.

Jacob got more from that experience of prayer than from any other event in his life. He became a prince with power with God and man. His warlike brother was coming to meet him with an army of 400 men, but he changed his mind and met Jacob in peace. He spared his wives and children and Jacob lived to see one of his boys the great man of Egypt.

It is absolutely amazing what a night of prayer with God can do!

Riches, a fine home, earthly glory or power with God and man: I wonder what each of us who read this will desire above everything else.

CATHERINE M. NOEL.

THE beautiful abbey church of Romsey stands on ground hallowed by 1,000 years of worship. It is as dignified as any cathedral in the land and exceptionally rich in history, having associations with King Edward the Elder, son and successor of Alfred the Great (A.D. 907) and the Abbess Ethelthaeda. In the stormy days of the Reformation it was sold by Henry VIII to the parishioners for £100, which seems a very paltry amount in these days! In later days the abbey added memorials to Lord Palmerston and to Lord and Lady Mountbatten. It is a sanctuary worth visiting by those who love history, both sacred and secular, mellow stone, ancient carvings and magnificent architecture.

It is uplifting, too, when one unexpectedly comes across something appealing which touches a chord in the heart. This is what happened to me, for on a shining brass plaque I read the following inscription :

Mark 8 : 22

The above window is dedicated to the glory of God

In thankful and loving memory of Caroline Maria Noel.

Thou didst lead a " blind man "
In thine earthly days,
Led him along and gently
Shewed him light's pure rays :
Oh ! through all life's journey,
To its furthest strand,
Surely he remembered
How he clasped that hand.

Lead me now and always,
Even to the last,
Till the way is ended,
And the darkness past :

Raising my eyes above the memorial, I saw a fine stained-glass window depicting the Lord Jesus leading the blind man of whom we read in Mark's Gospel. I wondered why Caroline Noel loved this incident in the ministry of the great Healer. Was she physically blind, or did she know a long period of spiritual darkness ? I cannot tell, but it seems obvious from her poem that she came to a place of utter dependence on Christ and longed to know, as the blind man did, the clasp of the Saviour's hand.

How tender and human were the actions and approaches of Jesus. They were always motivated by love and compassion when He was dealing with the sick and the sad. We can learn much from observing His gracious ways, for to our shame so often our attempts to help and to comfort are clumsy and ineffective. The words of Mark 8 : 23 give a lovely picture of Jesus ; first His hand clasped that of the blind man and then warm, tender, vibrant with Divine life, His hands were laid on the sightless eyes and they were sightless no longer ! Here we have all the essentials of conversion, for the Lord Jesus takes us by the hand to a place apart for a personal interview with Himself. He proceeds to open our blind eyes to behold Him and to perceive His love. How tragic it would be if, because of pride, we refused to take the proffered hand of Jesus. Rather let us pray in the words of Thomas Dorsey :

Precious Lord, take my hand,
Lead me on, help me stand ;
I am tired, I am weak, I am worn ;
Through the storm, through the night,
Lead me on to the light,
Take my hand, precious Lord, lead me home.

Thinks !

by Ron Williams

PASTOR OF ELIM PENTECOSTAL CHURCH, ROCHESTER

IN my spare time, when I manage to get some, I like to enjoy my favourite hobby—oil painting. I'm no da Vinci or Rubens, but I amuse myself with a dash of colour here and there and sometimes there's more here than there.

The thing I like about painting is that nobody sees my failures. I don't mean the obvious mistakes that would make any reasonable artist cringe, but the failures nobody will ever see—those things that I've failed to transfer from my thoughts to the canvas. They'll be my secrets for ever. Even if I did want to share them I doubt if anybody would understand anyway, for who can adequately describe what they mean?

We all share that inability to express our thoughts in words, yet thought is one of the most potent agents of today. The mere suggestion that we don't look as well as we used to hardly acts as a tonic. Before the words die away we're on our way to the surgery!

A slight misunderstanding of events can give rise to innumerable suggestions that possibly we may not be getting a fair deal. Certainly of some things it can justifiably be said that "it's all in the mind," but that's about the worst place in which to have anything that's bad. You only have to accommodate a couple of unkind thoughts a little while and before you know where you are you find you've become the landlord of some pretty difficult tenants.

I mustn't give the impression that everyone is conjuring up evil deeds; the powers of thought are far more positive and wonderful. We are the products of our thoughts and I must admit that there are some wonderful people about. Solomon, that wise old man, says "As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he." It would be nerve-racking for us if people were able to read our minds; it might mean that we'd never be able to look some in the face again! We seem to overlook the fact, however, that God is able to "read the thoughts and intents of our hearts." What we can keep from our friends we're unable to keep secret from God.

It's important that we all use this God-given faculty of thought to its best advantage. Emerson puts it in a nutshell, "If you're not a thinking man, to what purpose are you a man at all?"

Are you going to forget some of those ideas you've had lately? Remember that action is a close relation of thought.

A little while ago much was said about people who made overseas trips just so that they'd be able better to explore the powers of the mind. Well, you don't have to do any such thing today; you can explore your own powers now. Why don't you think something—something good—and act on it? When you've done that you'll have seen the advantage of thinking.

Some time ago there was this Person who made something He was especially pleased with. Then along came some people and abused it. Now probably we wouldn't have felt very kindly towards them, but this Person reviewed the whole situation and thought that it was worth starting all over again. Mind you, I can't see any good reason for it, because the offenders deserved punishment.

I'm sure you know exactly what I'm getting at. This world, created for our advantage, has really been abused by man, yet God, in giving His own Son on Calvary, thought that mankind deserved another chance. This really deserves something positive on our part. Just think about it.

How do you think you could return such a kind thought?

Monday, September 11th Matthew 5 : 13-20

"Ye are the salt of the earth" (v. 13).

The duty of the disciple in the community is always to be an influence for God, preserving society and preventing pollution by his presence and by advocating what upholds purity. He must inspire others to a zeal for the things of God by a contagious zeal that penetrates and prevails—zeal to evangelise, zeal that stirs, that makes its influence felt in every stratum of society. "If the salt have lost his savour" (v. 13) it is useless when it is required most. May we be ready, responsive, refreshing.

Tuesday, September 12th Matthew 5 : 21-32

"But I say unto you" (v. 22).

The standards of Christian conduct are of a very high and extremely exacting order. God's moral law still calls for absolute obedience. Permissiveness has no place in God's plan. Murder should surely never happen, yet we become angry without cause and fail so often. Evil speaking, wrongful criticism and failure to forgive quickly are all too apparent. Moral delinquency is so evident in this our day. "Thou shalt not commit adultery" (v. 27), Christ said. "Not guilty" is your plea? The lustful eye, the secret passion for that which God prohibits, can still exist. May the Lord give us hearts that are pure and clean!

Wednesday, September 13th Matthew 5 : 33-48

"Love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them which despitefully use you" (v. 44).

Our attitude to those who hate, threaten, insult, defeat or despitefully use us is made so abundantly plain. We are to love them and to pray for them. They wish us evil, but our attitude to them should show nothing but love, nothing but good. Our love must come out of pure hearts (1 Timothy 1 : 5), hearts that have been cleansed and freely forgiven by Him who loves us. Realising His love for us, how can we refrain from loving others as we ought? Let us keep on loving. If we do not forgive others, God cannot forgive us (Matthew 6 : 15).

Thursday, September 14th Matthew 6 : 1-15

"After this manner therefore pray ye" (v. 9).

We must model our prayer lives on this pattern prayer. Beware of vain repetition. We shall not be heard for our much speaking or for our frequent asking. "What things soever ye desire, when ye pray, believe that ye receive them, and ye shall have them" (Mark 11 : 24). Having offered our petitions, we must take the answers by faith and turn our prayers into praise. Our heavenly Father knows our needs and He delights to give!

Friday, September 15th Matthew 6 : 16-23

"But thou, when thou fastest" (v. 17).

Have we as yet known the necessity of this command? Prayer is always effective, but it is even more so when it is accompanied by fasting. Fasting will not always demand our abstaining from food, but it does mean our abstaining from what is lawful, so that for the time being we can give ourselves to prayer. Fasting may mean that we abstain from luxuries so that we might have more to give to supply the needs of others for the extension of His kingdom.

Saturday, September 16th Matthew 6 : 24-34

"No man can serve two masters. . . . Ye cannot serve God and mammon" (v. 24).

"Ye cannot serve God and gold" (Twentieth Century New Testament); that is all that gold represents—position, influence, power, prestige, houses and lands. Millions today worship the golden image. Mammon is their god. How unrewarding is their worship in the light of eternal realities and values! Willing to sacrifice so many things, they pursue what they can hope to retain for only a very brief season. Multitudes worship mammon, but there are multitudes who are serving God and proving that godliness with contentment is great gain, eternal gain (v. 33). "Lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven" (v. 20).

Sunday, September 17th Matthew 7 : 1-14

"Judge not, that ye be not judged" (v. 1).

To obey this command we must not condemn our brother. "God sent not His Son into the world to condemn the world; but that the world through Him might be saved" (John 3 : 17).

Condemnation is so often linked with criticism. We must stop criticising one another. Let us not condemn others, especially when facts relative to particular situations are not fully known to us. "Why dost thou judge thy brother?" "For we shall all stand before the judgment seat of Christ." We must not judge, for we can be easily mistaken.

Post-mortem kindness cannot cheer a burdened soul.

The Bible is a masterpiece of literature, but we should always remember that the Bible's primary appeal is not to literary men but to sinful men, not to our poetic sensibilities but to our guilty consciences, not to our intellectual curiosity but to our lost souls.

Jesus Christ—our Lord!

by Hugh Sawyer

"THE fool hath said in his heart, There is no God," declares the psalmist David writing under the inspiration of the Holy Spirit (Psalm 14:1). To accept this diabolical denial is to cast into the mystic realms of mythology not only our heavenly Father but also the very existence of Christ Jesus His Son and of the Holy Spirit, thus sealing for ever the hopeless, ultimate fate of mankind. Without a redeeming Saviour sinful man is condemned to a lost eternity!

To overcome such Satanic suggestions and despondency and the apparent tomb of despair occasioned thereby, this same Almighty God by His Spirit has blazoned forth to mankind an inspirational tome of Divine revelation, the Holy Bible, the undeniable Word of God! For the edification of mankind it is guide, companion, counsellor and friend.

This same Bible will flourish until the end of time, despite the fact that down the ages the forces of evil have unsuccessfully sought to destroy it. What God gives neither man nor devil can take away!

The very first words in the opening chapter of this mighty work are in themselves a Divine revelation: "In the beginning God." This immediately contradicts the Satanic contention that there is no God!

John places on record: "In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God and the Word was God" (John 1:1). The Word is a Person—Christ, the second Member of the Trinity. Thus is established the reality and true identification of Jesus, the Christ of God. His own declaration "I and My Father are one" (John 10:30) consolidates His position and authority.

He also reveals the fact that before the world was He was; He claims, "Before Abraham was, I am" (John 8:58). He rightly takes upon Himself the name of His Father who commanded Moses to tell his unruly people, when they demanded the name of their God, to say "I am that I am" and "I am hath sent Me unto you" (Exodus 3:14).

To further His claim to immortality and to prove His pre-existence in the heavenly splendour aeons of time before His advent to earth to become the Saviour of mankind, He declares, "I beheld Satan as lightning fall from heaven" (Luke 10:18).

John further enlightens us regarding Christ's advent to earth when he writes, "And the Word was made flesh . . . (and we beheld His glory, the glory as of the only begotten of the Father) full of grace and truth" (John 1:14).

As a child of twelve Jesus distinguished Himself by confounding the learned doctors in the temple with His knowledge and wisdom. When confronted by His parents who sought Him there, He gave further proof of His Divine origin, by reminding Mary, His mother, "Wist ye not that I must be about My Father's business?" (Luke 2:47-49).

When His cousin, John the Baptist, was baptising in the River Jordan, Jesus having been through the waters was praying, when suddenly the heavens opened and the Holy Spirit in form like a dove lighted on Him and God, speaking from heaven, cried, "Thou art My beloved Son; in Thee I am well pleased" (Luke 3:23).

On the Mount of Transfiguration, during the night in which His three companions slept heavily, they awoke to see Jesus, transfigured in all His glory, in deep conversation with Moses and Elias and again that voice from the overshadowing cloud spoke: "This is My beloved Son: hear Him" (Luke 9:28, 35).

On that tragic day when Jesus hung in agony upon that cross between two thieves He promised the one who repented, "This day shalt thou be with Me in paradise."

Jesus gave many other signs before and after His death, but they are not recorded in the Bible. What is written therein is for our edification and for engraving firmly on our hearts the factual evidence that Jesus is indeed the Christ, the beloved Son of God.

Fully believing, we receive the gift of eternal life through His name and the everlasting joy of sweet communion with Him who has placed upon record that immortal declaration, "I am He that liveth, and was dead; and, behold, I am alive for evermore" (Revelation 1:18).

Proclaiming the Truths of Pentecost

The letter to the Romans

By J. Alexander Wright

7. The effects of justification

FROM the means of justification (3 : 27—4 : 25) we pass to the effects (4 : 25—5 : 11). "Being justified" (5 : 1) means not only "acquitted" in a legal sense, i.e. "counted righteous," but actually made righteous (see 3 : 21). Sometimes the meaning of the word justification is offered in a play upon it: "just as if I'd never sinned." The writer feels that this is fictitious rather than factual, even though it may pertain only to our "legal" standing before God. In actual Christian experience it cannot be. What is done in this sense cannot be undone. Holy we may be, as holy as He (1 Peter 1 : 16); innocent we cannot be.

*Wounds of the soul, though healed, will ache,
The reddening scars remain
And make confession.*

Lost innocence returns no more ;

We are not what we were before transgression.

Of this justifying faith Dr. Vincent Taylor writes: "It is not fictitious, arbitrary, passive or meritorious, but real, active, ethical and binding, i.e. what God requires and makes possible. It is the Divine activity in which God gives effect to His redeeming work in Christ by making possible that righteous mind necessary to communion with Himself" (forgiveness and reconciliation). Ponder this: "justified by faith"—faith is the channel, grace is the spring (3 : 24), the blood is the ground (5 : 9), and the resurrection is the proof (4 : 25). Justification is the initial stage in God's dealings with men for their redemption. It makes possible the entrance to the experience of salvation in its fullest sense. In the hour that the sinner exercises faith he is "righteous," not in moral attainment as yet, but in spirit and in promise. His righteousness is real, though immature.

Now follow the seven blessings of justification: peace, access, joy, patience, experience, hope and love.

"Peace with God" (5 : 1) is the first great blessing of the justified: a new relationship, since before this we were enemies (v. 10); peace of mind, heart and conscience. "We have peace"; the Authorised Version is in the passive mood. The Revised Version and others render it in the imperative: "Let us have peace." Since we have peace with God "let us enjoy" the peace of God (Moffatt). Let no doubts interpose. In the Old Testament the peace offering was to be eaten, as far as possible, on the day that it was sacrificed, or on the next at the latest, but not on the third (Leviticus 7 : 15). There was to be no interval between the remission of sin (the sin offering) and the enjoyment thereof (the peace offering). Here are privilege and duty.

"Access into this grace" (v. 2): admission to the Christian's Canaan, the promised land of grace, is granted. "This grace," this unmerited favour, refers to justification. From this new standing the Christian makes his threefold boast: "rejoice" (v. 2); "glory" (v. 3) and "joy" (v. 11); all stem from the same word in 3 : 27. "Boasting excluded, pride [of that kind] I abase," but of these we may boast all the day long (Psalm 44 : 8). The Revised Version and others render them imperatively "let us rejoice," "let us glory," "let us joy." We "rejoice in hope of sharing the glory of God" (A.R.V.). That which we missed (3 : 23) now becomes the shining prospect—and what is this but ultimate Christlikeness? The Hebrew longed and prayed for the return of the Shekinah, the visible glory of God; Paul says that this is the great Christian hope: "the appearing of the great God and our Saviour" (Titus 2 : 13). We are called to the obtaining of it (2 Thessalonians 2 : 14). This will consummate our great salvation. S

Pastor : D. O. Ward

It is good to report continued blessing. At a recent baptismal service—the third this year—among the five who gave testimony before immersion was Mr. Joseph Fenton, aged eighty-seven. Saved in the old railway mission hall, Bath, on September 11th, 1922, then an Elim member and one-time deacon, our esteemed brother wished at last to obey the Lord in water baptism.

Next, in contrast, came a young husband and wife, who prior to baptism requested our pastor to dedicate their infant daughter.

Another candidate recently saved came from Trowbridge, fourteen miles away.

Last was a young man who had been brought up through the Sunday school and of godly Elim parents and who recently gave his heart to the Lord.

The climax of the service came when three decisions were made during Pastor Ward's closing appeal.

While on holiday at the Elim youth camp, Fraisthorpe, Bridlington, our youngest daughter, Sarah, aged four, was taken ill. We took her to the hospital, but the doctor was unable to find anything really wrong except a slight sore throat. He prescribed some medicine for her and we went back to camp. By 5.30 p.m. her temperature was 106° F. and she was unconscious. The camp "commie," Pastor D. G. Woodfield, gathered a few of the camp staff together and they laid hands on her and prayed. We called the doctor. He arrived in ten minutes and he said, "Hospital immediately—perhaps virus meningitis!"

We arrived at the hospital at 6.55 p.m. Her temperature was taken by two nurses with two separate thermometers, which read 97° F. Praise the Lord! They did a lumbar puncture and several other tests. The doctor still said that it was virus meningitis. We visited Sarah the next day and she was sitting up in bed feeling fine and wanting to come home. She was kept in hospital until all the necessary tests were done. They all proved to be negative. No medical treatment whatsoever was given. Doctors and nurses were baffled. We give all the praise and glory to our blessed Saviour, who did the work before we left the camp!

Our children's open-air meetings started only last year. One member of the team became so burdened for the children who never went to Sunday school that she sought the help of our pastor. A team was formed, a few choruses were learned on the accordion and we went out. A guitarist and a trumpeter soon joined the team.

We start in May, holding two meetings each week. In the summer holidays two more are held each week. It is a joy to see children of all ages running from their homes to join us. Often when we visit an estate for the first time we find that many of the children know very little about the Word of God. It is not unusual for a child to say "Who is Jesus?" After one meeting a boy of eleven asked "Can Jesus save me? You see I am a Jew. Did Jesus die for me too?"

We have between twenty and sixty children at each meeting. Many have come to know the Lord Jesus. Last winter we brought fifty of the children to the church and we had a great time telling them more about their wonderful Friend, the Lord Jesus Christ.

We hope to do the same this year.

MACCLESFIELD

Pastor : D. Beresford

The church was packed for the induction of our new minister, Pastor David Beresford. Pastor F. J. Day, the district superintendent, convened and gave the charge to the minister. Pastor D. S. Williams gave the charge to the church. Pastor Michael Epton opened in prayer. Choruses were conducted by Mr. John L. Bradley (Shrewsbury). The new minister's father, Pastor Stanley Beresford, preached a brief message. Rev. Ralph Dale (Methodist) and Rev. Jim Grimshaw (Bethany Fellowship) expressed a welcome on behalf of Macclesfield Evangelical Council.

For nineteen weeks the church was without a pastor. Presentations were made to Mr. and Mrs. G. Clowes for their work during this period. A bouquet was presented to the new minister's wife by Rachel Cliffe. Pastor and Mrs. Beresford's two small girls were present along with the pastor's mother and other relatives. A telegram from Pastor and Mrs. J. Glass was read. The seven ministers on the platform laid hands on the new minister and committed him to the Lord. Pastor J. Harrison (Assemblies of God) closed the service in prayer.

A fellowship tea was held next day. Various departments of the church took part. John Wright played the guitar and Julie Tomkinson was the soloist. The minister and his wife gave their testimonies. A telegram from a former minister, Pastor R. Hughes, was read.

The Sunday services were well attended. The weekend events were greatly appreciated by all and the warm welcome made the new pastor feel already at home and among friends.

GOD'S MEASURE OF BLESSING

Malachi 3 : 1-11 ; Luke 6 : 38

By Ian Davis

FORMER MINISTER OF OUR CHURCHES AT PARKSTONE AND WIMBORNE, NOW IN AUSTRALIA

IS it the will of God for His people to have material prosperity in this world? Does it line up with His plan for them to have large possessions of this world's goods? Is it right for God's servants to be kept poor or for God's work to be a begging institution?

These have long been controversial questions. Some teach that poverty is a blessing. They point out that the disciples who followed Jesus were poor, that they did not even have the money to pay the simple tax demanded by Caesar.

Many of the great saints of this age have suffered poverty and hardship. People often contend that God's blessing has been on the poor rather than on the rich, that poverty is often the key to humility. Many Old Testament characters served the Lord faithfully until they achieved prosperity, then they failed God.

It is true that riches have often resulted in people becoming proud and arrogant, but it is common knowledge that the poor can be just as deficient in their characters as the rich. Out of poverty have arisen many great men, but there have been many great men of wealth also, such as Abraham.

It has never yet been proved that poverty and wealth in themselves are the final answer to the problem of developing Christian character. The Bible teaches that the right use of wealth is of the utmost importance, however. Much has been said and written about tithing being the key to prosperity. The teaching of tithing is sound and Scriptural, but even though we know this we can still stop short of the full answer to Christian prosperity. Christ plainly gives the master-key to material and spiritual blessings, although He spoke many times against covetousness, which is a desire for wealth for the sake of having it. Christ never said that Christians should avoid material possessions, or that they should seek poverty for poverty's sake. What He did say was that we should seek first the kingdom of God and His righteousness and all these things shall be added unto us. The more you put God and His work first and the more you use your material possessions to further His kingdom the more the Lord will add to you, so that you may further His work in a greater way.

The teaching of Christ is that if a man truly seeks the kingdom of God first he need not be anxious about the material things of life. John expressed God's wish for His people in his last epistle, "Beloved, I wish above all things that thou mayest prosper and be in health, even as thy soul prospers."

God has a plan whereby His work shall be prosperous and never poverty-stricken and whereby His people will always be prosperous, but because God's people, through their own selfishness and lack of faith to trust God's promise, have robbed God by not being faithful to His plan, God's work has been hindered, revival blessings have been withheld and the people of God have not prospered but have suffered leanness of soul. God's people have cried for revival, but because they have not been faithful to this plan of God the revival has been withheld.

We cannot have plainer statements to prove this than Malachi 3 : 8 and Luke 6 : 38. God's Word exhorts us to give before we can receive. Jesus said, "Give and it shall be given unto you." God's programme is continually being stifled and the showers of blessing are withheld because of selfish, greedy believers who have not yet learned the joy of giving to God. One of the hardest things in this selfish world is to learn how to give. Giving cuts right across our old nature and reaches its very core, yet the Scriptures teach that our failure to learn this great lesson leads to impoverishment and leanness of soul. We often tell the sinner that he is robbing God by failing to hand over his life, which really belongs to God, but the Christian is often just as guilty of robbing God through withholding his tithes and using them for his own purposes and failing to give as God has commanded—then he wonders why there is no real blessing! Malachi 3 : 8 is the truth that will set him free.

The world in which we live is fast slipping over the brink of hell while believers are pleasing themselves instead of pleasing God and trying to enjoy their own selfishness rather than aiming for the joys of rich and abundant blessing from the presence of God. Luke 6 : 38 teaches that when we give in measure God gives back an abundant measure, but if our measure toward God is only small we can expect only small blessing in return. God uses the same measure toward us, except that He gives back more than we give to Him.

A poor widow gave Elijah all that she possessed, but as she gave so she received in abundance and became prosperous as she had never been before—"good measure, pressed down, shaken together and running over."

Moses possessed an old rod which he used to look after his father-in-law's sheep. God said "Give it to Me, Moses!" When he did it became a rod of authority and through it signs and wonders were wrought. Because God's people are failing to give what God demands, the signs and wonders are withheld. We see a small measure of blessing, a few healings maybe, one or two converts here and there, an occasional filling with the Holy Ghost, but then we are using only a small measure toward God.

A little boy gave his loaves and fishes to Christ. He handed over his last bit of food. He gave all he had, but what was the result? Five thousand souls had their hunger satisfied as well as he and twelve baskets were filled to overflowing.

One Sunday a widow went to church as usual. As she was about to give her usual offering the Lord began to speak to her from Luke 6 : 38. Suddenly she opened her handbag and gave every penny she possessed. She did not know how she would live during the following week, but she said, "Lord, I have obeyed your Word even if I die." On the Monday morning in the post there was a letter. When she opened it there was exactly twice as much money as she had given to God.

My wife's mother testifies that in the days when if one had a shilling one felt rich she was in church on Sunday morning with just ninepence (old currency) in her bag and this had to last her the week out. God spoke to her and said, "Give and it shall be given unto you," so she gave every penny. On the Monday morning following the gas man came to empty the meter and gave her back her rebate—it was exactly one shilling and sixpence, twice as much as she had given to the Lord the day before.

A man dedicated £2 to the Lord. He said, "Lord, please let this £2 grow. I am going to use it to profit with and of every bit of profit I make with it half will go to your work." That £2 led that man into a prosperous business and faithfully he still gave half his profits to God's work. He was an instrument in the hands of God and he himself enjoyed rich blessings from the Lord. One time he confessed that he became careless about his giving. His business began to suffer and he got into a state of spiritual barrenness and meantime God's work was suffering.

In the work of God we often get perplexed over ways and means to meet the financial demands, but if all God's people were giving to God as they should and tithing honestly without robbing God the work of God would prosper in every way as well as each individual, for this is God's way.

SONGS IN SUSSEX BY THE SEA !

HOLIDAY crowds in their hundreds stopped, listened and remained throughout the sixty minutes of musical presentation by the London Crusader Choir during its summer visit to Eastbourne. By kind permission of the corporation the choir was privileged to present the Gospel in song at the famous Wish Tower. The programme was directed by Pastors J. Lancaster, E. R. Gaudion and D. B. Gray, each of whom interspersed the items of music and song with personal witness. A few yards along the promenade one of Her Majesty's bands played "Amazing grace" and hundreds at the Elim open-air, led by the London Crusader Choir, sang the same great song of personal testimony. People left their palatial flats to investigate the reason for such a gathering and some remained throughout and were present again in the local Elim church at the evening service, which was conducted by Pastor J. Lancaster.

Two weeks later the choir visited Brighton and was warmly welcomed by Pastor F. A. Hodge. Holiday-makers from many parts shared two fine meetings held in this historic Elim church in The Lanes, an area of world-wide historic interest. The stirring renditions by the choir, directed by Pastor Douglas B. Gray, caused many holiday-makers and passers-by to halt and fill the entrances.

From heathen home to Christian ministry

The following testimony was given by Pastor David D. Tye at the welcome service for the students of the third refresher course, conducted by our missionary, Pastor David Mills, at Kumasi, Ghana.

I WAS born on October 23rd, 1938, in a small town in the Greater Accra Region of Ghana called Old Ningo, where the inhabitants worship idols. My parents and all my family were idol worshippers, who did not know anything about God. I was sent to school, where we learned the Christian religion, but it meant nothing to me because my father had taught us that our idols were our gods. All my family believed that the idols were our gods and that they were taking care of us. My father, who was the fetish priest, used to speak to them by knocking on the ground with a certain stone and then there would be a voice "Fee-fee-fee," indicating that the idols were talking. When I came home from school I told him about what we had learned in the Bible concerning God, but his only answer was that he sent me to school to learn, not to worship God, for he had gods himself.

In 1953 I travelled to Asuom with my mother for the memorial service of a late relative who was a Christian. During the service the pastor preached about salvation, which struck me, but because of my father's gods I felt that I didn't need any God again. The pastor said that he was going to make a god which could talk in the hearing of the congregation. To my surprise, he plucked some of the palm branches from the canopy under which the congregation had met, folded them, put them on the table, and started knocking the table. The noise started: "Fee-fee-fee," just as with my father's gods. After that he took something from his mouth and showed it to the congregation; it was nothing but broken parts of a calabash tied in some way that, when put under the tongue, breathing in and out started to make the noise. When the pastor explained this and I saw the trick I knew completely that my father had been deceiving us. I gave myself to God as my Saviour.

My mother did not allow me to be baptised for fear of my father. I started believing in God and praying that He would reveal Himself to my father. After the holidays I went back to my station to continue my education. When I came back on Christmas holidays I was told that my father was converted and baptised, together with all my sisters and my brother. All the idols had been destroyed. I became very happy. I went to the pastor in the town and eventually I was baptised with the Christian name of David.

That was in 1956, I completed my education in 1960. As my father is a farmer I helped him on the farm for one year. Then in 1962 I left for the new town of Tema in search of a job. I was employed in Tema Ghana Cold Stores as a refrigeration machine attendant on a fine salary until 1968, when I was awarded a scholarship to go to Denmark for further studies in refrigeration.

During this same year I had a call into the ministry and all this became a problem to me. What should I do? Within me I felt God's call to go and do His work, but I was thinking of losing the chance of going to Denmark. I asked my wife, whom I had married in 1965 (I had one son by her), about her mind on my problem. She advised me not to go into the ministry because there is not much pay. As she is my wife, I obeyed her advice and decided not to enter the ministry, but some days later she called me in the night and told me that she had had a vision. God had told her that if she had power to prevent me from doing His work on earth He would call me to work for Him in heaven.

The vision was so plain to her that she begged me to resign and enter the ministry rather than go to Denmark and lose my life so young.

In September 1968 I resigned my work and in October 1968 I was posted to the church at Sege, my present station, where I live happily with my wife and children as overseer.

James Salter speaking at the Jubilee Conference in Ireland in 1965.

The home call of another great Pentecostal pioneer

By James T. Bradley
SECRETARY-GENERAL

The victory of the funeral service at Bedford Pentecostal Church will long be remembered, as will be the tributes paid to our brother by those who had laboured with him and who knew him so well. As was well said by Pastor Eric C. Dando, of the Assemblies of God, quoting the Scripture reference about Barnabas: "He was a good man and full of the Holy Ghost."

THE name of James Salter will go down in Pentecostal history, with that of W. F. P. Burton, as co-founder of that great missionary enterprise the Congo Evangelistic Mission, now known as Zaire Evangelistic Mission. Hundreds of thousands of Congolese bless the day when brothers Salter and Burton obeyed God's call to pioneer Pentecost in Congo.

It was a very different, unsophisticated Congo in 1915. Today it has modern transport facilities and communications. Foot-slogging, bicycles and porters were then the normal means of transport and luggage conveyance.

Mr. Salter was one of the notable band of Pentecostal pioneers that included George and Stephen Jeffreys. Many of Elim's early missionaries, as well as some who are in Africa today, were enabled to enter Congo through his influence.

The stability of the work pioneered by brothers Salter and Burton may be gauged by the 1,000 and more C.E.M. churches established up to 1954. The fierce internecine struggles consequent upon the declaration of Congo's independence put those infant churches to great trials, but by God's grace today more than 2,000 Z.E.M. churches, with a membership of over 120,000 believers, bear testimony to the work of James Salter and his colleagues.

We remember brother Salter's ministry in our churches and at our annual conference in Northern Ireland in 1965. The writer recalls a visit Mr. Salter paid to Halifax during the war. A group of soldiers had been brought into our gospel service by our workers. Mr. Salter preached with his usual humour and pathos. Then he made the appeal. As men streamed to the front of the church one could not help but feel that James Salter was always the missionary, whether in Congo, Yorkshire or wherever he was.

In 1919 J. Salter married Alice, the daughter of Smith Wigglesworth. She predeceased him by eight years.

Another great Pentecostal pioneer has gone home.

AM I MY BROTHER'S KEEPER ?

THIS indignant question was flung back at the Almighty by the sullen, irate Cain of long ago. Undoubtedly his guilty conscience drove him along this line of non-responsibility in an effort towards self-defence. He knew his responsibility in this matter only too well, for was he not the one accountable for the lifeless corpse that had been his brother ?

Everyone holds some responsibility towards his fellow men because "no man liveth unto himself," but the greatest responsibility of all rests upon the shoulders of born-again Christians. Multitudes around us stand in danger of eternal death while we hold the secret of life from the dead. In the great day of reckoning it will be pointless to pose the homicide's defensive query or to try to hide behind the flimsy veil of non-responsibility. We are called to be witnesses. We are designated as labourers. We are entrusted with the faith. We are declared to be "the light of the world" and our duty is to disciple men to Christ.

In the cold reality of these facts we must all retain our evangelistic vision and so we bring before you our annual EVANGELISTIC SUNDAY, October 8th, when we invite all our readers to enter into particular intercession for souls, to give to the annual thankoffering and to work to win men for the Master.

IT was a great pleasure to have the fellowship and ministry of Neville Ally, from Georgetown, Guyana, during his recent six-week visit. At the same time David J. Ayling, pastor of Ulster Temple, Belfast, toured our work in Guyana and shared fellowship with the MacInnes family and their splendid co-workers, of whom brother Ally is one.

He was able to spend some time with us at our headquarters and we found the exchange of views mutually helpful.

One aspect of our discussion brought clearly to our minds that the problems facing the countries of the world are truly global. Mr. Ally outlined some of the challenges facing Guyana. We were able to tell him that we are challenged by the same things in principle.

Such contacts are invaluable. The Elim Missionary Society conference held at Elim Bible College served to reinforce this. Pastor Henry Joseph from India has also been able to share with us in fellowship and discussion.

We greatly value the increasing number of such delightful meetings, whether on the part of such brethren as Percy S. Brewster in his capacity as secretary of the World Pentecostal Conference, or of men like Mr. Ally and Pastor Joseph who come here. The field is the world and we welcome every opportunity to increase our knowledge and the circle of personal sharing with our colleagues from other countries.

Our official organ has been printed by Letchworth Printers Ltd., of Letchworth, Herts, for some years. Their premises are next door to our church in this lovely town, some thirty-five miles north of London, the very first garden city.

A take-over bid for Letchworth Printers Ltd. has proved to be successful and they ceased all printing yesterday. We would like to place on record our sincere thanks to the managing director, Mr. Leslie Bichener, and to all his staff for their splendid co-operation and help over the years. We shall miss them.

At extremely short notice we have been able to arrange for our own press, Grenehurst Press, to take over printing and production of the "Evangel" as from the next issue. We covet your prayers and your interest in this new, important extension in the work of our press, which is managed by Pastor Gordon A. Wright.

Saints in prison

By F. H. Coleman

PASTOR OF ELIM PENTECOSTAL CHURCH,
FINSBURY PARK, LONDON
SECRETARY, BRITISH PENTECOSTAL FELLOWSHIP

MANY people have little or no idea of what the inside of a prison is like, or of what goes on there day after day. All the same the very word "prison" conjures up mental pictures of such institutions. The thought of having to live there for months and years makes a chill go down one's spine.

To have a friend or loved one committed to prison would bring a blush of shame to most people's faces, for we rightly associate incarceration with offences against the society in which we live, yet we feel no shame when a Christian is imprisoned for his or her faith in Jesus Christ. All over the world hundreds, even thousands, are suffering unjustly because the regime under which they live has renounced the Christian faith. Those who believe and practise the Christian faith are in danger of physical suffering, which includes being shut away from loved ones and fellow saints.

What should our attitude be towards those who suffer such a fate? The answer is that we must show love, compassion and sympathy for a man's conscience in this matter. Peter, when he was brought before the religious leaders of his day and accused of disobeying their orders not to preach the name of Jesus, said "We should obey God rather than man." Later that same Peter found himself in prison. We rejoice that he was so wonderfully set free and that by an angel from heaven. Then the very king who had committed Peter to prison was himself smitten by God and died of an awful disease. We feel no sense of shame that Peter was in prison, but secretly in our hearts we are glad, for it afforded an opportunity for God to demonstrate His power on Peter's behalf.

John Bunyan's Pilgrim's Progress and the concordance by Alexander Cruden were products of men who suffered imprisonment for their faith in Jesus Christ as Saviour and Lord. Are we ashamed of these men or of the books they wrote and produced in prison? The thought of shame never enters our heads as we think of Pilgrim on his journey to the Glory Land, or are helped by Cruden's Concordance.

Our spirits are made glad when we read of the things that happened to John Bunyan in the jail in Bedford. He was a model prisoner and was often let out on Sundays to meet his fellow believers and to worship with them. He never failed to keep his promise to return by sunset. How surprised was his jailer one Sunday morning to be told by his prisoner he was staying in that day. How flabbergasted was that same jailer when the authorities suddenly decided to inspect the prison on a Sunday of all days. Had Bunyan been found to be missing we dread to think of the fate which would have awaited him.

Saints in prison, there because of their faith, and for doing what they believed God would have them to do—we salute them and above all pray for them that God will sustain them even as the great apostle to the Gentiles was sustained when he spent his long sojourn in prison, whether a dungeon or a hired house.

Essentials

By Paul R. Newberry

Paul R. Newberry was born in Southampton in 1942, brought up under the ministry of W. F. Shearing in the Millbrook Pentecostal Church, Southampton, born again on October 28th, 1950, trained as a commercial artist and calligrapher prior to call to the ministry under youth evangelist Tony Stone, worked as assistant to Tony Stone in youth crusades around the country, entered Kenley Bible School in 1960 for two years and was greatly helped by the principal, Donald Gee. Went from Bible school to Calvary Temple, Birmingham, as assistant minister to F. C. Weaver for four very happy years. Called in May 1967 to the pastorate of Sharon Church, Moston, Manchester, where God's call has been fulfilled in constant increase. District council youth secretary in south Lancashire for Assemblies of God. Entering fourth year of service on the National Youth Council of A.O.G.

I STOOD on a small spectators' gallery looking down into a brand-new gymnasium, completely fitted out and only waiting to be used. The pastor standing with me was obviously delighted with this addition to his building, with its changing rooms and coffee lounge. I had been reading a little treasure of a book by Frederick Wood entitled The Question of Worldliness. The gist of his comments on Jeremiah 2:13, "My people . . . have forsaken Me, the fountain of living waters, and have hewed out for themselves cisterns, broken cisterns, that can hold no water," flashed into my mind. This is what he had written: "The world's pleasures are the Devil's counterfeit for God's provision. The joy of God is the antidote, the corrective, the counter-attraction to all worldliness. It is the expulsive power of a new affection."

My acquaintance was of the evangelical position, if not of Pentecostal persuasion. He was what is popularly known as an evangelical believer. The obvious conclusion is that it is not sufficient merely to believe the Word. It must be believed to the full extent so that it is preached as the Divine answer, alone and unadulterated. It needs no additions in order to "get it over." It is this truth in Christ Jesus that the Holy Spirit uses to attract, to quicken, to regenerate, to convert and to keep. That all this has been said before is true—it is whether it is really believed that is the point at issue!

The begging from the world of every type of attraction and method would seem to indicate that faith in the Spirit and the Word is at a premium. Perhaps we do not quite believe that the truth will make men free. Is the Gospel really the "power of God unto salvation"? The quote from Frederick Wood does bear being thought through, for there is a present evangelicalism that sails perilously near the wind of what he called "the world's pleasures." It is an almost humanistic evangelicalism, where lip service to the truth is belied by a strange reluctance to preach that truth as from God! Somewhere essentials have been dragged into an affair with incidentals. An amazing family of concerts, stars, groups, organisations, societies, songs and festivals for almost every possible cause has been produced. To say the least, it is foreign to essential, primitive Christianity.

Perhaps the most disturbing feature in this example is the emphasis on programme at the expense of preacher. It might be unkindly hinted that preachers have some vested interest here. That, sadly, completely misses the vital point. R. B. Kuiper makes that point quite forcefully when he says in his book God-centred Evangelism, "It is a matter of supreme importance to maintain that the Word of God is the one and only indispensable means by which the Holy Spirit works faith in the hearts of men." Cleverly sidestepping this utter essential by talking of the Word being, for example, sung is not good enough. Romans 10:13-17 and 1 Corinthians chapters 1 and 2 make the place of the "sent" preacher of the Word truly assured. The rejection of preacher and message follows a well-worn path, the lessons of which we never seem to learn. Indeed, often now in "Christian" rallies there is no reading or preaching of the Scriptures at all.

The Word of the Lord, its power and its preaching have been the essential elements in revivals of true religion. An evaluation of what is essential and of what is non-essential in the work of the Church is now of turning-point importance. Do we have much that, if viewed against the background of Christian warfare, is really non-essential? Should we subject our activities, even our meetings, to closer Scriptural scrutiny? How much of the work can only be presented as optional, therefore non-essential? Is the authority of the local church impaired when its obligatory ministries become mixed with its optional functions? Perhaps the greatest and most unrecognised danger is that, because of such a mixture, the devotional and doctrinal obligations of the Christian are looked upon in the same way as are those activities that are not strictly necessary—thus the church meeting for prayer or reading of the Word or the breaking of the bread is attended “when we feel like it” as something merely optional. Such ought not to be! A feature of the Laodicean Church was its riches and increase in all save what really mattered.

Charles Haddon Spurgeon, lecturing to his students on “The need of decision for truth,” said: “If we had been entrusted with the making of the Gospel we might have altered it to suit the taste of this modern century, but never having been employed to originate the good news but merely to repeat it, we dare not stir beyond the record.” That is even more important now than when C.H.S. first said it. The evangel-altering wolves have donned evangelical sheepskins! Sadly, great moves of God have declined, again and again, when essentials have become blurred. More disturbing for us now is the blatant promotion of non-essentials as the essence of evangelical truth. May I quote Walter Chantry: “Some will immediately retreat behind the convenient shield of relativism. The excuse ‘it’s only a matter of emphasis’ will be used to escape a serious self-examination in the light of God’s Word. But the ensuing contrasts between Christ’s Gospel and today’s ‘popularised’ gospel are crucial, not peripheral. In these contrasting messages may lie the difference between life and death for a soul, between vitality and sterility for a church” (Today’s Gospel: Authentic or Synthetic? p. 16).

“Of what should the tree be pruned?” cannot be accurately answered, for it comes to the dilemma from the wrong direction. “What is essential?” is better. When new life grips the tree in the spring the old and dead remains that have clung on through a cold winter drop off! A fresh outpouring of the Holy Spirit will deal wonderfully with non-essentials. The true life of God will shake out the blight of humanism with a vengeance and it is the spirit of humanism that presents the greatest challenge to the true Church.

Which essential truths must we seek a new anointing upon? Surely we should stand as firmly as ever for the supernatural revelation and operation of the Gospel of grace. Salvation cannot be earned or learned! Such a gracious offer of mercy should be preached as Barry Benney said Whitefield preached it, with an “open hand.” It will be an amazing contrast to the “you must do this” gospel in any event and will, in the words of Joseph Parker, “throw people upon the mercy of God.”

A full-orbed presentation of the work of the Holy Spirit is vital. The Church is dependent upon Him. The Church must trust Him to anoint Word and preacher, to open the hearts of the hearers, convict, quicken, regenerate, sanctify and keep! If there is a loss of trust in the Holy Spirit’s work the door is opened wide to selfish and carnal endeavours, doomed to utter failure! The Baptism and Gifts of the Holy Spirit, the Divine equipment for the local church’s Divine ministry, must be received and operated continually by faith.

An acceptance of the God-given gifts of ministry as laid out in Ephesians 4 is of tremendous importance in these times of “stars” and of business-efficiency experts. The minister must realise afresh that his vocation is given of Christ to the Church. He is a servant!

The devotions of the Christ life, both in the individual and in the Church, must be maintained. The passion of prayer and the study of the Word are both completely essential. The developing of the life of holiness by a willingness for the Spirit to produce His fruit in us as we abide in Christ, the worship and witness of the Lord’s Table and baptism by immersion in water are not capable of being laid aside in the cause of evangelical unity. We must be careful of accommodating gentlemen’s agreements not to preach truth. If truth is essential there is an end to the matter!

The person of Christ must be Scripturally upheld. He is not “the latest thing.” Let such a blasphemous notion perish! To believers He is precious! The crown of Deity must ever be upon His brow. The full acceptance and sufficiency of His atonement is the heart of the Gospel. Humanism, even evangelical humanism, will tie men to the earth. Let it be preached that Christ Jesus is coming again, literally. This is the hope of the Church—the essential hope!

"Is there anything too hard for me?"

Jeremiah 32 : 27

By Leon C. Quest

WE often take this promise out of its context, believing and applying it in times of great difficulties, but the promise was given particularly to Jeremiah, the prophet of inconsolable grief. It was a prophetic promise.

The priestly prophet

One of the grandest men of Old Testament history is Jeremiah, the son of Hilkiah, a priest who became a prophet. From the priestly town of Anathoth, he was called and equipped for a God-appointed task (Jeremiah 1 : 7-9). His sufferings and persecution were tremendous. Tradition has it that he was stoned to death in Egypt by his own people, the Jews. He prophesied in days of national apostasy and international strife over a period of forty-five to fifty years.

The promise and its contents

Jeremiah was put into prison by Zedekiah the king because of his prophetic words (Jeremiah 32 : 1-5). The king of Babylon's army had surrounded and besieged Jerusalem. Escape was impossible and captivity was sure, but this did not silence the prophet. He knew that whatever happened it would not stop God's judgment.

While in prison Jeremiah bought a parcel of ground known as Hanameel's field. This lay in the priestly land of Anathoth in the land of Benjamin, where he had been born and bred. Who would purchase any property or land at such an hour as that (Jeremiah 32 : 6-15) ?

In prison, in the presence of Baruch, his secretary, Hanameel, his cousin, and other witnesses, the land was bought and paid for, the deeds were signed and sealed and put into an earthen vessel and hidden. Maybe a Jewish archaeologist or scientist will find it one day.

Jeremiah had no wife or family (Jeremiah 16 : 2). He and his relatives would be taken into captivity. Why should he, a prisoner, be a purchaser of such land ? It was an act of prophetic faith that God would one day restore Israel to the land and the land to Israel.

Prophecy has been fulfilled in our day and generation, some 2,560 years after. The British High Commission for Palestine departed on May 14th, 1948, and the Jewish State called Israel came into being. On that day Israel's first Prime Minister, David Ben-Gurion, in the Tel Aviv Museum, quoted from Jeremiah 30 : "The word that came to Jeremiah from the Lord, saying, Thus speaketh the Lord God of Israel, saying, Write thee all the words that I have spoken unto thee in a book. For, lo, the days come, saith the Lord, that I will bring again the captivity of My people Israel and Judah, saith the Lord : and I will cause them to return to the land that I gave to their fathers, and they shall possess it." Israel since then has occupied more land, especially since the six-day war, June 5th-10th, 1967. By 1935 there were 300,000 Jews in Palestine, now there are over 3,000,000. The Jew is a miracle !

The promise and its fulfilment

"Is anything too hard for Me ?" Jeremiah prayed to God after he had purchased the land. He adored God and His infinite perfection, giving glory to His name as Creator, Upholder and Benefactor, acknowledging, as the Apostle Paul did in Romans 9 : 14-22, His sovereignty. The reason is best known to the infinite and almighty God as to why He restored a people who had come under His judgment for their iniquity. God asserted His own sovereignty and power. He is gathering His people out of all countries, whither He had driven them in His anger (Jeremiah 32 : 36-44).

The problem of being a nation and a state is being solved by Israel. Many books give facts and figures about Israel. Israeli Society, by S. N. Eisenstadt, Professor of Sociology, Hebrew University of Jerusalem, outlines the economic structure and development, the social organisation and stratification, education, youth and family life, political structure and institutions, culture and values. Israel is a modern society. All that makes a modern nation has been accomplished. They await a king, the Messiah!

Thousands have prayed at the Wailing Wall in Jerusalem for the return of the people and for the coming of the Messiah. Does God answer prayer? Jeremiah, the priestly prophet, believed the Lord God, and this is why he bought the land in Anathoth and sealed the documents and put them in an earthen vessel, that they may continue many days. The Lord of hosts, the God of Israel, had said: "Houses and fields and vineyards shall be possessed again in this land." The hundreds of prosperous kibbutzim in Israel today, where everyone "with one of his hands wrought in the work, and with the other hand held a weapon" (Nehemiah 4:17), show that God is as good as His Word.

In the ancient world the Jews were Babylonised, Hellenised, Romanised; subsequently they have been Europeanised, Arabised, Asianised, Americanised. Now they are united at home, Israelis. The Israeli is a landowner, a soldier, an airman, a scholar or a poet, speaking his native language, Hebrew.

"Is anything too hard for the Lord?" Promise and prophecy have been fulfilled.

Pray the last prayer in the Bible: "Even so, come, Lord Jesus," that the last promise may be fulfilled: "Surely I come quickly." S

THE WEDDING GARMENT

By Sheila Price

TIMOTHY'S cousin was getting married. Timothy was looking forward to attending the wedding with his parents and to eating lots of nice things at the reception afterwards, but he did not like the idea of having to dress up for the occasion.

"Here is your clean shirt," said his mother, "and I've polished your shoes."

"Oh, mummy," sighed Timothy, "do I have to wear them?"

"Well, of course, dear. You can't go to your cousin's wedding dressed in your jeans and jumper!"

"Why not?" said Timothy. "I'm good enough as I am."

Jesus tells of a certain king whose son was getting married. He wanted to make it a wonderful occasion, so he sent out invitations to his family and friends. Every one of the invitations was turned down! No one wanted to come to the wedding!

The king could not let all the food go to waste, so he invited all the poor and needy people of the town to the wedding. As each guest arrived he was given a new white garment to put on, so that he would be suitably dressed to appear before the king. Later, however, when the king went to shake hands with everybody he noticed that one man still had on his own shabby clothes! He had refused to put on the white garment because, like Timothy, he thought that he was good enough as he was. The king was deeply hurt and he ordered the man to be thrown out of the palace. The king had gone to a lot of trouble and expense in buying the garments, so it was an insult when the guest had refused his kind offer.

Many people reject the love of God because they too think that they are good enough as they are and can get along on their own without God.

If we give our hearts to Him, God has promised us a pure, white robe, and because His Son, Jesus, paid the price of our sins on the cross at Calvary this robe of salvation is offered free.

We each need to accept salvation for ourselves. Only when we have done this are we fit to appear before our heavenly King. It is an insult to God when we refuse to accept this free salvation. Don't you think that it is even worse to think that we are good enough as we are?

AN OUTLINE

"THE LAMB IS ALL THE GLORY IN IMMANUEL'S LAND"

THERE are twenty-eight references in Revelation to the "Lambkin" (lit.). Contrast the world-empires there: the "wild beasts" (lit.).

1. The worth of the Lamb: His intrinsic value (5: 11-13).

2. The blood of the Lamb: the song of heaven (7: 13, 14).

3. The wrath of the Lamb: this strange conjunction of terms (6: 15, 16).

4. The book of the Lamb: "Is my name written there?" (13: 8).

5. The song of the Lamb: a mightier Deliverer than Moses was (15: 3).

6. The marriage of the Lamb: "With His own blood He bought her" (19: 7-9).

7. The light of the Lamb: rushlight, candle-light, lamplight, gaslight, electric light, sunlight, Lamblight (21: 23).

8. The throne of the Lamb: the ultimate triumph of innocent suffering (22: 3).

A POEM

POTS OF EARTHENWARE

(2 Corinthians 4: 7, N.E.B.)

The Master stood in His garden among the lilies so fair—

Which His own right hand had planted and trained with tenderest care.

He looked at the snowy blossoms and saw with observant eye

That His flowers were sadly drooping, for their leaves were parched and dry.

"My lilies need to be watered," the heavenly Master said,

"Wherein shall I bring it to them, and raise each drooping head?"

But close to His feet on the pathway, empty and frail and small,

An earthen vessel was lying, which seemed of no use at all.

But the Master saw it, and raised it from the dust in which it lay,

And smiled as He softly whispered, "This shall do my work today."

So to the fountain he took it, and filled it to the brim,

How glad was the earthen vessel to be of some use to Him.

He watered the drooping lilies until they revived again;

And the Master saw with pleasure that His labour was not in vain.

His own hand had drawn the water which revived the thirsty flowers,

But He used an earthen vessel to convey the life-giving showers!

And to itself it whispered as He laid it aside once more,

"Still will I stay in the pathway, just where He found me before.

Close would I keep to the Master and empty I would remain,

And perhaps tomorrow He'll use me to water His lilies again!

Only an earthen vessel, but, placed in the Master's hand,

And filled with His blessed Spirit, I will help many others to stand."

THE ELEPHANT STOOL

WHEN my husband returned from Ghana during July he brought a replica of the Esonodwa, the elephant stool, which was presented to him at his final service in Kumasi by Elder Clotney on behalf of the Church of Pentecost assemblies in the city, who had supported the week's Bible study campaign that he had conducted. It is a carving of great beauty, shaped out of one great piece of mahogany, very solid and measuring roughly fifteen inches high by twenty inches in length and one foot wide.

It is just a wooden seat composed of a base, a middle portion and a top. The middle section of these stools can be shaped into different patterns and symbols. There is a traditional choice in the species of wood used for carving. Durability and lightness are taken into account and wood is chosen which is believed to have a supernatural character, that is to be endowed with a spirit of its own. A sacrifice is made to the spirit of the tree before it is felled and the craftsman is careful to appease the spirit by offering eggs, a fowl or a sheep. The stool carver must live in a religious atmosphere. Skill is not enough; he must observe his code of morality and never go to work leaving behind any quarrel or discontentment unsettled. Unfaithfulness on the part of his wife, if kept secret from him, means that his tools would be made to wound him mortally, for his tools are considered to be sacred and are kept in special places, free from desecration. Before any important task is undertaken wine is poured over the tools, the blood of a fowl is sprinkled on them and prayers are said.

There are whitewood stools, silver-plated stools, men's stools, women's stools, the queen mother's stools, priests' stools, chiefs' stools and, most famous of all, there is the golden stool of the Ashanti. The chief's stool is believed to be the resting place of his soul and the golden stool is a symbol of nationhood. It is said to contain the "sunsum" or soul of the Ashanti. The stool renders both the chiefs and the King of the Ashanti sacred and worthy of direct communication with the ancestors. It is hence the symbolic source of all power and authority.

The stool which is illustrated at the top of my page is a copy of that owned exclusively by the King of the Ashanti. He alone may possess an elephant stool, which is symbolic of his great powers. The popular saying is "When you follow the elephant you do not get wet," thus to follow the owner of the elephant stool is to be free from unlawful provocation and attack. This description of Asantehene as the elephant is very clearly put in this sentence used to praise the paramount chiefs of Ashanti: "But for the presence of the elephant in the bush, the buffalo would be a huge animal." The meaning is clear. The King of Ashanti is so important and exalted that the prominence of even a great paramount chief is not noticed.

We cannot but be impressed by the prestige and reverence accorded to the chiefs and kings of Africa. Ever since human society began natural leaders and hereditary rulers have assumed great powers, but we must not forget the One who is supreme in earth and heaven! No words of mine can pay adequate homage to His power, but the Bible exalts His name and His attributes. Psalm 47 tells of the greatness of our God and in Psalm 95 : 3 we read : "For the Lord is a great God, and a great King above all gods." David reminds us in Psalm 145 : "Great is the Lord, and greatly to be praised; and His greatness is unsearchable."

None save the King of Ashanti may use his stool. It is set apart, a sacred object, because of the greatness of his office and the authority he commands. In the Old Testament God almighty desired that many things used in tabernacle and temple worship were to be regarded as sacred and consecrated as befitting His greatness. May we never fail to realise the holiness and power of God. As consecrated vessels we belong exclusively to Him (1 Thessalonians 4 : 4).

WANTED—MEN OF VISION

Proverbs 29 : 18

By Frank Lavender

THE history of the physical suffering and misery of mankind is illuminated by the vision and compassion of some men and women.

At heavy personal cost they have sought to relieve the distress of others and have "sat where they sat" (Ezekiel 3 : 15).

The modern nursing service can be traced back to the loving ministry of Florence Nightingale to the wounded at Crimea. Elizabeth Fry, appalled by the misery of women prisoners, gave herself to the task of prison reform. The plight of slaves led William Wilberforce and others to campaign to abolish the slave trade and release the slaves. Lord Shaftesbury's horror at the terrible condition of children in factories led to a bitter struggle to secure their emancipation.

We may not think of farmers, firemen, lifeboatmen and others as being visionaries, but without their everyday efforts the suffering of mankind would be far greater. To see a need and then to work for its supply is vision! Our text says that lack of vision causes death, therefore to have vision will lead to the saving of life.

Deeper than the physical suffering of mankind, however, is the desperate spiritual distress of men and women. Down the years the cry of the truly spiritual man, one who has seen the awful state of those around him, has been "Give me souls or I die!"

Think of the earnest intercession of Abraham before the overthrow of Sodom and Gomorrah (Genesis 18), of Moses pleading with God to spare the sinning people of Israel (Exodus 32), of the burning passion of Paul for the dying souls of men and women (2 Colossians 5 : 13, 14). Recall the compassionate love of God for a world of rebel sinners (John 3 : 16).

One cannot avoid the deep conviction that where the love of God reigns in human hearts there must be an agonising passion for the lost souls for whom the Lord Jesus died.

The greatest need of our self-centred, cynical generation is Christians with vision. According to the Bible, all around us men and women are perishing, dying in their sins without God and without hope. If someone had not had a vision of the need of our souls we, too, would be perishing. Unless we now have a vision those around us will go unwarned to a Christless eternity and their blood will be upon us because, though we know their plight, we refuse to give them the word of life.

Our loved ones, friends, neighbours, workmates are spiritually like straying sheep, lost, without a shepherd. They are like a ripened harvest with no reapers to gather it. They are blind souls on the edge of an eternal abyss, desperately needing someone to warn them before it is too late.

It is a terrible, dreadful indictment of many so-called evangelical Christians that they are so taken up with squabbles, likes and dislikes that they have no desire to seek and to save the lost. One can understand Ingersoll's contemptuous scorn for professing Christians who believe they have been saved from eternal fire yet will not stir themselves to seek the salvation of others. I can also appreciate Bishop Taylor Smith being nauseated by the formal, flabby, "suet dumpling" Christians to whom he preached.

The Lord Jesus Himself said that the half-hearted Christians at Laodicea made Him sick. They congratulated themselves on being a church with all that they needed for their comfort and pleasure, yet the Lord told them that they were blind and poverty-stricken.

It is time for us to shake off our complacency, self-interest, desire for comfort and self-indulgence, and to give ourselves as men and women of God to seek the perishing souls for whom our dear Saviour died.

*Rise up, O men of God,
Have done with lesser things ;
Give heart and soul and mind and strength
To serve the King of kings.*

Monday, September 18th

Matthew 7: 15-29

"Whosoever heareth these sayings of Mine, and doeth them, I will liken him to a wise man, which built upon a rock" (v. 24).

Many are so familiar with the sayings of Christ, even to quoting them, yet their position in relationship to personal salvation is absolutely insecure. The requirement as demanded by the Lord Jesus is to obey His commandments. Salvation and security can only be obtained by building on the Rock, "For other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ" (1 Corinthians 3: 11). A personal commitment to Him brings salvation. A faith founded on the Rock is always secure. The foolish men, the disobedient, who build on the crumbling sands of self-sufficiency, in the day of final testing experience utter destruction (v. 27).

Tuesday, September 19th

Matthew 8: 1-17

"Jesus put forth His hand, and touched him, saying, I will; be thou clean" (v. 3).

The touch of the hand of the Lord Jesus still brings healing, restoration and renewed hope. What is required? Faith in His ability to perform what He has promised to do. The centurion proved this. "Speak the word only, and my servant shall be healed" (v. 8), he said. Christ's glad response commended the great faith of the supplicant: "As thou hast believed, so be it done." The healing was instantaneous: "healed in the self-same hour." Christ can touch you now. Only believe!

Wednesday, September 20th

Matthew 8: 18-34

"Lord, suffer me first to go and bury my father" (v. 21).

This reply from a disciple indicated that He would follow Christ at some remote future occasion. He was not prepared to respond immediately to Christ's command to follow Him. "Me first," he said. May the Lord forgive our insistence that our interests should come first.

Another, a scribe, agreed and made known his willingness to follow the Master, yet there is no record that He fulfilled His promise. He was not willing to abandon a comfortable home to follow in the steps of Him who had no place to lay His head.

Christ's call is insistent: "Follow Me." May we be willing to follow Him now!

Thursday, September 21st

Matthew 9: 1-13

"The Son of man hath power" (v. 6).

The manifestation of this power brought renewed hope and encouragement. "Son, be of good cheer" (v. 2): the presence of Christ will always effect this. "Thy sins be forgiven thee": Christ's power alone could do this. Power to enjoy life and restoration to his family circle (v. 7), were granted through Christ. His power has never diminished. You can prove the effectiveness of Christ's power today in every situation.

Friday, September 22nd

Matthew 9: 14-26

"If I may but touch His garment, I shall be whole" (v. 21).

"Daughter, be of good comfort, thy faith hath made thee whole" (v. 22) was Christ's response. Disillusionment, despondency and despair recede immediately faith is exercised in the ability of Christ to heal. Opposition is overcome and every obstacle is removed. Contact with the living, life-giving Christ brings immediate healing. Press through with faith abounding. The answer is still the same.

Saturday, September 23rd

Matthew 9: 27-38

"He was moved with pity and sympathy for them because they were harassed, distressed and dejected, helpless like sheep without a shepherd" (v. 36, Amplified New Testament).

He was moved with compassion as He looked upon a very needy world. These conditions still prevail. What will be our response? May our love be more akin to His. May a desire be born in our hearts to go out, to move among the many in need of the ministry that contact with Christ inspires. The harvest is plentiful. Exercising pity and sympathy to the distressed will bring a great response. Enlist today in the ranks of the labourers!

Sunday, September 24th

Matthew 1: 1-15

"He gave them power" (v. 1).

Christ called the twelve and gave them power and authority to resist, to rebuke, and to release all who were held in captivity by the emissaries of the evil one. Christ-given power prevails today. "Angels and men before Him fall and devils fear and fly." His power is given to us also: "All power is given unto Me. . . . Go ye . . ." (28:18, 19). A ministry has been given to us. A needy world awaits us. Power and authority are given to us by Christ with the assurance "Lo, I am with you alway."

There are men now fishing who catch no fish because they have never taken time to mend their nets.

"The wine failed"

John 2 : 3 (R.V.)

by John Harrison

PASTOR OF ELIM PENTECOSTAL CHURCH, LOWESTOFT

NO one likes failure ! Many young people in particular will be tasting the sweetness of success, while others will endure the bitterness of failure. In every facet of life there is failure : at school, at college, on the sports field, in motoring, physically, spiritually and mentally.

This business of failure became a reality for me recently while I was visiting. During the same afternoon I both saw and experienced failure. Directly opposite the house of a person I visited is the driving test centre. Car after car left the centre and duly returned, but many of the drivers had failed ! On another visit I was drawing up to a house in my vintage Minor 1000 and I applied pressure to my brake pedal. Nothing happened ! Fortunately I was not going fast and was able to stop the car without any further difficulty.

Failure can be quite nerve-racking and shattering !

In the familiar record of the wedding that Jesus attended at Cana of Galilee the writer very pointedly says "The wine failed." All the minor difficulties during the months of planning and preparation had been ironed out, but suddenly, unexpectedly, this major crisis occurred. The wine failed.

I have had the privilege of attending many weddings and have known various things to happen—forgetting rings, one partner failing to turn up, the organist forgetting the music, the bride arriving before the 'groom, the taxis taking the bridal party to the wrong church—but I have never known the beverages to fail !

Why should John mention this fact of the wine failing ?

Surely the governor of the feast could have sent discreet word to a friend or neighbour without making known their dilemma.

The reason for John's inclusion of this fact is not incidental. It is there to teach a very important lesson.

Make no mistake, the pleasures of this life often fail when we are relying on them most. Notice that the wine which brought happiness and satisfaction to so many failed utterly and completely.

Think of the prodigal son when he left his father with the portion of goods that belonged to him. After enjoying himself, the Scripture says, "he began to be in want"—in other words, what had brought him happiness and satisfaction failed.

Think of the woman with the issue of blood. The Gospel of Mark informs us : "She spent all that she had" in her twelve years of suffering. Her health and her substance failed.

Think of the man with the lunatic son. The boy had been suffering since childhood and the father had become desperate to know what to do next. Human help, ingenuity and consolation had failed.

For some strange reason the best wine of life often fails, whether it be money, friends, jobs, cars, homes or businesses.

I am glad of the happy sequel to the wedding at Cana. For one reason—Jesus was there ! He recognised and appreciated the need and a miracle was performed—the turning of water into wine.

If we had to muddle through life hoping for the best, what disasters and disappointments might occur ! The encouraging news is that we do not have to plod along hoping for the best, because Jesus Christ has promised to help and to supply our needs. He said Himself : "I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly."

There is no reason why the Christian life should be dull, why it should face failure. The earthly ministry of Jesus shows how much and how many times He was present to help and to encourage in the face of seeming failure. Remember the feeding of the 5,000, the healing of blind Bartimaeus, the raising to life of Jairus's daughter and Lazarus ? Even in death Jesus showed his love and help for the sinner.

Has the "wine" of pleasure and happiness failed you ? Surely your need is no greater than any of the examples that have been mentioned. Christ is the answer to your every need.

Failure can be turned into success when Jesus is given a chance. Why not trust Him today ?

WE thank God for this milestone in the development of our press, Grenehurst Press. This is the first regular ELIM EVANGEL to be printed and produced by our own press. We planned to take over this task as from 1973, but, owing to the take over of our previous printers, Letchworth Printers Ltd., we had to make extremely hurried arrangements for Grenehurst Press to assume production

Our press is housed in inconvenient premises at the moment and manager Gordon A. Wright and his staff will face problems because of this and also because some of the machinery required for such a production as the EVANGEL cannot be purchased and installed until the new premises in St. Georges Road, Cheltenham are erected. Some of the work will have to be put out for the time being, but, when operating fully, Grenehurst Press will print and produce our official organ in full.

You may know that they have already published their first paperback book and included among a number of other publications is the very popular "Why?" series of pamphlets. Now that this further step in the development of this side of our work has been taken we feel that we must give thanks to God and ask for your very kind interest and prayer support.

While Sabbath keeping in the Old Testament sense does not now apply in the sense of an obligation of the Law, the setting apart of one day a week for worship is still a sensible, sacred privilege. Some of us have to use the roads on Sunday evenings when returning from preaching engagements. They are more often than not crowded. The motorways seem to abound with cars containing families returning from seaside or inland resorts, family visits and so on. We could wish that our nation would get back to the highly realistic necessity for having a day of rest and spiritual recreation (in the literal sense — "re-creation"). We would do well to ponder Isaiah 58:13,14: "If thou turn away thy foot from the sabbath, from doing thy pleasure on My holy day: and call the sabbath a delight, the holy of the Lord, honourable; and shalt honour Him, not doing thine own ways, nor finding thine own pleasure, nor speaking thine own words; Then shalt thou delight thyself in the LORD".

KEYNSHAM

Pastor: D.W.R. Morton

AN open-air rally of hymn singing and gospel music was held at the riverside bandstand in Keynsham Memorial Park by members of Elim Pentecostal Church. The rally, starting at 8 p.m., was led by Pastor D.W.R. Morton.

The programme included a teenage singing group and instrumentalists. Vocalists were Richard Douglas and George Lancaster. The closing epilogue by Pastor Morton was called, "The Jesus Revolution". To pave the way for the rally, some 3,000 invitation cards and special Jesus stickers were distributed.

Taking part in the second rally were the gospel singing group The New Creation while the closing message was given by Rev. W.R. Jones, minister of City Temple, Bristol.

Weekly Chronicle

Pastor Morton adds:

The first rally was held in pouring rain. God honoured our step of faith for the sun came out just after 8 p.m. There were approximately 200 people present. Six made decisions during the appeal, four made decisions through personal evangelism and twenty-four asked for the booklet, Journey into Life.

At the second rally, held in beautiful weather, about 300 were present. Three made decisions during the appeal and nineteen requested copies of the booklet.

There was a wonderful sense of the presence of God in both meetings.

EALING

Pastor: F.F.L. Frost

A tea was prepared by the sisters of the church for the farewell of Pastor and Mrs. A.S.F. Horne after five years of faithful ministry, when, despite many members being away on holiday and the local Presbytery Isle of Wight Camp being in progress, about eighty participated.

The members of the diaconate, the Sunday School Superintendent and the Church Secretary paid tributes for blessings received from Pastor Horne's ministry. He had been a real shepherd to the flock, a spiritual and practical help in times of difficulty. We thank God above all for the souls won to Christ during his pastorate.

After a duet by Mr. and Mrs. C. Reed, Mr. R.S. Garrard (Church Treasurer) presented Pastor Horne with a cheque, and Miss. L. Palfrey gave Mrs. Horne a bouquet. Mrs. D. Mohan gave Mrs. Horne a present from the Sisterhood. Pastor Horne said that whatever had been accomplished was because of God's blessing and the unity which existed with the Church officers and members.

Pastor Horne's final service at Ealing took place the next day when one decision was made for the Master. Our prayers follow them as they take up their new appointment at Ipswich.

At this service we said goodbye with regret to Mr. and Mrs. P. Mohan, who, after only twenty months in Ealing, are moving to Devon. Both had been very active in the church during their short time and Mr. Mohan had been elected to the diaconate.

SCOTTISH YOUTH CAMP

A RECORD fifty-six young people attended the ninth Scottish Presbytery Elim youth camp, held at Crieff, Perthshire. The Greenock, Motherwell, Dundee and Aberdeen churches were represented. The camp was held in a well-appointed school building on the outskirts of the town.

The primary object of our camps is to meet the spiritual needs of the young people. Pastor Ron Williams came north from Rochester, along with his wife and family, to act as camp padre. His duties were considerable, with breakfast sandwiched between a prayer meeting and "Thought for the day," followed by a mid-morning Bible study. Over twenty local children were attracted to each of the evening services. Thereafter "sing-alongs" or meetings for receiving the baptism in the Holy Spirit were held.

Afternoons were occupied by swimming, treks, treasure hunts or Bible quizzes. The large playing field and sports rooms at the school, with equipment for football, netball, volley ball and table tennis, were at our disposal.

On the second Sunday we travelled to the Dundee church at the invitation of Pastor Hugh B. McGowan and campers conducted the service. The camp commandant, Pastor Peter Smith, led the meeting and the padre preached.

The commandant's appointment to Rotherham provided the young people with an opportunity to show the esteem in which they hold Pastor and Mrs. Smith. A small presentation was made with the wish that their camp interests might be maintained.

Our last night found us gathered at a quiet stretch of the riverside, where we had a barbecue and held a short service. The commandant entreated the campers that on return to their churches they would strive to maintain the level of spirituality achieved at camp, where souls were saved, a number were baptised in the Holy Spirit and Gifts of the Holy Spirit were received. These God-given Gifts were so distributed that each church represented will profit.

The camp reunion service will be held at Greenock on November 18th.

PEK Pictures

WE are pleased to publish the photographs, which have been delayed in reaching us, of the wonderful Conference held in Berne, Switzerland, this midsummer.

Top Left: F.H. Coleman, Pastor of Elim Pentecostal Church, Finsbury Park, London and Secretary of the British Pentecostal Fellowship, addresses the Conference. Readers will know Mr. Coleman well from his fortnightly column, "Prayer and Praise".

Below: An impression of part of the crowded Festival Hall, Berne, during one of the Conference services. The hall was packed for these services and, such was the blessing upon the Conference, that it was decided to hold another one in Norway in three years' time (D.V.).

The George Canty Viewpoint

... about the desert in the oasis

GROWING up, we find out not only that we didn't know, but that we didn't know we didn't know. We learn that we have to learn. The Gospel call is itself a call to begin learning: "Come unto Me...learn of Me", literally, "be My apprentice". Why? Because this is also Christ's attitude: "For I am meek and lowly in heart". He Himself was teachable. As Hebrews records: "a Son, yet He learned".

Repentance is not just dropping the battle, it is "metanoia": changing your mind. A Christian is a person who has accepted a new thought-pattern. We are freed both from the jail of common vice and from the restrictions of worldly thinking and trendy attitudes. We are not in tow to fashion, "the course of this world", but "have the mind of Christ".

As a man "thinketh in his heart, so is he" says Proverbs. Relative thinking, the specious assumptions of press, television, society, education — these do not reflect God's mind. Our "separation" doesn't take us out of the world, but takes the world out of us, out of our outlook. The oasis in the desert must not have the desert in the oasis.

Surrounded by the ever-shifting sands of worldly yackity-yack, how can a man be "like a tree planted by the rivers of water"? Ezra supplies the answer in Psalm 1: "In His law doth he meditate day and night".

A nice with-it, slick, snazzy sermon, no longer than a pop L.P., served up with all the trimmings, clap-clap singing, once a week, and home in time for the TV programme, isn't what Ezra meant. "They will not endure sound doctrine", prophesied Paul. He meant the unconverted of the last days, but my point in this article is that the Church can reflect the world.

Without daily bearings, we can drift in a mid-ocean current and not realise it. In our uncertain times, only one fixed point remains — the immovable rock of Holy Scripture. By this we can check against the subtle direction of our age. Without the Word we are merely the children of our times. The George Canty Viewpoint sees several distinct modern worldly features influencing our Christian minds: family break-up, indiscipline, faith in money, love of pleasure, successism.

The ideal of family life has been shattered by the official planners, industry, education, and economics. Everything is considered except family feelings. Such worldly hardness is evident when people swop churches with less sentiment than swopping milkmen. The Divine glory of love finds its medium of expression in the family and is heightened in the family of the church. It will not do to say: "I belong to the world family". The New Testament does not talk in such terms. We can no more wander from house to house because everybody belongs to the family of Adam, than we can wander from church to church because all Christians belong to the family of Christ. The family unity is only seen in the family unit. We have to recognise and honour certain people, such as our parents "in the Lord". The love of the brethren is practically impossible until we know one another. To be "kindly affectioned one towards another" indicates one thing — the local church.

Crazy old Sigmund Freud foisted upon us, via the educationalists, such as John Dewey, systems of indiscipline which we harvest today in contempt for authority, pride of mind, resistance to organised systems, self-esteem, and worse — violence and anarchy. The Church of Christ is the answer to this lawlessness. It is a body of those who "submit themselves one to another in love". A denomination is a discipline founded on Christ's law, whose members "tremble at the Word of God". take the yoke, and accept the necessary organisation which makes effective the fellowship of all the members of one body. This Scriptural arrangement is being smeared with a dreadful word: "denominationalism". People who labour and sacrifice under the name of a denomination, but in the name of Christ, do not deserve this slander. Why should their good be evil spoken of by the innuendo of this loaded word? It carries the implications of sectarianism and love-of-party. We protest that this is not what we find present in our precious brethren. The law of Christ is not better fulfilled by hiving off. We can't prove our love of the brethren by anti-denominationalism, nor are we made perfect by turning our backs on the God-given pastors, teachers and overseers, who have watched over our souls in prayers and tears. The dangers of a small insular group agreeing on their limited understanding of things without exposure to the greater movements of the Spirit in the churches, where Christ said He walked, are only too evident. It reflects world indiscipline, creating divisions and animosities and breaking the hearts of spiritual parents. It is the desert in the oasis.

Faith in money. The world subsists on the myth of the almighty dollar still: "Money can do everything". In fact money can do nothing. Only people can do things. If everybody paid his tithe into the church there would be only one problem left — who would do the work of the church? The ministry can't be bought. It is somebody's love gift. Visitation, witness, a beaming handshake, loving the children, tears, prayers, caring interest — you can't buy all this for a tenth of your income. You get it by giving it — by all giving it. Outreach to neighbours, miracles of healing, music that reaches your soul, testimonies, these are not on sale in any shop. God wants me — involved.

Love of pleasure. I hope I don't misunderstand, but I say that to talk about being "high on Jesus", or "uptight in the Spirit", is open to misunderstanding. Jesus is not a substitute drug, or another way to a pleasurable experience. Jesus is not for pleasure. A generation "seeking blessing", blessing being some kind of trauma in a service, reflects those in the last days who would be "lovers of pleasure" — the taint of the world. To flit from meeting to meeting as if from show to show, looking for places where there is "more blessing", and "more of the Spirit" (!) is a curious interpretation of denying ourselves and taking up the cross. Lurking behind it is discontent and restlessness. The way to blessing is by loyalty, love, service, doing the will of God, and sacrifice.

Successism. It was pounded into my head at school that we must study hard and get on. "Aim high", was our school motto. We have a world chased and harried by the "Aim high" schoolmaster, but Jesus said "I have come to do the will of Him that sent Me". This is what we learn of Him, and that is the yoke Christians take upon their necks. The fever of life comes from the virus of successism. God is being used as a means to money, to prosperity, a formula for success, one more ingredient of life, a chemical secret to add to the sum total of experience.

The old Pentecostals still sing, "Jesus is my all in all". They are not all old, however, these old Pentecostals. Many young people have the old touch — devoted, loyal, loving, full of Jesus, running nowhere to get, but delighted by every opportunity to give and to do His perfect will. They are the stability on which the work of God will grow.

Every Pentecostal church offers the fullest possible opportunities for the service of Christ. There is no need to search the city for new organisations and groups or to go across continents to find a niche to fill. The genius of the Pentecostal church is that it spells opportunity for every enterprise of witness and work. If all the labours put into the mushrooming causes of evangelism had been put into the churches to which the labourers belong, the effect would have been infinitely greater. Siphoning off help for glamourised fields of activity takes the heart out of local churches who cannot get their own projects under way because members' time is spent elsewhere. Some tend everybody's vineyard except their own, and then complain of the conditions which their neglect has created.

"Let us love one another, with a pure heart, fervently".

"If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in Him".

Called to separation,
With the Crucified,
Temples of the Spirit,
Saved and sanctified,

Set apart for service,
By God's hand ordained,
We the cross have taken,
By His love constrained.

In the steps of Jesus,
We would plant our own,
Blessed path of triumph,
Leading to the throne.

The Letter to the Romans

8 The Effects of Justification (continued)

by J. Alexander Wright

THE Christian's threefold boast is not confined to future blessedness (5:2); it embraces also the present with its inevitable trials, for "we glory in tribulations also" (v.3). Here is the Christian's philosophy of suffering. It is not like the Stoics' of that day, who "bore it without a grin". "Blessed are you, when men shall revile you . . . rejoice" (Matthew 5:11, 12). "Count it all joy when ye fall into divers temptations" (James 1:2). "Rejoicing that they were counted worthy to suffer" (Acts 5:41). "I will glory [boast — same word] in my infirmities" (2 Corinthians 12:9).

"Knowing" (Romans 5:3). Four facts of experience sustain us, the three graces of faith, hope and love combine to hold us and the floodtide of Pentecost, God's love, assures us. The saving hope with which we began sustains us to the end, for "hope never disappoints" (v.5, Moffatt).

Four terms describe us as we were: "without strength" (v.6) — weak and helpless; "ungodly" (v.6), — without God in this world and therefore without hope; "*sinner*s" (v.8), — who by intention or omission have missed God's purpose for their lives; and "enemies" (v.8), — hostile in heart and mind in our attitude to God.

The great Jewish scholar, C.G. Montifore, in his Beginnings of Christianity marks what he considers to be the uniqueness of the Christian message: "The summons not to wait until they meet you in the ordered and sheltered path, but to go forth and to seek out and redeem the fallen, the passion to heal and to bring back to God the wretched and the outcast — all of this I do not find in Rabbinism — that form of love seems to be lacking."

The cross of Christ commends the Father's love for the worst and the love of the Son is one with His (v.8). In vv. 9, 10, we have the past, present, and future aspects of salvation set forth. Reconciled when enemies, justified by His sacrifice, we are being saved daily by His indwelling life, and when the dread day of judgment dawns, we shall be saved from God's righteous wrath on sin through Him, our Redeemer. "If God reconciled His enemies, He will surely save His friends" (Rev. J.R.W. Stott).

Now comes the Christian's final boast: "we joy in God" (v.11), Himself from whom all blessings flow, and the chiefest of them, "the atonement" (v.11). Here is the one and only occurrence of the word "atonement" in the Authorised Version of the New Testament, though it appears many times in the Old Testament, but there the meaning is different. There it is the Hebrew word meaning "to cover". The first use of it, in Genesis 6:14, is very significant. Noah's Ark was to be "pitched" (verb) with "pitch" (noun). So by the Divine covering the Ark was preserved and protected from the flood of His judgment which fell upon that guilty world. "By whom we have now received the atonement" (Romans 5:11): atonement was made by God and not to God. "I have given it [the blood] to make an atonement" (Leviticus 17:11). In fact, there is no Greek word for "atonement" in the New Testament or Hebrew word in the Old Testament. William Tyndale, in his great translation of the English Bible, coined it from three others, to express that complete union which is effected between God and man, that healing of the great divisions which sin had wrought in him, separating him from God, from his fellow-man, even from himself, and from the world of nature, God's creation.

"Heal me at the centre", cried Gautama Buddha, "and let the world come on". This is what God has done for us through Christ. In Him, man has become again a unity: "at-one-ment" and in Tyndale's day the numeral was pronounced as "own", and so we have this great word as we know it.

It has disappeared from the modern versions of the Bible; "expiation" (O.T.) and "reconciliation" (N.T.) take its place. Jesus died to reconcile us to God, not to reconcile God to us. God is never the object of reconciliation, but always the subject. God never went away from man; man went away from God. "To sing, 'My God is reconciled, His pardoning voice I hear' is not correct, but to sing, 'My soul is reconciled, His pardoning voice I hear' is to state the truth of being one with God in the place of fellowship, by means of Christ's atonement." (Dr. F.E. Marsh: Structural Principles of the Bible).

From small Beginnings

IN 1958 an eight-day campaign was launched in the Co-op Hall, Keynsham, Som. Some thirty-five decisions were registered and so commenced another Elim Pentecostal Church, which continued to meet in the Co-op Hall. Later an old Methodist Church was put up for sale at £2,500. An offer of £1,000 was made and accepted. A stranger wrote out a cheque for £1,000 and the congregation had a new home. In 1966 the construction of a new building was commenced and the above church was opened to the glory of God at Easter, 1967.

The church continues to progress with an average Sunday evening congregation of fifty, a children's work forty to fifty strong and an enthusiastic group of teens and twenties.

Recently, open-air services have been held in the local park with full equipment laid on by the local council. Three baptismal services have been held in the last four months and a fourth is already planned.

There are 20,000 people in Keynsham and it is estimated that 19,000 of these are non-church attenders, but every house in the town has already received literature from the church. Personal evangelism is the key-note in the future plans of this enthusiastic church.

The original launching campaign was certainly worthwhile and we would cherish your help towards similar efforts. Please remember the Annual Thankoffering for Evangelism on October 8th.

The Baptism in the Holy Spirit - Is it really necessary in 1972?

by M.R. Forster

A GREAT talking point among many Christians these days is the matter of the baptism in the Holy Spirit. Many people, including born again Christians in the Church, are asking the all-important question. "Is the experience which the disciples received on the day of Pentecost (Acts 2:4) still available today and, if it is, then is it really necessary?"

When I was first converted I felt that the baptism in the Holy Spirit was reserved for the chosen few and for them alone. I felt that this experience was not at all for the ordinary person. I was a born again Christian for three years before I came to realise that this experience was indeed for me, yes, me — who had nothing to offer the Lord but a loving heart and willing hands.

Many of my friends had received the baptism in the Holy Spirit and I noticed that there was something very different about them. They seemed to enjoy the same power which those early Christians enjoyed. They were enjoying another Pentecost... praise the Lord! After seeing this I realised that I was really missing out on something very wonderful. I came to see that they had something which I did not have — and that something I really wanted.

After much prayer and seeking the Lord's guidance I came into a wonderful knowledge of the baptism in the Holy Spirit. What a night that was! I felt as though Pentecost itself had come down in the hall where I was. I felt a new, inward power and spoke in a new, wonderful language. I am very pleased to tell those people who think that Pentecost is all over and finished that indeed it is not! God is still wanting to fill His people with the Holy Spirit. He is still wanting them to know another Pentecost, even though we are living in 1972.

I hope and pray that you, too, will come to realise that this experience is for you now. Here are some guide-lines:

Is the baptism for me?

Yes, friend, the baptism in the Holy Spirit is for you, because Jesus says so in His Word. "For every one that asketh receiveth; and he that seeketh findeth; and to him that knocketh it shall be opened." (Luke 11:10). "And I will pray the Father, and He shall give you another Comforter, that He may abide with you for ever" (John 14:16). The Word of God stands sure for ever; His promise is for each of us today!

The baptism is given to both old and young.

God has no age barriers; He is able and willing to give His Spirit to all who ask. "And it shall come to pass afterward, that I will pour out My Spirit upon all flesh; and your sons and daughters shall prophesy, your old men shall dream dreams, your young men shall see visions" (Joel 2:28).

Jesus Christ is the Giver of the Holy Spirit.

Do not think that the Holy Spirit can be given by anyone else except Jesus Himself. Others may be used as channels, but Jesus Christ is the Giver. As John the Baptist said, "I indeed baptize you with water unto repentance; but He that cometh after me is mightier than I, whose shoes I am not worthy to bear: He shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost, and with fire" (Matthew 3:11).

The Holy Spirit is bestowed in answer to prayer.

"If ye then, being evil, know how to give good gifts unto your children: how much more shall your heavenly Father give the Holy Spirit to them that ask Him?" (Luke 11:13).

The Holy Spirit empowers us for the service of Christ.

"But ye shall receive power, after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you: and ye shall be witnesses unto Me both in Jerusalem, and in all Judaea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth." (Acts 1:8).

* * *

I have proved that the Holy Spirit has made a wonderful difference in my life. He has given me power which God promised to each of us in His Word. Without the baptism of the Holy Spirit we are weak and ineffective, but when Pentecostal power comes down and fills our hearts, we can say with Paul... "I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me" (Philippians 4:13).

Let God have His way in your life. Let Him take full control and fill you with His Holy Spirit!

Thou Christ of burning, cleansing flame,

Send the fire.

Thy blood-bought gift today we claim,

Send the fire.

Look down and see this waiting host,

Give us the promised Holy Ghost.

We want another Pentecost,

Send the fire.

Book review

I have been requested to review four booklets written by Eddie Neale and published by Scripture Union. They are: I want to get married, I hate the boss, We're all afraid and My Chance to live. They cost 12p each, postage and packing 3p each extra.

The aim of these booklets is to get the Gospel and something socially helpful across to lovers, newly-weds, and young parents. They are well presented, colourful and make for easy reading, as well as being profusely illustrated, especially by picture strip.

There are one or two things which are in bad taste. In the booklet My Chance to Live is an article — "What's wrong with the Church?" — which is extremely negative in its approach. If I had to form an opinion of the church from such an article I would think that the church was full of bad-tempered, scruffy, eccentric old people who are always having rows with someone else. Of course, this is far from the truth.

In the booklet, I want to get married, the language used is not good. An elderly lady is called an "old bag" and "a nose-y old interfering thing". The young man, on being given the news of a coming baby, says, "I felt like a man who's been kicked in the belly." I know that these expressions are often used in the world, but it seems to me that we shall never lift people to higher levels by going down to theirs. David Wilkerson said: "I don't have to wear clothes like a hippy to win them for Christ."

The scene in the picture strip of the young married couple refusing to make love at the girl's mother's home need not be so obvious. I must say that generally I do not believe that young people are so inhibited.

In all fairness, however, I admired the strong stand taken against pre-marital sex, loose living, and bad relationships. The Gospel, too, is clearly presented. In the main these booklets meet a need. I feel that they will succeed in reaching the people for whom they were written.

Pastor: P. Watson

MANY members and friends gathered to say farewell to Pastor and Mrs. F.F.L. Frost. In his opening prayer, Mr. Reed, our organist, thanked God for their faithfulness and for the words of exhortation, counsel and encouragement received throughout their ministry.

Christians from outside Elim also paid tribute to our Pastor. One spoke of the quiet quality of his personality in contrast to the authority and power of his preaching. Another told of his practical Christianity. Through another we heard of him as one willing to go the second mile and someone else had proved him as a friend.

Miss J. Archer, a young lady saved through Pastor Frost's ministry, presented him and his wife with a china cake stand on behalf of the Crusaders.

After speaking of Mrs. Frost's love and faithfulness Mrs. Arthur presented her with a gold watch from the Sisterhood.

Before presenting them with a beautiful 400-day clock from the church, Mr. J.B. Mundell, our church secretary, spoke of Pastor and Mrs. Frost's untiring devotion to the Lord's work in Carlisle, making special mention of the Pastor's regular visits to the "shut-ins" with his tape recorder, a ministry much appreciated by the sick and aged.

We were greatly blessed by solos by Miss. C. Mundell and Mrs. M. Mungall. Two visiting brothers sang a duet and Mr. Brown recited "The starless Crown". We derived much pleasure from listening to our tambourine group, accompanied by Mr. Reed at the organ.

Pastor Frost gave a word of thanks and graciously exhorted the church to stand loyally by his successor, Pastor P. Watson.

The Carlisle church say with one voice: "God bless you both in your new sphere of service for the Master!"

EDITH HARPER

Another Slant

by Ken Smith

"TALK to me about Jesus, but Christ — NEVER!" retorted the G.P. when I gave him the tract Seven reasons why you need Christ, as he carefully folded it up and put it into my top pocket. He was a Jew and it was obvious from his voice and manner that, though I would have been happy to talk about Jesus, he would have had none of it. He had been in Birmingham for many years, but his practice had been drastically reduced due to housing clearance in his area. One would guess that very few of his patients are English, for the density of immigrants in that area is very high.

Another G.P. in the Walsall area told me that it was his first morning back at the surgery after three months of sickness. He has had four coronary attacks. I felt it to be an opportunity to ask him if he had considered eternal matters. I gave him a copy of my usual tract, Seven reasons why you need Christ. Physicians, too, are the victims of life's ills, but I could tell him of a more serious "heart" complaint. Thank God, even if we cannot have a new heart in the natural, the Word of God promises a "new heart" in the spiritual.

One is amazed that, through such serious attacks, when life is endangered, men and women do not think of eternal realities. It seems to me, too, that, when the crisis is over, it's back to "business as usual", namely a life of godlessness, in which Christ is totally discounted or ignored. It can also be true in the life of God's people to an alarming degree!

Where would you find a professional man, a barrister, a dental surgeon, an architect, or the like, over sixty and in Sutton Coldfield, who services his own car? I gave up the search, but it was one of the quota for an oil usage survey I did recently.

Having a car, it interested me much to find out about various oils and people's reactions to the high pressure publicity and the millions of pounds spent on promoting this product. It's all a question of viscosity and friction.

I was reminded of how much we need the Holy Spirit so that the "wheels" and the "engine" in our local church fellowship turn smoothly. It is not without significance that oil is used to illustrate His Person. There is need for "spiritual lubrication" when friction mars the fellowship. Nothing less than "the love of God shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Spirit" can meet the need.

"MASS BRAINWASHING PUBLIC"

CHARGES CONFERENCE SPEAKER

The Public Relations Officer to the British Pentecostal Fellowship pointed to the modern situation that the public is conditioned to show interest only in subjects promoted by television or the Press.

What is left out of the mass media is now regarded as unimportant by most people. The Church, which was the grip of the mass media, now has the mass media. For how long the Church will survive is a question.

Churches were mentioned when they were first mentioned. They were mentioned as being a part of the Church. They were mentioned as being a part of the Church. They were mentioned as being a part of the Church.

The BBC's "Pentecost" programme was quoted as showing only the worst of the Church. The BBC's "Pentecost" programme was quoted as showing only the worst of the Church. The BBC's "Pentecost" programme was quoted as showing only the worst of the Church.

Inch by Inch

Words and drawing:
Sheila Price

John and Susan were playing ball at the bottom of their garden. "That was a silly thing to do," said John. "You threw the ball much too high for me and now it's stuck in the tree. We'll never get it down now."

"Yes, we will," said Susan. "I'll see if I can reach it."

"You'd better let me try," said John. "After all, I am taller than you are."

"You are not," said Susan. "I am taller."

"We'll soon see," said John, as he ran up the garden and into the house. Soon he was back again holding a tape measure.

"Just stand up against the wall," said John, "and I'll measure how tall you are. Now, let me see . . . you are thirty-seven inches tall. Now you measure me."

Susan held the tape measure against her brother.

"Well, how tall am I?" asked John.

"You are forty inches tall," said Susan.

"Then that proves I am taller than you, doesn't it?"

"What is all the fuss about?" asked Mr. Brown. "I can hear you from the kitchen."

"Well, daddy," said John. "Susan would not believe that I was taller than her, so I borrowed mummy's tape measure to prove that I am three inches taller than Susan."

"Well," said Mr. Brown. "You may be taller than Susan, but how about measuring me?"

Mr. Brown stood against the wall. John held the tape measure against him, but he could only reach as far as his father's elbow.

"Now then," said Mr. Brown. "There was really no need to argue, was there? You see, when you measure yourself against others, you seem to be very small indeed. When we try to measure ourselves against Jesus, we fail too. We boast of our good works, our talents, our kindness, and think that we are very big indeed, but when we measure these against the wonderful love of Jesus, these things don't seem so important after all. Jesus has given us all a wonderful promise, however!"

"What is that, daddy?" the children asked.

"Jesus has said that, if we love Him and serve Him, we shall grow more like Him day by day. Now then, let me get your ball out of the tree, so that you can carry on with your game."

"Thank you, daddy."

From T. H. Stevenson

On our Knees is the title of a new book on the Irish scene, which contains interviews with public figures of note or notoriety. The language of Republican personalities would bar the book from recommendation for Christians, but it has an arresting opening paragraph: "In Ireland there are two reactions to a crisis. The first is to get down on your knees and pray to God. The second is to go down on one knee, lift a gun and try to shoot the head off your opponent."

Both things are common in Ireland, but not as presented here. Even nominal Protestantism does not promote such apposite kneeling attitudes, nor would I hope, does Romanism, yet I have read in Irish literature for Catholics emigrating to Britain: "a good Catholic is one who attends a weekly mass, makes a regular confession and recites daily the prescribed prayers." Ethics and morals do not seem vital. Sincere Christians do not act as quoted, but if the sentences were reversed, I would say that many ungodly act so. As one has said, "Hearts cry 'God be pitiful' that ne'er said 'God be praised'."

Happily in Northern Ireland many believers are sincerely praying and God is blessing, though nominal church attendance may be quite ominously declining. It has been an amazing observation in Bangor, a town once saturated with churches of the largest denominations — Presbyterian, Church of Ireland, and Methodist — to find that they conduct one united service on Sunday nights in the summer. This is a mark of weakness not of unity.

Perhaps the greatest move that Northern Ireland is to see has already begun: the Baptism of the Holy Spirit among many believers. In a few special meetings in the Bangor Elim Pentecostal Church, I have prayed with Presbyterians, Methodists and Christian Brethren seeking God's promised blessing. A Presbyterian lady, on receiving the Holy Spirit baptism, soon spread her testimony and brought with her to the following meeting a sincere life-long Methodist. It was inspiring to hear such dear ones spontaneously praising the Lord.

But not only in Elim and among others coming to an Elim Church is God blessing: God is blessing in Ireland! Bangor like some other Elim churches is packed to capacity morning and evening on Sundays. A young Brethren married couple attending my final service informed me that they with others of their assembly have been baptised in the Spirit. The young woman is a converted Roman Catholic. They also told me of a mission currently being conducted by a Brethren evangelist in a country district near Newtownards where many young believers and older ones were being filled with the Holy Spirit. Those who know the very rigid stand that each evangelical group in Ireland can take and has taken, will realise that this is a move of God.

May such a move in such a conservative stronghold be a reminder and an incentive to Pentecostal ministers and members to see to it that "the fire shall ever be burning"!

PRAYER AND PRAISE

By F. H. COLEMAN

Recently I was invited back to a church which I pastored during the war years. I was able to recall and share with the people some of the wonderful things that God did in those dreadful war years. Here is one of them.

One afternoon I was out visiting and, entering into a home, I was greeted with the good news that a son of the family serving in the Royal Navy had come home unexpectedly on leave. He had brought with him a number of things which were impossible to buy in this land in those days of war, among them a bunch of bananas. Before I left, I was given a half banana to have with my tea. At the next house at which I called lived a little boy. I was told by his mother that he was praying for a banana. I was able to tell her that I had the answer to his prayer in my pocket. You can imagine the delight when the boy came home from school to find the answer to prayer! He did not seem to mind that he had only a half answer to his prayer! If he had prayed more, it might have been that I would have received a whole banana and he would have got a full answer!

The Bible says that God makes all things work together for good to those who love God. How true this is in regard to prayer. We pray about something that we cannot do for ourselves or cannot provide for ourselves. We pray, then the wheels of "all things work together for good" begin to turn.

Margaret M. Laddow's page

"The Word of God which effectually worketh"
(1 Thessalonians 2:13)

There they were blazoned across the wide wall of the cathedral facing the congregation for all to see, the glorious words of Scripture: "God was in Christ reconciling the world unto Himself" (2 Corinthians 5:19)

This lovely text, containing the very essence of the gospel, is to be found in a Roman Catholic Cathedral in Mexico. Rev. John G. Weller, B.A. of The British and Foreign Bible Society saw this text and told of the joy he experienced when worshipping in the various churches. On one particular occasion he worshipped with Pentecostal believers in the morning, in a Presbyterian church in the afternoon, and finally in the R.C. cathedral edifice. Without exception, the worshippers were joyful and lively in praise and prayer. Great enthusiasm abounded and, most significant of all, many carried and read their Bibles, even in the service in the cathedral. Isn't it satisfying to hear news of progress and triumph in the propagation of the gospel and the distribution of the Scriptures?

Two facts from Mr. Weller's address thrilled me: 175 million units of Scripture have been distributed by the B.F.B.S. and 97% of the world's languages now have translations of at least portions of the Bible.

In one year the B.F.B.S. has shared in over 800 translations and revisions of the Bible. New Guinea, with its 700 tribal languages, now has a Pidgin New Testament suitable for all its people and the Christian Church is increasing twice as rapidly as is the population.

Reverting to the amazing hunger for the Word in predominantly R.C. countries, Bishop Howell, recently in charge of the longest Anglican diocese in the world comprising Chile, Bolivia and Peru, tells how the Bible has become part of the scene in Latin America. The Church went into S.America with a closed Bible, but recently he saw in a city in Northern Peru a R.C. bookshop offering an open Bible as the first prize in a raffle! On another occasion he saw 25,000 people surging into the square, a traditional place of violent revolution. This revolution was bloodless. These people carried, not rifles, but Bibles! Their new theme was "Onward Christian Soldiers". The Bible's message had revolutionised their lives.

One of the greatest Bible sellers in Ghana is a veteran R.C. missionary, Rev. Henry Janssen, who works amongst the outcasts of society — thieves, prostitutes and petty criminals — in the shanty town of Ashaiman on the outskirts of Accra. In 1968 he sold over 39,000 copies of the Scriptures from his little stall and he said: "I could sell 100,000 copies if I only had more time."

Mgr. Conroy from the R.C. cathedral in Motherwell once said to a gathering of the Motherwell ministers' fraternal: "There is a wind of change blowing in our church; one might almost say it is a revolution. Since the Pope allowed the Bible to be read by the people in their own vernacular, there is a demand for Bibles everywhere. I will not say that the Bible has not been read by our lay people in the past, but I do say it has never been read on such a scale as it is today." He added, very significantly: "One cannot read the Bible without experiencing a change in one's outlook."

In a recent book, Reformation, the R.C. writer John M. Todd insists that the Bible has been and will always be at the centre of Reformation. I am sure that my readers will say "Amen" to that! We may well wonder if the new wave of Bible reading is the prelude to another Reformation in the R.C. church and the forerunner of a great spiritual revival. We pray most fervently that it may be so.

All Scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness.

Chocolate Soldiers

by Tony Williams

Pastor of Elim Pentecostal Church, West Bromwich, Birmingham

IN most Christian hymn-books there are some songs with an army-type background, like, "Soldiers of Christ arise", "Onward, Christian Soldiers!" and "Stand up, stand up for Jesus".

Paul wrote about fighting a good fight. He also detailed the armour of the Christian warrior.

The great William Booth caught this vision and the Salvation Army was born.

The Christian life is a battle which is very hard to fight. In a normal war the enemy is human; Christians battle against satanic enemies.

Christ's call is very fair. He does not force folk to enlist, as did the press gangs of old. He clearly said, "If any man will be My disciple, let him deny himself and follow Me." What could be fairer than this?

"Disciple" indicates one who is disciplined. Every great army is founded on discipline. There are ranks and various duties in every armed force and the Christian army is no exception.

When you think about it, there are three types who reveal themselves.

Defenders

The faith in Jesus Christ of millions has lasted and lasted, because in every decade there have been those who were controlled by discipline. They are a big problem to the Devil. They live for Christ in what they say, think and do. They are alert to every snare and trap that evil seeks to lay in their path. They keep going, because they are in constant touch with their great Commander-in-Chief.

These people keep in training by attending the training centre of the Christian faith — their local church. There they equip themselves for war by prayer and Bible study.

These soldiers make a minister's heart glad. He knows that the Kingdom of God on earth can be extended because of the type of people he has working with him. God can and does use them. Their love, their loyalty and their desire to please their Saviour keep them from becoming like the other two types.

Dissenters

This type is a problem to everybody including themselves. They attempt the impossible: they try to please two masters. They play at being double agents.

Jesus rightly said that no man can serve two masters. No-one is very sure of those who try. They seem to disagree with everybody. Only they are right. Everybody and everything else are wrong.

Here is the bad apple that can cause the rest of the box to go off. They are indecisive. They don't know whether to defend or to desert, so they dissent. In the meantime they are useless all round.

The enemy comes off best. They are too busy to fight for the truth and they are so undecided as to where their service should go, that even the Devil is not too sure of them.

This type are chocolate soldiers. They look like, talk like, walk like and even sing like Christian soldiers. When things get hot, however, they melt. The soft centres don't help, either.

As much as I feel sorry for deserters, I'd rather have a person who wants out than a person who is half and half. God supports this feeling about the lukewarm. His reaction is most unpleasant (Revelation 3:16).

Deserters

A deserter of the faith is one who has rebelled. He has turned and run away from the cause and from the authority of the Commander. The Bible word for this sort is "backslider". If all the backsliders were to make their way back to their churches, they would not be big enough to hold them.

Backsliders fight another battle every day. Having tasted of God's best, they try satisfying themselves with the Devil's husks.

In spite of the dissenters and the deserters, there will always be the defenders. The Christian faith needs its defenders what with all the unbelief and modernistic thought which are going about. Jesus Christ has given His assurance that He will stand by every soldier of the cross until the trumpet sounds for the end of the fight.

God help us to be sure of the greatest, highest honour in life . . . standing for truth and right — and Jesus said, "I am the truth".

Notes
by
D.C. Lewis

Monday, September 25th

Matthew 10:16-33

"Fear ye not therefore, ye are of more value than many sparrows." (v.31).

Divine care in intimate detail is assured as we look to God in every situation. There is provision for our every need. God, who feeds the sparrows, will surely meet every need. Protection is assured, for not one sparrow shall fall. How comprehensive is His care! Fear not! "Casting all your care upon Him; for He careth for you." (1 Peter 5:7).

Tuesday, September 26th

Matthew 10:34-42

"He that taketh not his cross, and followeth after Me, is not worthy of Me." (v.38).

Discipleship in depth will always mean taking up the cross and following Christ. We need to be delivered from adherence to those things that would prevent us from a close identification with Him: earthly relationships, family ties (v.37), comfort and the temptation to take the easier way. To tread the pathway of suffering, even to lose our lives for His sake we must be prepared for these.

Wednesday, September 27th

Matthew 11:1-19

"Art thou He ... or do we look for another?" (v.3).

John the Baptist doubted through confinement in the dark recesses of the prison. His soul had become depressed. How soon he had forgotten God's declaration: "This is My beloved Son" (3:17)! In times of doubt and despair remember His promises, the assurances from His Word, and that He is alive and exercising the same ministry (v.5). Jesus lives!

Thursday, September 28th

Matthew 11:20-30

"Come unto Me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." (v.28).

The invitation of Christ to a confused, heavily-encumbered people comes anew to us today. To the labouring and heavy laden Christ gives ease, relief, refreshment, recreation and blessed quiet (v.29, Amp. N.T.). He brings comfort also. His yoke is not hard, sharp or pressing; it is comfortable, gracious and pleasant. How can we refuse the invitation of the great Burden-bearer?

Friday, September 29th

Matthew 12:1-21

"In His name shall the Gentiles trust." (v.21)

His Name is precious, beloved of God (v.18) and beloved of men. It is as ointment poured forth. His name is powerful. He shall proclaim and show forth judgment to the nations (v.18). His name is full of promise. "In His name shall the Gentiles trust" and set their hopes (v.21).

Jesus the name high over all

In hell or earth or sky.

Trust Him today and prove the power of His name!

Saturday, September 30th

Matthew 12:22-37

"He that is not with Me is against Me" (v.30).

Christ declares that there is no neutrality in relationship to our identification with Him. We are for Christ or against Him. To be with Him we stand for truth, purity, tenderness, compassion, honesty, integrity. Christ calls us under His banner to be identified closely with His cause, to stand firmly for Him. There cannot be a neutral position. Let us boldly take our stand with Him and for Him! His cross is the conquering sign. His presence and power are assured as we identify ourselves with Him.

Sunday, October 1st

Matthew 12:38-50

"Who is My mother? and who are my brethren!" (v.48).

Family relationships must never claim priority. Brother, sister, mother must always be highly esteemed and loved in the bonds of family relationships, but Christ's claim must always come first. Beware of the pressure of family cares that prevent us doing His will in everything. To place even our dearest one before Him cannot ever meet with His approval.

The Mount of Transfiguration

by H. Burton-Haynes

"He was transfigured before them" (Matthew 17:2)

AS Calvary loomed before the Saviour, casting its sombre shadow across His pathway, our Lord gradually unfolded His Divine Sonship and His redeeming mission to His disciples.

The effect was most disturbing, so much so, that Peter even reproved the Master, saying, "This shall not be unto you." While His disciples were still brooding over His words He took Peter, James and John into a high mountain apart. In fellowship with Jesus and a deputation of the glorified — Moses and Elijah — they learned that death in His case would not spell loss only, but infinite gain, not shame only, but eternal glory.

Why did He choose three men to form the innermost circle of the apostolic fellowship? Was it because they were more akin to their Master in sympathy and spirit, more advanced in spiritual things than their brethren, and therefore more capable of apprehending the inwardness and deep significance of such a happening?

It says that He was transfigured before them. An essential purpose of the vision was for their benefit. Philip was too sense-bound; "Lord, show us the Father", he had asked. Thomas, like Muck-rake, was always looking down. Judas — his eyes were blinded by avarice; the money-bag filled his thoughts. There had to be a capacity for the vision, a measure of close affinity with the Spirit of Christ.

"He was transfigured before them". Matthew, describing this scene of ineffable beauty, said that His face did shine as the sun. Mark expressed that the whiteness of the light was like snow glistening in the sunshine. Luke, in his account, said that the glory was as dazzling as lightning in its brilliance. Peter sums it up in his Epistle: "We were eye witnesses of His majesty." The descriptions suggest a vision of splendour, of overwhelming beauty and glory, that which arrests and subdues the mind to the point of worship and adoration. Christ's inherent majesty flashed forth as the curtain of His humanity was drawn aside for a few moments.

Our Lord reached every consummation of His life by stages and processes that are open to us all. Our lives, too, may be transfigured.

We are transfigured by contemplation. His whole life was marked by the contemplation of His Father's glory. He was never detached from men. There was nothing exclusive or seclusive in His manner of life. No suggestion of the monastic occupied His religious observances. Humankind was in His heart and in His thoughts. But he never lost sight of the glory!

When the darkness of the cross was closing around Him He prayed, "Father, glorify Thy Son, that Thy Son also may glorify Thee." Acknowledging the transcendence of His transfiguration, it is still true that we are being changed as we are engaged with the glory of God.

Moses, returning from the mountain of vision, caught some gleam of the Light which he beheld.

We are transfigured by communion. "As He prayed, the fashion of His countenance was altered." Prayer is making contact with God and, by means of this sacred intercourse, the life takes on a heavenly lustre. Thought, speech, conduct are refined by Divine grace. This refinement is to a believer what bloom is to a flower. Unsuspected gifts, which have lain dormant, are revealed. Spiritual genius, which has slumbered, is awakened to conscious life. Doubts and fears are changed into blazing hope. The character is "strengthened with all might unto all patience, and longsuffering with joyfulness".

We are transfigured by consecration. There upon the hill top He laid His life at the Father's feet for the suffering of death and the glory of God enveloped and possessed Him, like the fire that came down upon the ancient altar and consumed the burnt offering.

The surrendered life is the life that shines with heaven's beauty. At His coming, the transfiguration will be complete. The persistent habit will receive its crowning reward. Perfect vision will result in perfect likeness.

UGANDA has occupied the world's headlines of late. The turnabout in the attitude of the Ugandan leader towards Great Britain has taken many by surprise. His reported anti-Israeli statements should not have had the same effect, for he is a Moslem and his natural sympathies would tend towards the Arabs.

We specially commend to your prayers the many Christian workers in the country including our own Lightbearer, Miss Lilian Jones. She has but newly returned to her post as a lecturer in a teacher training college. Some of us had the great privilege of meeting her at the recent Elim Missionary Society Conference at Elim Bible College, Capel, Surrey. Her contributions were of the highest order and her obvious dedication to her calling was a matter of approving and thankful comment. May she and the many hundreds of other Christians be wonderfully upheld in the time of trouble and testing.

Africa is a study in human nature. The colonial days were too often a record of greed and cupidity, though Arab influence of earlier days was very strong and has left its mark. Many of Africa's problems since its many countries became independent stem directly from the history of the nineteenth and early twentieth centuries. "Darkest Africa" was always the phrase, with the next remark always being "with its teeming millions". Literature of the period abounds in words like "natives", "savages" and the like. It somehow betokened an attitude.

Dependent territories were set up without regard to tribal boundaries or customs. The languages of the countries became English, French, Spanish, Portuguese simply by the accident of the dominating nations. These things have left a heritage which will probably never be removed entirely.

It could be said that colonialism did have many beneficial effects. Systems of law and order, communications, education, government, health services, development of resources were begun.

It also has to be conceded that very often the Christian missionary was the first on the scene in many countries, to be followed by the trader and the administrator. The Christian Church has made a great impact on the whole Continent, though the farther north one goes, the greater is the influence of the Moslem faith.

It is a tangled, troubled picture. Pray for Africa. Pray for the thousands of Christians. Pray for those who are training potential leaders in many fields, like Miss Jones.

God save Africa!

KENSINGTON TEMPLE

Pastor: E. R. Corsie

WE recently enjoyed the third visit of Portuguese children.

Twenty-eight children (pictured above), mostly chosen from the poorest homes, trained and in the care of Mr. and Mrs. Riberio, missionaries of the Christian International Refugee Mission, enjoyed a holiday in England. Their songs and testimonies, learned by heart in English, were an inspiration to the Sunday evening congregation. Mr. and Mrs. L. Pick, Directors of C.I.R.M. have old membership ties with Kensington Temple and for many years have sent clothing and toys to many parts of the world and to our own Elim missionaries.

THE Westcliff Male Voice Choir were our musical guests for the opening night of our annual convention. Six lovely pieces were rendered during the evening, conducted by A. Bush and J. Smee.

The church was packed each night with members, friends, and visitors from near and far. The congregation sang heartily under the wonderful leadership of our resident minister.

Marie Hamilton's beautiful solo voice brought great blessing to us on Sunday and Monday.

Pastor J. T. Bradley, our guest preacher, was the chosen vessel through whom the Spirit of God flowed freely. The Word was with power. We thank God for anointed ministry. "Lift Jesus Higher" was the repeated longing of every heart expressed in the lovely chorus.

AUGUST opened with the Camp Weekend when campers from the Elim Youth Camp at Whitecliffe Bay took part in the services. Pastors I.W. Lewis and B.C. Vidamour preached with much blessing. This was the best camp weekend for many years. It was a tonic to see the zeal of the young teenagers.

A fortnight later the church celebrated its minister's third anniversary and H.W. Greenway, the former Secretary-General, was the guest preacher. He last visited the island at the opening of the Albert Street premises in 1966 and was pleasantly surprised at the improvements to the building. A group from Newport Salvation Army took part on the Saturday evening and Mr. H. Feasey, Church Secretary and Miss A. Jerram, Sisterhood Secretary, paid tribute to the work of Pastor and Mrs. Hall and presented them with an automatic coffee percolator. After the meeting the congregation enjoyed a Buffet Supper to celebrate the Pastor's anniversary and his obtaining the degree of Bachelor of Divinity from London University. Mr. and Mrs. Greenway ministered in song on Sunday evening. Great blessing attended the ministry throughout the weekend.

The month ended with ministry from Pastor A. Linford, editor of Redemption Tidings, on Bank Holiday Sunday evening. His forthright presentation of the gospel brought this eventful month to a fitting climax.

PONTYPRIDD

Pastor: R. Hughes

PEOPLE from all over South Wales and from across the Bristol Channel converged on Pontypridd for the annual convention.

This popular Bible Convention had three speakers:

Leslie Green, who now resides in Pontypridd, Stanley Beresford, a much travelled preacher from Blackburn, and Philip Powell of Manchester, who is not only a minister of a thriving church, but also the director of a Christian Press, publishing evangelistic news sheets and Bible correspondence courses.

The ministries of the guest speakers, coupled with congregational singing of the highest order, made for happy gatherings. There were added enjoyments through the singing of Mrs. Grace Wood of Cardiff, the "Soul-seekers" youth singing group from Glynneath, and the Elim girls' guitar group.

All the meetings were chaired by Ray Hughes, and tribute must be paid to the many local church workers who catered for the extensive number of visitors and attended to the many details that go to make up such a vigorous convention.

— Pontypridd Observer

The Minister adds:

We had five Baptisms in the Holy Spirit during convention week and praise God for several youngsters converted through our open air witness. There is a real move of God among the teenagers of the church and we are holding a second baptismal service in two months, making ten baptisms in the first nine months of this year. "This is the Lord's doing and it is marvellous in our eyes"!

RAY HUGHES

SILVERDALE

Pastor: D. S. Williams

WE are delighted to report that progress is the theme in our church.

Our minister has arranged regular visits to Thistlebury senior citizen's home as a result of which eleven decisions have been made. Three have been saved in our services, two baptised in the Spirit and new members added to the roll. Attendances have increased at both morning and evening services. The building fund has doubled in ten months. A young people's walk raised £103 of which £50 went to the building fund, the remainder being used to buy a tape recorder. The church has been redecorated.

At a recent baptismal service shared with Crewe church and convened by Pastor M. J. Epton, two were baptised. Our Pastor preached. Pastor Williams is youth commissioner for the presbytery. He organised a presbytery quiz for Sunday schools. Our team reached the semi-final. Pastor P. J. Hill preached at our graduation service. The children took a major part. Our Pastor also booked the ideal facilities at Keele University for an Elim sports' day and a rally in the 600-seater University church.

We appreciate the tireless efforts and zeal of our minister in so many ways. One member specially desires to give thanks for his help and ministry to her and to her family during the year.

We give God all the praise and glory.

PORTSMOUTH

Pastor: A. A. Biddle

AN interpreter attended a wedding at the Elim Pentecostal Church, Arundel Street, Portsmouth — when Mlle. Marie-Claude Sola was married to Mr. William Knipe - so that French visitors could follow the service.

Although the service was conducted in English, the vows were taken in both French and English, and the interpreter, Rev. L. Wigglesworth, explained various points of the service in French for the benefit of visitors.

The bride, the daughter of M. and Mme. R. J. Sola, of Mourenx, France, has been teaching French at Copnor. The bridegroom, a fruit grower, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. Knipe, of Fairview, Mount Drive, Catisfield. While in England, the bride has been living at Purbrook Gardens, Purbrook.

Given away by her father, the bride wore an organza gown with a matching hat, and carried sweet peas and daisies.

She was attended by her sisters, Mlle. Jocelyne Sola, and Mlle. Nicole Sola, and by Miss Bryony Backhouse and Miss Caroline Foot.

Mr. V. R. Foot was best man, and Rev. A. A. Biddle officiated.

. . . Sally and the will of God

TIME-RICH Sally, aged 16, can spend hours as a millionaire spends pennies, engaged closely on the finer points of the will of God. She could do worse. Various surveys reveal that most people think about sex at least once every fifteen minutes. Alexandre Dumas' Dutch flower specialist concerned himself solely with his black tulip. Sally cultivates her soul. Eventually, however, she will have to leave the hot-house atmosphere of her youth-led room-meetings for the normal weather of life. Her special "leadings" will not then bloom so exotically. Her Her spiritual "ESP" (as the science-fiction boys describe extra-sensory perception) will lose much of its mystique when responsibilities come. Duties will leave her little opportunity for indulging her more temperamental inclinations.

For the young, both in years and in spiritual experience, dependence on parents is natural. At 16, Sally is phasing out of childhood, when everything — hair style to school route — has been selected for her by Mum. Adulthood looms uncomfortably close with the need to choose her own patterns. Despite teenage rebelliousness, she looks around instinctively for somebody to make her decisions. When her assorted urges come, which she has not learned to understand, it is warmly comforting, even superior, to claim, "The Lord led me".

Sallys come in all sizes, sexes and ages. They feel lost without a tight rein. God must steer their every step by direct revelation. But we are supposed to exercise wisdom ourselves. God's people are not God's marionettes. There is guidance, but Sally wants enslavement. "Be ye not as the horse, or as the mule, which have no understanding, whose mouth must be held in with bit and bridle", says the Bible. God deals with us by enlightening our minds, not by taking away the right to have our own will. "I will instruct thee and teach thee in the way which thou goest: I will guide thee with Mine eye". We are sons, not trams.

True, there are many instances of Divine compulsions and strange directives, from Noah building the ark to Smith Wigglesworth the preacher-plumber buying ostrich feathers. You can "read all about it". But what you can't read about is any record of fretting, sweating anxiety in case the voice of the Spirit is not heard. God's workers need not worry. God will see that you do what you should do, if you are willing. The Apostles did not develop hyper-sensitiveness and depend each moment on specific instructions, looking back all the time in case they'd failed to toe the line without realising it.

The disciples seemed relaxed: "Gay troubadors - singing adventurers, following Christ and quite sure of themselves". They seemed to find Christ's yoke easy and that He wouldn't have His servants say, "You never know what He wants". If there was a job to be done, they did it. They didn't have troubled heart-searchings when they wanted to sharpen their pencil point or sing a solo. Asked to help, they did not reply, "I must ask the Lord". They judged that "Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might".

Paul, for example, just went. He didn't approach Barnabas and announce dramatically and impressively, "God has spoken to me", but simply "Let us go again". He departed for places that God later — later mark you — forbade him to visit. Obviously he had set off there without any Divine promptings. It was enough for Paul that Christ had said, "Go ye into all the world". If there was some particular bit of it God didn't want Paul himself to go to, it was up to God to say so. God did — and does. "I, being in the way, the Lord led me".

Paul and Peter did have direct supernatural guidance. How gratifying if we have similar visionary directives so that we can claim equal status with the spiritual aristocracy of Scripture! There's just this. These rare moments moments of Divine visitation usually affected the course of history. The alleged Divine leadings by which some people have explained their odd, disturbing conduct, haven't changed sixpence. Paul's recorded movements from place to place (by my reckoning) number forty-four major departures. One was guided by Scripture, two were his own decision confirmed later by vision, and the most important one had a threefold directive by the Spirit. Only once did such guidance come while they were waiting upon God and it does not appear in that case that they were waiting upon God for this purpose.

In effect, Paul evangelised Europe with little more leading from God than some folk want before they stand up and pray in a prayer meeting. John Wesley was once told not to speak to a soul about Christ unless he was specially led by the Spirit to do so. Humbly accepting the reproof he went on a considerable journey without once opening his lips for the Lord. This proved to him that he had been wrongly advised and Wesley never again waited for such leadings. Like the apostles, he "witnessed to all both small and great". Jesus said "Go" — so why wait to be told again? Who do we think we are to demand personal orders? We are not dumb animals, but people to whom God has vouchsafed choice. He respects our choices. We don't read that the Lord went everywhere and the disciples followed. We read: "And THEY went forth ... everywhere, the Lord working with them". He goes where we go: "For the Lord thy God is with thee whithersoever thou goest". People with this confidence get things done.

When the returned captives waited the Divine moment to build their Temple again, Haggai prophesied against them: "This people say it is not time to build the house of God". When, so stirred, they began the work, the blessing of God broke upon them. Now is the time ... today is the day. Let's go!

Jenny's Birthday

Words and drawing:
Sheila Price

(James 1:23,24)

When Jenny heard the postman coming up the path, she quickly got out of bed and hurried down the stairs to see how many cards he would drop through the letterbox.

"Oh, mummy!" she called. "I have such a lot of cards. Everyone has remembered my birthday!"

Jenny arranged her cards along the top of the sideboard. After breakfast, she helped her mother to prepare cakes and sandwiches for the party.

Jenny was looking forward to her birthday party. Just before her friends were due to arrive, Jenny went upstairs to put on the dress which her mother had made for her, a pretty dress with blue spots and a big bow at the back. Jenny looked in the mirror. "Oh, mummy!" she called. "Do come and see how pretty I look! Thank you so much for making this dress for me. It is the best dress I have ever had!"

"You look very nice indeed", said Jenny's mother. "Now, if you will sit on the edge of the bed, I will arrange the ribbon in your hair".

When Jenny's mother had brushed Jenny's hair and tied the ribbon into a nice big bow, Jenny went over to the mirror again. "I do look nice, don't I, mummy?" she declared.

"Yes, Jenny, but you can't spend all day in front of that mirror. Your friends will be here at any moment and you had better get ready to welcome them to your party" was her mother's reply.

* * *

When we look into a mirror, we get a true reflection of ourselves. A mirror cannot lie.

The Bible, too, is a mirror. When we look into its pages, it shows us how much we need the love of Jesus. It sees right into our hearts. It shows us how our lives can be changed when we have Jesus as our Friend. It shows us Jesus, too. Just as a mirror cannot lie, neither can the Bible; it is the true Word of God.

"Happy Birthday, Jenny!"

The Divine Imperative

by Mrs. Madaline Coull

IT has been reported in America that the space programme is a national imperative. Taking one small word from the Bible (from what other book can you take a word and make it your stake for eternity?), I bring you the Divine imperative. Just four letters spell the word MUST, but it rings with all the emphasis of Almighty God!

A small boy is playing in the back garden. "Billy, darling, mummy wants you!" is the call. Billy seems oblivious to that female cry. With a resounding crash, an upstairs window is thrown open. A strong masculine voice booms out, "WILLIAM!" – and William is into that house before the count of three! With father it meant business. As for mother one could take a chance without fear.

When God says "must", He does not mean "maybe!"

"You MUST be born again" (John 3:7).

It is a common belief that we are all God's children. A prominent Jew, Nicodemus by name, heard from the lips of Jesus Christ Himself that this was not so. Jesus told him, "Except a man be born from above, he cannot see the kingdom of God". Naturally, Nicodemus was puzzled at first, but the Master explained that it was possible through the Word and the Spirit of God to be born again.

This sophisticated age is also a sinful one – educated, but also evil. Beneath all the arrogance – just a bluff after all – is the great big ache of storm-tossed hearts.

If you have never known that "second birthday" when you became one of the multitude who have experienced that "as many as received Him, to them gave He power [right or privilege] to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on His name" (John 1:12), you are not a child of God, but a lost soul with no hope of heaven. "You MUST be born again" – and God means just that. In Christ Jesus you will become a new creature (2 Corinthians 5:17; 1 Peter 1:23).

Let this Divine imperative capture your hearts and urge you to accept His claim. Start a new, worthwhile, sin-free life with Him.

"As Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so MUST the Son of man be lifted up" (John 3:14).

Supposing that you and I had walked this earth with Jesus and He had told us that the day drew near – a day of horror when wicked men would nail Him to a cross. What would we have said? How would we have reacted?

Like Peter, I guess, we would have rudely disagreed: "Not You, Lord, not YOU!" God had His plan, however. There was no other way, only a sinless life – "a Lamb without blemish" – could atone for a sinful race. "Even so MUST He be lifted up!"

Jesus was pointing Nicodemus back to Israel's record. A disobedient, murmuring people had been punished by fiery serpents in their midst, yet God who judges also provides a remedy, and Moses' brazen serpent on a pole was to be the focal point of their salvation and deliverance. Just to look was to bring life.

Only an uplifted Christ on Calvary's tree, "made a curse" and held by the strong, enduring love of Omnipotence, is the way back to God. "The Son of man MUST suffer" (Mark 8:31-33).

*Lifted up was He to die,
"It is finished!" – was His cry;
How in heaven exalted high,

"He MUST increase, I MUST decrease" (John 3:30).

These words were spoken by John the Baptist, a very popular preacher. No modern evangelist, however big-time and church-sponsored, can boast of such crowds as came to hear John the Baptist. "Then went out to him Jerusalem, and all Judea, and all the region round about Jordan, and were baptised of him in Jordan, confessing their sins" (Matthew 3:5,6). Preachers are human, but John always asserted that he was only the one sent to prepare the way for the Christ "unworthy even to fasten His shoes"!

Then he met Jesus by the river and for John it was day of eclipse. Pointing towards the Lord, he would direct the gaze of the throng to Jesus only. "Behold, the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world"! he cried. The only way to a happy Christian life is to let Christ have the pre-eminence. "He MUST increase", self must abdicate. "He who gives Christ second place, gives Him no place." As Paul would have it, "Christ shall be magnified in me . . . for to me to live is Christ" (Colossians 1:20,21). When He takes over, life loses its friction, its strife and its unrest.

Not I but Christ, be honoured, loved, exalted;

Not I but Christ, be seen, be known, be heard.

"He MUST needs go through Samaria" (John 4:4).

Jesus was wearied with travelling, hungry and thirsty, yet there was no short cut for Him. He chose the long way round; Divine urge and compassion MUST go where there is a need.

He MUST needs meet this woman by a well, a social outcast coming to draw water when no-one else would be around. Jesus asked her for a drink. The conversation with the Christ convinced her. She perceived that here was a "prophet, One greater than Jacob, even the Christ". She left her waterpot and went into the city to tell others. He had given her living water, a well in her, springing up into everlasting life.

Many more were won to Him that day, but He went that way just for her. The disciples could have had no need to go in search of food to appease their hunger, for He could have turned stones into bread. He need not have sought out this well and that lone woman there, for He could have spoken a word and at His feet would have bubbled up a cool crystal spring. He never forgot how imperative was His mission. He MUST always seek out and save the lost.

He is the same today. He saves, heals, comforts, strengthens and meets the deep longings of human hearts. God cannot lie, or deny Himself; He MUST keep His promises and fulfil His Word.

Have I lost that Divine imperative which marked my service in the early thrill of knowing Him? How we loved to serve our new-found Saviour; every activity in and out of church was a must. As years roll on, do we sit back?

Some of Christ's passion must have rubbed off on to the woman by the well, for those who heard her in the city were soon compelled and constrained to answer her summons, "Come, see a Man"! "Many of the city believed on Him for the saying of the woman, which testified, He told me all that ever I did... And many more believed because of His own Word."

"God is a Spirit; and they that worship Him MUST worship Him in spirit and in truth" (John 4:24).

This statement is also part of that wonderful discourse which Jesus made to His congregation of one. She was a Samaritan and pointed out to the Master that He was a Jew. Her race had their mount of worship and the Jews worshipped only in Jerusalem. Jesus bridged the gulf of tradition and pulled down every racial barrier. "The hour is come, when the true worshippers shall worship the Father in spirit and in truth."

God is not confined to a temple or to a place; the seeking soul can find God anywhere. Jesus Christ died for ALL men; our common ground is Calvary, where there is mercy, love and deliverance for all who will believe.

Many are found at the shrines of the world. Money, fame, material things, are the idols that they worship and allow to fill their lives. To know God is to love Him, to adore Him, to have Him fill our vision and crown our days with praise. We have no time or desire for other gods; we MUST worship Him.

Speaking on the Holy Spirit, an American lady preacher said, "We've got the Fire and we don't know what to do with it!" We've got the Divine Imperative, the great MUST of God: I know what I am going to do with it! Oh, that it might come to you with all the passionate passion of the Eternal One moving, urging, driving. This surrender is not to succumb to violent force, but to yield, sweetly, completely, to the irresistible influence of holy Power and everlasting Love.

Book Review

Question Mark Booklets, by Michael Eastman, published by Scripture Union, price 12p each, postage and packing 3p each extra.

This is a series of six excellently produced booklets on God, Man, Jesus, The Bible, Church and Life. Each page is mainly a cartoon-type drawing, plus the posing of a basic question or the giving of a relevant answer to the subject being dealt with. The drawings are very clever and humorous, but the humour never intrudes upon the search for reality. The booklets are in no way trivial. I would most warmly commend them for use in teenage work and youth outreach.

The booklets pose questions for group discussion and suggest relevant Bible passages. The series could well be used to help our youth in this questioning age and to help unsaved young folk at school or at work who are interested in the things of God.

The drawing on the front of the booklet on Jesus could well be misinterpreted and ought to be altered.

My two teenage daughters also read them, found them instructive, helpful, and eminently readable.

A Testimony

Trial!

by Pastor S.A. Tetteh

Church of Pentecost, Kade, Ghana

A CASE happened between the chief and the Church of Pentecost here in this town of Kade.

According to our forefathers, the only river in this town, Kadewah, is the god of the town, whose important day is Friday, so hitherto the chief and elders have made it a law prohibiting the inhabitants to fetch water from the river on Fridays.

One of our sisters, who returned from her farm on a Friday, was in dire need of water. Apart from this river, there is no other means of getting water. Not knowing what to do, she took her pot and fetched water from the river. She was immediately arrested and sent to the chief. She was consequently found guilty of breaking the law and was asked to slaughter a sheep to purify their god, the river. This she refused to do.

I was sent for and appeared before these heathen rulers of the town. I made plain to them that we, the Christians, are not bound by such laws, hence this sister should not slaughter the sheep. They became very angry but, as I stood very firm, the sister was at last freed from the penalty of slaughtering the sheep but was asked to pay an amount of N.C.2.40 to perform some customary duties to purify the river. This was also objected to.

The chief then sent for the leaders of the other Christian denominations in the town and asked them if they were in agreement with us. They answered in the affirmative. Not knowing what to do, they decided to set the sister free. Not only did they set her free, but they have also permitted all the Christians to fetch water from the river on Fridays — what a victory!

A few days later the chief, together with the second man to him, came to our church, heard the gospel and took Jesus Christ as their personal Saviour. They have since been baptised and have become members of the church. I am therefore calling all Christians to stand firm in the faith as did those other Christians of old. To God be the glory and honour! Amen!

Pastor S.A. Tetteh

Our missionary, David Mills, gives details omitted by Pastor Tetteh, no doubt because he desires God alone to have the glory:

After the trial of this sister and the verdict as reported above, the pastor received an invitation to attend a traditional feast of the chief and his rulers and to open the proceedings in prayer. What should he do? Here was a serious dilemma. If he refused he would be considered guilty of a gross insult, yet, if he went, he would probably offend his own church and the Christians of the town. How could he, a minister of Christ, pray God to bless a heathen feast? It seemed like a trap of the evil one to get him discredited one way or another and probably force him to leave the town.

After much prayer, he felt the Lord leading him and accepted the invitation. Instead of opening the proceedings in prayer for God's blessing, he prayed that God would save the chief and his elders. To use his own words: "I put as much gospel as I could into my prayer". The Spirit of the Lord used his words to bring conviction and so it was that the chief and his deputy later made their way to the church and found salvation. Praise the Lord!

Another Slant

by Ken Smith

Pastor of Elim Pentecostal Church, Erdington, Birmingham

IT wasn't cricket, but I could not resist the opportunity!

It was an important sociological study on television viewing for one of the T.V. channels. I felt that to get twenty Christians to give their opinions could be of use in the future shaping of programme material, as this was a national, not a regional survey. In the field of research work twenty people could well represent 200,000 viewers, as they would be a representative sample. Questions included the presence of offensive hearing and viewing on the screen and what types of programmes were too often screened. It included comments on religious broadcasts, which gave an open field for believers to give their views.

To get the right social and age groupings among committed Christians proved to be an exercise, but it was worth the effort. Too much violence, sex, swearing, blasphemy, presenting unchristian and immoral standards as the norm for behaviour and the effects on children all came up in the survey. The opinion on religious broadcasts was generally unfavourable among evangelical believers, as one would guess. Being at church, they cannot see them anyway. One hopes that this will have some effect on future programmes.

Moving house is always a trial! Lugging hundreds of books into the bedroom, now used as my office, made me want to be a man of one Book, for more than one reason! Abraham had a point when he lived in a tent! The amount of furniture and even junk which one accumulates is incredible. How I envied the neighbours who had not moved for forty years or so! Our near neighbour once attended our Graham Street Church and speaks of the early days of Elim in the city. George Jeffreys' campaign certainly had a tremendous impact and it is still remembered by the older generation.

Having spent almost all my life, certainly what I remember, in the Elim fellowship, the opportunity to minister at an Anglican Communion service gave me some hard thinking. I decided to accept the opportunity and felt that Isaiah 53 was appropriate. I declined the ecclesiastical dress, feeling happier in my usual collar and tie.

One had the feeling that it was out of touch with reality, as if the clergy were performing and the congregation were spectators, in spite of the repetition of passages of the Prayer Book. I was glad to take one of my men, who had been vicar's warden for many years, for I was all at sea when it came to the order of service. How I missed the open worship and the atmosphere of worship of a Pentecostal assembly. I longed for "Praise the Lord!" and other expressions of spontaneous worship. I make no plea for fanaticism, but formality appalls me. The vicar quickly drank the remaining wine, with some apparent pleasure; it seemed odd. The Creed found me on common ground to a great extent, but its repetition seemed to dull its effect rather than excite one's faith. The corporate confession of sin could be a form of escape from personal conviction of sin. It seems safer to say "us" than "me"!

Speaking of Isaiah 53 caused me to point out that Jesus Christ is the unique Vicar, in that He was our Vicar on the Cross and now pleads our case before the Throne.

I appreciated the opportunity of ministering but I felt that the form of worship which I have known for so many years brings me greater satisfaction.

I did not get all the interviews concerning television viewing among believers. It was interesting to compare the attitudes of both groups. A few objected to bad language and violence, but there was not much protest from those not in the Faith. I sensed their attitudes to spiritual things by their replies to the question concerning religious broadcasts on I.T.V. and B.B.C. and witnessed accordingly. One young man used the Lord's name in vain when I asked about religion not realising who I was and refused to accept a tract at the end of the interview. I was equally insistent, in the right spirit I trust, and he accepted one.

I cannot abide Christ's name being blasphemed, can you? God give us courage to do something about it, wisely and yet firmly, as our witness for Him!

The Letter to the Romans

9 The two Humanities

by J. Alexander Wright

FROM the Effects of Justification (4:25-5:11), and to end this second theme, we pass to a supplementary parenthesis on the two humanities, Adam's and Christ's (5:12-21). The first Adam, the man of the earth, leads to the dominion of death; the last Adam, the Lord from heaven, leads to the dominion of life eternal (1 Corinthians 15:45-47). "The credibility of the Good News depends upon the acceptance of the anthropology set forth here. The denial of our origins is a refutation of the Gospel. Can there be Christian evolutionists?" (John Murray, The Epistle to the Romans).

"By one man sin entered the world, and death by sin" (v.12): Paul takes the Genesis story as historical — the theological basis of the New Testament requires it — but by that other Man sin was taken OUT OF the world, for He "takes away the sin of the world" (John 1:29). "Had there been no sin, man would not have died" is a statement which many would question. They would argue that death was in the world before man and point to the geological remains of innumerable creatures of a vast antiquity. Death, they would say, is natural to all, and universal with man as with animals — and animals have never "sinned". Death for man, while including the physical, is, however, something more! The scriptures do not question the death of the animal creation, nor do they say "death passed upon all creatures", but "upon all men", and for MORAL reasons — i.e. "for all have sinned". Jesus said, "Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God". Because life for man is more than physical, death is more than mere physical dissolution. "In the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die" (Genesis 2:17, the margin giving the literal: "dying thou shalt die"). Though Adam lived long after his fall — until he was 930 years old — disintegration had set in, for the process of death began "in the day". Passages like, "You hath He quickened, who were dead", (Ephesians 2:1) and "She that liveth in pleasure is dead while she liveth." (1 Timothy 5:6) bear this out. Physical dissolution completes the severance from God, (Hebrews 9:27).

How "sin and death" are transmitted to posterity none can tell, but there is a causal relationship and a solidarity of the human race with Adam by which the sin of one is regarded as the sin of all. In this sense we are all sinners, but there is no guilt where there is no consent and where there is no guilt there is no punishment. What blasphemy and travesty of Divine truth then is found in that so-called Church of Rome today which bars from heaven little children who have not been baptised and condemns them to that fictitious borderland of Limbo, the babies' hell!

"Until the Law" (Romans 5:13), i.e. over 2,000 years later, though sin was present and as a monarch reigned in all its terrible sway, no charge of breaking Divine Law was made against men, although men sinned and died. No standard as yet had been set for men to violate. It was the coming of the Law which gave sin the character of transgression, i.e. personal guilt.

"Not as the offence, so also is the free gift" (v.15) is rendered: "God's act of grace is out of all proportion to Adam's wrongdoing" by the New English Bible. The one was of inevitable law — "the soul that sinneth it shall die", but the other was of God's grace, and a gift to be received! "Many" (v.15), literally "the many", means "all", as is clear from the context (compare vv. 18,19). Adam's entail led to the triumph of death, Christ's gift to the triumph of His life in us. The subjects of the kingdom of death become the monarchs of the Prince of Life (v.17): "The slaves should live all their lives like kings" J.B. Phillips translates the verse. The "abundance of grace" they exhibit is the crown they wear. We recall John Bunyan's famous Grace abounding to the chief of sinners. "Many [all] were made sinners" (v.19), i.e. were constituted so in the polluted life-stream of Adam; "many be made righteous", i.e. constituted so since they are found in the new life-stream of Christ.

"The law entered" (v.20) as an interim in God's great plan, to enhance the enormity of sin. The Law, however, was not God's first word to men, nor was it to be His last. "But where sin abounded" (v.20) — like the spring-tide, it reached its culmination at Calvary. There, through that act, God's grace "did much more abound", and "abound" is much stronger than "abounded". "Where sin was thus multiplied,

Visitor's View

1 Silent Sound

by David J. Ayling

Observations on the mission field made during a recent visit to Guyana

WHEN arrangements were made for me to visit Guyana I determined to return as well equipped as possible with things that would remind me in years to come to pray for the work here. I have collected so far one African shirt-jack, one swordfish blade, and numerous mosquito bites! To help with this library of memories, however, I brought with me a small tape recorder and have been collecting evocative sounds that to me spell "Guyana"!

This brought a great deal of amusement to local folk who watched me poised over a trench to record a loud, croaking bull frog at dusk and caught in the torrent of Georgetown traffic with microphone in hand listening to the many decibels of car horns as drivers in this tormented city displayed their musical accomplishments at every excuse!

Yet so many of the sounds which I have caught for my future interest are not heard by those who have listened to them through the years.

I caught the sound of the evening crickets starting their dusk song. They seemed to be so loud the first time I heard them that they seemed to drown even the singing in the services, yet now, after three weeks, my accustomed ears scarcely hear them.

There are many sounds like this in the spiritual life. When first we hear them, they deafen us with their message, but common usage dulls our hearing until we take them for granted.

This weekend, a great-grandmother from Ithica came to Georgetown to follow Christ through the waters of baptism. She had never travelled so far in her life. She came from that outpost of Elim up by the Berbice river from which we brought her on Saturday night. Her delight in the simple, joyful service in the Albert Street church yesterday was a joy to behold. She woke us at 4.30 a.m., softly singing the hymns she had learned by heart at our mission in the heart of the sugar plantations. She claimed: "This is the greatest day of my life" as she prepared to follow Christ with her simple faith.

Today she has gone back to Ithica by the long distance bus carrying with her memories of her experience of a lifetime.

When next I break bread in any Sunday morning service, or listen to the sound of a youthful, enthusiastic choir singing out their faith, I hope to remember again that rapture which she portrayed with her simple joy in Christ.

One of God's charges to Israel was that they had grown dull of hearing. So often it is true of us. We need a freshness of spirit to hear the sound of the still, small voice of God when our faith has become a patter of behaviour rather than a rhapsody of love.

Try and catch afresh the wonder of your salvation today. "He that hath ears to hear let him hear"!

The Holy Spirit and the Preparation of His Church by Jose Passoa

Text: 1 Corinthians 2:12, 13; 2 Corinthians 4:18.

THERE is no substitute for the Holy Spirit in the preparation of His church. To try to substitute the Holy Spirit by human talents, programmes, money, political power or influence, is to destroy the Biblical foundations and to reduce the mysteries of God to earthly matters. Ministers of Christ are supposed to be stewards of the mysteries of God (1 Corinthians 4:1). They must speak the wisdom of God in a mystery, even the hidden wisdom (1 Corinthians 2:7). Only the Holy Spirit can and will reveal to us the mysteries of God, without which there is no true church.

Consider some of these mysteries:

The mystery of the church itself (Ephesians 5:31, 32);

The mystery of salvation (John 3:7-10);

The mystery of faith (1 Timothy 3:9);

The mystery of godliness (1 Timothy 3:16).

In the present materialistic age, this time of great affluence and ease, these mysteries are being ignored. The invisible is being substituted by the visible, the supernatural by the natural, the intangible by the tangible. The psalmist asks: "If the foundations be destroyed, what can the righteous do?"

He can mourn and weep (Matthew 5:4);

He can denounce and rebuke (Jeremiah 1:17);

He can warn and teach (Colossians 1:28);

He can fast and pray (James 5:16).

How desperately we need the Holy Spirit to prepare His Church as well as His servants, sending a great awakening, a mighty revival of conviction and repentance!

Jose Pessoa is the Pastor of the Lisbon Pentecostal church with 4,000 members. He served as a missionary in Portuguese West Africa. He is also a teacher at the Lisbon Bible Institute and has travelled widely in the Lord's service.

This same Jesus

TEA was over. In the pleasant lull before the bustle of getting off to the Sunday evening service our hostess said, "I wish we could sing 'Sweeping through the gates of the new Jerusalem, Washed in the blood of the Lamb', but I hesitate to ask for this hymn because it has a sad beginning."

Turning to number 788 in Redemption Hymnal I scanned the verses and found them to be really heart-warming and soundly fundamental. Without premeditation I linked them with the life and recent homecall of dear Marion Paint, missionary teacher, village and market evangelist, even in the forbidden land of Nepal, and of recent years a kindly lecturer and counsellor at Elim Bible College.

We sang the hymn that was requested and, though unknown to many younger members of the congregation, it gathered volume and zest as the verses proceeded.

On the following day, when searching for a card, I came across part of a letter from Marion Paint written from Gorakhpur, N. India, telling of a wonderful vision.

The vision was given to a believer in Thailand. Its genuineness was confirmed by one of the missionaries. I quote from the letter: "He saw the heavens open and the Son of Man step across the threshold to return to this earth. There was, as it were, a great staircase and our Lord began to descend it. Never before had the realisation of Christ's manhood been so keen. He was clothed in gold, but He was a MAN".

Doesn't it quicken your heart-beat and help you to lift up your head when you consider such a precious revelation? — our coming Saviour, our World-Ruler, yet a Man. We must always remember the words of the heavenly bystanders on the Mount of Olives in Acts 1:11: "This same Jesus". How reassuring to the disciples were those words and how tender and comforting as their eyes strained to catch the last glimpse of that beloved Form!

Is He "this same Jesus" to you? Is He a familiar, intimate companion? Have you cultivated His friendship? Marion Paint gladly went through the gates of the New Jerusalem. Jesus said, "Come up higher!" and she responded and went to meet her Master and Friend.

The Lord Jesus may come again before you have to face death. Many believers have had visions telling of His return. Through the Gifts of tongues, interpretation and prophecy again and again the Holy Spirit is announcing to the Church Christ's imminent return. He is poised and ready to obey and to descend when God His Father gives the command. The Son of Man, the Son of God, the kingly One, the Lord of lords, will come again. Are you ready to meet Him?

Yet There is Room

*The Lamb's bright hall of song,
With its fair glory, beckons thee along.
Day is declining, and the sun is low;
The shadows lengthen, light makes haste to go.
The Bridal hall is filling for the feast;
Pass in! Pass in! and be the Bridegroom's guest.*

*Yet there is room! Still open stands the gate —
The gate of love: it is not yet too late.
Louder and sweeter sounds the loving call:
Come, lingerer, come! Enter that festal hall.
Ere night that gate may close and seal thy doom:
Then, the last loud cry, "No room! No room!"*

*Room, room, still room!
Oh enter, enter now.*

H. Bonar, D.D.

Letter to the Romans (continued) grace immeasurably exceeded it" (N.E.B.). Study the "much mores" of this chapter. "Sin hath reigned unto death" (v.21), triumphing in the marring of the God-like image, but now grace reigns to restore that image and to bring the lost to life eternal.

Asians with Passports

by Eldin R. Corsie

National Youth Director

"WE have nothing against them but . . ." — so we begin to state our attitude to the vast immigrant population in our midst. The thought of perhaps 55,000 Asians from Uganda suddenly invading our streets has filled people with alarm and concern. It is not that they entertain racial prejudice, but that these islands seem so over-populated. This influx presents problems for educational, housing, employment and other authorities.

"Little India" is in Southall, London. This nickname is applied to the concentration of Indian people who live in an area of ten streets where eighty per cent of the people are immigrants. Turbans, saris, curry and rice, bazaars and temples make the visitor think that this is Calcutta, not Southall. Now it seems that "Little India" will become bigger!

There are over 250,000 Indians in this country, mainly from the states of Punjab and Gujarat. The former are mainly adherents of the Sikh religion, the latter are Hindus. Some 73,000, mainly Muslims, also came from Pakistan. There are 59,190 Cypriots, adherents of the Eastern Orthodox Church.

The Church continues to expand its missionary work in remote corners of the world. There is little difficulty in stirring interest in the Asian homeless of Bangladesh. The Asian homeless of Bradford do not excite the same enthusiasm. These people are (with the exception of a very few Christians among them) adherents of their ancestral faiths. Their mosques or gurdwaras are springing up everywhere.

Christianity to Asian immigrants means our British way of life. We are a Christian country in their eyes. Our permissive society, our materialism, are part of the Christian religion to them. They are not impressed.

The Church is presented with an opportunity to reach this ready-made mission field. Asians with their own religion, dress, language and diet, do not strongly desire integration. They make deliberate efforts to retain their national consciousness. The young Asian, however, is particularly open to the truth. He or she will not be completely enmeshed in the cultural web of their parents and grandparents. From the age of five the children are integrated into British schools. Inevitably in their teens they will be pulled two ways — between home and British culture. The majority are not able to resist the fashions of our western culture. This accounts for the thousands who flock to bingo halls on Sundays!

Here is a challenge to your youth group. An evangelistic outreach to Asians must be backed by prayer. Many of us will have to pray for grace to love them. The Church can provide amenities for Asians to be taught our culture and learn our language. The neighbourly attitude will do more for the gospel than mere street preaching.

Many missionaries, retired and otherwise, would be ready to address gatherings of such people in their languages, Hindustani, Urdu, Punjabi, etc. They would also advise regarding customs and courtesies. It must be appreciated, for instance, that men and women from Asia group separately for all social and religious activities outside the home. Even in places of worship they sit separately. Sex is not openly discussed or even mentioned in public.

The British and Foreign Bible Society and the Scripture Gift Mission can provide gospels and tracts for distribution. The Christian Literature Crusade stock books in the languages of Asian people.

Another way of contacting them is to find employment where many of them work. After getting to know them, invite them to your home for a meal. Be careful that you do not serve anything that contravenes the dietary laws of their religion. The writer has found Asian people to be courteous and deeply appreciative of any hospitality extended to them.

The value of evangelising Asians is inestimable. Those who respond to the claims of Christ will, no doubt, correspond with their families and friends in Asian countries. Others will desire to return to their continent to preach the gospel.

These people need love and friendship. Will we fulfil the commission of Christ to preach the gospel to every creature . . . including Asians?

Monday, October 2nd

Matthew 13:1-23

"Some an hundredfold, some sixty, some thirty." (v.23).

IT is easy to grow discouraged when one considers the seed which does not bear fruit as it could — that which falls on the stony ground or among thorns — but the productivity of the good ground far outweighs the disappointment in the others. The fruitfulness of one Christian life well lived can surpass all our imagination and hopes. That word of God you pass on today may spring up into an Appollos, Spurgeon, or Whitefield. This Scripture that you read today may transform your spiritual life. It is our reception of the seed that counts. Give the Word of God a chance in your life today!

Tuesday, October 3rd

Matthew 13:24-43

"So shall it be in the end" (v.40).

The end always counts. We can become disheartened when we look for immediate results from our work. The enemy of souls seems to get so much more instant success with the sowing of evil. The good seems to be lost in the harvest of sin. There are differences between good and evil, however: in their sowing (vv.23,24); in their growing (v.26); and in the final showing, (vv.42,43). Keep the final harvest in view today and the tares will not discourage you!

Wednesday, October 4th

Matthew 13:44-58

"One pearl of great price" (v.46).

The gospel is a thing of quality. This age count goods in quantity. Success is measured by the diversity of our aims and desires. Our single aim for God counts in the Saviour's reckoning. "One thing have I desired of the Lord", cries the psalmist (Psalm 27:4), yet in that one thing he had everything. So it is with the soul who sells all to gain the pearl of great price. One glimpse of Him will make the sacrifice seem as nothing. May the pearl of great price adorn my life and living today!

Thursday, October 5th

Matthew 14:1-21

"Give ye them to eat" (v.16).

We can always find feasible reasons for shelving our spiritual responsibilities. The disciples (v.15) seemed to have every reason for their suggestion. The desert place, the wrong time, the size of the crowd, were good reasons for not doing any more. Christ had a better reason why He should act (v.14) — He was "moved with compassion". Compassion-filled eyes see opportunities where others see only the obstacles.

Friday, October 6th

Matthew 14:22-36

"Walking on the sea" (v.25).

There was a storm. Christ felt it as he knelt in prayer on the mount. The dismissed crowd felt it as they slowly left, their half-formulated plans of making Christ a king crushed by His refusal. The disciples felt it as they reluctantly rowed out into the night. Note that He "constrained" them to go (v.22). They felt alone and disappointed as the waves beat into the ship, but at that moment Christ used the very storm waves as a pathway into their boat. Have we let Him use our storms to get closer to us?

Saturday, October 7th

Matthew 15:1-20

"Knowest thou that the Pharisees were offended?" (v.12).

We forget that the Pharisees at the time of Christ were not looked upon as hypocrites, but as the greatest examples of religious behaviour. Only when Christ came as the true light did His perfection show up the flaws in their religious observances. Only when they stood next to the Christ were they shown for what they really were. The best test for a paste jewel is to put it alongside a real one. Do not judge your spiritual progress by the saint in your assembly. How do you stand in the light of Christ?

Sunday, October 8th

Matthew 15:21-28

"He answered her not a word" (v.23).

The silence of Jesus was not a snub; it was a challenge. Doubt, fear and self turn away mortally wounded when Christ does not immediately answer just as we want. Faith will worship still at His feet and find enough from the crumbs that fall from his table to meet all our need. When God does not instantly answer our every whim, it is often only our pride that is hurt. That must be dealt a blow before faith can flourish!

A personal Letter from the Field Superintendent

Dear Friends,

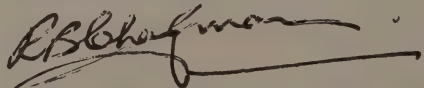

We feel sure you share with us in gratitude to God for souls that have been won through our Pioneer and other Evangelistic efforts. We are thankful too for the valuable assistance you have given in the realm of prayer and finance.

Once more we are round to the season of the year when we present to you our appeal for your ANNUAL THANK-OFFERING for EVANGELISM. Last year the response was better than usual and you kindly contributed over £2,200. We would say thank you and we trust you feel the achievements of the year were worth your sacrifice. Nevertheless, such a figure only represents about 12p. per head of our Sunday evening congregations. If we are to continue this vital work of pioneer evangelism to open new areas across Britain to the full gospel we need much more help. Last year's offering provided a figure equivalent to what would be needed for two major crusades and costs are ever rising.

I wonder are we all doing our part to open up Britain for God? Please contribute liberally to the cause of Evangelism. Special envelopes can be obtained from your minister or, if you prefer, send your gift direct to Headquarters and designate it to the THANK-OFFERING.

Thank you and God bless you.

Yours through Grace,

R. B. CHAPMAN.

Gifts and communications can be sent to:-

DO you ever feel astonished that the truth of the Second Coming of our Lord Jesus Christ seems to be hidden from so many?

To the discerning eye, it is self-evident that the world demands to be run as a whole. Sectional interests can no longer take priority. As the rich get richer and the poor become poorer among the nations, as the problems of the environment and of ecology intensify, as political ideologies proliferate, it becomes ever more necessary for there to be global government.

We are among those who believe that our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ will quite literally be King of kings and Lord of lords here, on this very earth. As we gaze on a troubled, increasingly frightened world, we can but cry with longing, "Even so, come, Lord Jesus".

That these things are not revealed to millions is illustrated by the generation in Israel at the time of our Lord's crucifixion. He was then the King of the Jews if they had but known it. When we add that they were proud possessors of the ancient Scriptures, for them a matter of great moment, their myopia is all the more amazing.

The Church now should be preaching the Second Coming with renewed vigour and determination. We believe in the personal, pre-millennial return of our Lord. "Let the redeemed of the Lord say so" concerning this vital revelation.

Surely the way is made for us. If Paul could write to the Thessalonians: "But of the times and the seasons, brethren, ye have no need that I write unto you. For yourselves know perfectly that the day of the Lord so cometh as a thief in the night.", then we can positively declare that this modern generation should read the signs of the times which are so patent. Ours is to proclaim that the Lord, the righteous Judge, is coming — and soon.

When we go on to read: "For when they shall say, Peace and safety; then sudden destruction cometh upon them, as travail upon a woman with child; and they shall not escape.", we must be stirred to a renewed vigour in forthtelling the future — the coming of Christ for His Church and with His Church.

*Tell the world that you have found a precious Saviour!
Tell the world that there is healing in His Name!
Let them know that He can fill you with His Spirit,
But best of all that He is coming back again!*

LONG EATON

Pastor: R.L. Currie

OVER the August Bank Holiday weekend our President, Pastor T.W. Walker, was the guest speaker on Saturday evening. Our own Pastor convened, opening with the reading of Psalm 146. All received a challenge from the Lord through the Word. We had a good congregation, including members of the Church of God, Long Eaton, and those from other churches in the area.

On Sunday, Pastor and Mrs. H.W. Greenway joined us. Pastor Greenway gave us fitting messages from the Lord, in both the morning and evening services.

Pastor Greenway ministered again on Monday afternoon. The Sunday school children took part and the secretary's wife testified to the saving and keeping power of the Lord.

The evening meeting included various singing items, a testimony from Mrs. Greenway, and the ministry of the Word.

The convention concluded with the singing of: "It is well with my soul". Though loath to leave, we did so thanking God for a week-end of blessings which we trust will bring fruit for Him in the coming days.

IPSWICH

Pastor: A.S.F. Horne

ON August 12th about eighty guests sat down to a lovely tea at St. Mary Stoke Parish Hall, the occasion being the retirement and farewell of our beloved minister and his wife, Pastor and Mrs. W.J. Hilliard. Among the guests were Pastor and Mrs. J.T. Bradley, Secretary-General, Pastor and Mrs. H. Burton-Haynes, District Superintendent, and Pastor and Mrs. A.S.F. Horne, our new minister.

At the service held afterwards in the Elim church, Mr. Leslie Holmes, a deacon, presented Pastor Hilliard with a cheque for £70 from members and friends of the church. Both Pastor J.T. Bradley and Pastor H. Burton-Haynes spoke of Pastor Hilliard as a Christian gentleman. This we have proved in the three years and three months of his ministry in Ipswich. Mrs. Hilliard previously was presented with a chair from the E.W.M.A. group.

A ten day crusade was held in May by Pastor A.R. Williams resulting in several decisions. A children's crusade in June, conducted by two Elim Bible College students, strengthened the children's work.

On August 26th Pastor A.S.F. Horne was inducted. The service was supported by friends from Clacton, Maldon, Colchester and Felixstowe churches. Pastor H. Burton-Haynes welcomed Mr. and Mrs. Horne on behalf of the Eastern Presbytery and the church secretary welcomed them on behalf of the members and friends of the Ipswich Church.

Pastor A. Greaves gave the message and spoke of the church's responsibility to their Pastor.

EALING

Pastor: F. F. Frost

WITH joy we welcomed Pastor and Mrs. F.F. Frost to the pastorate of our church. The induction service was convened by Pastor G.S. Hillman (a former minister) and was supported by Pastors S. Blake and L. Magee. Mr. Frost exhorted the church to go forward in the name of the Lord in co-operation with him. We anticipate a great moving of God under the consecrated and anointed ministry, striving together for the sake of the Gospel.

When we celebrated the church's forty-second anniversary, we had the honour of the visit of our President with his wife and members of their family.

This coincided with Pastor Walker's thirtieth anniversary in the ministry and a special cake was made for them and divided at the tea on the Saturday.

After tea the church secretary, Mr. L. Groves, spoke of the church's growth and blessing over the forty two years. Pastor T.W. Walker gave reminiscences of his ministry at our church from 1949-1953, during which time two of his children were born.

During the evening meeting Mr. Walker played a medley of choruses on the piano which were in vogue at the time of their Ealing ministry and ministered the Word of God in an encouragement to the church.

On Sunday morning the President dealt with the events leading to the cross, making them live in our hearts, which responded with increased love for Jesus for His wonderful sacrifice at Calvary.

In the evening meeting Mrs. Walker made relevant comments on portions of Psalm 37 as she spoke of her happy remembrances of Ealing. It was encouraging to hear the sweet voice of Sue Walker as she ministered in song. After a duet by Pastor and Mrs. Walker, the President gave a powerful, searching message.

All the services were convened by Pastor F.F. Frost. We are grateful to the President for his stirring, uplifting ministry, which will prove a challenge as the church enters its forty-third year.

STOWMARKET

The local press reports:

The minister of the Elim Pentecostal Church, Stowmarket, is hoping to gain new members for his Sunday School as a result of a Holiday at Home Club held in the church.

Pictured above are some of the youngsters who attended the club. It was the first Holiday Club to be held at the church, and Mr. Drew said "It was a great success."

At the moment, about 14 children attend the Sunday School and the "Tuesday Specials." an average of 40 turned up each day for the Holiday at Home, and Mr. Drew said, "I am very hopeful that some of them will join the Sunday School. We would very much like to expand our Sunday School."

The children, aged between eight and 12, spent the mornings listening to stories and working in groups in the church. In the afternoons they played games, went for a nature walk, swam in Stowmarket Swimming Pool and spent a whole day at Lowestoft.

Parents of the children were invited to attend a family service at the church on Sunday evening.

The Pastor writes:

We have doubled the attendances at our Tuesday Specials and the Sunday school has increased by a quarter. A good number of parents attended the Sunday evening service mentioned above and some are coming regularly since.

The Letter to the Romans

10 Sanctification

by J. Alexander Wright

WE come now to the third theme in our exposition: The Righteousness of God in Sanctification (6:1–8:11). “Sanctification” does not occur in Romans. Our old Bible translators, at home in Latin and Saxon, sometimes rendered with a Latinism and its correlates, sometimes with an Anglo-Saxonism in the same way. “Sanctification” belongs to the former, “holiness” to the latter. Both mean the same thing. We will use them in this way.

The Principle of Holiness (6:1–11).

It is one thing to save a man from drowning, but another to impart to him the ability to swim. Paul never contemplated justification without sanctification. One is the wicket-gate, the other is the road. Justification is not a legal fiction by which we are called righteous when in fact we are not. Justification is, in its nature, before sanctification, but not in order of time, for the same moment that brings the justification of chapter 5 brings also, by the same atoning blood, the sanctification of Hebrews chapter 10. This is why we feel that those who teach that sanctification is a separate, second, subsequent experience to salvation or justification are mistaken in their theology. The righteousness imputed at conversion is also the righteousness imparted. Though a man be discharged from a court of law, acquitted, with no further claim made upon him, he is the same man as he was before, just as liable to repeat his crime. God deals with men, not only with what they have done, but with what they are. He not only pardons and acquits, He renews. He infuses them with His own life so that they will not do the same things again. This is what Romans 6 is about.

Dr. J.S. Stewart says, “It is safe to say that if Paul’s commentators had followed the great apostle’s example, and bound these two great concepts together, indissolubly, instead of sundering them and endeavouring to tear them apart, no talk of ‘fictitious righteousness’ or ‘antinomianism’ would ever have been heard. Too often Sanctification has been spoken of as a second work of the Spirit, superimposed on the original act of Justification, as a kind of extra. In reality, of course, there is no such hiatus (gap). When Paul uses the verb dikaioo, he means, ‘to pronounce righteous’, not to ‘make righteous’, but the very pronouncement does, in point of fact, have the effect of making a man something he was not before. ‘Justification’ carries life with it. It puts life into the man who receives it. It is life — Romans 5:18, Galatians 3:21, an illuminating sentence which shows that ‘justification’ and the producing of life were, in the apostle’s mind, virtually synonymous. Sanctification is not a new thing, but simply the unfolding, by the operation of the Spirit, of something already present. It is God’s justifying verdict itself which sanctifies, for it makes a new creature, with a new heart, in a new world. It translates the soul from the domain of the flesh and all the evil spirits, unto the control of the Spirit of Christ. To be justified means that a man stands up and lives, really lives at last, erect and clean; and in his right mind before God. And this is Sanctification!” (A Man in Christ — I commend this great book to every student).

From the teaching on abounding grace (chapter 5) and remembering that Paul writes in the form of dialogue, the dialogue continues. Some might argue, “Does not the teaching of free pardon through God’s unmerited favour practically encourage sinning?”

One of the errors that the Church has had to deal with down the centuries (once called “Antinomianism” — anti=against, nomos=law) says, “The Christian has no obligation to keep the moral law — God will always forgive.” This is a perversion, a grievous misunderstanding of what Paul said about being “free from the Law”.

“Shall we continue in sin, that grace may abound?” (Romans 6:1). He takes up this very point. How pertinent it is, for elements of the teaching are ever with us — compare that ignorant Christian who says, “But I didn’t know it was wrong to do it!” and the easy-going one who says, “Well, others do it!” That wicked monk, Rasputin, who was the “chaplain” to the Russian royal family before the Revolution of 1917, actually practised this evil doctrine, saying that each time he experienced the mercy of God in greater measure than if he had not sinned. He was referring in particular to the many young women whose innocence he violated in the name of God!

Paul protests with horror at the thought: “God forbid. How shall we, that are dead to sin, live any longer therein?”

Cogitations from the Cross (a fantasy)

by Philip E. Streeter

Sublime mystery!

That my misshapen arms should embrace HIS mal-treated body.

I know something of the inner world of searing pain
For dawn uncoiled and sunlight shivered
On stuttering saws that grated through my bones.
Men smirked, children whooped as I
Tottered, reeled and shuddered on to hot earth
That sucked away my limpid blood in sobbing spasms.

Perspiring bodies leapt upon mine

Hacking, hewing,

Shaving away my flesh and spiking my shattered pieces

Into a criss-cross nightmare that has lurched the Strongest into near insanity.

Nobody wanted me in life, so they used me in death.

I was hauled to a hill that crawled round an ancient city.

Where, with hoots of jubilation,

HIS suffering form was skewered to mine

By pointed steel that screeched through muscle and sinew.

Hoisting high with grappling hooks,

They suspended us in roaring seas of human faces.

Mind-unhinging hours, like blades of smouldering sunlight

Lanced unforgettable pictures into our burning brains.

Time distorted into

A squirming everlastingness of dust, thirst and humming insects—

A toneless, ringing anvil of harsh pain as the swinging

Ponderous hammer of destiny beat Redemption into shape.

Thunder rumbled in the hazy faraway and Daylight drained into the guttering of the horizon as Crashing waves of darkness islanded us in their black flood,

Horrible trembling flickers of God-abandonment

When sad thoughts settled about like pale-grey gulls.

I imagined that I would be forgotten

When they shouldered HIM away from the hill.

For who aspires to glare at a blood-caked profile like mine?

Yet men came and gazed on endlessly.

Hours slid into days, days seeped into years and Still they bended their steps toward me.

They seemed to revere me because I clenched in such An uncouth way, the Maker of the Worlds.

The bodiless wind, rainy and mournful, came,

Groping out of dark waste places and crying about the hill

Like the haggard form of HIS mother mourning For her dead child.

Once again I was hammered to earth where Vermin gnawed at my vitals,

Insects bored into my bones and Gradually I fell apart into a heap of rotted wood.

I was young the day they swung me high

But the years have withered my flesh and Spread my dust beside the dust of men.

Yet I lived on.

Men could not erase me from their minds.

My symbol became their symbol.

When men wrung hands of despair, I recalled HIS tenderness.

When men were frightened

I whispered to them that even in death HE knew no fear.

Throwing aside the shadowed shroud,

He wrenched the grill of the grave from its hinges and Darted out into the dawn.

The jerking feet of pagan centuries swaggered

Deliberately over me,

But could not eliminate my irresistible command Over the souls of men.

So they scratched me into catacomb walls,

Splashed me upon Crusader breastplates and Caused me to glitter on a million altars

In a million churches.

HE stooped a long way in allowing my ugly arms To cradle HIS holy body.

I still feel hands and flesh warm against my side,

Hands, that transformed everything they touched

Including my brutal death beams,

Hands, that dragged me as HE staggered skyward Toward a throne.

Now I have impaled a terrifying abruptness

Into the silence of eternity,

Changing the calendar of the clock of time

From B.C. to A.D.

And this is my story,

The story of two planks of cheap wood nailed

One across the other.

That my coarse, knotted fingers should entwine round HIS

Is indeed a

Sublime mystery!

Visitor's View

2 "Whosoever will"

by David J. Ayling

Observations on the mission field made during a recent visit to Guyana

I HAVE always sought to preach the gospel that says "Whosoever will may come", but I have never been anywhere where this text is taken so literally as here in Guyana, for everybody comes!

In some services we have hosts of boys and girls sitting as well as any grown-up congregation in Britain. Changing a nappy on baby is nothing to the resourceful mother who spreads her baby out along the laps of her two nearest neighbours in the service.

I wasn't thinking of the children, however. Sometimes the pets come! I know a terrier in Guyana who would put to shame many a Crusader in the homeland by his regular church attendance. There was a moth fluttering round in Albert Street Church last evening with a wingspan of about five inches. He didn't think much of our rendering of "Hark, the gospel news is sounding". To my profound relief he went to sleep again before I spoke. I didn't know whether I could compete with a small snake that came in at Agricola during the crusade meeting, but it was promptly despatched by the nearest adult, all while I went on preaching. I can imagine the reaction to that event in the Ulster Temple Sunday evening service!

My personal favourites are the lizards. They hang poised on the ceiling and rafters by the lights waiting for the unsuspecting mosquito, moth or flying cockroach. Then, with the speed of lightning, they dart forward and ferociously devour all and sundry. In the economy of God they help to keep pests at bay during the services.

"Whosoever will" applies to the people, too. They come as well, in every shade from our sunbaked red to darkest indigo, men and women, whom God has touched, from every background. The kindness and grace of so many of them and the apparent eagerness of both children and grown-ups to receive literature is a revelation.

Yesterday I visited our Elim Sunday schools in a small village called Success. There are five of them taken by young men from different Elim churches. The first is held under a house. The children are already singing before we get there. The mother of the home is swinging in the hammock with the baby in her arms. We tell the old, old story and go on. The next is held on the corner of the cricket field. A match is in progress to the strains of "The love of Jesus is so wonderful"! The batsmen steal a look in our direction and more gospel literature is sent forth.

Do you know that over 1,000 children are reached every Sunday here in this way? Some come to the meeting as prettily dressed as any you will see anywhere. One little fellow came just as he was fresh from a bath under the tap, but in God's eyes as beautiful as any other. Who was to say that he cannot come?

We often glibly say, "Where there is a will there is a way". Many of these have the will... we must show them the Way!

The Friend at the Wedding

Words and drawing:

John 2:1-10

Sheila Price

JESUS stopped in Cana because He was invited to a wedding. You might think that Jesus, who had such great plans and thoughts in His mind, would not waste His time on a simple little country wedding, but He went. I think that He enjoyed Himself. I think, too, that the village people liked having Him among them, for Jesus made happiness wherever He went.

I see that the mother of Jesus arranged the wedding feast, so perhaps it was one of their relatives who was getting married. How happy and proud that bride and her bridegroom must have been to have Jesus at their wedding! Perhaps they had known Him since they were children — for Cana was only a couple of miles from Nazareth — and had invited Him to their wedding because they wanted Jesus to share in their happiness.

An awkward situation arose at the wedding, however, for someone noticed that there was not much wine left. The young couple were very upset. They did not want their guests to think that their parents were too poor to arrange a proper wedding feast!

Jesus understood exactly how they felt and straightaway He decided to help them. He told the servants to fill the pots with water and, with a word, He turned that water into wine. All the guests agreed that the wine was sweeter than any that they had tasted before. 'I don't think that the young couple would ever forget the kind and wonderful thing that Jesus did for them, do you?

God turns water into wine every day, for He provides all that we need to eat and drink. The farmer plants his grains of wheat and in the autumn he finds that each grain has changed into a hundred or more.

Do you ever stop to think of these wonderful miracles that God performs every day?

I don't know how God makes sweet, juicy grapes and turns those little grains into fields of wheat, but I do thank Him for providing them for me to enjoy. I love to think, too, that that great God is the loving Friend of us all, just as He showed at that wedding in Cana.

The Challenge of Chelmsley Wood

THIS is the largest single civic housing project in Europe. The nearest of its twelve areas to our Sparkbrook church is about 9 miles away. About two years ago Sparkbrook friends began a Sunday school. Mr. Ron Pearson has worked hard and made many contacts in areas 1 to 4. The size of the school is only limited by lack of teachers. With extra help another school on this city-size estate could be commenced.

An attempt is now being made to establish adult services. Three were held on Wednesdays during August, which, with help from Sparkbrook, filled the hall, Alder Hall, Alder Drive, off Greenlands.

Every Sunday the Pastor's son ferries a minibus full of passengers on the double return journey to the Sparkbrook church. Some have been saved this way.

Here is a "report" written by a girl of about nine years, whose name is Maxine:

The Painted Sermon

On Wednesday night my Aunt Ellen and I went to see Pastor Canty paint a picture.

Aunt Ellen and I set off at 7.00 precisely and we walked down to the church. It was rather a nice evening. To see Pastor Canty paint this picture we had to go to Chelmsley Wood. There parked at the front of the church was a minibus. So my Aunt Ellen enquired and we were allowed to get on. It was a jolty ride and the minibus was packed.

We got to Chelmsley Wood after a long drive of jolts and bumps at 7.30 and went into Alder Hall, where Pastor Canty was painting his picture. After a few songs and one which I especially liked, we learned that Pastor Canty was painting a sky-scape. It was marvellous. It turned out to be sunrise, a beautiful mixture of colours and mountains in the distance. Pastor Canty explained about the picture for a few minutes.

Mr. Ennis gave his testimony about when he had come to know God when his mother died and when he was a young lad.

When Mr. Pearson and Mr. Ennis had finished, Pastor Canty had finished his picture. Then he read us a few verses about the Bible. He talked about it being wrong to be healed by mind over matter and it being right to be healed by God. We finished up by only believing that we could only get truly better by putting our whole self in God. Mrs. Margaret Mellor and Mr. Billington sang two lovely songs.

PRAY FOR A SPIRITUAL AWAKENING

Bennie

by George Canty

I KNOW how to enter a fourth floor flat without going through the front door. Bennie told me. Bennie also told me how to slip a packet of fags to a colleague temporarily deprived in jail.

Once, having lost every penny at Cheltenham races, he walked home. Sore feet forced him to take off his shoes en route just as he passed the mental hospital, but walking softly past that institution didn't help.

At last it claimed him, raving with alcoholic poisoning.

He burst into my service one night and had to be restrained. He dented my car with a blow of his fist as he expressed disgust "because there's no love there". He would talk for hours to me about his burglarious escapades, his work around the sale rooms, and his mother.

His mother, a rough diamond, planted something in him for God. He never could get away from God. Youngsters from the church used to see him leering at them from his sick room window, and run away, but he found his way to the church.

For years his spiritual life ebbed and flowed after his conversion, but he'd have given you anything he had if he thought you wanted it. His grin never faded and impishness gleamed at you from his eyes — whichever one happened to be focussed after "a friend smacked him one". To old age he carried the boxer's style — light footed, fast reactions. Once his old instincts jumped in when a quarrelsome neighbour made a threatening gesture, and said Bennie, "He went out like a light!"

One day, Bennie came in to his wonderful Christian wife and said, "Has this room gone brighter?" To him it had. He had been baptised in the Spirit at long last. From that moment he lived in the Spirit, puzzling out his Bible for his own spiritual good — he had taught himself to read after his conversion.

He got hold of the young people. He talked love into them, inspired them to live for God. He tried to find them husbands and wives. He was as good as an army of workers.

One of these young people stood in the pulpit in Gloucester recently and, weeping for the one-time drunken burglar, described him as: "A father to me". It was Pastor Tony Chamberlain officiating at the funeral of Bennie Bowen of Gloucester, one of the greatest characters I have ever met, a man of God.

Bennie found Christ in an asylum where some Elim Crusaders were singing. He was a rock to me in hard times and would have defended me with his life if necessary.

I pay tribute to a man who enriched my life and who has now made me poorer by leaving us for Glory.

Book Reviews

Dressing Up Saturday, Banana Saturday, Wet Saturday, Birthday Saturday, all written by Margaret Holder.

Published by Scripture Union. Price 20p each, postage and packing 3p each extra.

The four little books are beautifully produced and compare favourably with similar secular books for quality, colour and price. I was sorry to find two or three grammatical errors and that after reading them my own children asked if they were supposed to be Christian books as there is very little in them to give this impression.

Each one, however, is designed to teach a good Christian principle such as honesty, truthfulness, good neighbourliness, etc. The stories are interesting and well illustrated on every page.

Although they might have introduced the child to Christ a little more they obviously provide a useful addition to the reading range for the six to eight year olds.

DEREK J. GREEN

Dragon Year, by Martyn Halsall. Published by Scripture Union. Price 40p, postage and packing 5p extra.

Dragon Year, an allegorical novel, presents as its central character Magg the Magician, who practises the spells and laws of the wise Lord. Along with Corfe, his nephew, he sets out on a journey to greet the birth of The wise Lord's son, Christ. They pass through many adventures including a lizard-infested island and a pitched battle with demons.

The book cleverly traces by fantasy the journey of one of the wise men. I had a job when reading it to decide if it was written for all ages or for the younger age group, possibly up to fourteen. Whoever reads it needs some religious background.

I wonder about the wisdom of using such words as magician, magic, spells, charms (by implication), especially when we consider the present excessive interest in black magic and spiritualism.

The book is an attempt to present a modern Pilgrim's Progress. If you like fantasy, you will probably enjoy it.

ADRIAN L. HAWKES

Preaching Yesterday and Today, by du Preez, Hulse, Kingdom, and van Zyl. Published by Henry E. Walter Ltd. Price 45p, postage and packing 7p extra.

This selection of papers from the first Evangelical and Reformed Conference in South Africa provides much meat in a small space and fortunately avoids the pitfall of being bitty, probably because of the writers' common commitment to dogmatic Calvinism.

This is most apparent in "Free Will or God's Grace" by van Zyl, the Conference organiser, which is marred by his use of "weasel-words" like "diatribe" for writings with which he disagrees, but "balanced" for those he favours. For him the teachings of Erasmus (d.1536) belong to the school of Arminius (1560-1609).

Hulse, in his treatment of George Whitefield, has caught something of the spirit that inspired the great preacher, but he is less than fair to Whitefield's contemporaries, the Wesleys. While the frequent warning notes regarding extravagant claims, ecumenical co-operation and entertainment in evangelism are timely, all mass evangelism is not suspect, as Kingdom implies in his paper "God's Church and Scriptural Evangelism".

The highpoints of the book are undoubtedly the last two papers: Kingdom on "Secularism and the Gospel" and du Preez on "The Implications of Biblical Theology for our Preaching", especially the latter's plea for a return to Biblical, expository and doctrinal preaching.

IAN R. HALL, B.D.

Baptism and Church Membership, by Errol Hulse. Published by Henry E. Walter Ltd. Price 12p, postage and packing 3p extra.

THIS booklet outlines clearly the importance of believers' baptism. Although it covers much familiar ground for the initiated, it presents a useful summary of events and Scripture references in connection with baptism. The sections on the symbolism and the mode of baptism are specific and convincing. The importance of the use of the Trinitarian Formula in baptism is stressed with cogent reasons given. Personally, I agree with his exegesis of I Corinthians 12:13, but the Pentecostal reader will readily see this as the starting point and basis for the Baptism of the Spirit and all other blessings. I like the emphasis on preparation for baptism.

The importance of church membership is stressed, rightly so in the context of so many drifters and homeless Christians.

We commend the booklet as useful for distribution to new converts and as offering helpful advice to new church members.

From T. H. Stevenson

A RECENT pleasure was the reading of Preachers and Preaching by Dr. Martyn Lloyd-Jones. It was holiday reading.

I am reminded how that, while on holiday, I visited an evangelist whom I have known for many years. I could not fail to notice that lying open on his table was Pegs for Preachers, which looked well worn with usage, maybe by several previous owners. The experience passed on by Dr. Martyn Lloyd-Jones would appeal to me as more profitable and basic than various books of sermon outlines — but every man to his own taste!

Dr. Lloyd-Jones mentioned his famed earlier co-minister, Dr. G. Campbell Morgan, who told him that, if he wished to fill his church, he should preach on prophecy. Quite evidently, Dr. Morgan was neither eulogising nor criticising the doctrine, but passing a verdict upon a certain type of hearer.

There certainly was a time when prophecy was much more dealt with than it is today and when many events were still future. Now much has already become history and immediately relevant, but there is scarcely a whisper.

Perhaps also, as growing numbers acknowledge Divine Healing, there is the danger of less reference to it and, with much medical advance, Divine Healing is less relied upon or emphasised.

Most of all, it may be that, with the Baptism of the Holy Spirit widely experienced and by no measure exclusively to Pentecostal churches, there is an inclination for some Pentecostals to take the message for granted and to give little prominence to the glorious fulness of this experience. Silence here would be tragedy and failure.

Harking back to Dr. G. Campbell Morgan's advice on what to preach to fill a church, I do not think it was intended too seriously. Certainly Dr. M. Lloyd-Jones filled his church for many years, but not by preaching on prophecy, nor even by his strong Calvinism, since others have emptied churches by preaching Calvinism. Any strong line of preaching may empty or divide one congregation, as it might fill another church. The message is important, but the messenger is also important. By God's grace, Dr. Lloyd-Jones filled his church as an able minister of the Gospel, an observation that could be illustrated by many other examples. We must have the message, but we also need men to equate the message.

Paul expressed it: "Take heed to thyself and to the doctrine". Pray both for your minister and for his ministry, your messenger and his message. They are both vital to the work of the gospel.

PRAYER AND PRAISE

By F. H. COLEMAN

JESUS had much to say about prayer, as well as other things, in what we call the Sermon on the Mount. In Matthew Chapter 7 He tells of the appointed means by which prayer can be answered. He uses three words and then gives a promise with each word. Those words are "ask", "seek", "knock". Those who ask will receive, those who seek will find, and those who knock will find the door opened to them.

What the Saviour is saying to us is that we must pray, pray, pray. We must be persistent. We must go on asking, seeking, knocking until we get what we desire. So often we give up easily if we do not get at once what we have prayed for.

It may be that we are not prepared to make prayer a business. If we own a business, we do all in our power to make that business succeed. We should go on praying until we receive what we pray for.

I once read of a man who sought an interview with George Muller. The great man of faith told of answers to prayer, some of which had come after long nights of seeking God to meet the needs of the orphanage. He recalled one such answer to a whole night of prayer.

There was no food for the next morning's breakfast, so he retired to a room and prayed. A baker in Bristol was watching a boxing match. He became uncomfortable in his mind and his thoughts wandered from the boxers in the ring to the Muller orphanage on Ashley Down. At last he left the match and returned home much to the surprise of his wife. Soon both were preparing dough. The oven was

God planted a Garden

(Genesis 2:8)

MARIGOLD, candytuft, poppies, alyssum, foxgloves, forget-me-nots and wallflowers abound in my English country garden, all self-sown and doing themselves proud in most unexpected places. This veritable riot of colour has cost me not a penny!

As a gardening enthusiast, not only are these flowers my joy and delight, but they bring me visible evidence of the bounty and liberality of the Creator. He never stints His supplies. They are more than adequate, in fact, enough and to spare in variety, colour and quantity. It will never be God's fault if some lovely species of plant life disappear; the guilt will be at the door of mankind. Careless or wanton destruction and pollution are always the work of man.

I leave my English country garden and travel north to Scotland and take my adorable little grand-daughter for a walk through a newly-built housing estate. The freshly planted open-plan gardens are magnificent and there are many expensive shrubs, roses and bedding plants. My little companion is eager to pick some flowers and so we turn to the as yet undeveloped land and the grass verges. In five minutes I have discovered nine species of wild flowers – and please don't call them weeds! There are buttercups and daisies, "the little children's dower", red and white clover, field marguerites, pink dead nettles, rose-bay willow herb and St. John's wort and farrow. We have a wonderful time making our collection to be carried home, tightly clasped in the hand of a happy two year old.

I'm so glad that God didn't make only strictly utilitarian things in His world, but that He sowed flowers for little children to gather.

Have you noticed that nature abhors a vacuum and always endeavours to fill and beautify the barren places?

In a sin-sick, violent world with the main theme of the news a sorry tale of strikes, prison riots and murder, it is good to remind ourselves of God's ancient promise in Genesis 8:22: "While the earth remaineth, seedtime and harvest, and cold and heat, and summer and winter, and day and night shall not cease."

Harvest fields are a joy to behold. God is faithful to His Word and the basic blessings of life remain as a constant reminder that the Lord is good and that His mercy is everlasting.

heated and batch after batch of bread was baked. Loading his cart, he set off for the orphanage.

Muller and his orphans had sat down to an empty table, but soon there was enough to eat. Muller also told his interviewer that he had prayed since his own conversion for a friend to be saved. He prayed earnestly for that man's salvation all his life. It was not until after Muller's death that the man was converted.

Here is the amplified version of Matthew 7:7: "Keep on asking and it will be given you; keep on seeking and you will find; keep on knocking (reverently) and the door will be opened to you."

Read any good Books lately?

asks Eldin R. Corsie

National Youth Director

WELL, have you?

When did you last encourage someone to read a good book?

Literature is the easiest, most effective means for making known the Christian message and mission! Victories in the spiritual realm and in the vast field of public relations are not won by relying on one means — however excellent it may be — but on the correct use of all the means available.

Like all other weapons in our warfare, each Christian book and periodical has its part to play. Many are potent weapons in the fight against sin, error and ignorance. Others are a means of teaching the faith. Many are indispensable when it comes to interpreting doctrine and Christian phraseology, giving arms, hands and feet to abstract truths. Others, properly used, will influence people and win new friends for the Church and establish worthwhile public relations.

At all communist party gatherings, whether indoor or out, you will find books and pamphlets on sale. How tragic, then, that we who have at our disposal what others consider to be so vitally necessary to their work and usefulness are in danger of neglecting it.

I offer two main ways of achieving the Christian's purpose in this respect, viz. bookstalls and libraries.

There is no substitute for the bookstall. There should be one in every church, convention, crusade and camp. If we agree with the above and are vitally concerned, this is a practical way of proving it. If our books are to fulfil their purpose it is at church level that we shall do our most effective work. Very few people will go to the trouble of securing a postal order, sitting down and writing to a book-seller for a book. Time spent in emphasising that the bookstall is an important instrument in the life, ministry and usefulness of the church will pay dividends.

Choose wisely where the stall is to be situated.

People must be able to see the books easily on entering and leaving the church. See that the display and presentation reveal some thought and imagination. Some point of sale display can be very helpful. An artistic friend with bright ideas will often be pleased to assist with this.

Centre of attraction in Great Titchfield Street Market in London's West End is a brightly painted barrow — red woodwork, black ironwork, yellow wheel-spokes and green-striped roof awning. It is the barrow bookstall belonging to the church of All Souls', Langham Place — the "B.B.C. Church". As befits a place of worship situated next door to Broadcasting House, the congregation are deeply concerned in getting the news of the gospel to the people outside the church's normal reach.

Make full use of the advertisements and reviews appearing in Christian papers. Mention something interesting about the books at every possible opportunity. Reiteration and recognition are very important. Never miss an opportunity for a sale. The books should always be available. We must be enthusiastic. This will overcome most difficulties. Ministers are too busy generally to maintain the oversight of a bookstall and should seek to inspire the right types of persons to be responsible.

Libraries are another channel through which books can be made available. For some unaccountable reason this means is sadly neglected.

In Great Britain there are over 40,000 public libraries serving 20,000,000 borrowers. In many of these libraries you will not find a single Pentecostal book, even though in the same town there is a good-sized Pentecostal church. Libraries are willing to stock our books if we request them — and the more the requests, the more Pentecostal books get on the shelves.

If, in the words of Bacon, "Reading makes a full man", we must encourage serious reading.

Matthew 15:29–39

“And they did all eat, and were filled” (v.37).

HOW little notice we take of the feeding of the 4,000! Had it been the first of such miracles it would have had a much more startling effect, but Christ had already fed 5,000, so this second miracle seems to pass without comment. Such is the credulity of the soul that we can even get used to the miraculous and judge the miracles against each other by the number of people fed!

To God every miracle is a new event. He supplies the bread according to the need, not to produce eye-catching headlines. To the hungry, this miracle was just as good as the first!

Tuesday, October 10th

Matthew 16:1–12

“Desired Him that He would shew them a sign from heaven.” (v.1).

How stubborn unbelief can be! Jesus had just fed the multitude from seven loaves, yet they still cried for a sign from heaven! No wonder that He told the disciples to beware of the leaven of the Pharisees. Nothing leavens pure faith like doubt. It goes on corrupting it until whatever miracle Christ does for us it is never enough — we always want another that we might believe Him!

Faith takes God at His Word and finds that miracles follow.

Wednesday, October 11th

Matthew 16:13–28

“From that time forth began Jesus to shew” (v.21).

The flash of revelation to the disciples as to who Jesus was marked another turning point in the training of these men. Christ was never content to stop with them along the path of discipleship. There was so much to learn and so little time. He hastened them to the thought of the cross. Peter rebelled (v.22). His shrinking from the cross obscured from him the last thing that Christ said — that He would rise again.

When we manfully accept the cross we discover the reality of the resurrection.

Thursday, October 12th

Matthew 17:1–13

“Let us make here three tabernacles” (v.4).

Forgive us, Lord, that we can live with You as Peter did and even then not realise how great You are! The true majesty of Christ dawns on us in flashes. At other times we are so gross and dark in our outlook as to compare You with earthly heroes whom we admire. When in our hasty words we detract from Your glory, burst upon us with the voice out of the cloud that will not be silenced in the soul and show us again the incomparable Christ!

Friday, October 13th

Matthew 17:14–27

“They could not cure him” (v.16).

The disciple is no substitute for his Lord. When the disciples failed to heal the need brought to them, they presented Christ with even greater problems. Before He could heal the boy, He must first deal with the despair in the father's heart.

Our failures often give Christ even bigger problems. As disciples, our only responsibility is to lead others toward Christ who is the real Healer.

Saturday, October 14th

1 Thessalonians 1:1–10

“In the sight of God and our Father” (v.3).

How much Christian work is done with headlines in mind — how it will read to others afterwards! We need often to be delivered from the false note that this can bring into our service. The safest way is to realise that our work and words have an even greater publicity value in heaven. Our “work of faith, and labour of love, and patience of hope” are in the sight of God. Only He can evaluate the true worth of what we say and do.

Sunday, October 15th

1 Thessalonians 2:1–12

“As a nurse cherisheth her children” (v.7).

Paul's ministry in Thessalonica had been more than just another mission in a new town. His aims were not merely to open a new centre or to win new converts, admirable as these things are. He came to give them the gospel and with it part of himself: (v.8) “Because ye were dear unto us”.

The real soul-winner cannot have a clinical approach to his work for God. He gives of himself as well as his message. As he bleeds, he blesses.

Stop the World I want to get off by H. Spencer

Wharnccliffe Side, Sheffield

If press, radio and T.V. news coverage is a true reflection of world conditions, millions of people would do just this, if they could!

WHAT has gone wrong? Will we ever know true peace, real happiness? Where is the brave new world so often acclaimed as just around the corner?

Mankind has its dreams. Not all men love violence, discord, crime. Some long for a world free from fear, poverty, strife, sickness, death. They do not know how such dreams are to be realised. Is such a world possible?

In Old Testament times, Isaiah saw a day when the world would be a wonderful, happy place. Read the amazing words of Isaiah 2:4.

He was not alone in this certain hope, for Micah had the same vision (Micah 4:1-4). What are philosophers, scientists, technocrats, world leaders going to do about the predictions of the prophets?

Today's youth - tomorrow's leaders - are cynical, pessimistic. Many have lost all confidence in the System and its manipulators. It only needs that someone in a moment of mental stress should throw the wrong switch and all life on earth could soon be ended.

World-wide unrest, environmental pollution, industrial strife, hunger, famine, sea and air disasters, road slaughter, punitive wars, even the very elements and nature seem to be rising up in protest against man's blind stupidity and brash arrogance.

What has happened to the human race? Why are we here? Who are we any way? Where are we going? Why are so many lonely, frustrated? Why are there so many suicides? Why are there the growing breakdown in law and order and the frenzied scramble for the transient things of time - money, possessions, pleasure?

These and many related questions basic to our existence and well-being are being asked, with growing awareness of the urgent need for answers. Do statesmen, philosophers, scientists, religious leaders have the answers? On the evidence of their public pronouncements and stated beliefs, the answer is NO!

Are there any absolutes? What is truth?

Philosophers would have us to believe that 2x2 might no longer equal 4, but be in the spectrum of 4 - an indication of the trend of human philosophy, logic and reason. Like Neville Chamberlain in 1938, these self-appointed wise ones run around crying, "We have the answers", waving their scraps of paper, promising peace in our time, but they fail to make sure of the ground of their optimism.

All sane men want peace, not just for our time, but for our children's and for all time and for all people.

Nearly 2,000 years ago a Roman official, Pontius Pilate, asked a question about absolutes. He asked Jesus of Nazareth, "Are You a king?" Jesus answered, "To this end was I born, and for this cause came I into the world, that I should bear witness to the truth." With the cynicism of his age, Pilate commented, "What is truth?" A product of his times, he had been brain-washed by the philosophies of his nation. He could conceive of no absolutes. This thinking finally brought the mighty Roman Empire crashing down (Proverbs 14:34).

Does the world of today have any clearer notion of what truth is? Many of our youth and some of the establishment ask the same question, not cynically, but pensively, wonderingly, earnestly. Is man merely a link in an endless evolutionary chain? Is this life the be all and end all? Have the world's high priests and prophets been deceiving and self-deceived? By what authority do they speak? Who gave them their mandate?

Find the answer in Jeremiah 5:30,31; 14:14. The cry runs through the land: "Who will show us any good?" (Psalm 4:6). The Word of the Lord rings clearly down the ages, "I am the way, the truth, and the life".

The kind of life man lives cannot be of the quality his Maker intended for Him. God purposed a richer, fuller, nobler life for man. Jesus said, "I am come that they might have life, and that... more abundantly."

Man has drifted away from the truth of God and from the God of truth. To be without hope and without God in the world is to exist. This is a pale caricature of the life which God's Son offers. Despite all our human inventions and boasted achievements, we have failed to discover the truly rich, satisfying life... with contentment. It is found only in Jesus (2 Timothy 3).

The seers and prophets of old, to whom the Lord made known His earth-directed purposes, looked with undimmed eyes into the distant future and saw the glorious day when wars will cease, strife will end, and the knowledge of the Lord... His righteousness... will cover the earth as the waters cover the sea (Isaiah 11:9). There will be an end to pain, loneliness, misery, suffering, death. God has pledged His solemn Word (Isaiah 32:18; 60:18; 65:21,22).

"Behold I make all things new!"

"Sirs, I believe God!"

THE late nineteenth and the early twentieth centuries were a period when evangelical Christendom had a very tender heart towards the needs of its fellow-men. Many societies were founded, often by a few people. Some of these endure to this day and are still doing splendidly. To this era belong household names in evangelical history, names which have become focal points even in secular history.

The work of the Salvation Army is an apt illustration. The truly terrible needs of East London provoked an examination of the whole situation and a strange alliance between the journalist Stead and the revivalist Booth led to the rapid expansion of the now familiar ministry. In Darkest England and the Way out may be little read now, especially by the younger generation, more's the pity. It is one of the most dreadful indictments of a nation there ever was — and Gospel preachers strove to meet the problems, not without considerable success.

The mention of social work has caused many eyebrows to be raised in conferences, conventions and so on. It seems that two opinions have largely prevailed. The so-called Welfare State is deemed to have taken over all the difficulties and met all the needs. Aren't we paying stamps, taxes, rates and who knows what else to cover the enormous cost? Then there is the reasoning that man has a body and is a soul, so the saving of the soul is not only paramount, it is everything.

It would be stupid to pretend that the State does not do very much. It would be equally unwise to ignore the danger of diversion from soul-saving work to mere caring for the body.

It seems to me, however, almost double-minded in that we accept obligations on what we call "the mission field", which really means God's work other than in our country, which include education, medicine, midwifery, even famine relief. True, our workers would never get into many countries if they sought to go as gospel preachers only; we recognise that much philanthropic work has to be done to gain access. Our gospel preaching is tolerated because of what else we can offer.

Is that the end of the story, however? Are there no poor, homeless, illiterate, unkempt? Are there no orphans? Are all old folk cared for and loved? Is the State mental health plan sufficient?

We would be wise to reconsider the whole outlook very seriously. After all Bible verses like Proverbs 21:13 and James 1:27 seem pointed enough.

NORTHAMPTON

Pastor: J.M. Cuthbert

PRIOR to the Summer holidays, our young people organised a series of park campaigns for children. Two wet Saturdays forced the meetings indoors when about seventy children clapped and sang in the living room of a moderate terrace house!

The photographs show a fine, sunny Saturday in the park. Over 100 children gathered and we praise the Lord for the noticeable increase in the attendance at the children's meetings since the campaign.

PAUL DRURY

NORTH EAST PRESBYTERY RALLY

ON Bank Holiday Monday the North East Presbytery Rally was held in Grangetown Elim Pentecostal Church. The number of people (around 200) who attended the meetings was the most the church had experienced for quite a considerable time. Many gave their testimonies in the singing. The two preachers, Pastor David G. Holmes and Pastor Alex P. Johnston, really made the messages they brought sink deep down into the hearts of the congregation.

SHIRLEY UNDERWOOD.

DAGENHAM

Pastor: J. McBurney

ONE of the most enjoyable evenings ever spent in the Dagenham church celebrated the Golden Wedding of Mr. and Mrs. C. Lay. Mr. Lay is the beloved Elder of our Church. He and his wife, who suffered many years of blindness, but who has had her sight wonderfully restored, are deeply loved and respected. Ministers through the years have praised God for their presence in the Church. The present Minister and his wife, together with the Diaconate, members and friends have increasing cause for gratitude and praise to God for their presence with us.

The celebration had been arranged completely unknown to the chief guests. What a surprise was theirs when they entered the building for a completely different reason to find about 180 people from near and far sitting in the darkness awaiting their arrival. The lights were switched on and, under the expert leadership of Mr. Ted Inight, the crowd burst into singing. Past ministers combined with members and friends, old and young, in paying tribute to the life and witness of Mr. and Mrs. Lay for more than forty years in the fellowship and work of the Church.

A number of greetings from friends unable to attend were read. A "Teasmade" was presented on behalf of all present after which a splendid meal was provided. The event was brought to a close with the cutting of the cake and the singing of the Doxology.

JAMES MCBURNEY

WE at Dagenham are still giving glory to God for His wonderful presence during our Bank Holiday convention.

Pastor John Flowers set the pace on Saturday and Sunday and his ministry in word and song brought showers of blessing. The Chelmsford church choir and our own Crusader, John Kennett, provided the musical items with great benefit to us all. On Monday Pastor Flowers was joined by Pastor A. Nicolson, The Foursquares Gospel singers and friends from neighbouring churches. The church was filled with men and women eager to hear the Word of God. The glory of the Lord fell and we rejoiced to see young people joining in spontaneous praises to the Lord. We praise God for the many who have written and telephoned our Pastor - and for the personal testimonies from our own members of what the Lord has done in their lives as a result of this convention.

We give grateful thanks to God for restoring our Pastor to good health in time for the Convention. We fell sure that the Lord has set His seal on the work here.

Pastor: G.A. Hawes

WE have come to another milestone, for we recently held the induction service of our first minister, Pastor G. Hawes. It was an inspiration to our small church to have approximately 250 people present. Many Elim churches were represented, including Ballymoney, Coleraine, Ballymena, Bangor, Alexandra Park, Randalstown, Ulster Temple and Ballysillan. Also present were representatives from all the Protestant churches in South Derry. It was nice, too, to have a lady from New York, a member of Dr. Billy Graham's choir, who was holidaying in the area.

Pastor A.D. Sandford conducted the service. Pastor R.G. Weare opened in prayer, and a sister from Newtownards was the solist. Pastor A. Wilson, our Irish Superintendent, preached a challenging message to both minister and congregation. It was a night of refreshing and blessing to everyone who was present.

ROBERT SCOTT.

CANNING TOWN

Pastor: John C. Ritter

WHAT has happened since George Canty's crusade last October? From a congregation of three we have risen to as many as twenty-five. Out of the many who made decisions for Christ nine still attend regularly and, praise the Lord, I am one of them!

We had a wonderful candle-light carol service at Christmas followed in the New Year by many more candle-light services because of the power cuts.

Around Easter-time, following several waiting meetings, four of our members were baptised in the Spirit. In July we held a baptismal service at East Ham where seven of our members passed through the waters of baptism in obedience to our Lord.

The next significant event was that the little road where our church stands was renamed from Bethell Avenue, to ELIM WAY, our postal address changing overnight from Canning Town, E.16, to Plaistow, London E13. We try not to be too snobbish about it!

The next event is the leaving of our dear Treasurer and his wife. They have been staunch supporters during the past few years. They are going to reside as house parents in a council welfare home for children in Surrey. David and Christina Kelly - we will miss you, but we earnestly pray that the Lord will bless you in your new venture and that you will bring many needy souls to know our precious Lord and Saviour.

A special tea marked the leaving of David, Christina and their daughter, Joy, so that their many friends could say farewell. We also held a Dedication service for baby Lucy, born to Bill and Stella Preston in June.

STOP PRESS: We have just heard of another new arrival, this time a boy, named Timothy, born to Mrs. Maureen Jullien!

PETER SULLIVAN

LIVERPOOL

Pastor: B.J. Epton

WE are rejoicing in a wonderful move of God among the children. This is quite refreshing in an area where there is total indifference to the things of God. Our Pastor and his wife conducted a fortnight's campaign for the under-fifteens with an expertise that captured the interest and attention. The gospel was clearly and simply presented. The numbers increased dramatically each day and accommodation was extended to capacity.

Decision cards were taken home by those children who accepted Christ as Saviour and their parents were asked to complete the forms and return them at the next meeting. Over fifty were handed in to the Pastor.

The result of this Junior Campaign has been a stimulus to the girls' and boys' clubs. The Sunday school has benefitted numerically also.

This outreach to the children has been fruitful by introducing parents to the church. Consolidation through the various junior departments is now the joy of our Spirit-filled workers.

J.F. ILLINGWORTH

SOUTH OF ENGLAND PRESBYTERY YOUTH HOLIDAY

"WHEN I came my faith was very weak. Now I really know the power of God!" were the words of one young man who, while on holiday at Pressland House in Devon, attended a waiting meeting and was filled with the Spirit.

The youth week had been organised by Pastor Derek Edmonds for the churches in the South of England Presbytery, of which he was Youth Commissioner. Thirty-two young people came from the Romsey, Bournemouth, Yeovil and Leigh-on-Sea churches.

One young man said, "I went full of fear; I came back full of the Holy Spirit." It was that sort of week — a week of great spiritual blessing and of recreation and relaxation. Each day started with a prayer meeting followed by Bible study and discussion. Pastor Edmonds led us through an interesting study on the Holy Spirit and the Gifts of the Spirit. These meetings were well attended and set the seal on the rest of the day.

Each day we set forth in a drove of cars to explore the County of Devon and the Cornish coastline. Our hosts supplied us with packed lunches and orange drink by the gallon. At the end of a hard day's relaxation we returned to the house to find a three-course banquet prepared for us.

On the Wednesday evening a barbecue was laid on by Mr. John Wright. This was supported by young people from the local Baptist Church and was followed by the first waiting meeting. These meetings became the highlight and were eagerly awaited by all. They began at about 10 o'clock and it was midnight when they were brought to a close. During the three waiting meetings, eleven people received the Holy Spirit. Those who had previously been filled with the Spirit received great blessing and a new awareness of the presence and power of God.

It was a week that none of us will forget. We are looking, not back, but forward, to the way in which God will use us in this coming year — and to the holiday at Pressland House already planned for next year (South of England Presbytery Youth Holiday at Pressland House, Devon, August 11-25, 1973).

SOUTHPORT

Pastor: A. B. Tee

OVER 100 members and friends gathered for the farewell tea in honour of Pastor L.N. Knipe prior to his retirement later this year after forty-five years in the Elim ministry.

Greetings were received from Sheffield, Wimbledon, Swindon, Reading and Bangor Churches, all former pastorates of Pastor Knipe.

A cheque for a substantial amount was presented to Pastor and Mrs. Knipe on behalf of the Church by the Treasurer, Mr. D. Vernon, as a token of the Church's love and gratitude for six years of faithful ministry during which they have endeared themselves to the Church. Tributes were paid by the Church Secretary, Mr. G.E. Rowe, and presentations and tributes were made on behalf of all the departments of the Church. Mr. F. Fiske, the Church Elder, then paid tribute to Pastor Knipe and spoke of having known him for well over forty years, having been a member of Pastor Knipe's first church in Wimbledon and now of his last church. Pastor Knipe then spoke a few words culminating in the words of the Psalmist, "The Lord hath done great things for us whereof we are glad", which summed up the forty-five years he had spent in the work of the Lord. The gathering was brought to a close with a tribute by Pastor J. Tetchner.

On the Sunday, the last day of Pastor Knipe's term as our Pastor, good numbers gathered for both services. In the evening service, Pastor Knipe gave a brief farewell message, the Gospel being preached by Pastor W. Hunter, who also ministered in song.

Before a large congregation of members and friends, supported by Lancashire Presbytery churches, the induction of Pastor Alexander Tee took place on September 9th. The meeting was convened by the District Superintendent, Pastor L.E. Lambert. Pastor J. Seaman paid tribute to the new Minister, who was welcomed on behalf of the Deacons and members by the Church Secretary, Mr. G.E. Rowe. Pastor Tee replied and reminded us of the challenge of future days. Pastor S. Beresford brought the charge to the Church. The Ministers of the Presbytery laid hands on Pastor Tee, praying God's richest blessing upon his ministry here. The singing of the Good News Chorale from Fleetwood brought much blessing.

We trust that God will move in Southport in a mighty way under the ministry of our new minister.

Visitor's View

3. Thieves in the Night by David J. Ayling

Observations on the mission field made during a recent visit to Guyana

IT was ten to four in the morning. I was quietly wakened by Doreen, my wife. We had eaten a Guyanese supper of crabback, curry and dholpouri, finishing with soursop. Unfortunately the soursop had not finished with Doreen! While looking out of the window, she spotted two young men trying to break into our house. While we were preparing our reception for them, they were disturbed and fled.

This is just another hazard on the mission field. Last year John MacInnes was robbed of his wallet in the street while folk looked on. Thieves have broken into this house before.

There are other thieves in the night which operate on the mission field as well as at home. They cause the missionary even more heartbreaks. They are the false cults which lie in wait for the converts from heathenism and try to confuse their simple faith in Christ. There are many here of all sorts, the Kingdom Halls, the Seventh Day Adventists and all the fifty-seven varieties of those whom Christ described as those who seek to kill, steal and destroy. This is beside those who are held by catholicism, hinduism and Islam.

I watched a young girl hovering in the distance as we conducted one of the branch Sunday schools in a village last Sunday. She was about thirteen years old and had shown a longing for Christ as her Saviour. She has been forbidden by her Hindu father to come to the Sunday school at all, so she stands on her own doorstep and tries to listen from there. When the Sunday school workers pass the gate they leave some helpful literature under a stone for her to retrieve later.

When the good seed is being sown, the birds of prey soon gather to try to prevent it germinating into new life in the soul. We thank God for those in whose lives it brings forth fruit one hundredfold.

I sat in the six o'clock morning prayer meeting this morning and listened to some saints praying for revival. I watched seven young Hindus following Christ through the waters of baptism in a pond in the middle of their village, watched by their neighbours.

I gathered with a crowded congregation around the Lord's table and rejoiced with them in the wonder of the love of God in Christ.

I realised that the enemy can hinder as he will — the power of the Word of God is greater than all his subtleties. The gates of Hell shall not prevail against the Church of Jesus Christ.

"But let us, who are of the day, be sober, putting on the breastplate of faith and love; and for a helmet, the hope of salvation". (1 Thessalonians 5:8).

The Letter to the Romans

11 The Principle of Holiness

by J. Alexander Wright

SAVING faith brings more than mere justification; it brings UNION with Christ. With faith comes fellowship. So close is this union that it becomes identification, oneness with Christ, so that the thought of being in Him and continuing in sin becomes intolerable. "We who died" (Romans 6:2 NEB) — then how can we live in sin any longer? "If a man lives in sin he is not a believer". (John Murray, The Epistle to the Romans).

Paul illustrates this identification by baptism (vv. 3-5) and sees therein the three stages of Christ's redeeming act: into the water (immersion), portraying death, our dying to sin; under the water (submersion), portraying burial, our complete renunciation; and up and out of the water (emersion), portraying our resurrection — "walking in newness of life".

The mere outward rite does not, however, bring that vital union with Christ. It is inconceivable that water-baptism could be the means of salvation — a sign, yes, but justification is by faith alone.

Now, changing the figure of speech, Paul speaks of "planting", as in 1 Corinthians 15, not two plantings, His and mine, but one — "co-planted", to coin a word, and growing up into His likeness. "Our old man" (Romans 6), our old self or ego (RSV), obviously refers to our past sinful life: "the man you once were" (NEB), the unregenerate man in his entirety, "old" because of the coming of the "new" (Ephesians 4:22, Colossians 3:9) — not that part of me which I am pleased to call "my old nature", but all of me as I was before conversion.

I think it is erroneous to speak of believers having both "an old man" and "a new man", i.e. the doctrine of the two natures. That is not Paul's teaching as I understand it. "Our old self was crucified" (v. 6): the past tense indicates a once and for all act illustrated by our Lord's crucifixion. Death, baptism, planting, and crucifixion are the figures used to describe the complete break with the old life.

"That the body of sin might be destroyed" (v. 6). Do not confuse "the body of sin" with the human body as such. The expression indicates that sinful self in objective form. While sin is never viewed apart from the body, since the body is employed for every act of the will, good or bad, and our judgment will be for "the things done in the body . . . good or bad" (2 Corinthians 5:10), it is wrong to say that the body of itself is "sinful". This was an old Platonic error — that the body was bad and only the soul mattered — and it has been perpetuated, in ignorance, by those who whip and torture their bodies, as though they of themselves were the agents and not merely the instruments of evil.

The error arises, too, from a failure to distinguish the New Testament words for "body" and "flesh", since the latter is sometimes used in a purely moral sense. Someone has said that "flesh" reversed, with the aitch dropped, spells "self"! We think also that the Authorised Version rendering of Philippians 3:21: "vile body" has contributed to it. Originally, "vile" meant "common"; the commoner was a "villain" and the house he lived in a "villa". Now we have given it a bad meaning and the temple of clay became "a vile body". Nothing that God ever made is vile. "The body of our humiliation" (R.V.) is much better.

"Destroyed" (v. 6) means made of none effect, "put out of commission" (H. Scofield translation), as in old-time warfare the enemies guns were spiked and so destroyed. Watchman Nee, in his book, The Normal Christian Life said "Supposing the government decided the country was to go 'dry', how would they carry the decision into effect? Every shop and every home would have to be visited, and every bottle of strong drink smashed. But behind the bottles are the distilleries and the brewers, so the factories would need closing down ere the problem could be dealt with; but how are we to be dealt with? He has done away with our sins, and that is good, but He has also made a clean sweep of the factories! Romans 6:6." The self is still with us, not destroyed in the absolute sense, no more than the gun that was spiked, but changed, sublimated. It is the "putting off the body of the sins of the flesh" (Colossians 2:11), like a major operation, by the circumcision of Christ, the great Physician: "Circumcised, not in a physical sense, but by being divested of the lower nature" is how the NEB puts it.

The Blood crieth from the Ground

Pastor Emanueli Kazimoto remembers.

TOBIAS had come to see the mission council. Five pastors were present to hear him explain the death of his twin children.

He said, "Brethren, I told my people that if twins come they are children and must not be treated as demons. Thus I am sure that the twins were born dead."

We pastors thought in our hearts, "What is the meaning of these words?" We told him, "Why did you come here with such a story? We do not believe it. Go and check this terrible matter again!"

He returned to us later. He then told us, "I have enquired further from my wife and mother."

"Do you believe the women? Are they not heathen? Surely they have deceived you. They have killed them. We know the customs of our people," was our rejoinder.

We then asked Mama Bull about this matter. She explained that it was possible to find out how they had died if the bodies were examined. We called for Tobias and told him, "We are not satisfied, there is one more thing you must do. Go to your elders and tell them that you have doubts about your children's death and you wish to call in the police and medical opinion. A doctor will know whether the children were murdered."

He agreed to this and appeared at the next council meeting. "Did you do as we told you?" we asked him.

"Yes", he answered, "but the elders told me on oath that the twins were born dead."

"Tobias", we replied, "We have grave doubts. Suspicion lies on you who are a Christian. We must call in the authorities."

"I will go and think it over," he answered.

He returned and replied that the elders had assured him that nobody was killing twins now and that that bad custom was past and gone for ever. We African pastors were angry at that word. Pastor Hermani said, "Last month at Msata twins were suffocated. Is it finished?" Pastor Eliya exclaimed, "My brother lives near you, as you well know his wife bore twins and the first child was dashed to the ground by the midwife. That was last week!"

"Tell the truth!" said we all, "You have agreed with your people in this matter!"

"No, brethren, no!" he cried.

We sent him aside while we took our decision. Then when we called him to us again, Pastor Bull said, "Tobias, it is evident that you are guilty of a great sin. You have blood on your hands. You think to deceive us, but God sees all things. It is not hidden from Him. Even now you can speak the truth regarding this dreadful deed."

He would not listen to us at all. We cut him off from the church completely. "How long will he be outside the church?" some Christians asked. "How long will the blood cry?" we answered.

Transvaal Visitors

by David G. Butcher

DISTANCES are getting smaller, or so it seems with our modern forms of transportation. We appreciated this recently when we had a visit from my parents, Mr. and Mrs. G.W. Butcher, of the Rye Park, Hoddesdon, church. Many friends recall Pastor Charles Coe, my mother's father.

During the time spent together, we visited many wonderful places and my parents had a chance of seeing something of the work of God here in the Nelspruit, Transvaal, S. Africa, area. Impressions and memories are obviously very vivid in their minds. Emmanuel Press and its activities were viewed with knowing eyes, both having been involved in the printing industry for many years. Over and above all, the African services with their great singing and prayer times will never be forgotten.

My pictures show my father preaching at a sawmill compound service and our family just before we left to take a service at an Indian and Coloured church.

Children's Corner

Wings of Faith

by Sheila Price

EAGLES look like very vicious birds with their strong, curved beaks and powerful feet and claws, but they look after their young very tenderly.

Mrs. Eagle had built a nice, cosy nest for her eaglets, high up on the cliffs out of harm and danger, and had lined it with soft feathers so that they would be warm and comfortable. Mrs. Eagle loved her young and took great care in seeing that they were happy and wellfed. All through the long days, she would hunt for food. Mile after mile she would fly and, when she found a titbit they liked, she would bring it back to the nest and share it among them. When the weather was very cold and windy, or when it rained, Mrs. Eagle would spread out her wings and shelter the young eagles, keeping them warm and dry.

The day soon came when the young eagles were old enough to leave the nest. First, they must learn how to fly. Mrs. Eagle removed all the nice soft feathers from the nest, making it so uncomfortable for the young eagles that they really did not want to stop there any longer!

Gently but firmly, Mrs. Eagle pushed them over the edge of the nest, one by one, and, once they were out, they just had to use their wings or else fall to the ground. Mrs. Eagle watched very closely, making sure that they were all using their wings correctly. She noticed that one was having great difficulty. He was falling through the air! Quickly she flew over and spread her big, strong wings underneath the young eagle. When he was safely supported she carried him gently back to the nest.

"These ought ye to have done" (Luke 11:42)

ONE hears so much these days about high prices and rising costs that it seems like sacrilege to make mention of them in connection with the work of God. Nevertheless, the Church is involved because it has to face the inflationary figures the same as everybody else.

We teach and believe that our God will supply all our need and, in marvellous ways, many have proved this to be abundantly true. This has not been, however, by a sudden shower of "pennies from heaven" nor by the discovery of some treasure trove as we have dug the cabbage plot. Somehow, somewhere, the Lord has graciously moved on some heart and out of either compulsion or beneficence the need has been met. God, by divine prerogative, elected to use some willing human agency in order that His promise might be fulfilled towards some person in need. God does supply the need and we are a thankful people.

Having stated this as a solemn fact of experience, it is also true to say that the work of God in general is restricted severely by the limitation of financial resources. The maintenance of the ministry, the cost of crusading, the purchase of properties, all have to be faced in an inflationary climate. The problems are becoming crippling.

What is the answer?

Should we abandon a paid ministry and depend solely on honorary service? This may sometimes be the answer, but biblical principles should not be jettisoned. The labourer is still worthy of his hire and they who preach the gospel should live by the gospel.

Should we reform our campaign tactics, withdraw costly advertising and other modern means and rely more on the convincing power of the Holy Spirit? Here we have the sentiments of idealism. We must never seek to substitute anything for the person and power of the Spirit, but, facing the cold facts of realism, we must realise that we need to use all the means at our disposal to penetrate the soulless indifference of the world.

Should we spurn the sheltering roof and resort to the lakeside, the mountain slopes, the cornfield, the olive groves and the steps of the religious courtyards as the Messiah did? True, this would be cheaper, avoiding rentals and mortgages, but what of our climate? We may well need an ark for a pulpit and a Joshua to stay the sun in its flight!

In such controversial arguments we find no solution to our dilemma. The answer lies in the human agency, in the people who bear the Lord's name and whom He has redeemed by His blood. They can solve the whole situation by FAITHFUL TITHING!

Watch for the speedy and indignant reaction: "Tithing did you say? That was under the Law, we are under grace!"

Let me take you up on your own statement. Are you suggesting that because we have entered into the unspeakable privileges of grace, have partaken of the blessings of undeserved favour, have tasted the good things of God which were withheld from our fathers under the old economy, that we should now give less than they did?

Such reasoning is quite unthinkable. Listen how the inspired Apostle argues out the position: "What Law could not do, in as far as our earthly nature weakened its action, God did, by sending His own Son, with a nature resembling our sinful nature, to atone for sin. He condemned sin in that earthly nature, so that the requirements of the Law might be satisfied in us who live now in obedience, not to our earthly nature, but to the Spirit" (Romans 8:3, 4, Twentieth Century).

Where the requirements of the Law failed through human weakness, they should reach fulfilment in the spiritual attainments of amazing grace. "Freely ye have received, freely give" (Matthew 10:8).

Did tithing really belong to the Law? I would say that it did not. Most clearly God consented to its inclusion in the legal code, but tithing was practised over four hundred years before the Law was introduced. It is shown first as the spontaneous reaction of the grateful heart of the "friend of God" as he returned from the battlefield of victory (Genesis 14). There the man of God, who partook of bread and wine beneath the Melchizedekian priesthood, gave back a tenth to God in heartfelt thankfulness. Later his wayward, often unscrupulous, grandson found himself in face to face confrontation with the God of Heaven. The outcome of this provocative, revolutionising experience of the awe-stricken, third generation member was the pledge to exercise grandfather's practice of tithing (Genesis 28:22).

Thus we see from Scripture that tithing was established long before the advent of the Law, it was subsequently incorporated in the Law, and, in the gracious dispensation of our Lord, it received His divine approval, "Ye tithe mint and rue and all manner of herbs, and pass over judgment and the love of God: these ought ye to have done, and not to leave the other undone." (Luke 11:42).

It is extremely difficult to escape the implications of such biblical evidence. If the Body of Jesus Christ universal were to rise to the clear challenge of this issue there would be no shortage in the coffers of the Church. There would be abundance wherewith to evangelise the world. No longer would there be need for retarding restrictions, embarrassing economies or woeful withdrawals.

God's Word refers to the failure to implement this function as robbery (Malachi 3:8). I suppose the Great Train Robbery will look like an insignificant stage play compared with the magnitude of the withholdings from God over the centuries. It has been suggested that the train driver suffered loss and finally died through the effects of that audacious robbery, but how many may have suffered eternal loss and entered everlasting death because of the Great Tithe Robbery by the Church?

Paul, speaking in a different context but on the same subject of giving, said to the Philippian Christians, "It is not the money I am anxious for, what I am anxious for is the interest that accumulates in this way to your divine credit" (Philippians 4:17, Moffatt). How does your heavenly bank balance stand? Is it in credit or debit in this respect? Be assured that there is no more safe deposit. Nowhere is better interest given. A harvest of blessing can accumulate to your account if you are faithful in the discharge of this divinely-approved contribution to the treasury of God. In addition God has invited you to PROVE HIM on this subject and has promised an increase in blessing which will exceed even your capacity to absorb.

Tithing, therefore, offers a superabundance of blessing at the personal level. Obedience always gains its reward.

Tithing also provides the Church with the wherewithal to convey the blessing to the uttermost part of the earth.

"These ought ye to have done . . ."

Major Bible Campaign

THE British and Foreign Bible Society is organising a nation-wide campaign to get people reading their Bibles and to raise funds.

"Bible Action Fortnight" will take place from November 26th to December 10th (Bible Sunday).

One thousand five hundred local action groups are being asked to back the campaign. A special mailing will be sent to 24,000 ministers throughout England and Wales.

Attention will be drawn to the continuing need for Bible translation and the provision of the Gospels through electronic media (cassettes, etc.) and to the importance of effective aids to Bible Study. The Society is concerned with getting the Bible or part of it into the hands of more people and with helping men and women to understand what they read.

The Church in Action

by Margaret Mills
Ghana

Fourth group of Students of the Kumasi Refresher Course

TUESDAY, September 5th, saw the completion of Refresher Course No. 4 for ministers. Here in Kumasi, fifty pastors and overseers have passed through the school and are back on their stations.

Four weeks away from ministerial burdens and frustrations, a month away from family demands and problems — is it just a holiday for them?

The Third Course erected a post and pitch for volley-ball and enjoyed the competition between “McKeown House” and “Mills House”. These names represent the Chairman of the Church of Pentecost and the other missionary family among so many Ghanaian workers.

On the third Saturday morning of each Course the brethren are taken on a conducted tour of the sights of Kumasi, including the lovely modern university, the airport, the zoo, the Asantehene’s palace. We drive past the huge half-erected mosque — to give a stimulus to the vision for the many Muslim in the land.

From each Course, however, we have received encouraging reports of action taken by the graduates after they have returned to their stations. For example, three of our own Ashanti Region men got together with their wives for prayer and study of the responsibility each must show towards the other in order to be a Scriptural “pastor-family”. This has become a monthly activity for this small group. In a country where wives are not always encouraged to share the ministerial duties of their husbands, this is certainly beneficial to the work of God.

From letters we have received from far-away regions we read:

“I recollect many changes in my ministry after returning from the Refresher Course.”

“I am trying to put everything into practice which I was taught.”

“The youth work has been enthusiastic and as I write there are twenty children in the Asankrangwa Sunday School, thirty-six children in the Samreboi Class and sixteen in the Enyinebrim. Praise the Lord!!”

A young overseer writes: “I have started putting into practice all that I learned. In order to impart some to the entire membership I first called a Presbytery Meeting to an all-night of prayer and Bible study meetings. The presence of the Lord was felt throughout the five-hour service. After the meeting twenty-seven souls were baptized. Glory to His Name!”

“A new light has come within me and things are going well.”

The greatest testimony was the weekend at Swedru, where the District Superintendent called a meeting of pastors and overseers, six of whom had passed through the Refresher Course, elders, deacons and deaconesses — approximately 350 church officers in all. The meetings commenced at 4 p.m. on the Friday and continued until 2.30 p.m. on the Sunday. Only one meeting was less than five hours in length and then simply because an all-night of prayer was called and the brethren and sisters were given a short break in which to prepare themselves. The longest meeting lasted six hours. Very little singing was done, but at each meeting there were either two or three speakers. The main theme was instruction to church officers through the preaching of the Word of God in order that our churches might continue to be scripturally organised and our meetings scripturally conducted. The Gifts of the Spirit were manifested and the presence of the Lord throughout was rich and real.

Yes, the Church here in Ghana is really in action. It is a great joy to have fellowship with the brethren as they come to us from month to month. They share with us their local problems, which include clashes with Satan through fetish beliefs, demon possession, etc. One pastor on Course No. 4 told us how he prayed for one woman and she dropped dead before him — the power of the enemy had had her in control for so long.

Often during lectures the brethren "feel to pray" and we witness the breaking power of the Holy Spirit. The Word of God reveals the Lamb and the Holy Spirit begins to pull at hearts and turns eyes to the cross of Calvary. Many times the gifts of the Spirit are in operation during lectures, confirming the Word, exhorting, encouraging and challenging us to full surrender and humility in our work under God.

For ourselves it is not a case of "all give and no take"; truly the Lord ministers to us through the lives, testimonies and examples of our Ghanaian brethren, as they "walk in the Spirit" before us.

Second group, Kumasi Refresher Course. Lt. to rt. D. Mills "Principal", J.E. Wilson "Housemaster" (aged 63) and E.K. Kyei "Senior Prefect".

Elim Missionary Society Conference

ANOTHER Missionary Conference has slipped into history, but its results will be projected into the future. There was a high spiritual tone in the gatherings and this, coupled with the fine discussions, created a very wonderful Conference. "What a shame that many more friends were not able to share" was the expression of so many delegates and friends.

The co-operative ministry of an Indian Pastor and experienced missionaries brought blessing and enlightenment. Reports of recent visits to Ghana and Guyana kept us up to date with field news. Visual aids also made it possible to see slides of several fields. The lovely depiction of the Inyanga North and Z.E.M. (late C.E.M.) work filmed by F.B. Phillips moved us to exclamations of praise to the Lord.

In between while the Missionary Council members interviewed missionaries, candidates and visitors and generally tackled a lengthy agenda. For them the Conference week is one long period of service with early mornings and late nights!

Titles for the sessions included "Founding the Church in an Animist Society". Arthur Bull (Tanzania) very seriously explained to us the awful power of Satan, but made us rejoice as we contemplated the all-powerful name of Jesus. Henry Joseph instructed us in the ways of India, of Hindus and Moslems, thrilling us with accounts of great triumphs in South India, and prospects of progress in the North. Gerald Ladlow explained how the Church in Ghana is expanding and financing herself even to spilling over into neighbouring states in a new missionary outreach. David Ayling was enthusiastic about the functions of the national Church and reminded us that nationalism and nationalisms were different from national Church leadership. The Church is still international and must not be divided.

Lightbearers were represented by Lilian Jones, who flew back to Uganda on September 13th. Pray for her. She spoke of the work among students and staff at Irene Ladies College. She has bravely returned in spite of the disturbing news from Uganda.

The E.W.M.A. had a portion of the programmes and Mrs. Wigglesworth spoke about the spiritual applications of the Women's work. Mrs. Burton-Haynes followed with a talk about the practical application. These led to more talks by Mrs. Hyde and Mrs. Brown on market evangelism. These sisters have been very active in Scarborough and Thorpe markets, using their stalls to preach Christ and to assist the missionary cause. An E.W.M.A. Rally was held in the Elim Church, The Lanes, Brighton on Wednesday night and Mrs. E. Ruth Walker addressed a large congregation. Mrs. G.M. Gorton led the service.

Throughout the Conference devotional and prayer sessions were addressed by Council members and visiting ministers so that participation was widespread.

It was a very busy, but exhilarating time. Those who were able to relax and enjoy the sessions testified of the tremendous blessing received and of a new understanding of missionary problems.

Walking worthy

by Mrs. Noreen Magee

Colossians 1:10

I FEEL sure that many were deeply impressed by the Opening Ceremony of the Olympic Games at Munich on Saturday, September 2nd, 1972. The months of planning, preparation, financial expenditure, hard training, sincere concentration, absolute abandonment and dedication of each contestant to his or her task stirred us all.

The culmination of such gigantic efforts, came as, resplendent in colour, design and timing, each contesting group, proud to march behind its country's flag, filed into the great arena. Yes, they were proud to WALK WORTHY of their country.

The eyes of the world were trained upon them — nothing but their best, their utmost, must go into action. Health, physique, poise were all so important. As those who traverse high ropes, they would lose all if the perpendicular was lost.

In the Games the tremendous precision and exactitude, the undisturbed concentration of the young competitors on the horizontal bar staggered me.

Truly walking worthy must be the practical result of our spiritual knowledge. The competitors knew exactly each sure step. There was no time for talk, sitting down, relaxing or enjoying oneself. The walk (or exercise) was the perfect, practical result.

We need to be filled with the knowledge of His will in all wisdom and spiritual understanding. Our walk is determined by our communion and fellowship with Christ.

Walking with the King makes us royal in gait. His form and texture become part of our natures as we see, hear, act and walk unto all pleasing — worthy of the Lord. It is a conditional walk. Paul desires that we might walk worthy of the Lord unto all pleasing, being fruitful in every good work. Keeping close, keeping in step, we walk circumspectly, in newness of life, by faith and not by sight.

"Walk worthy of the vocation wherewith ye are called" commands Ephesians 4:1. Walking with our eyes wide open, contemplating the life, following the example set by the Master, promoting His gospel, defending His truth and amplifying His cause.

May we never repel an earnest seeker after truth by adulterated, vagrant, unworthy walking.

In Africa's jungles of sin and superstition, many turned to Christ because of the worthy walking of Mary Slessor, Dr. Livingstone and many others.

The Queen in her royal office walks alone.

May we in the jungle cities and towns of our beloved land, walk worthy of Him who loved us and gave Himself for us!

Walk in the light! and thine shall be

A path, though thorny, bright:

For God by grace shall dwell in thee

And God Himself is Light.

YOUTH PAGE

The National Youth Rally

Trafalgar Square

Our Reporter:
John Bristow

THE unfolding of a large canvas banner on Nelson's Column revealed what the occasion was to be that Saturday afternoon in London's Trafalgar Square. Soon the platform was a colourful spectacle of flags held high by Elim Bible College students, representing the nations from which students past and present have come.

Pastor L. E. Lambert convened the open-air meeting, no doubt conscious of the fact that there were hundreds of non-Christians within sound of his voice. Foreign tourists, parents and children, students, anarchists, drop-outs and others watched and listened as Elim youth proclaimed their faith in Christ.

Assisted by Geoff Cooper on the organ, the crowd sang choruses with clapping and shouts of praise. The musical presentation was of a high standard. Five girls known as "The Glory Singers" sang their message with great enthusiasm and soloist Maureen Davies also made a good impression for the Lord.

The first speaker, Pastor George Miller, could not be accused of propagating "black power" when he said of the world "the future is black", he was joyfully able to present the answer found in Jesus. Mellow-voiced Welshman Lyndon Bowring spoke vigorously of his conversion and of the conversion of his Marxist father. The challenge was finally put again by Pastor B.C. Richardson. His fine growth of hair bristled, as his compassionate voice called on the hearers to turn to Jesus.

When the meeting was concluded the hundreds of young Christians marched happily down historical Whitehall to Westminster, passing such places as Downing Street and the Houses of Parliament.

Westminster Central Hall

Our Reporter: Philip G. Parsons

THIS glorious day of witness culminated in a great rally. "In Praise of Jesus" was a very apt title for such a time.

Young people from various parts of Britain gathered in Westminster Central Hall, London, for this rally which was wonderfully blessed by God. The Elim Bible College Choir commenced the programme with a great song of witness: "Christ for the world".

Pastor E.R. Corsie, the National Youth Director, convened the meeting, with Pastors A.A. Biddle, L.E. Lambert, and A.B. Tee taking part. The inspired singing of Eleanor Ribleman brought a real blessing upon the meeting and Robert Higgins of Cheltenham gave a soul-stirring account of his conversion to Christ from a life of crime. Other items were given by the Rugby Tambourine Group and the Glory Singers from Froebel Teachers' Training College, London.

Pastor W.M.E. Plowright delivered a challenging message based on the godly life of the young king, Josiah. At the end, Pastor A.B. Tee appealed for young Christians to return to the Lord. It was glorious to see over thirty people stand and rededicate their lives.

The next National Youth Rally will take place on September 22nd, 1973 (D.V.)

D.J. Ayling

Monday, October 16th 1 Thessalonians 2:13-20

"But Satan hindered us" (v. 18).

NOT every door that closes is an evidence of the denial of God. Our adversary also tries to have a part in the guidance of those who seek to do God's will. He attempts to deny us fellowship with Christ and with His saints.

Those moments which you intend to spend in prayer in the house of God or in your own room are precisely the ones that suddenly become the busiest with other activities that demand to be done.

We must never lose sight of our true priorities. Satan may hinder — but he cannot defeat!

Tuesday, October 17th 1 Thessalonians 3:1-13

"That no man should be moved by these afflictions" (: 3)

I AM writing these notes in Ulster during days of extreme trial for our people here. Our faith in God is being strongly tested, but our testings ought not to move us. They must make our roots drive more deeply down into God. The wind only strengthens the roots of the oak. We cannot pretend that God has not warned us of the testing of our faith, for our verse continues: "We are appointed thereunto". The only movements permitted by the soul under strain go deeper down into God's promises and higher into the sunlight of His love.

Wednesday, October 18th 1 Thessalonians 4:1-12

"Abound more and more . . . increase more and more" (vv. 1, 10)

PAUL was never afraid to repeat what the saints already knew. Some preachers have the weakness that they must always try to be novel, to present truth in a new way, to have new revelations, to be sensational in their presentation of truth. We do not need novelty, but we do need that freshness upon our words which only the Holy Spirit can give. Paul wanted to see more of what the saints already were doing. They were already doing more but he wanted to see more and more!

If you have lost the cutting edge of your witness claim the promise that says, "I shall be anointed with fresh oil".

Thursday, October 19th 1 Thessalonians 4:13-18

"So shall we ever be with the Lord" (v. 17)

THE Christian life is never an anti-climax. The worldling's life reaches its highest moments in youth, when he is naturally incapable of making the best of them. From then on he marches towards the grave. The spiritual life of the saint ascends higher and higher in desire and aspiration towards the heavens where he anticipates his final reunion with Christ his Saviour. Remember today that "our citizenship is in heaven".

Friday, October 20th 1 Thessalonians 5:1-11

"The children of the day" (v. 5)

THOSE who are of the night have their world now. The spiritual sleep that has settled on some and the spiritually drunken excesses that occupy others are the natural elements of the unconverted. For us even to attempt to join them would be foreign to our nature and calling. We are the children of the day. So, like the watchman (v. 8) with helmet, breastplate and soberness, we await the return of Christ. Our day is yet to come!

Saturday, October 21st 1 Thessalonians 5:12-28

"In everything give thanks: for this is the will of God concerning you" (v.18)

THERE are some things that, at first glance, we cannot really know to be the will of God or not. There are other things that, when we ask for them, we are asking in God's will, because we are already told they are the will of God. This is one. Can you think of any others?

I do not have to ask God whether I should give thanks for everything. It is the will of God. Then I must obey.

Sunday, October 22nd 2 Thessalonians 1:1-12

"Your faith groweth exceedingly" (v. 3)

THE church at Thessalonica was still growing. Paul's First Letter to them had commended them for being "examples" to all who believed, for "sounding" the word of the Lord abroad. When he wrote this later Letter to them, they were still going on.

How often have we seen much growth in the early enthusiasm of a Christian, only to come back later to find the same person settled down into being a respectable Christian and nothing more. The church at Thessalonica had not settled down. They were still expanding. What about us?

"You are not quite ready to fly yet", she said, "We will try again tomorrow, when your wings will be much stronger."

Jesus wants us to grow stronger in our Christian lives. Sometimes He has to make us uncomfortable so that we might prove that we are ready to use our wings of faith. If we get into difficulty, we can put our trust in Him. He will help and guide us.

How's your Power?

THE other day I went out to my car, unlocked it, removed the "Krook-lok", inserted the ignition key and turned it. My feet were poised ready for a quick get-away. I was already turning over in my mind the route that I should take to do all the work that I had determined to do that morning.

So much for plans! There was no response. I admit that I know very little about cars and even less about electrics. I tried everything that I knew, but to no avail, and in the end I came to the conclusion that the battery was flat (so was I!). There was nothing else for it but to take the battery out and carry it into the house and put it on charge.

During that day I walked and walked. At the end of my day's work I arrived home at ten o'clock, twelve hours and ten miles later.

As I walked I thought, "Why should the battery suddenly fail?"

I found the answer. At lunch-time I tottered up to the car, unlocked it and looked at the dashboard. Then I realised — I had left my lights on the night before. When I pulled up outside the house the 'phone was ringing. I jumped out, locked the door, and rushed into the house to listen to a plea for prayer. Having dealt with the problem I sat down to drink the inevitable cup of tea. I never gave my poor, faithful car another thought.

So the power drained away, wasted in the dark road, its poor lights becoming more and more dim as it stood there under the street lamp. It was a bit daft, wasn't it?

Jesus said, "Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven." To shine in the darkness is important, but it takes power. Where there is no power, there is no light, and this poor, old world needs a little light nowadays. There is far too much darkness, sadness, distress wherever you look.

Light is essential to life and, if you are going to enjoy life to the full, you must have light. Jesus is the Light of the World. Most of you know that painting by Holman Hunt that hangs in Keble College, Oxford, or the one in St. Paul's, London. It shows Jesus the Light of the World waiting to gain admission through an overgrown door. There is no handle on the outside of the door. If you want the Light of the World in your life, you must let Him in by inviting Him,

*Into my heart, into my heart,
Come into my heart, Lord Jesus.
Come in today, come in to stay,
Come into my heart, Lord Jesus.*

asks Bernard J. Epton

Pastor of Elim Pentecostal Church, Liverpool

If you let Him come in He will give you the power to live and to brighten up this drab world of ours. Think of the children and the life that lies before them. Be a light shining in the dark corners and make sure that you are drawing daily from the Source of all power, the Holy Spirit. "Ye shall receive power, after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you", Jesus promised, and it can be yours every day — the power to bring new light, life, joy and peace to others.

This message was broadcast over B.B.C. Radio Merseyside in the "Thought for the Day" series.

Letter to the Editor

Dear Sir,

I would like to express my appreciation of the article written by Paul R. Newberry entitled "Essentials". Of the points raised there are two on which I should like to comment.

1. The Modern Gospel.

There seems to be a widening gulf between the modern gospel and the Bible gospel. Now we preach to make men happy instead of trying to bring men under a sense of need. Happiness is baseless, unless it is grounded on conviction of sin and judgment, which then leads to pardon and true happiness.

2. Modern Gospel Presentation.

When sitting in some of our large meetings, I have at times felt as if I was back in the world being entertained. Now we applaud the soloist instead of glorifying God.

Yours sincerely in Christ,
D. WORSFOLD

THE Evangelistic Conference recently held in our Graham Street Church in Birmingham was an event of great significance. It would be easy to expatiate on the crowded public meetings, the intensive, absorbing lectures, the well-prepared, effective "teach-ins", the excellent organisation, the grand fellowship in the church and in the homes which were so kindly opened to delegates, the splendid catering arrangements, unfailing cheerfulness and happy service of the Minister, his wife and their co-workers, the marvellous way in which the church premises came into their own in such useful accommodation, the times of prayer...the list seems nearly endless. Somehow, however, my feeling is that all those who were privileged to be present will feel that the Conference strongly reinforced a growing sense that God is moving among us in increasing power. We shared the good company, anointed preaching and lecturing and helpful contributions of Alfred Webb and W.T.H. Richards, two of our colleagues from Assemblies of God, and they shared with us in the feeling that there is a new spirit abroad.

This was no dry-as-dust series of ill-prepared talks followed by discussions full of cliches and evangelical adages. Young men and older really got down to the serious business of examining the situation as it is, of realising afresh and anew that our basic need is not new methods, important as these can be, but the old-time power.

I am sure that our members would have been greatly encouraged to have witnessed the times of unbroken prayer, when one after another poured out their hearts to God. They would have rejoiced with us to see among the delegates such a good proportion of keen young men.

This was a Conference that will have done tremendous good. The future will undoubtedly reveal just how much.

Church Reports

ASHINGDON

Pastor: C. D. Stockdale

IT was a great joy to see a church normally seating fifty packed night after night with about 100 children when Pastor John Harrison of Lowestoft came to Ashingdon to lead a Childrens' Special campaign.

The meetings went with a swing all the way through every night with "Uncle John" leading choruses, setting quizzes, telling stories and showing filmstrips. At the end of each meeting Pastor Harrison gave a more serious talk explaining to the children their need of Jesus. Twenty children were counselled and a number of them signed decision cards.

The climax of the week was the Sunday morning family service to which several parents came. Thirteen children were presented with prizes.

One hundred and ninety-six different children came throughout the week, 156 of whom did not belong to our Sunday school. We now have 103 new families to contact. Please pray with us that we shall have the blessing of the Lord as we continue this work.

Pastor: R. Cotter

MEMBERS and friends assembled for the induction of our new minister, Pastor R. Cotter, in the local Orange Hall, kindly loaned. Since the departure of our previous minister and his wife, Pastor and Mrs. D. Kilpatrick, we were privileged to have Pastor Cotter in charge of our church. This was intended to be temporary.

It was thrilling to see the packed hall and to hear the beautiful hymns expressing our heartfelt thanks to God. On the church's behalf, Mr. William Davidson extended a warm welcome to Pastor Cotter, aptly referring to the previous Sunday morning service. He also thanked Pastor and Mrs. A. Wilson, Pastor and Mrs. A.R.T. Whittall and members of Armagh, Portadown and Ballymena assemblies for coming, the last being Pastor Cotter's home church. His parents, family and uncle, Mr. David Cotter, who rendered two solos, were present.

Mr. Matthew Fullerton added his welcome, saying how much he had enjoyed fellowship with the new pastor already.

Pastor Whittall ably convened the service and Pastor A. Wilson, our Irish Superintendent, welcomed the new minister, saying that he hardly needed an introduction. The Superintendent had prayed that God would send the right man to us and, though other arrangements had been made, God over-ruled and he was confident that God had answered prayer.

Pastor Cotter replied very movingly, saying that it was a great day for him — the induction to his first church and his twenty-first birthday. He expressed appreciation for the kindness and co-operation that he had already received.

Pastor Wilson then addressed both Pastor and people.

As the new minister knelt, Pastors Wilson and Whittall laid hands on him praying God's blessing on his ministry among us.

MOTHERWELL

Pastor: F.W. Jones

AT our Sisterhood weekend, our guest speaker was Mrs. E. Ruth Walker from Cheltenham. Her opening address on the Saturday night was a challenge for the meetings which were to follow. The ladies' trio sang with much feeling and our junior and senior Timbrells played very well indeed. We will long remember our speaker's Sunday morning message. The Sisterhood choir rendered a devotional piece, "At Calvary". The Gospel service was well attended. The chorus session was led by Gena. The ladies' choir, under the able direction of Mrs. McKillop, sang twice. Mrs. Walker's address indeed brought a shower of blessing.

On Monday night our church was packed with 300 women for our united rally. Miss Marilyn Hutton sang and played with great effect. Miss E. Reid thrilled the congregation with her Scottish dialect rendering of David and Goliath. The closing address was so relevant to the need of these days.

Mrs. Jones ably convened all these services.

BELFAST, Ballysillan

Pastor: A.F. Seeman

"HOW are things in Belfast? Does the trouble affect your church?" were the questions I was asked when on holiday in England. We rejoice to be able to report that the blessing of the Lord maketh rich and addeth no sorrow.

In the last few months we have known the guidance of the Lord and seen blessing in the church. A young man recently came to know the Lord as Saviour and four young people were received into membership. A visit by Pastor J.T. Bradley was of much blessing and greatly appreciated by us all. Then on a recent Sunday night the service was taken by two young women. One has gone to Elim Bible College, the other to France to work with Operation Mobilisation. As they spoke of their vision and call we were conscious of the Holy Spirit challenging us all to full surrender. The church was full and the troubles around were forgotten for a while.

A few weeks ago, a car bomb was left outside a shop just 300 yards from the church. The area was being evacuated when the bomb exploded, causing the usual damage to property and homes. None was seriously hurt. We believe that it was of the goodness of the Lord. A few hours previous to the bomb being planted, a member of the church had a burden of prayer for the district and in particular for her own road, which is opposite the explosion.

In such ways we prove the goodness of the Lord and continue to trust Him day by day.

BISHOP AUCKLAND

Pastor: R.M. Kingsbury

"LORD, do something bigger than we imagine is possible"; was our prayer during the weeks preceeding our children's crusade. Invitation cards were distributed at all the local schools and posters were displayed all over the town. We had invited Pastor Ron Mackenzie and "Robbie the Robot" to join us. The Crusade was financed by selling home-made cakes and novelties on a stall which we had managed to hire in the local market.

On the first night of the crusade we were overwhelmed by the crowd of children who crammed into the church. Three hundred excited, noisy youngsters waited impatiently to see "Robbie". A local news photographer took photographs and, two nights later, a recording was made for B.B.C. Radio Teesside's breakfast time programme, "On the Move". The following evening, B.B.C. Television news team came along to see what all the excitement was about and they filmed the children singing and interviewed Pastors Mackenzie and Kingsbury. Unfortunately this film was damaged in processing and rendered unusable, but many of the children will long remember the night they were "filmed for T.V."

A local bus proprietor offered us a coach at a nominal fee to bring in children from an outlying estate. Due to the overwhelming response this had to be replaced by a double-decker.

It was wonderful to see 250 to 300 young people gathered in the church every night to hear the Gospel proclaimed in clear, relevant terms. Pastor Mackenzie ably illustrated various spiritual truths with his excellent equipment, all of which he has made himself. We are most grateful to him and to the members of his church, who worked so hard to make this effort a great success.

COLCHESTER

Pastor: A.P. Thomas

WE thank God for the children's campaign recently conducted by Pastor John Harrison, the Youth Commissioner for our Presbytery. Each night for a week over 100 children met, culminating with a great Sunday evening service when the children and their parents gathered together.

Decisions for Christ were made by children of all ages and our youth work has received a great stimulus.

CRADLEY HEATH

Pastor: T.W. Jacobs

A THREE-COURSE banquet, complete with cake, marked the beginning of our twenty-first church anniversary convention, when four of our previous pastors sat down with some fifty-five members and friends.

The guest preacher for the four-day convention which followed was Pastor J.A. Crimp.

During the Saturday night rally, our Church Elder, Mr. Ted Smith, along with Pastors Ken Smith, of "Another Slant" fame and F.J. Taylor recalled memories of yesteryear.

It was a privilege also to have Pastor J.J. Way with us for the weekend. He ministered God's Word on the Sunday morning.

The convention finished with the singing of, "Revive Thy Work, O Lord". The meeting became charged with the presence of God.

WEST MIDLANDS PRESBYTERY RALLY

THE idea of a Presbytery sports' day came from our Youth Commissioner, Pastor D.S. Williams. After much planning, over 600 people arrived for this event on the splendid campus of Keele University. The Youth Commissioner and Pastor M.J. Epton directed football, cricket, tennis, table tennis, netball, five-a-side football and track events.

After all the physical exercise, over 600 came to the evening rally in the church on the university grounds. The singing was wonderful. A group of young people from a Pentecostal Anglican church in our area sang and testified. Pastor Epton preached in a forthright manner and over sixty came forward in answer to his invitation — what a climax to the day!

Another hymn was sung and then came the long-awaited moment. Pastor F.J. Day announced that Silverdale were the winners followed by Macclesfield with Hanley third.

The day was greatly enjoyed by all. More people who were strangers to our churches heard the gospel than through most events we promote. We thank Pastors Williams and Epton for their hard work.

Canada Conference

THE twenty-eighth General Conference of the Pentecostal Assemblies of Canada which met in Halifax, Nova Scotia, saw the re-election of all the Executive Officers with strong mandates and the creation of one additional national executive post. Robert W. Taitinger, who has served two terms in the office of General Superintendent, won re-election on the nomination ballot, gaining 241 of the 252 votes. Dividing the post of General Secretary-Treasurer resulted in James Montgomery being elected General Secretary, a position he has filled by appointment of the General Executive since the passing of C.H. Stiller, and Graydon R. Richards being elected General Treasurer.

The other ministers elected as Executive Officers were: C.W. Lynn - Overseas Missions, R.M. Argue - Home Missions and Bible Colleges and S.D. Feltmate - Christian Education and Youth.

Conference delegates represented all provinces and territories across Canada, Bermuda, Trinidad, Africa, and many of the mission fields. Delegates learned there has been a growth in the Fellowship's fifty-three years of history to where there are now 749 churches and 1,945 credential holders. Twenty-seven new churches have been built in Canada since the twenty-seventh General Conference — PAOC

12 Practice and Preventative

by J. Alexander Wright

THE Practice of Holiness (Romans 7:1–6) is now illustrated by the marriage bond: “dead to the Law” (vv. 2–4). If a woman, married to Mr. Law, were to die and miraculously to rise again from the dead, she would be freed from her old partner, since her death dissolved the union: “she is loosed”, free to marry again and to have children by her new husband. That is what has happened to us, Christ’s holy Bride, says Paul. We have been married to Jesus Christ that we should “bring forth fruit unto God”, i.e. bear children unto the Lord. Believers sing with anticipation of the forthcoming Marriage Supper of the Lamb, but they are already married to the Lord. Not until the last believer has been added (married) and the Bride is complete, will the wedding breakfast, or Marriage Supper, be celebrated! The children of the former marriage to Mr. Law were all stillborn (v.5). Mr. Law was a good man, but very exacting, always making demands upon her – legitimate, of course, but she couldn’t keep up! She might wish him dead, but he never dies (Matthew 5:18), so she must and she did (v.4)! “Delivered from the Law... wherein we were held” (v.6) shows that Mr. Law’s hold was cruel, like a mantrap’s (lit.), but Jesus freed us from his bondage that, “in the new life of the Spirit” (ARV), we might be His bondslaves.

The Preventative to Holiness (7:7–24)

This passage is a subject of dispute among Bible students. In chapter 6 the “old man” was crucified, dead, buried with Christ. Here we are introduced to the “wretched man” (v.24). Dr. Alexander Whyte has written, “Romans chapter 7 is the most terrible tragedy in all literature. You may search the classics of the ages and nowhere will you find a tragic passage to compare with this one. All your Macbeths, your Hamlets, your Lears, and your Othellos are pale ghosts of tragedies, mere stage plays when set alongside the awful tragedy of soul-shipwreck outlined in Romans 7. The chapter should always be printed in letters of blood. All the passions and terrors of eternity are packed into it. Here Heaven and Hell meet as they meet nowhere else in all the universe, and here they grapple together for the everlasting possession of the immortal soul of man.”

Who is the “wretched man”? Who speaks in the present tense – Saul the religious sinner, or Paul the born-again saint and apostle? We cannot deny the possibility of failure and grievous backsliding on the part of Christians, so much of this language might be applicable to experience, but did Paul ever so fall from the time of his conversion? Some “Holiness” teachers, with their doctrine of a sanctifying Baptism in the Holy Spirit, hold the view that the passage is descriptive of a Christian before he receives the Pentecostal Baptism as at 8:2. The writer once asked one such teacher as to when, in the light of this teaching, Paul underwent the experience of chapter 7, since he received his Pentecost three days after his conversion on the Damascus Road and was then, presumably, freed from his wretchedness. The good man replied that it was during those three days!

The use of the first person and present tense in vv. 14–25 should not limit our understanding of them. Strict insistence on their literality would mean that Paul was in such a spiritual state even while writing this great Letter from Corinth in A.D. 58 or thereabouts after nearly thirty years of intensive missionary service and sacrifice! They may mean no more than making vivid and personal the general and collective experience of all, saying “I” but implying “We”. The language is not that of one who has given way to a sudden gust of temptation; it describes habitual character. The tenses make this clear.

Moralists have always taught that man has two natures, the good and the evil, each striving for the mastery within, a kind of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde existence. Some years ago at the London Conference leading to the independence of Nyasaland, Dr. Hastings Banda, their first Prime Minister, paid a tribute to Mr. Robert Butler, saying, “You sir, have drawn out of me that side which is good and reasonable and pushed that other side which is bad and pig-headed back”.

First E.W.M.A. rally

Our Reporter:

Gladys M. Gorton (E.W.M.A. Secretary)

AMONG comments on the first E.W.M.A. rally, held in Brighton, were: "An outstanding success"; "What an inspiration!"; "The E.W.M.A. is a wonderful fellowship"; "The enthusiasm shown by Elim sisters is tremendous"; "We felt it was an inspiration to go forward refreshed and helped by our meeting together".

A full coach and the college minibus travelled from Capel. The weather was ideal. After enjoying sea and sun, we met at the historic Elim Pentecostal Church in The Lanes for tea. About 130 gathered and, over a working tea, each E.W.M.A. branch represented was introduced and told of their activities. Profitable ideas and suggestions were exchanged. Appreciation was expressed to Mrs. Hodge and her workers for providing a splendid tea.

At the evening rally, the ground floor of the church soon filled as coach loads arrived. There were E.W.M.A. representatives from Eastbourne, Brighton, Bognor, Camberwell, Clapham, Caterham, Gosport, Hastings, Hove, Portsmouth, Letchworth, Newhaven, Clacton-on-Sea, Springbourne, Winton, Sunderland, Sheffield, and probably others, too. We were conscious of the anointing of the Holy Spirit from the beginning. Retired and former missionaries were mentioned. New candidates and Lightbearers took part. Mrs. D. Bull gave a vivid account of her work in Tanzania. Mrs. Joseph of Madras, India, who looked lovely in her royal blue sari, spoke of the work there with Pastor and Mrs. J.H. Prentice and in appreciation of the printing press ("Light through Literature" project). A singing group of about twenty-five sisters from the Capel conference sang twice. Thanks were expressed to Pastor and Mrs. F.A. Hodge for the use of their church and to their son, Kenn Oldfield Hodge, for his beautiful playing of the Hammond organ.

We sat spellbound under the timely, God-anointed ministry of Mrs. E. Ruth Walker, wife of the President, who earlier led us in prayer. Her major points were most suitable for E.W.M.A.: Vision: Burden; Identification; Source of Supply. "Others could be the E.W.M.A. motto", she boldly declared.

We were encouraged to have members of the Missionary Council with us. At the close we remembered Miss Sylvia Beardwell, a member of the Brighton church now a missionary in India.

We rejoice in a glorious rally and in a profitable and precious Missionary Conference.

World Congress on Evangelism

CHURCH leaders from all six continents recently met in Los Angeles with Dr. Billy Graham to plan an International Congress on World Evangelization.

The Congress will be convened by some 200 leading clergymen from around the world. More than 100 have already accepted invitations from Dr. Graham to serve on the Convening Committee and further invitations are being issued. Dr. Graham has been named Honorary Chairman of the Congress. A decision on dates and location will probably be finalised in the next few weeks. He also announced that it had been decided that the Congress was to have a large representation of people from the so-called "Third World" areas.

Graham said, "During the past six months I have sought counsel with a number of men from six continents. We believe that God led us to the unanimous decision to convene this International Congress on World Evangelization in 1974. The purpose of the Congress is clear — to press for the evangelization of the world in our generation. We believe that the Holy Spirit is at work in the world in unusual ways. Millions of people are searching for what Christ has to offer. Multiplied numbers of them have responded to the Gospel invitation. Churches and Christians have been and are still being renewed. We stand on the threshold of a new era. Never before have the opportunities been so great nor the means at our command to proclaim the Gospel so manifold."

Speaking about this week's consultations in Los Angeles, Graham said, "I cannot help being excited about the plans being evolved and I believe that God will use this Congress to focus our attention on the strategy for total world evangelization in our time."

Book reviews

Gems of Grace, by Bob Stokes. Published by Marshall, Morgan and Scott Ltd., price 50p, postage and packing 5p extra.

IT has been said that truth is stranger than fiction and certainly the stories from the author's own rich experience with God and from those of others, inspire and thrill the reader with the joyous realisation that Bob Stokes' God is their God, too, and that what he has performed for Bob He has done, is doing, and can do for them.

To my mind the life incidents recorded in this book should be the norm for true Christians. The enthralling diversity of happenings is an inspiration and encouragement to the fearful, the doubtful, and even the stoutest, seasoned believer, while they present a challenge and contain a revelation to the backslider and the unbeliever.

(Mrs.) GLADYS M. GORTON

Missionary Adventure in Brazil, by Fanstone. Published by Henry E. Walter Ltd., price 38p, postage and packing 6p extra.

THIS amazing story of the Anapolis Hospital, which is renowned all over Brazil, is the result of many enquiries as to why it had not been published sooner.

It is a small volume, easy to read because of its short chapters, and published "in praise not of a person, but rather as a tribute to the dedicated labours of countless missionaries who live and die unheard of and unhonoured, in lonely far-off lands".

It gives an insight into the difficulties of early missionary work in Brazil, of the vision of a godly doctor and the spiritual as well as the medical results of the work of both missionaries and nationals, who are determined to introduce every patient to the Book. It is worth far more than its price.

HENRY JEFFERY

The Vatican Billions, by Avro Manhattan, published by Marshall, Morgan and Scott. Price £3, postage and packing 10p extra.

That the Roman Church is well able to abolish the poverty and need that covers so many lands and lives under her domination is convincingly revealed in this astonishing book. A detailed account is given of the build-up of the fabulous wealth of the Roman Church. The research into this arena of the Vatican Empire and of the accumulation of its vast wealth reveals a sandy foundation that ultimately will be swept away.

The origin of this network of the great Roman financial empire is set forth with a vivid record of statistical facts. The progressive accumulation of unparalleled wealth is beyond the reader's imagination.

One cannot but think of the words of the Lord Jesus to the rich young man, "Go sell that thou hast and give to the poor, and thou shalt have treasure in heaven."

EDWARD F. COLE

Can you tell me?, by Dena Korfker. Published by Marshall, Morgan and Scott Ltd., price 35p, postage and packing 3p extra.

ANY parent or teacher will know all about the inquiring mind of a child and will be pleased to discover this book. The authoress poses thirty-nine poignant questions that any child might ask, like "Where was I before I was born?", "How does a caterpillar become a butterfly?", "Why can't I see God?" and "When is Jesus coming back?"

Dena Korfker sets out the answers to these questions in a simple, clear, concise way, making difficult topics easy to understand without destroying or distorting the truth. Having devoted her life to teaching in the kindergarten department of a church school, she has acquired a valuable store of experiences upon which to draw in producing this fine little book.

(Mrs.) PAMELA RICHARDSON

Happiness is... by Betty Carlson, published by Marshall, Morgan and Scott. Price 35p, postage and packing 4p extra.

This is a helpful, refreshing little book, easy to read and to understand, yet containing great truths, simply and concisely expressed.

The chapters are short and self-contained, yet each contributes to the whole, thus making it a very useful book for a busy housewife and mother, whose reading time is so often limited to a few snatched moments. Each chapter ends with a thought-provoking prayer, which, as I read them, became my prayers, too.

This is a book from which one gains comfort, encouragement and challenge. The writer has some very practical, down-to-earth things to say on many aspects of Christian living.

Advertised as "Talks for Womens Meetings", it certainly provides an excellent framework on which to build many interesting, helpful talks.

My Story

Abednego

Radebe African Staff Foreman of Emmanuel Press, Nelspruit, Transvaal, S. Africa, talks to Elim missionary David G. Butcher.

D.B. Abednego, how did you first come into contact with Mfundisi Phillips and the message of the gospel?

A.R. In about 1930 a teacher, Nqolasi, came from Emmanuel Mission, Nelspruit, to my home at Hedricksdale, about forty miles away. He talked to my father about sending his children to school. My father was pleased. It was 1932 before we actually started at the school. Here we first met Mfundisi Phillips. We were taught many things about our Zulu language, how to read and write it, and other school lessons, but first thing each day came teaching about the Bible, especially about God's love for us and how that God's own Son died for our sins. The words of John 3:16 have always remained with me. We were taught to sing and pray. These Bible lessons went on from 8 to 10.30 a.m. each day.

D.B. You seem to have had a good time at school, but how did the schooling go?

A.R. I suppose it was about a year before I could read a few Zulu words. One year I was given a New Testament; that thrilled me. I made up my own way of reading it: instead of just reading, I made up my own tune and sang the words of Scripture. I was so happy, for now I could not only read, I also had my own copy of the New Testament.

D.B. When did you accept Jesus into your heart?

A.R. I was the first of our family to accept Jesus and I did this in 1937. I remember reading my New Testament and that verse Revelation 3:20 spoke to me. I opened my heart's door and Jesus came in. I used to tell my friends. They did not understand and laughed at me, asking me, "Where does your Jesus sit in you?"

D.B. Did you go away from the Lord?

A.R. Yes, during 1947 I wandered away from the fold of God and became a great servant of the devil. I smoked and was a great drunkard. I was the friend of many women. I became a thief and a great gambler, plus many other things which I will not say about.

D.B. When did you return to the Lord?

A.R. Some great meetings were held in Nelspruit during 1956 by Mr. Bhengu (a well-loved African Evangelist). My friend told me about them — but for

Meet the Emmanuel Press Staff. Abednego Radebe, or, as we all know him, Bednog, is our African staff foreman. As a young boy he was a cleaner and later served an apprenticeship to become a compositor. Apart from being a good comp., he is extremely versatile and very capable. He is now one of the church elders and the treasurer of the local church, a wonderful Christian and a joy to work with. Pray for him as he leads the African staff. Pray for him as he gives many hours free of charge to the service of the Lord.

another reason other than the services. He said that there were many lovely young ladies going to the services. I replied with a well known Zulu phrase and we decided to go to the meetings just simply for the girls who were there. The Lord had His hand on my life though and I remember those girls at the service for one thing only — their singing. They were singing in Zulu, "There is power in the blood of the Lamb", The preacher prayed. It was so clear and I understood so well. He said, "Lord Jesus, there are many here who are backslidden and today is their day to come back to you."

The reading was from John 3 and this touched my heart, for verse 16 was my favourite verse that Mrs. Phillips taught me in Sunday school. There and then I gave my heart back to God. Jesus became far more beautiful than all those girls. His love was far greater and more wonderful. God knows people and He knows how best to speak to them.

How God wonderfully healed me

by Mrs. Bagshaw

I WRITE this testimony, praying that it will encourage others to believe that miracles can happen today, as they did during our Lord's time on earth. My testimony proves that they do.

Over twelve months ago, one morning on my way to work, I was knocked down by a car in Halifax. Though badly shaken, but, as I thought, physically unhurt, I got up and went on to work. I worked that day and the following week without any trouble at all. The next week we went on holiday by car. On the journey I developed a very severe pain in my back and lost all feeling in my right leg. We continued the journey and arrived late. We went straight to bed, but I found I was unable to sleep, the pain being so severe by this time.

The next day my husband took me to the nearest hospital, where I was X-rayed, and told by the doctor that I must have had a terrible bump on my body, as my spine was twisted and out of place and my back extremely bruised, the result of my accident. I was detained in hospital for a few days and my back was kept rigid. We were then advised to return home and see our own doctor, which we did, after a most unpleasant and painful journey.

My own doctor gave me a letter to post to the Royal Infirmary, but it was two months before I heard anything. By this time I could hardly walk even with the help of a stick. We prayed continually that God would undertake for me. He was our strength through all those weeks. I was then X-rayed again and told that my back was virtually broken. This could be seen now, as most of the bruising had gone. I was put in a plaster cast for three months, but I was still in considerable pain. Then followed weeks of various treatments, but to no avail. By this time I was getting desperate. My one consolation was the constant prayers of our Minister, his wife and the friends of the Halifax Church.

I was then asked to see a specialist at Leeds, who told me, after examining me and all the notes of my case, that he would like to operate. This would free me from pain, but the chances were that I would not walk again. This was the decision I was faced with. I was only 46 and did not want to be a burden to my family. I was given a few days to think it over. I prayed as I had never prayed before, asking God to take over and move in a miraculous way.

At our Church one Sunday, after deciding against the operation, but still not feeling sure of my decision, I went out to be anointed with oil according to James 5:14. I believe that the miracle took place just then, for I felt a wonderful peace come over me. The next day I was free from pain. It was just wonderful.

I saw the specialist some time later for another X-ray and it proved without a shadow of a doubt that I was healed. The part where my spine was damaged had closed up and my spine was whole. The doctor said it was like a miracle. He could hardly believe his own eyes, as he looked at the before and after X-rays. I told him what had happened to me and about the anointing and he praised God with me. "Only God could have done this," he said, and I knew it to be true.

* * *

*Suppose that the man who was lame had come To the Saviour by Galilee's shore
And had asked for a cane to help him walk,
For a cane, and nothing more.*

*Suppose that the man who was blind from birth
Had asked for only a guide
And had missed the wonder of Christ's dear face
And Heaven and earth beside.*

*Suppose that the woman who seemed rebuffed
Had turned away in despair,
Resigned to nurse her helpless child,
And the hurt of unanswered prayer.*

*Suppose they had all been like you and me,
With their asking so fraught with doubt;
What sorrows and pains they would have retained
What joys they'd have gone without!*

AN OUTLINE

The Shadow of the Almighty

Psalm 91:1

WHERE is "the secret place of the Most High?" — under the shadow of the Almighty. The following objects are the symbols of the Almighty.

1. The Shadow of a great Rock (Isaiah 32:2): shelter.
2. The Shadow of a Tree (Song 2:3): satisfaction.
3. The Shadow of His Wings (Psalm 63:7): safety.
4. The Shadow of His Hand (Isaiah 49:2): service.

A QUOTATION

Morbid Sabbaticus

THIS dreadful disease attacks professing Christians. It never appears except on Sundays, but in these days more and more are being laid low on Sunday evenings. Symptoms vary, but it never interferes with sleep or appetite. It never lasts for more than the twenty-four hours. No doctor or specialist is ever called in. It is alarmingly infectious. No remedy is known, except prayer. Unless it is checked, it always proves fatal to the soul.

AN INCIDENT

Self-service

"A FELLOW captive of mine, like the rest of the prisoners of war in the German camps of the last great war, regularly received parcels from home, which often included blocks of chocolate. For the last three months, W. stored away every slab in wrapping paper and cardboard. Suddenly the order came, 'Move!'. All baggage was to be jettisoned. Off went W. to secure his precious chocolate, only to find, when he unwrapped it, a heap of uneatable mould!"

Letter to the Editor

43 Manilla Road
Birmingham B29 7PZ.

Dear Brother Walker,

Many Elim friends know that I teach religious education in a large secondary school. It has been a thrill to see otherwise uninterested young people gripped by the book, Tortured for Christ. I have managed to put this and several other evangelical books into our school library, but I am anxious to get the young people reading this type of book in actual lessons.

It may be that there are those who possess some of these modern paperbacks which they have read and which they would like to be used in service for the Lord. If such friends would care to donate their copies I would be extremely grateful.

Quite a number of young people from my classes have come to our services at Stirchley.

Prayer would be valued as I am actively involved in conducting Assemblies.

Yours in Christ,

JOHN B. COLEMAN.

My High Priest

*So oft when sorely tempted
And faith seems very weak,
When battles fierce are raging
And help from God I seek,
My failing strength is quickened
When in His Word I see
That Christ is interceding
And praying now for me.*

*The blood He claims in pleading—
His hands, His feet, His side—
Before our God disclosing
A place where we may hide.
Unknown His words so holy
To us in feeble frame.
The heart of God responding—
He hears in Jesus' name.*

*Believe, my heart, and praise Him,
Though Satan sorely try.
Fear not when shadows darken,
Though hid, your Lord is nigh.
He knows your frame and weakness,
He will be strength for you.
Have faith! He's interceding.
Trust Him! He'll take you through.*

Observations on the mission field made during a recent visit to Guyana

I HAVE attended many lively meetings here in Guyana, but nothing came up to last Saturday.

I have noticed with interest that meetings go very well in this part of the world, even if sometimes there is no piano or organ. A good song leader, a good clap, and the meeting is well under way. Often there is a youth choir ten to fifteen strong. They partly lead the singing and help to keep up the tempo.

"It was on a Monday Somebody touched me — I know it was the hand of the Lord!" All those who were converted on a Monday stand to their feet while it is sung and we go through eight verses to include all those converted on other days. If you wonder how we found another day in the week the last one is for those "who don't know what day it was but Somebody touched me!" By now the meeting is really off to a good start and preaching is easy in such an atmosphere.

I haven't forgotten the meeting last Saturday! We set out early in the day to visit the furthest outpost of Elim in this land, seventy miles away in Ithica. We travelled along the coast until we reached the village of Ithica in a sugar plantation on the banks of the Berbice river. In the middle of the village is a house which we use as our mission station. It stands on stilts, like all the rest, and under the house a cement floor has been put in. Lattice work makes the walls and we have our church.

We carried up with us two veterans of the work here, Brothers Romao and Trotman, who were to continue after our meeting with a week's evangelistic mission, while looking after themselves in the house above. One of these veterans is over seventy and the other is eighty!

A good crowd of children and adults gradually gathered for the meeting and I stood up to speak. It had been a lively meeting with singing, clapping and shakers playing (these are made of pop-bottle tops strung on wire and played something like a tambourine), but my message began to have the strangest effect on the hearers. They began to stamp, jump and slap each other. I wondered whether this was some new form of appreciation which I had not come across before, when I saw my wife indulging in the same antics. For a moment I stopped preaching

The military wedding of two former Sunday school children and the question came to my mind, "Is Doreen also among the prophets?"

The moment I stood still and surveyed the scene, which I can only describe as like a display by wild dervishes, I understood the reason for the chaos. I was attacked by the fiercest plague of mosquitoes it has been my misfortune to meet. My message was appreciated in inverse proportion to its length! I tried to say something that would be of benefit and left it at that.

Afterwards I gladly surrendered my bottle of insect repellent to the brethren who were carrying on for the week. It was, I felt, the very least that I could do.

I bear the marks of that meeting still, but when I think of the courage and faith of these stalwarts of the cross who maintain these outstations — and each carries outside the hall or houses the sign that many have come to respect in this country: "Elim . . . the Mission with a Message!" — then I thank God for our devoted missionary staff who have put the work on such a sound footing.

New shoes for Timothy

by Sheila Price

Deuteronomy 29:5

TIMOTHY needed a new pair of shoes for school, so on Saturday he went shopping with his mother. When Mrs. Lewis had bought all the groceries she required for the weekend, they went into the shoe shop at the corner of the street and took a seat while they waited for the assistant to serve them.

"Can I have a brown pair this time, mummy?" asked Timothy.

"Very well," said his mother.

The assistant handed Mrs. Lewis several pairs of shoes and Timothy tried them on.

"I like those best," said Timothy, pointing to a shining, brown pair with a small buckle.

"Are you quite sure they feel comfortable?" asked Mrs. Lewis.

"Oh yes," said Timothy, as he tried them on once again and walked up and down. "They fit nicely, mummy."

"Then we'll take them," said Mrs. Lewis, and handed over the money to the assistant. "I do hope that these shoes will last longer than the last pair did, Timothy. You wear out your shoes so quickly."

"I expect it's because of all the running and climbing I do in the school-yard," said Timothy. "Wouldn't it be nice if we could buy shoes that never wore out, mummy?"

The Bible tells us that, when the Children of Israel were in the wilderness, God provided them with shoes to protect their feet from the hot, dusty sand. They spent forty years in the wilderness and travelled many hundreds of miles, yet, at the end of the journey, their shoes were still as good as new!

Many times the Children of Israel became downhearted, but they kept going, putting their trust in God. He had promised to care for them and to provide all that they needed for the journey and God kept His promise.

Find the verse in Deuteronomy chapter 29 which says: "Thy shoe is not waxen old upon thy foot".

From T. H. Stevenson

AN Elim member, on his appointment as deputy head of a new fast-growing comprehensive school with 1,100 pupils and almost sixty staff members, was concerned to find the absence of any form of Christian fellowship or witness. God moves in remarkable ways, however. In the reorganisation, a former Anglican vicar and padre was appointed in charge of Religious Instruction, followed by a young Christian Brethren lady for the same subject. Both felt led to form some active group, though their suggested title of "Prayer Meeting" didn't seem inviting if announced to the school assembly.

It was agreed that the matter should not be dealt with hurriedly. In an unusual way, however, things were to be speeded up. The vicar detained a fourth form because of their inattention. Following this half-hour, during which the vicar sought to emphasise his purpose for teaching, he was surprised when a group of teenage boys approached him to request the forming of a meeting as they wanted to learn and talk about Pentecost and the present outpouring of the Holy Spirit.

He went to the deputy head, more worried about the subject mentioned than happy about the prospect of a meeting at the pupils' request. The deputy head informed him that he was a member of the Elim Pentecostal Church. Immediately the vicar revealed that he had long been seeking a Pentecostal experience. That same night he made a considerable journey to an Elim Church on learning that a special service was being conducted by myself on the subject. Though he was not among those who received the Holy Spirit in the short after-service, it was wonderful to see this godly man so released, praising God with uplifted voice, head and hands. The following morning at school it was the young lady teacher who came to the deputy head rather concerned because the vicar could scarcely wait to begin the meeting that they had planned to go about slowly! When she learned of the previous day's events — the boys' desire about discussion concerning the Holy Spirit and the vicar's desire and first visit to a Pentecostal Church — the Christian Brethren teacher joyfully revealed that during the summer vacation, before taking her new appointment, she had felt a great need and at a conference she had sought and received the Baptism of the Spirit with speaking in tongues.

I must leave my readers carefully to consider the many interesting aspects of the above events. Need, desire, opportunity, and fulfilment are before us today.

Reflections

by Mrs. Noreen Magee

DURING the holidays, as I sat on the brink of the lovely Lake Tallylyn, Merionethshire, a God-consciousness stole over my soul. The great mountains flanking the banks towered all around. At the foot of the Lake the mighty Cader Idris reared majestically into the azure blue of a cloudless sky. A lone heron slept undisturbed on her tall slender leg amid the reeds. A buzzard hovered cautiously in the distance. The whole panorama was perfectly mirrored in the deep, still Lake. David the psalmist knew something of such a scene (Psalm 23:2): "He leadeth me beside the still waters".

Quite unexpectedly, the voice of my little grandson, Matthew, piped, "May I throw stones into the water?" Of course he could. The perfect reflection vanished. The tranquillity was gone. The picture became disturbed and distorted as the stones splashed and the ripples lapped the bank. While there were commotion, excitement and disturbance in the Lake there was no reflection. The perfect reflection was held only while there was an unmoved calm.

Jesus said, "I am the Light of the World" (John 8:12). It is essential for this "Light" to be reflected in us. Sin has so marred and polluted, so distracted and disturbed. We have become so highly mechanised, so scientific, so fashionable, so restless in a seething mass of ceaseless activity. One wonders how much of the original "light" is being reflected. There are many so-called "lights", luminaries which one day will be extinguished with a noxious smell as the mighty Orb — Christ — rises as the Light of the World.

Why paddle in the shallow eddies of trivial things, when we are urged to "launch out into the deep" (Luke 5:4)? There is buoyancy above the trivialities. There is perfect reflection. His presence bears likeness in us. His light shines clearly, for "we are seen and known of all men". "Ye shine as lights in the world" (Philippians 2:15).

Christ should shine more brightly than ever before through His saints. Instead of twelve reflectors as in the beginning, there should be ten thousand times ten thousand.

The Light of the World shines out brightest at Calvary — a Lighthouse throwing its beams across the seething sea of guilt and misery, warning men of the Devil's rocks, a Light which outshines all earthly splendour.

The light of self-righteousness, of good works, the lamps of superstition and priestcraft must pale before the true Light.

Cease toying with artificiality! May His beauty and reflection be upon us.

Little Matthew withheld his stone throwing and the beautiful Tallylyn Lake became calm like a photographer's plate.

As together we leaned over its brink, a little voice declared, "Grandma, there's you and me!"

May our lives be a true reflection of HIM!

Love's Revelation

*How lovely is a garden bright with flowers
Refreshed by morning dew or gentle showers!
Such beauty of creation speaks to me
Of God's most tender care and love so free.*

*The clouds that float along their spacious ways,
The grandeur that the rainbow-arch displays,
And western skies aflame with sunset rays,
Are tokens of His wisdom and His love.*

*I look up at the countless gems of light
That glitter on the velvet screen of night;
From vast unmeasured distances above
They tell me, "God is great and God is love!"*

*I hear the music of an autumn breeze
Amid the trembling glory of the trees,
I catch the theme-song of its melody —
It is that God loves you and God loves me.*

*But best of all I read in His own Word
The wondrous story that has strangely stirred
The hearts of men when they have heard
How Jesus left His royal Throne above,
And gave His life for us — O matchless love!*

*We are pleased to welcome our guest contributor, Mrs. Noreen Magee, wife of Pastor A.J.K. Magee. Look out for her message next week.

Any Convictions?

asks Tony Williams

THIS title may seem to imply that I want to know if you have ever been in court for exceeding the speed limit or for some offence against society.

I am really asking whether you are a person of sound convictions.

A man's strong convictions motivate him to action, unlike a man with no conviction.

There was a time in Britain when little boys of six and seven went to work in deplorable factories at 5 a.m., when women worked in coal mines until dusk. Conditions were terrible. It needed people of strong convictions to change the picture.

On to the scene of world history came folk like Lord Shaftesbury, William Wilberforce and others whose deep convictions moved them to make life human for human beings. The hospital and prison systems were changed for the better because of women like Elizabeth Fry and Florence Nightingale. These are but four outstanding people of conviction, but the world is a better place because they once lived.

There are those with wrong convictions, and, sadly, those with misguided ones. Zealous, sincere young people have burned themselves alive in protest against war or want. Fine youngsters have shown their excessive preoccupations, but their methods of demonstration have achieved nothing. They have too often brought discredit and disrepute on laudable aims. Anti-war demonstrators who scuffle with and kick policemen are a contradiction in terms. The world is no better for some of their efforts, however pure the motive originally appeared to be.

Jesus Christ was the Man of conviction. He came to earth to die for our sins and He set His face like a flint to go to Calvary's cross. His earthly ministry, healings, wonders, were part of His pilgrimage, but His goal was Golgotha.

Today, by various means, God is looking for those of all ages, classes and colours who have the courage of their convictions.

What does this involve? If a man is drowning in a river, you do not stand on the bank feeling sorry for him, you dive in and try to save him. You put into practice what you know to be right.

Most people know that sin is wrong, that no-one on earth can forgive sin, that you cannot be right in God's sight through living a moral, well-meaning life. People try to fool themselves into thinking that these things are so, but, if they are people of courageous convictions, they will know that they are sinners in God's sight. They are in need of a Saviour, the Saviour. Heaven is not for apparently good people, but for bad people who are saved by God's grace.

The greatest conviction that can come to you is when you are caused to say,

*Just as I am without one plea
But that Thy blood was shed for me
And that Thou bidst me come to Thee —
O Lamb of God I come.*

It takes courage to come to Christ.

It takes courage to have Christian conviction.

It takes courage to be involved, really to care and to do something about it.

Where do you stand?

D.B. How did you come to work at Emmanuel Press? To me it seems strange to think of the Press without you!

A.R. Later in the year after the campaign, Mfundisi Phillips asked me to come to the press and work there for the Lord. This pleased me a great deal. At the time I was working as a breakdown truck driver. All my friends at the garage were unsaved and life for me wasn't very pleasant. I was thrilled to go back to the press again. I had worked there before I backslid. There I could work with the Lord as my leader. It is still my prayer that my Lord might use me more than what the devil ruined me.

In my life I know for sure now these two things: God gives wonderful abundant life; the Devil gives nothing but ruin and death.

Notes
by
D.J. Ayling

Monday, October 23rd 2 Thessalonians 2:1-12

"They received not the love of the truth... that they should believe a lie" (vv. 10, 11).

WHEN one shuts one's heart to the truth, one opens another door to a lie. It is impossible to have a spiritual vacuum in the soul. If I shut God out, then I let the devil in.

The simplest way of ensuring that I fill my life with the truth is to open my being to all that God would give me. In this way I shall have no room for the other.

Tuesday, October 24th 2 Thessalonians 2:13-17, 3:1-5

"But the Lord is faithful, who shall stablish you" (v. 3:3).

HOW often Paul had to say goodbye to those converts whom he had led to the Lord! What fears and concern filled his mind for them when he was away from them. Would they stand? Would they go on? Then he remembered that they were not his sheep; they were Christ's. He had to leave them in the care of the great Shepherd, who could do a far better job than Paul!

Wednesday, October 25th 2 Thessalonians 3:6-18

"Be not weary in well doing" (v. 13).

AS the margin puts it, "Faint not". Most Christian service that languishes is stopped by Christians having fainting fits! It does not need a special attack of the enemy, just the gradual sapping of our strength to go forward until we are tired in God's service, then tired of doing it. There are in Scripture many stimulants that God gives to fainting souls. The best thing is to take a good deep breath of Isaiah 40:29-31. "He giveth power to the faint; and to them that have no might He increaseth strength."

Thursday, October 26th Ecclesiastes 1:1-18

"Under the sun" (v. 3).

THIS phrase comes again and again in this Book as Solomon tries to find satisfaction without God. It is the limitation of his looking, the horizon of his hopes. When one excludes God from one's reckoning, one can never find satisfaction. It is like trying to work out angles without a triangle or to learn about gravity without Newton. To eliminate God and then to try to find satisfaction is but to lead to failure. The very opposite is also true, for "The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom".

Friday, October 27th

Ecclesiastes 2:1-26

"God giveth to a man that is good in his sight" (v. 26).

HAVE you noticed in today's reading the word that is more predominant than any other? It is the little word, "I". This revealed the fleshly energy of a man with every earthly power at his disposal, yet he remained unsatisfied. At the end of it all, he felt, was vanity. Remember this simple equation: you minus Christ = nothing; you plus Christ = everything. The first is "Without me ye can do nothing". The second says, "I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me."

Saturday, October 28th

Ecclesiastes 3:1-22

"He hath set the world in their heart" (v. 11).

DOWN in the very personality of man God has placed a longing. It is not simply born of his environment as communists say, nor is it drilled into his personality by his sufferings. Deep within the soul of every one of us is the inescapable longing for the best. This longing in the heart of even the worst sinner provides every Gospel preacher with an ally as he proclaims Christ.

Ecclesiastes 4:1-16

"Woe to him that is alone when he falleth" (v. 10).

THE preacher is conscious of the solitude within his soul. If he falls when he is alone, he is utterly cast down.

The Christian never need face that desolation. Christ has said, "I will never leave thee nor forsake thee". It is the Lord's day today. Find your way to His Table and put right with Him anything that you know is casting a shadow across your fellowship: A Christian need not fall alone. He does not stand alone either!

The Art of Noticing

by H. Burton-Haynes

Pastor of Elim Pentecostal Church, Clacton-on-Sea

"Jesus noticed His mother-in-law was down with fever" (Matthew 8:14, Moffatt)

I RECENTLY visited the picturesque village of Finchingfield in the heart of Essex. It has a Norman church tower and many old houses. One of the features is that the houses and shops are for the most part painted white. The white circle of dwellings overlooks a pond situated right in the centre of a luscious surround of green, grassy banks. Observing an old man, whom I assumed to be an inhabitant, I asked him if 'ere was a bye-law or an old tradition whereby the residents consented to paint the outsides of their houses white. Looking round with a surprised expression on his face he paused, then, gazing at me, he replied in his native dialect: "That's strange! I was born and bred in one of those cottages, but that's the first time I've noticed it!"

There is a difference, we surely admit, between seeing something and noticing what is unusual about it. Moffatt in his translation of the incident of our Lord entering the house of Simon Peter says that "He noticed that his mother-in-law was down with fever." Noticing at once her fevered condition, Jesus did not wait to be asked to help. Reaching forth His hand He touched her and immediately the fever abated.

Jesus noticed! It was a habit with Him. When Jesus looked upon people He noticed every detail of their lives. He moved among men with an alert, sensitive sympathy.

Jesus noticed the woman who touched the hem of His garment. She thought that she could press through the throng, touch His clothes, receive healing, and slip away without being observed. Luke, recording the miracle, writes: "The woman saw that she had not escaped notice" (Goodspeed's translation).

James Russell Lowell, talking to James T. Fields, gave him some wise advice concerning writing: "Be sure and don't leave anything out because it is trifling; for it is out of trifles only that it is possible to reconstruct character, sometimes, if not always."

Jesus never missed trifles where a person was concerned. He noticed the patched garments of children, the long lines of men out of work. He noticed when people grew hungry. He said, when His disciples would have dismissed them: "Give ye them to eat." He noticed the flushed anxiety of a woman preparing a dinner. He perceived that Martha was being dragged around with much serving. When the disciples were intent on the architecture and the grandeur of the Temple, He noticed a poor widow casting her small coins into the treasury.

What a high art it is — just noticing! Some people never really notice anything. In his book The Cathedral, Hugh Walpole has drawn a powerful, painful picture of Archdeacon Brandon who lived for twenty years with his wife — a sensitive, gentle woman — without coming within a thousand miles of learning what she really was, how life seemed to her, what she wanted of life. It was the tragedy of a man who never noticed.

This art is one in which science and religion unite in perfect harmony. Science is organised noticing. It began when men ceased to guess, when they threw over superstition and began to notice facts. Christian love, like science, is the genius of noticing. Contrast the things which Jesus noticed with what the eagle eyes of the scribes pounced upon. The scribes noticed "unwashed hands" (Mark 7:2). They were on the outlook for things that they could criticise. They prospected for quibbles.

A poor little boy was asked why he bestowed such admiration on a gracious, popular teacher. For a moment he could find no answer. Then, in school speech, he replied: "I like her because she looks as though she didn't see the holes in my shoes."

What do you notice?

ONE of our ministers recently allowed me to see a publication regarding Northern Ireland. It has been a harrowing experience to read the details and to see the truly terrible pictures. Since the magazine derived from a political party it has to be said that a certain slant was given to the captions and comments, but the facts already published by the press, television, radio and the British army are undeniable.

How many of us who do not live in Ulster really understand how serious the situation is? The horror of the events of the Abercorn restaurant do not seem to have caused much reaction, yet a girl of twenty-one and another of twenty-two were killed, while Rosaleen McNern lost both legs and an arm, her sister both legs, a man lost both legs, a lady one arm and one leg, another lady one limb, while three suffered the loss of eyes. This was Belfast. What if it had been York, Edinburgh, Cardiff, London, indeed anywhere in Great Britain? Have we become accustomed to hearing about Ulster? Has it become remote in our thinking?

You would not expect or want your Editor to be the least political in his comments and rightly so, but it must be said that the Darlington talks seem to have done absolutely nothing as yet. Confessedly the problems are many and difficult, but there seems to be almost an anti-climax about these discussions which in any case were not fully representative.

All along we have said that the real answer to the sad troubles is spiritual. Those who are not Irish and who do not live in Ulster are not qualified to comment in any great depth on details, but all Christians surely have the right and privilege in love and grace to declare that Christ is the answer. We are all too mindful of the glaring lack of spirituality in the remainder of the United Kingdom to cast any stones against those of our kith and kin in Northern Ireland. These islands as a whole need an outpouring of the Holy Spirit. Certain aspects of public life make it clear that we are ostrich-like if we think that what is happening in Ulster could not happen elsewhere in the United Kingdom. We have had one or two bitter tastes already.

As individuals, may we look again at the truth in that moving chorus, "O, Holy Ghost, revival comes from Thee" and say from the depths of our hearts, "start the work in me".

National Evangelistic Conference

Graham Street, Birmingham

About 120 delegates attended the Conference, which was held in our commodious central Birmingham church. On several occasions they were divided into three groups for intensive study on practical aspects of evangelism, reports thereafter being given to the whole Conference. The evening rallies were remarkable for their enthusiasm. The Graham Street Church was crowded for all four rallies.

Monday and Tuesday

by Maldwyn Jones

"WHAT is evangelism?" asked George Canty. "It is loving people too much to allow them to go to Hell," he explained.

These words sum up the meaning of that great word. Because of a great desire to prevent souls from going to Hell over 120 delegates from all over the British Isles gathered at the Elim Pentecostal Church, Graham Street, Birmingham.

The Conference opened with a welcome from the President, T.W. Walker, after which Rev. David MacInnes, the Precentor of Birmingham Cathedral, gave the opening address which proved to be a challenge and an inspiration to every delegate. He reminded us of the great commission which Christ gave to His disciples, the compassion for the sinner which we must have and the confidence with which we must approach the great task of evangelism.

In the evening service, which was convened by the Field Superintendent, R.B. Chapman, we were made conscious of that glorious declaration of Paul, "All things work together for good to them that love God". The scheduled film "Like a Mighty Army" did not arrive, and instead, P.S. Brewster, the Secretary of the Advisory Committee for the World Pentecostal Conference, inspired us with first-hand accounts of the advance of the Pentecostal message in the world at large. As he told us of how he preached before 21,000 people on one Sunday and before 70,000 in an open-air meeting in Korea, a cry went up from my heart, "Lord, move in Britain!"

The first session met on Tuesday morning to consider a paper on "World Pentecost - A Panorama" by P.S. Brewster. He gave a brief outline of the history of world Pentecost, reminding us that no one country has a complete understanding of God's Word. He spoke of the compassion, love and devotion of our missionaries and of the establishment of the World Pentecostal Fellowship twenty-eight years ago. Every Pentecostal Fellowship in the world is concentrating on Evangelism. After forty-six years in Elim, forty-two of which have been spent as a minister, Mr. Brewster is well qualified to comment on evangelistic policy in Elim. His closing words challenged us greatly: "The major thing in our Movement is to win souls for Christ."

W.T.H. Richards from the Gospel Tabernacle, Slough, then gave a paper on "Mobilizing the Membership". He claimed that the Church is facing its greatest crisis for years. "Our members need to be mobilised to become worshippers, workers and witnesses," he declared.

The third paper of the day was given by George Canty. His subject was "Pauline Evangelism". We were made to realise a little of the driving force behind Paul's fearless presentation of the Gospel message. The address was given in Mr. Canty's own inimitable style. It included many original phrases! I quote one of them: "Most people canonise the dead and cane the living".

The church was filled to capacity for the evening service. We thank God for the Pentecostal message, for the Pentecostal experience and for the liberty that attends a truly Pentecostal service. We were deeply conscious of this as D.G. Woodfield, Pastor of the Newcastle church, convened the service. Students from Elim Bible College ministered in song. As the song service came to an end, our hearts were filled with expectancy as we anticipated the ministry of the Word. The speakers were Alfred Webb, Pastor of the Assemblies of God Church at Dagenham and J.E.G. Cooper, minister of our Caerphilly Church. We were thrilled, inspired and challenged by the sweet, forceful preaching of these brethren. We left feeling that it was good that we had gathered together in the House of the Lord.

Wednesday

by Trevor Partington

ALEX Tee commenced the day by referring to God's brilliant blueprint for Pentecostal progress. We need the supernatural. This is God's method and can never be superseded. The purpose of Pentecost is power, not power to witness, but power as we witness. We need, too, to carry in ourselves the presence of God. There must be a deep, consistent concern for holiness. This is the dimension that will attract and that will yield far more than any human methods.

After a time of prayer, the conference broke up into three workshops. The group led by Ron Jones on "Pioneering Initiatives" dealt with pioneering through campaigns, pioneering through those who have moved to towns where there is no Elim witness, and pioneering through presbyteries. "Presbyteries," said Pastor Lambert, "must rediscover their reason for existence." Another workshop, led by Wynne Lewis, dealt with youth outreach. The importance of making the church relevant to the youth of today was emphasised. We have no right to preach to them unless we have built a bridge of confidence, compassion, and friendliness. The third workshop concerned door to door evangelism and this was led by Pastor F. Lavender. Four groups discussed our motives, our methods, the training of workers, and the types of literature available.

In the afternoon session, the Principal of our Bible College, G. Wesley Gilpin, gave a paper on the content of the evangelical message. We were reminded of a recent report in which reference was made to the irreducible minimum that we must preach if we are to hold to the gospel, namely, the deity of Christ, the fall of man, the cross as the sole means of redemption, and the need for repentance and faith. We must preach the same message as the Early Church, but our preaching must be apposite and appropriate to the religious and secular world we are faced with today. On the question of communication Mr. Gilpin referred to the statement of one man that "the last eighteen inches (i.e. the head) is the hardest!" We must spell out our theology. The "in" language of the evangelical world means little to non-Christians and therefore, in preaching doctrine, simplicity must be the operative word.

In the discussion that followed this paper, Mr. Brewster emphasised that doctrine must be made to live. It must burn in our hearts before we preach it to others. Pastor E.F. Cole quoted 1 Corinthians 2:14, reminding us that we are wholly dependent on the Holy Spirit to give revelation.

National Youth Director Eldin Corsie speaking to his workshop group on "Scholar Recruitment".

The afternoon workshops dealt with the subject of Radio and T.V.. Pastor J.E. Moore (Leeds) led a group which discussed approaching the authorities, Mr. V. Fisher, from Elim Bible College, led a second group on technical guidelines and a third group dealt with presentation techniques. Ron Williams spoke of several types of programmes which he has used on Radio Medway: a magazine programme, a music programme, thought for the day, interviewing people, and a church service.

A studious group in the lounge during a teach-in. L.W. Green and John Seaman are taking careful note.

The public rally in the evening was led by Brian Garrard. In the song service young ladies from our Bible College asked us two challenging questions: "How long has it been since you talked to the Lord?" and, in a solo, "Is He satisfied with Me?". How appropriate this was for what followed! Pastor C.J. Watkins spoke from Matthew 12:13 about the man with the withered hand who was healed by Jesus. Our hand — perhaps the one we have failed to use — must be reached upwards in prayer, reached out in fellowship to others, and reached down to those without Christ. The second message was given by W.T.H. Richards. He spoke about the kind of man God uses in an extraordinary way. He must be a man of humility, integrity, simplicity and courage.

Alex Tee had emphasised in the morning the need for renewing our lives to God if we were going to see Him really work. The truth of this was clearly impressed upon all our minds. It was the dominant theme throughout the day. God was speaking to us and at the end of the rally in the evening many stood to rededicate their lives to Jesus Christ.

Thursday

by A.W. Leavesley

ON the last day Brian Edwards introduced his subject "Maintaining a live Evangelistic Programme", taking his text from Proverbs 29:18: "Where there is no vision, the people perish". He emphasised the need for a vision for our church and for our community and for a vision of Christ. The challenge was given to go after the one lost soul, rather than chatting with the saints, the ninety-and-nine. Evangelism is of paramount importance, not an optional extra. Our churches must be a centre for evangelism, not a centre of evangelism, by getting beyond the four walls of the church into the many fields. Students, nurses, schools, married couples and senior citizens were highlighted.

Our time of prayer afterwards was blessed as we sang "Keep the touch of God in your soul" and when God spoke to us through the gift of prophecy encouraging us to attempt things for God and thus achieve more than we thought possible, reminding us that we are dependent on Him.

Workshops were conducted on "Scholar Recruitment", "Teacher Training" and "Practical Hints, after which each leader reported on the discussions. Ron MacKenzie reminded us that all gadgets were simply an aid to evangelism and showed how, with a little ingenuity, one could produce simple visual aids which were most effective in getting the gospel across to children. Derek Green spoke on the necessity for teacher training and the qualities needed in teachers: dedication, patience, love, personality and punctuality, to name a few. Eldin Corsie said how important it was to approach parents on the lines that we were helping to educate the children and that a good way to increase Sunday schools was for the children to bring their own friends with them.

The question of finding the funds for evangelistic work was ably dealt with by John C. Smyth. We were reminded that finance should not be the deciding factor for our evangelistic work and that we needed to be men of faith, trusting God to supply the need. The importance of Christian stewardship was stressed, as was our responsibility, not only towards our tithes and offerings, but also to the remainder of our income.

A Sense of Direction

by Bernard J. Epton

Pastor of Elim Pentecostal Church, Liverpool

WHEN I first came to Liverpool I was often lost. My sense of direction was not functioning at all.

One day I took a wrong turn and I went about one-third of the distance round the City trying to find the way home. I didn't know any landmarks. The signposts didn't help me, because they didn't mean anything to me. I drove on hopefully and eventually I saw a petrol station that I had seen once before and then I thankfully headed for home.

Now I recognise many landmarks and, as I travel about, I add more details. I manage very well and I get around, sometimes taking devious routes, but I always get there in the end.

I remember, when I was a little boy living in a suburb of Nottingham, coming out of school one afternoon and being enveloped in dense fog. I felt my way along the lane towards the group of houses where I lived. I must have had great confidence, for I turned boldly to the right and came to a corner. As I lived on the corner I was very happy to run up the path and throw open the back door and rush inside.

There stood a very nice lady, but she was not my mother! I stood and stared and then the tears began to flow. The poor woman was as upset as I was and she tried to comfort me. All I wanted was my mum. Fortunately the lady knew me and where I lived and she took me by the hand and saw me safely home to my mother's house.

We all need help at some time to find our way home. We need landmarks. In the darkness we need lights. Often we need instructions that are clear and easy to follow.

In Liverpool I never go out without my street map.

The "A to Z" is my reference book. It enables me to get to the place where I want to be with the minimum effort and with a sense of confidence because I know where I am going. I have a sense of direction.

God doesn't want us to be lost either. He gave us adequate directions and information to make sure that, if we follow them, we shall reach our destination. Jesus said, "I am the way, the truth and the life, no man cometh to the Father but by Me". He is the way, Why not follow Him all the way home? It's better than being lost. Why not read the Bible, God's guide and instruction on how to have a sense of direction and to arrive home safely.

The Letter to the Romans

by J. Alexander Wright

IN our last article we wrote of moralists and their teaching that man has two natures, the good and the evil. Some theologians teach that the regenerate Christian also has two natures: a human, Adamic nature cursed by the inherent law of sin, and a Divine nature bestowed at conversion. They illustrate this from the process of grafting, by which the new graft (the new nature of Christ) is grafted on to the old stem (the old Adamic nature), so that the tree may bring forth new fruit, but, as with the rose or the apple, it is only by the constant use of the pruning knife (prayer, self-discipline, etc.) to the day of our death, that the new can have supremacy, since the old is ever there, ready to shoot forth again. This the Scofield Bible teaches at this passage: "The apostle personifies the strife of the two natures in the believer, the old or Adamic nature, and the Divine nature received through the new birth. The 'I' which is Saul of Tarsus, and the 'I' which is Paul the apostle are at strife, and Paul is in defeat." So a kind of civil war is said to go on in the Christian.

The difficulty with this teaching is that it denies Scriptural freedom from sin as taught by our Lord, e.g. "If the Son shall make you free, you shall be free indeed" (John 8:36), free from the bondage of sin.

Further, it confuses the old nature with our human nature. God does not graft His new nature on to the old sinful nature; on to our human nature, yes — on to the man himself. Conversion to Christ is not the mere cutting back of the evil growth while the root remains to sprout and grow again; it is a new creation. If there must be an analogy of grafting, let it be the Biblical one of Roman chapter 11. It is not the self that is essentially sinful, but "sin that dwelleth in me" (v.17) can make it so.

Let us examine the following five statements from Romans chapter 7.

1. "I am carnal, and have sold my soul unto sin" (v.14 Phillips).
2. "Sin has made its home within me" (v.17, Phillips).
3. "I know that in me dwelleth no good thing" (v.18).
4. "The evil I do not want to do I find I am always doing" (v.19, Phillips).

5. "I observe an entirely different principle at work in my nature. This is in continual conflict with my conscious attitude and makes me an unwilling prisoner to the law of sin and death" (v.23 Phillips).

Forty-four times "I" "me" "my" appear, thirty of these being the intensive, "I myself". Do these terms really describe the born-again person in union with the risen Lord? They all seem a reverse description of the man in the previous chapter who was set free from sin. Chapter 6 might never have been written!

Paul's description of the Christian is clear: "Being made free from sin...ye have your fruit unto holiness" (6:22). Otherwise the Gospel has no more power than the Law, but the Gospel accomplishes what the Law cannot — it makes men holy. Why then came the excessive self-scrutiny? Does not Jesus deliver us from this tragic, useless self-examination? No, the five statements describe a religious man as yet unregenerate, but never that "new man created after the likeness of God in true holiness and righteousness" (Ephesians 4:24, A.R.V.). "If this is descriptive of the habitual character of a Christian, then there isn't a word of truth in all the glorious descriptions of the Christian life elsewhere in the New Testament. What is the use of conversion if it does not end our spiritual misery?" (Dr. J.S. Stewart, A Man in Christ). "Jesus Christ has totally misled us and the Atonement is not what it claims to be" (Oswald Chambers, Bible Psychology). Dr. Stewart adds, "It is the experience of a man still requiring to be born again".

The Unity we seek

by R. Williams

Pastor of Elim Pentecostal Church, Rochester

CHRISTIANS have always had a keen interest in the subject of unity. Throughout the history of the Church various factions have brought the subject to light for periodic perusal and negotiation. They have sought for better charitable fellowship.

One thing that must be established, however, is that there is a difference between unity and amalgamation. I wonder sometimes if people who think of an ecumenical movement really have in mind an economical movement!

It is good to cultivate that which Christ established, but any fertilization we offer must be on His principles. Christian unity is not devised by man, but by God. Its foundations are not on earth, but in heaven.

To consider that there is no unity among Christians today would be a sad reflection on the Church in the eyes of the world. Unity is our inherent environment. If unity is needed now, does it mean that we have been a divided Cause for 2,000 years? If this were so, the opponents of our faith would have devoured us long ago.

The unity man first needs is with his Maker, not with his neighbour. If he is first right with his God, he will automatically strive for acceptance with his fellow-creatures. The oneness of Christians must not be considered in the light of blessing to themselves only, but, in particular, as that which would be beneficial to the world. Society should derive great advantages from the united Church.

There is a danger in trying to turn personal issues into interdenominational mergers. The unity of the Church is not something for which we should hope or even pray, for the bond we are trying to create already exists in the Church because, being one with Christ, we must be one with each other. We are far from perfect, but, in the deepest sense, we are also far from being divided.

The duty of Christians relative to unity, some seem to think, is to ignore or conceal their differences. They find it difficult to appreciate that there can be a unity co-existing and underlying diverse opinion. This is distinct from uniformity. Looking alike is not being alike. This can be gained only by the surrender or the suppression of differences. This is a very superficial thing, for it represents Christian unity not as a living, spiritual thing, but as a dead form of policy.

It is also a dangerous view, as it tends directly to the establishment of ecclesiastical despotism, the discouragement of the open expression of individual convictions, and the destruction of faith in the sacredness and value of truth. The discovery that something deeper is required might be a reflection on religious tolerance, but it does not suggest that there has been no kindred spirit among God's people.

We must also bear in mind that the Body of Christ is not a church, or even the churches; it is comprised of such persons as have made a personal acceptance of Christ as Saviour. While differences may exist between denominations, there will always be fellowship among true Christians. The unity we seek is a devoted union with our God. When this has been accomplished, we will, through the family nature of Christianity, rightly discern those who are our brothers and sisters in Christ.

Communicating the Gospel to modern man by Stephen Crisp, B.Sc., Ph.D.

OVER the last century, England has seen a reversal in attitude towards Christianity from national respect to antagonism or indifference. A major factor responsible for this change has been the tremendous influence of science on material comforts and philosophy. The intellectual climate has become hot for some who feel that a Christian has to abdicate intellectual honesty and respectability. This is certainly not true: modern man is in darkness and needs the gospel as much as ever.

A Characteristic Condition

It is nothing new for Christianity to be despised by the intelligentsia of the day. The Jewish leaders persistently opposed Jesus. Paul reminds us that "not many wise men after the flesh . . . are called". Neither Jesus nor His followers cowered under the academic brilliance of their opponents; rather they vigorously and effectively exposed their errors, teaching God's wholesome message instead.

In his writings, John refutes the teachings of Cerinthus and the Ebionites who opposed Jesus's eternal deity, and Docetism, which denied Jesus's humanity. These were heresies influenced by Greek philosophy. Paul, on Mars Hill, exposed the futility of Athenian thought. Martin Luther completely upset the decadent Roman Catholic Schoolmen whose ideas were founded on Aristotle.

These examples are sufficient to encourage us aggressively to attack the world's ideas, however brilliant they may seem. In their place we must present the gospel.

The Influence of Science

There are more scientists living today than in all previous generations. Scientific knowledge is growing STEPHEN Crisp was brought up by parents. His father has been the pastor of churches. He made a personal commitment at the age of ten and was baptised in water. He read chemistry in his teens. He read chemistry at the College of Science and Technology, University, where he obtained his degree. He later his Ph.D. in physical chemistry. He worked in the Scientific Civil Service on dental silico. Besides writing Christian articles he has worked in Sunday school and student work. He has two children.

exponentially and science has acquired a popular mystique, so that scientists' pronouncements are usually accepted without question.

In the past theologians tended to explain the unknown about nature as God's direct activity, i.e. "the God of the gaps". As science has filled in these gaps in our knowledge of the universe, this idea of God has become progressively less tenable. It has resulted in a materialistic outlook in which creation is replaced by evolution, human behaviour by modified animal behaviour, and mind by a brain mechanism. The origin of the universe is regarded as insoluble.

The materialist overlooks that science is only one picture of the universe. For a complete understanding, many views are required, including the Christian revelation. This article can be described as marks of ink on paper. A chemical analysis of the ink and paper would be a valid description of the article, but it is neither the most significant description nor does it destroy the literary interpretation. Science neither eliminates the Christian message nor can it claim to be the most significant description of existence.

The discoveries of science daunt modern man. When he contemplates the vastness of space he feels lost and insignificant. World problems, such as population, pollution, diminished mineral resources, and poverty, have been caused or exacerbated by science. Man often just runs away from this situation to forget himself by pleasure seeking. To man overwhelmed by science, we can speak of a God who cares and of Jesus who can bring him into a personal relationship with God.

The Influence of Philosophy

Philosophy is considered an irrelevancy by most people. It is surprising, however, how, through the work of writers and artists, philosophy often becomes a major social influence.

A case in point is Existentialism, which was developed on the Continent and which has many variants. Existentialism takes the world as it appears as its starting point. Absolute standards of morality are rejected and an experience of validity is sought.

Existentialism has been adopted by some theologians. Perhaps the best known example is the "New Morality" of Dr. Robinson. Love is the guiding principle and an action can be wrong in one situation but not in another. In this system of "situation ethics" one decides, not by divine principles, but as the circumstances appear to one.

Secular forms of existentialism lead to a complete liberation from conventional morality. Thus we see "free love", homosexuality, free abortion, nudity and obscenity in the theatre, etc., all accepted as valid.

Many existentialists have failed to discover an authenticating experience. To them existence is meaningless or absurd. Their frustration is expressed in modern paintings, plays, and music. We ought not to laugh at the apparent "rubbish" of modern art: it is often the heart cry of a lost soul needing the "light of life".

Existentialism is commendable in seeking to give significance to the individual, but it fails, as unrestricted freedom for one person may lead to injury or destruction for another. Existentialism cannot be taken to its logical conclusion. To those influenced by this philosophy we can speak of God who came from the beyond to this world as man in the person of Jesus. By Him we can have a conversion experience that is existential as it concerns the here and now, but it is also a transcendental experience that brings meaning to life.

The Influence of Christianity

It is the Church's work to convey God's saving message to the world. Three things are essential to this task: Spirit-filled preaching, Spirit-filled living, and supernatural confirmation of the message.

Whether we witness from the pulpit or personally, we need a thorough knowledge of God's Word plus a fresh anointing of the Spirit. As we know how our generation thinks, we can apply our message to specific needs under the guidance of the Spirit. Our message is authoritative in its being truth and by the conviction it carries under the Spirit's anointing. Too often Christian witness is hesitant and unimpressive.

Besides our words, the quality of our life is a telling witness. Nietzsche was brought up a Lutheran, but he became a bitter opponent of Christianity, and finally lost his mind. The following quotation from one of his books is significant, "They would have to sing better songs to make me believe in their Redeemer: his disciples would have to look more redeemed!" If we are daily filled with the Spirit then we will possess a grace and a poise that will convince the world of our experience. We are living epistles "known and read of all men".

The Christian faith is founded on the miracle of the resurrection. It is therefore fitting that we demonstrate the miraculous character of our faith. In the West the Church appears to have become conditioned by materialism, consequently we see less miracles than elsewhere. It is for us to seek the scriptural confirmation of the Word in order that sinners may see God's power and reality.

Man's philosophies and science have changed much since the first century, but we can join Paul in being unashamed of the gospel. It is still God's saving power. We must know our generation and tell them in love and power the message of the gospel.

Why does not God kill the Devil?

asks Joseph Smith

IF God should kill Satan He would remove from us for ever the privilege of being overcomers in the battle of life. Why, I could have won the last world war by myself if only the enemy had been sent home!

God did not kill the devil when His only begotten Son was born in Bethlehem. He allowed His Son to grow to full manhood and then as a man to defeat Satan and all his hosts. No wonder all heaven resounds with the praises of such a Hero. "And they sung a new song, saying, Thou art worthy to take the book, and to open the seals thereof: for Thou wast slain, and hast redeemed us to God by Thy blood out of every kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation; and hast made us unto our God kings and priests: and we shall reign on the earth." (Revelation 5:9,10).

God wants an army of overcomers, a tried army of true soldiers; who have proved their loyalty on the battlefield of life: "And they that are with Him are called, and chosen, and faithful." (Revelation 17:14). In His wisdom, God allows as much temptation in this life as to make obedience valuable, but not as much as to make obedience impossible (1 Corinthians 10:13).

It is a privilege to be allowed to live in this Laodicean age. By far the highest prize offered to the saints of God in all the Scriptures is that held out to the overcomers in that half-hearted, worldly-minded, self-satisfied, lukewarm Laodicean church. "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with Me in My throne, even as I also overcame, and am set down with My Father in His throne." (Revelation 3:21). So take heart and thank God who has allowed you to live in this age, even though, because of abounding iniquity, the love of many is waxing cold. You are not expected to thank God that the love of many is waxing cold, far from it, but because God has chosen you to be one of those who will help to keep the fires of true love and devotion brightly burning in these the closing days of time. "Who knoweth whether thou art come to the kingdom for such a time as this?" (Esther 4:14).

Consider the famous men of the past, whose names we honour today. Many of these now famous men would never have been heard of had it not been for the circumstances which surrounded them and the opposition they encountered. Who made the name of Sir Winston Churchill famous? Was it not that man Hitler? Who made the Duke of Wellington famous? Was it not Napoleon? Who will make the saints of God for ever famous? The answer is found in Revelation 12:11,12: "And they overcame him [Satan] by the blood of the Lamb, and by the word of their testimony; and they loved not their lives unto the death. Therefore rejoice, ye heavens, and ye that dwell in them."

As good soldiers of Jesus Christ, put on the whole armour of God, buckle on our shields, take the sword of the Spirit in our hands, and step forth at the command of our great Leader, not complaining of the why or the wherefore of the war, but proving ourselves valiant soldiers in the army of the King of kings.

There is a wonderful plan behind all these things. The God of the universe purposed from all eternity to have from this planet a family of sons, whom He would discipline and train in the battle of life (as it is even now experienced all around us), to be His heirs in conjunction with His only begotten Son, Jesus Christ, that they might co-operate with Him in the government of His mighty universe — and that for eternity.

In Hebrews 1:2 Jesus Christ is said to be the Heir of all things. In Romans 8:17 it says concerning us: "And if children, then heirs; heirs of God, and joint-heirs with Christ; if so be that we suffer with Him, that we may be also glorified together." According to Matthew 25:21-23 it is the plan of God to make His people not just subjects, but rulers in His great eternal kingdom. "If we suffer, we shall also reign with Him".

As joint-heirs with Christ, who is the Creator of all things, how great are our dominions? The Reader's Digest stated that the number of galaxies composing the universe is of the order of five hundred million million, and that our galaxy is of the order of 100,000 million stars. The writer further stated that, if you reduced the size of our earth to the size of a full stop at the end of a sentence (or one-fiftieth of an inch), on this basis the distance of the earth to the moon would be five-eighths of an inch, of the earth to the sun about nineteen and a half feet, of the nearest star about 1,005 miles, of the Milky Way about 23,380,000 miles, and of the Andromeda galaxy about 467,600,000 miles.

Seeing that one day we will come into such a place of authority that we will be called upon to judge the world and will judge angels (1 Corinthians 6:2,3) can we wonder at the great Creator of this mighty universe allowing us, who are His children, His heirs, His co-workers, to go through a time of discipline and training in this world?

Even Jesus Christ was not exempted in this matter. "For it became Him, for whom are all things, and by whom are all things, in bringing many sons unto glory, to make the captain of their salvation perfect through sufferings." (Hebrews 2:10).

Think it out and pray it through!

National Evangelistic Conference (continued)

Spirit: love and power. The supernatural is necessary in our churches. We should do more than preach the gospel faithfully; we should preach the gospel in faith.

Derek J. Green (Bradford) elucidates a point when giving a report on the workshop which he conducted.

He told us of a person who took the initiative in arranging for a coach to collect fifty people for a service and in less than three years four coaches were regularly bringing 200 people.

Even while the conference continued, one of the ministers was led to speak about God to a man in the

Letter to the Editor

Dear Pastor Walker,

While watching the Olympics and listening to the interviews with the participants, I was amazed to hear of the time they spent in preparation and the way they disciplined themselves that they might win a medal.

My thoughts turned towards the Body of Christians who are also in a race, the prize being a crown of glory. How do we prepare ourselves?

Our power is found in prayer, yet the meeting that has the lowest attendance in many churches is the prayer meeting!

We serve God, who can move mountains, yet we seem to be content to go on in an apathetic way, when the needs of the world are so great.

We still have the problem in Ireland and wars in other parts of the world, like Uganda, as well as industrial troubles in our land. Do we think to spend time in prayer that these troubles may be resolved or, like the priest and the levite of old, do we shut our eyes?

We look for revival, but do we pray for the men in our movement who go out on evangelistic campaigns? Do we support our Pastor or think he is just doing the job he is paid for?

Let us use this power which is at our disposal and seek to bring peace and revival to the world.

MARY BURROWS

street, who, along with his wife, had been seeking God for the past two weeks.

The final rally, led by David Holmes, was a great climax to an inspiring conference. After the singing of "There shall be showers of blessing" John Seaman spoke on Isaiah 6:1. When in the spiritual condition of seeing the Lord, Isaiah heard His voice and then obeyed, saying, "Here am I, send me". May God touch us with live coals from off the altar!

Richard Lighton took as his text James 5:7. We are now living in the days of the latter rain and need to discern the signs of the times. Awareness of the presence of God came upon the packed congregation as we sang, "Fill me, O Lord, with Thy desire for all who know not Thee, then touch my lips with holy fire to speak of Calvary." Three manifestations of the Holy Spirit confirmed the word, after which we repeated the verse "King of my life I crown Thee now.

The end had come to a memorable week, but we felt that it was only the beginning of great things yet to be.

Children's Corner

A good habit

by Sheila Price

DURING His stay in Capernaum, Jesus was asked by the ruler of the synagogue if He would preach to the people. Quite a crowd filled the synagogue. The farmers, the fishermen and the housewives had never seen Jesus before and they were all curious to see this Stranger and to hear what He had to say to them. Jesus told them about the Kingdom of God. The people were astonished at His teaching, for they had never heard anyone speak with such knowledge and authority before.

Afterwards Jesus walked home with Peter, for they were to have Sunday dinner together at Peter's house. Halfway through the meal they heard a noise and footsteps outside.

"What is that commotion?" Peter asked.

They went to the window and looked out. It seemed as if the whole village had gathered outside Peter's house. Peter opened the door and what a sad sight there was in his garden! All the strong, healthy people of the village had brought their sick and crippled friends to Jesus. Although it was a sad sight, it was a beautiful sight, too, for Jesus loved to see people filled with concern for their friends. Jesus was filled with compassion and He healed them all.

How very tired Jesus must have been after His long and busy day. He lay down in Peter's house to get some rest. Jesus needed to sleep very much, but there was something that He needed to do much more, so He quietly slipped out of the house.

Peter heard Jesus leaving and decided to follow Him. He found Jesus on the hillside in prayer. Jesus had needed to talk to His heavenly Father. He talked things over with His Father every day of His life, no matter how tired or how busy He was.

It would please Jesus very much, if we would get into the habit of talking things over in our daily prayers with our heavenly Father.

In the Mary Jones Country

by Mrs. Noreen Magee

AS a girl I was intrigued by the story of Mary Jones and her Bible. This dear young Welsh girl with a God-inspired longing for God's Word had a special place in my heart.

I never dreamed that one day I would stand within the precincts of the shell of her little mountain cottage in Llanfihangel.

My heart leaped with joy and emotion as I stood on the narrow welsh stone bridge which she so often crossed. It is now overgrown with ivy, little fresh ferns and wild flowers. At the rear of the cottage I climbed on to the large, smooth boulders in the midst of the river, with its crystal-clear waters, to reflect on her childish haunts.

In the centre of the cottage walls is a large marble monument engraved to her memory. A plaque on the remaining ruins tells of the British and Foreign Bible Society, which was commenced because of this little girl's hunger to possess a precious Bible. The great, tall, aged beech trees provide shade for this sacred spot. They stand erect like silent sentries. The surrounding mountains hold their memories. The famous rugged ridge of Bird Rock rises silhouetted against the sky. Each little winding lane felt the pressure of her bare feet. In the distance can be seen the farmhouse where she went weekly by kind invitation of the farmer's wife, Mrs. Evans, to lift the glass case carefully and to fondle and read the pages of the Bible, a rare possession in those days. There were no Bibles in Llanfihangel or in Abergynolwyn.

Mary would return to her simple home and her poor parents to recite the Word of God and to enthral their hearts by what she read and retained.

After years of mending, feeding hens, running errands and ardent saving, this little girl traversed the mountains bare foot to Bala, twenty-five miles away in order to purchase a Bible of her very own. Mary clutched her Bible to her heart as she sped over the mountain back home. At long last she possessed her much-cherished Bible.

Visitors from all over the world come to this lonely spot to bare their heads and to pay homage.

I entered the little stone church by the lych gate and through the heavy, creaking doors and sat in the wood-worm eaten pew, where Mary, in a simple dress, with bare feet, a daisy chain about her hair, drank in the Bible stories as the Rev. Ivor Jones from Towyn made alive within her a desire for God and for His Word.

I was impressed as I meditated — yes, and deeply convicted — almost ashamed. How much does God's Word mean to me? Do I treasure its instructions and comfort, its counsel and guidance as precious things? "Man doth not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of the Lord" (Deuteronomy 8:3). Paul urged the youthful Timothy: "Study to shew thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth." (2 Timothy 2:15). The Word stimulates growth, cleanses the life and activates the whole being in living, walking, talking. The worldling is bewildered and hysterical because the diet of current newspapers and contradictory editorials is unwholesome and unstable, leaving the life impoverished and bankrupt, an easy target for Satan and sin. The hidden Word within the heart is a guard against sin, a shield and buckler enabling us to withstand the enemy's fiery darts.

How grateful we are to Mary Jones, who stirred the heart of Rev. Thomas Charles to inaugurate such a Bible Society to distribute thousands of Bibles! Our gratitude, too, goes to the tireless efforts of the Gideons in their distribution of the Word in schools, colleges, hospitals, institutions, hotels, etc., and to the worthy saints who languish in prison cells because of their brave efforts to bring the Word of God to the undertrodden.

How much does the Bible mean to you? Dr. G. Campbell Morgan wrote: "On every page of the 'Holy Letters', the 'God-breathed Writings', there are many thoughts which stretch out like long clear arms of light across the darkness, discovering, illuminating".

Have I made a discovery today? Have I been illuminated thereby?

How to be rich

by David B. Tinnion

Pastor of Elim Pentecostal Church, Driffield

THE United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization estimates that one person in every two in the world is under-nourished and that one in three is chronically hungry, so nearly two-thirds of the human beings on this earth know some form of hunger. Every day 10 – 12,000 people die from starvation. Authorities tell us that hunger is a greater threat than the H.Bomb.

Far more devastating than this however is the knowledge that hundreds of Christians suffer from spiritual poverty and malnutrition. They live in isolated cells of depression and despondency. Instead of building up spiritual investments, they endure spiritual barrenness.

The banks of this world can become insolvent, but heaven's bank is unshakable and steadfast. Nothing pleases our heavenly Father more than a daily, hourly, moment by moment demand on its treasures. The resources are ample to cover all past debts, to meet all present liabilities and to provide for all future needs. Watchman Nee wrote: "God is so wealthy that His chief delight is to give. His treasure store is so full that it is pain to Him when we refuse Him an opportunity of lavishing those treasures upon us."

An infinitude of wealth is available to every believer in: the riches of His grace (Ephesians 1:7). Justification is a declaration of the believer's standing in relation to the law, a legal status. We were transgressors and lawbreakers. Because of Christ's atoning work, our sin was cleared. We are no longer in the red; we are credited with His love and righteousness.

When we go to Christ and draw out of the riches of His grace, we feel clean. Sins are forgiven. Joy floods our souls. His love brings praise to our lips because we have been "accepted in the Beloved".

Then there are the riches of His glory (Ephesians 3:16). Many times we have felt His glorious proximity and, as the glory has filled the temple, so His nearness has filled our beings. If it can be glorious down here, what will it be like when we are glorified — "the glory that will be revealed" in us? We will forget all about ourselves because He will be the glory!

*The bride eyes not her garment,
But her dear Bridegroom's face;
I will not gaze at glory,
But on my King of grace;
Not at the crown He giveth,
But on His pierced hand;
The Lamb is all the glory
Of Immanuel's land.*

"The face of Moses shone, when amidst the terrors of the law, he talked with God. What shall our condition be who shall behold Him, not on the mountain that might be touched and burned with fire but, in the heaven of heavens, not amidst thunderings and lightnings, but amidst the express testimonies of His favour and blessing?" wrote Robert Haldane. Suffering will be nothing compared with the glory of heaven so we are told to "lay up treasures in heaven" — investments for the future.

There are also the riches of Christ (Ephesians 3:8). A wealthy business tycoon could give us riches out of his vast amount of wealth: Christ says all that He has is ours. To obtain the riches of a person we must be found in their company. So with Christ, the more we are in His presence the more we will be able to draw out of His vast amount of treasures.

When we are in the company of Christ we find ourselves "in Christ". Says Dr. A.T. Pierson: "A very small key may open a very complex lock and a very large door, and that door may itself lead into a vast building with priceless stores of wealth and beauty." "Without Christ" a sinner is spiritually dead and morally bankrupt but, "in Christ" he is made spiritually alive and a joint heir with Christ. "In Christ" we are ensphered and enriched. Christ is to be the source, sustenance and security of our life. "In Christ" we are in the position of great spiritual blessing because:—

In Christ — denotes our position — where He is we are.

In Christ — defines our privileges — what He is we are.

In Christ — describes our possessions — what He has we share.

In Christ — determines our practice — what He does we do.

H.W. Greenway, in a tribute to the late W.F.P. Burton, wrote "He died a poor nomad in this world's estimation of values, yet he was rich in heavenly treasure."

Instead of living in those cells of depression and despondency, let us draw on the wealth that can be found in Christ at any moment of the day!

Monday, October 30th Ecclesiastes 5:1–20

“Pay that which thou hast vowed” (v.4)

THE preacher, even in his backslidden state, remembers from his past what the person who loves God should do, even if he has not done it himself. What promises Solomon had made to God! – and now from the bitterness of his state he cries, “Pay that which thou hast vowed”.

What have we told God in those high moments of holy dedication? Are our words bigger than our deeds?

Tuesday, October 31st Ecclesiastes 7:1–14

“Who can make that straight, which he hath made crooked?” (v.13).

THE Old Testament poses this query in various forms. The bent twig grows into the bent tree. Who can straighten that?

The prophets had an answer. In Isaiah’s description of the Messiah’s power (Isaiah 42:16) he says, “I will make the crooked things straight”.

Nothing is beyond the ability of God. Bring every problem to Him and find that He who straightened the back of the woman who was bent double can straighten out the most crooked of men and things.

Wednesday, November 1st Ecclesiastes 8:1–17

“Where the word of a king is, there is power” (v.4).

THE authority of words can depend on who says them. It is not the violence with which they are said, or the number of times which they are repeated that denotes power; it is the position of the man who utters them.

Our King now sits on the right hand of the Majesty on high. Even when He was on earth His words had such effect that demons fled, lepers were cleansed, and the blind saw. Now He is exalted far above all. “Whatsoever He saith unto thee, do it”!

Thursday, November 2nd Ecclesiastes 9:1–18

“No man remembered” (v.15).

WHAT a parable of pathos – the man had delivered the city, where there were not very many men anyway, yet even those few did not remember him in his poverty. Such is the despair of the materialist’s outlook. How different are the words of our Lord in Luke 12:6, when, speaking of the cheap price of the sparrows, He showed that “not one of them is forgotten before God”.

To keep God in your sights is to realise that God keeps us in view, too.

Friday, November 3rd Ecclesiastes 11:1–10

“Cast thy bread upon the waters: for thou shalt find it” (v.1).

THIS is a comment on the farming methods often used at the time. As the water from the overflowing river went down, the farmer sowed his seed in the flooded fields and the rich deposit of mud brought the seed to a bountiful harvest.

We often feel that the Word of God that we sow is swept away in the torrent, but, in the most unlikely ways, it will come to fruition.

Saturday, November 4th Ecclesiastes 12:1–20

“Remember now thy Creator” (v.1).

NOW the search is over. All the preacher’s looking for satisfaction in material things has failed. At length, like all of us, he is forced to lift his gaze to God above and find his satisfaction there.

Those haunting words of the chorus say:

“All my lasting joys are found in Thee; Jesus Thou art everything to me”.

It is not simply that we are happy with our discovery of God, but also that, having found Him, we could not be happy anywhere else.

Sunday, November 5th Psalm 57:1–11

“My soul is among lions” (v.4).

HAVE you ever felt like this? Do you feel that you have joined Daniel in his den? The enemy is too strong, too numerous, too near.

The opening verse of the Psalm shows where our confidence should be: “In the shadow of Thy wings will I make my refuge”. The very feathers of the wings of God are more than enough to keep the most ferocious lion at bay, even the “roaring lion” himself!

What Price a Miracle?

by Eric T. Carter

Pastor of Elim Pentecostal Church, Grimsby

"Sanctify yourselves: for tomorrow the Lord will do wonders among you" (Joshua 3:5).

THE salvation of an individual is no less a miracle than the axe head that floated.

Examine the many definitions of the word, "Miracle". It has been defined as: "A work wrought by a Divine Power for a Divine Purpose, by means beyond the reach of man." (Herbert Lockyer).

The miracle of salvation sees the release of the sinner from the strait-jacket of sin, but this is only half the miracle. Christianity is not simply the news of God forgiving, for, if that were all, it would be like driving into a cul-de-sac from which emerges no further stretch of asphalt on which we could travel. The scope of this miracle is breathtaking, for the "new man" is given a new, unequalled life in Christ. One certainly sows, another reaps, but it is God who gives the increase. Salvation is His gift to bestow.

When we pray for the world, our nation, the town in which we live, the street where we played as children, the folk next door, members of our family who seem ever to remain beyond the reach of the Gospel, we are asking God to save as only He can. We are asking for miracles.

Trace the supernatural element in the Scriptures. One intrinsic truth demands attention: Coupled to each miracle is the price someone paid before God's power was demonstrated. For example:

The price — SACRIFICE. A little boy donated his lunch before a dense crowd could be miraculously fed. Little is much when God is in it. This was giving until it hurt!

The price — HUMILITY. Naaman, the mighty warrior, climbed down his ladder of stateliness, lowered his dignity, submerged himself in Jordan and was instantly cured of leprosy! Pride often prevents men from acknowledging their need (Proverbs 16:18).

The price — OBEDIENCE. A man, lame from birth, sat at the Beautiful Gate. Peter and John had no coins; only a cure could be given. This the cripple received by obeying their command and rising in the name of Jesus.

The price — PRAYING WITHOUT CEASING. The Apostle Peter lay in a cell. His execution was imminent. Heaven alone could intercept and deliver. Knees may have become sore as believers sought God, but the interruption to their prayer meeting brought living proof in the person of Peter that God had performed a miracle.

Nazareth was the most privileged spot on earth, for, in this hamlet in the hills, Jesus spent the greater part of His life, growing in favour with God and man (Luke 2:52), yet, in that tiny village, His own home town, Jesus could do no mighty work save healing some who were sick (Mark 6:5). The reason is as plain as a pike-staff. A chilling fog of unbelief had settled on that community; it seemed to tie the hands of omnipotence. No one was prepared to haul down the flag of scepticism and raise a standard by submitting to the lordship of Christ. Jesus, therefore, went His way and the spiritually blind groped in their darkness not realising that the Sun of Righteousness had passed by. Lepers remained the untouchables of society. Wooden crutches continued to creak under the weight of cripples. So many hearts were hardened. What price a miracle? — obviously it was too high!

All the wonders of God wrought in great revivals have been marked by obedience to certain laws. Determined Christians, young and not so young, have paid the price and have then stood still and seen God's salvation. The windows that withhold super-abundant blessing are bolted on the manward side. God's tomorrow of wonders awaits our today of sanctification. If we are to experience the refreshing breeze of God's Spirit today, the cost must be met in full.

The command conveyed from tent to tent in the camp of Israel on the eve of the epoch-making day when entry into the land of promise was gained is no less relevant today: "Sanctify yourselves: for tomorrow the Lord will do wonders among you." Joshua's edict called for self-examination, not by human standards, but by standing in the beam of God's spot-light. Absolute surrender was the order of the day before God actuated His mighty power on their behalf. Then the first of many spectacles took place before an awe-inspired audience and the swift flow of Jordan was halted permitting the people to cross without so much as their shoes getting wet (Joshua 3:17). On that occasion and during the years of warfare that followed, whenever the price was paid, Israel's career was one of continual conquest.

As light is preceded by darkness, as Pentecost was preceded by a period of preparation, so the price we pay today in whatever currency God asks will be preparation towards God's tomorrow of wonders. Let us not withhold payment nor count the cost!

I HAVE said a few times lately that we can waste time in prayer.

Think of the public prayers we hear. Thank God for them. They are an essential feature of our services, though I have to say that we ministers may well need to learn a lesson in that, in conducting a service, we can pray four, five or six times or more, especially on Sunday mornings. We would do well to enlist the aid and ministry of others in this respect, though maintaining the privileges of leadership.

Recall, however, how often and how long we beseech God to be present with us. You would hardly think sometimes that Matthew 18:20 had ever been written.

It needs only two or three — and He's there!

Again we plead with great intensity, "Do not let Your Word return to You void!" Why do we do it? God has promised that He won't!

Do you agree that our public prayers can become almost like a liturgy if we are not careful? We must pray for the absent ones, the church programme, the missionaries and so on, but must we make every opening prayer a catalogue of them all?

May I also wonder aloud whether others become as discouraged as I sometimes do by the lengthy prayers for backsliders? We must, of course, plead for their return to the fold, but is it really necessary to spend so much of our public prayers rehearsing the problems of those who have fallen away? By all means pray for them, plead for them, yes, plead with them, but must they be allowed to dominate our thinking and praying as they sometimes do?

Perhaps we should give more careful thought than we do to our intercession in public. We can adopt the idea of praying to God to send sinners in and feel warmed and satisfied by the fervour of our praying. Is this all, however? Does not an important part of the answer to our pleadings consist in our going out to win the lost? The Divine plan can never be construed as Christians remaining within the ivory towers of their churches on the defensive asking God to do for us what He has told us to go and do.

We claim to be led and guided by the Holy Spirit. Does this mean that we do not have to think? Our whole services would be materially and spiritually improved if we could lift the whole tenor of our public prayers.

Southend-on-Sea Elim Sunday school harvest display

SOUTHEND-ON-SEA

Pastor: A. Nicolson

"THE Bible comes alive" was the title of an impressive and informative series of meetings at which Pastor Christopher Gornold Smith authoritatively depicted the significance of the scriptures. He gave a vivid presentation by means of exhibits, scale models, colour slides, taped interviews and sound-movie films from original newsreels. Studies ranged from Abraham and Ur of the Chaldees to the Israeli-Arab conflict and the six-day war, revealing the many aspects of the people, their culture and the importance of age-old customs. Pastor Smith delved into the background of the Bible and presented archaeological confirmation of Bible prophecy and indications of the Second Coming seen in the evidence of history, fulfilled prophecy and present-day world events.

He also spoke to the Church Forum, the Sisterhood and the Junior Crusader Youth Club. His ability and unique ministry brought much blessing and encouragement to the many who heard him. About 190 were present at the final meeting.

We thank God for the inspired ministry of His servant, the undeniable truths of Scripture and for the benefit such a series has brought to our fellowship.

ABERYSTWYTH

Pastor: G.S. Wyborn

"THE Elim Church in Aberystwyth had a large congregation at the harvest festival service on Sunday.

The chapel had been decorated with all kinds of provisions, including a beautiful floral display. The young people from the Sunshine Corner played an important part with many active choruses. The service was concluded with an appropriate sermon on the harvest theme."

Cambrian News

On the following day the Sunshine Corner members visited an old people's home and the gospel was expressed in hymns, active choruses and two duets. Pastor G.S. Wyborn gave a short address, explaining that Jesus was the only way of salvation. The service was well received and an invitation to go again was extended.

GRANGETOWN

Pastor: A. L. Hawkes

WE have held a successful "Holidays at Home" week. Each day we had up to twenty children, first for an hour's special programme taken by Gwen Haynes of Kings Heath, Birmingham Elim Pentecostal Church. Gwen kept the children's interest well with her stories and slides. Some of the children wrote letters to her saying that they had asked Jesus into their hearts. Following these programmes we took the children out each day, either to the sea or to a park. One day we went to the airport. One of the most encouraging things was a letter of thanks from one of the parents for the interest taken in their children.

Children's crusade at Grimsby

GRIMSBY

Pastor: E.T. Carter

AT our very successful children's crusade, conducted by "Uncle Ric", our Pastor, children flocked in to the church at 5.30 p.m. every night for a week for "Adventure Hour". The average attendance each night was 100 children of all ages.

Competitions, quizzes, chorus singing and a serial story on Pilgrim's Progress, were some of the items included in the programmes. The whole crusade carried a spiritual theme, which resulted in many children giving their hearts to Christ. A number of these wrote personal letters to "Uncle Ric" telling him that they loved Jesus and that He had saved them from their sins.

The Lord truly blessed all the meetings and as a result, the Sunday school has increased.

SUNDERLAND

Pastor: D.G. Holmes

WE continue to be amazed in the presence of our Lord as He pours out His blessing to the enrichment of our souls.

At our fourth baptismal service, six brothers and sisters followed their Lord through the waters after giving heart-warming testimonies.

We had a mid-week Anniversary Thanksgiving service with our Pastor and his wife as "guests". They have in a quiet, unassuming way endeared themselves to our hearts. Members expressed their appreciation and presentations were made of a love offering and a bouquet of flowers. It was wonderful. For the first time our Pastor found it difficult to find words to frame his reply. Afterwards, Pastor and Mrs. Holmes cut the cake and we enjoyed a lovely spread prepared by the ladies.

We all benefitted by the special weekend ministry of Pastor Leslie W. Green and rejoiced in the impact of an enlightened, consecrated mind dedicated to the service of God. Several received the Baptism in the Holy Spirit.

Sunday, October 1st, was the climax of a week of children's outreach meetings. Many parents and children were present on the Sunday evening which was our first Sunday School Prizegiving.

Pastor and Mrs. D. G. Holmes cut the anniversary cake.

We pray that God will continue to bless His work as we press on to His glory.

G.H. SLAWTHER

HASTINGS

Pastor: E. Dainton

IT was with regret that we bade Pastor and Mrs. G. Harpin and family farewell after five years of ministry in Hastings. It was most gratifying to see a full church; not only our own members and friends, but many people from other churches also attended, showing the esteem in which Pastor Harpin was held. Tributes were given by two local Pentecostal ministers with whom we enjoy fellowship. The church secretary thanked Pastor and Mrs. Harpin for all that they had done and presented Pastor with a watch, Mrs. Harpin with a picture, and Michael and Rosemary with book tokens. We pray that the Lord will richly bless them in their new church at Barnsley.

The induction service of our new minister, E. Dainton, and his wife was held on October 8th, when again the church was filled. The Sussex Presbytery was well represented by friends from Eastbourne, Brighton, Hove and Newhaven. The District Superintendent convened the service. Pastor F.A. Hodge gave the Word and singing items were rendered by the Hove Ladies' Singing Group. At the close of the meeting refreshments were served and happy fellowship was enjoyed.

We look back with gratitude to God for all the blessings of the past, but trust for a greater future.

(Mrs.) L. CRIPPS.

Pastor: D.S. Williams

WE have just concluded a very successful crusade. Right from the commencement it was evident that we were in for a rich time of blessing. The evangelist, John Woodhead, preached the Word with power and conviction. One young lady, an alcoholic, was saved and is now going on with God. There were twenty-three decisions for Christ and a few testified to healing. The ministry of Pastor Woodhead was enriched by his wealth of experience.

The crusade was not confined to the church building. There was much pre-crusade preparation, like prayer, printing and distribution of personal letters. Pastor Woodhead was interviewed on B.B.C. Radio Stoke-on-Trent, resulting in many telephone calls being received and contacts being made. Much hard work was put in every day in visitation by our Pastor and the evangelist. Valuable assistance was given during the meetings by the "Jesus saves" guitar group, Mr. J. Talbot, Mr. Deakin and family, the Hanley church and our own timbrell band.

The Ladies' week-end followed, with the welcome visit of Mrs. J.T. Glass, whose ministry in word and song was much appreciated. The Friendly Hour Choir pianist, Mr. R. Morley, ministered in song. The Harvest Thanksgiving came next, with items from the Bible class and the timbrell band. Our Pastor preached at both services. Many parents were present.

Testimony Time

by Mrs. Nessie Tait

ON the second day of the Conference at Blackpool last May, I was taken very ill and removed to the intensive care unit of the Victoria Hospital with a heart attack. My family were told that I had had a coronary thrombosis.

Much prayer was made at the Conference. The ministers went home to their respective churches and arranged special prayer on my behalf.

On my return home and for the following four months my condition did not improve, so my doctor sent me to hospital to see a heart specialist. After X-rays, a cardiograph and an intensive examination, he told me that my illness was caused through the narrowing of a valve in the heart and that it would require an operation, which would be done when my weight had come down to a certain level.

For months I had not been able to do the simple things like washing my face or combing my hair without having to go to bed afterwards.

A week after seeing the specialist and on a day when my health was at its very lowest, I received a phone call to tell me that a member of the Full Gospel Business Men's Fellowship from America, Cliff Powell, would be praying for the sick that night in a local Baptist Church, the young minister of which has been baptised in the Holy Ghost.

My husband took me to that meeting. I had to be helped up the steps and into the church. When the invitation was given for the sick to come forward, I was helped on to the platform and ever so gently and quietly Mr. Powell laid his hands on my head and prayed that God would touch me. I came off the platform as ill as I went up, but fifteen minutes later I felt a new life come into me. Whereas for months I had not been able to sing or even speak above a whisper, I stood up for the last hymn and sang lustily, "To God be the glory, great things He hath done." At the end of the service I went down the aisle and all the steps before I realised that I had done so without help.

Now I can go up and down stairs without any breathlessness and have lost the awful grey colour. I went to my doctor and told him the whole story. He told me that he believes in the laying on of hands and in miracles. He sounded my heart and then he sat back and said, "You know, you're a new woman, and I'm delighted with what you've told me."

I saw the heart specialist and told him the story also. He did not seem as impressed as my own doctor had been, but he examined me and said that he was very pleased and that I was doing well. I asked him about the operation and he said, "Well, you may not need an operation." We are trusting the Lord that this will indeed be so.

We thank all who have been so faithful in their prayers for me. Our desire is to give God all the glory.

West of England Presbytery Rally

THE Autumn Presbytery Rally took place recently at Chippenham, Wilts. It happily coincided with the Fourth Anniversary of the Chippenham church and that of its indefatigable Pastor, Ken Phillips, and his enthusiastic workers. It was a wonderful, full day, with a business session at 11 a.m. in the church, and two services in the College of Further Education (kindly lent).

Both services were led by Pastor Ken Phillips and there was not a dull moment in our brother's presentation of the various items which contributed much blessing. The visiting speaker for the day was a member of our Presbytery, the President, T.W. Walker.

The President's afternoon message, based on Proverbs 18:10, stirred our faith in the name of the Lord. Prior to the message Mrs. Mary Ward sang about the name of Jesus, a beautiful introduction.

Pastor J. Hyde, who recently came into the Presbytery, read from the Scriptures. Pastor D.W.R. Morton led in prayer. A duet was rendered by Pastor and Mrs.

D.O. Ward. The chorus session was led by Pastor J.R. Brown.

The evening service saw a large congregation in anticipation of blessing. Pastor Ken Phillips welcomed the Chippenham Evangelical Male Voice Choir, who opened the service with the piece, "Praise and magnify His Name". Other items were rendered later. Pastor F. Lavender led in prayer. Pastor B.L.T. Wall read from the Scriptures. Christine Brown (Weston-super-Mare) gave a testimony of salvation and healing and sang a duet with Faith Norton. Pastor J.B.D. Ritchie led the chorus session. In a few kindly words, the President expressed gratitude to Pastor Ken Phillips and his church workers for the preparations of the rally and wished the Pastor and the church "Many happy returns".

The President preached under a wonderful anointing which challenged and convicted us. The service was of some length, but when you are in heaven, what's the hurry?

FREDERICK C. SMITH (Bath)

“The Lord will provide”

by Susan Grady

DID you know that every person on this planet depends on God?

Most do not realise it. Some would even deny the fact if they were confronted with it. If God removed everything that He has made except man and left him on his own, however, he would never survive. We can praise God that, in His great providential care, He gives us all the things that we need so that we can live day by day, yet, when it comes to accepting His love, people reject it. Shouldn't life and love walk hand in hand?

Some unbelievers cry, “Why doesn't God leave us all alone? We can manage our lives without His help.” If God granted that request this world would be the very image of hell itself. God preserves man and beast by His wonderful goodness. He feeds the birds of the air. How much more will He feed and clothe us? “Take no thought for your life, what ye shall eat, or what ye shall drink; nor yet for your body what ye shall put on. Is not the life more than meat, and the body more than raiment? Behold the fowls of the air: for they sow not, neither do they reap, nor gather into barns; yet your heavenly Father feedeth them. Are ye not much better than they?” (Matthew 6:25,26).

God is present with all His creatures, but especially with His own people. When we accept Jesus Christ as our Saviour He takes all our concerns into His own hands. He comforts us when we are in trouble, strengthens us when we are weak, is close to us when we are ill, upholds us when we are falling.

NOTHING can separate us from His love.

Have you wondered how God can be caring for you when He allows you to go through painful trials and temptations? It is necessary for us to go through these difficult periods. They bring us closer to God, mature us as Christians and make us fit and able to help others.

The Old Testament shows how God preserved the Children of Israel, His chosen people. He preserves us – His Church. Time and time again God provided for His people supernaturally. Nothing is too big for our God!

If you come to a situation that needs a miracle to solve it, do not despair, for our God IS able. The Lord will provide in the small things and in the great. Trust Him NOW!

*Though troubles assail,
And dangers affright,
Though friends should all fail,
And foes all unite,
Yet one thing secures us,
Whatever betide:
The Scripture assures us
“The Lord will provide.”*

Book Review

Once a Junkie, by Sonny Arguinizoni. Published by Coverdale House Publishers Ltd., price 60p, postage and packing 7p extra.

THIS book tells the amazing story of the life, conversion and service of a heroin addict. It describes the appalling grip and life-destroying effects of drugs on young folk. It introduces one to a world which is both unfamiliar and frightening to the average Christian.

The story then tells of the transforming power of God's grace. Jesus can still take the worst possible cases of human sin, filth and degradation and transform them into children of God and worthwhile citizens of earth.

Once a Junkie is the story of how one young man so transformed desires to, determines and does win other heroin addicts to Christ. He founds a church specifically for such cases and their families.

This is a fine book, moving and yet factual. It lays great stress on the Baptism of the Spirit with speaking in tongues as God's antidote to this terrible habit of drug taking. It shows that with Christ there is always hope. He can give victory over the demon drug.

As our own land is increasingly engulfed by this terrible scourge and curse of drug taking, Christian folk and ministers would derive much help and understanding of the problem from this fine book. I commend it to you as a worthy successor to The Cross and the Switchblade and Run Baby, run. It gives a very real insight into this world of fantasy and fatality.

My only criticism is that the book's binding is very poor.

The Letter to the Romans

14 The Principle of Holiness (continued)

by J. Alexander Wright

Romans 6:1–11

THE Principle of Holiness is found in the death of the “old man” and our union with the risen Lord “that henceforth” (v.6), i.e. from now on. We do not have to wait for physical death to release us from sin’s slavery. That alone could set Uncle Tom free from the lash of his cruel taskmaster, Simon Legree. This death with Christ frees us from both the claims and the thralldom of sin. “He that is dead is freed” (v.7) from sin. “Freed” is the same as “justified”, “no longer answerable to sin”, so to be justified is also be freed from the bondage of evil. “Get your arithmetic right”, says Paul (v.11): “Reckon” — don’t merely pretend that it is so, but count upon it. It all adds up! This is The Principle of Holiness. “‘There was a day when I died, utterly died,’ and as he spoke, he bent down until he almost touched the floor, ‘died to George Muller, his opinions, his preferences, his tastes, his will, died to the world, its approval or censure, died to the approval or blame even of my brethren and friends, and since then I have studied only to show myself approved unto God.’” (Dr. A.T. Pierson, George Muller).

“Alive unto God through Jesus Christ”, better, “in” [en] Jesus Christ our Lord: This is the first use of the great phrase which A.T. Pierson said was the key to Paul’s epistles: “in Christ”.

The Practice of Holiness (6:12–7:6)

“To say to a slave who has not been emancipated, ‘Do not behave as a slave’. would be to mark his enslavement, but to say the same to one who has been set free is an appeal to put into effect the privileges and rights of his liberation.” (J. Murray, Romans). From slavery to sin he willingly becomes the thrall of the Lord. In this section sin and grace are personified, competing like rival kings, for the throne of our lives. “Let not sin therefore reign in your mortal body” (v.12). The capacity for sinning remains even in the regenerate, but, “Do not let it reign,” says Paul. There is no need that you should. It is not impossible, physically speaking, to refrain from it, but, morally speaking, it is surely inconceivable. The language here is military and reminds us of Bunyan’s Holy War. The gates of the Castle of Mansoul have been opened to the conquering Christ and now Satan is on the outside, but he says to himself, “If I cannot own the Castle I will at least bluff them into thinking that I do”. When the sentinels are not as vigilant as they should be, he slips two soldiers (sins) over the wall, who, once over, display Satan’s banner and shout, “We own this Castle”. What a lie! — two soldiers don’t own a castle! Throw them out! “Neither yield your members as instruments of unrighteousness” (v.13): don’t hand over your weapons to the enemy, to further his dark deeds. “Sin shall not have dominion” (v.14) — you are not under his flag now. “To whom you yield yourselves” (v.16): whatever loyalties our lips profess, deeds and actions tell, besides, slaves have no choice. “But God be thanked, you obeyed that form” (v.17) is literally “that mould of teaching to which you were handed over”. (Dr. H.C.G. Moule, Romans). Dr. Moule points out that the Greek here means that we are to fit the doctrine, like metal to the mould, and not to try to fit the doctrine to ourselves.

“Being then made free from sin” (v.18), freed from Satanic bondage you willingly entered another blessed servitude. “I do not wish to go out free, but ever, always, willingly, to serve Thee to the end”.

“After the manner of men” (v.19) — Paul’s illustrative language is but partial and shares the inadequacy of all speech. The “infirmity of the flesh” is mental, not moral.

“What fruit?” (vv. 20–22): two harvests are before us. Sin yields the “Dead Sea fruit” of shame and death; grace yields purity and life eternal.

“The wages of sin is death” (v.23) continues the military metaphor. This is a reference to the Roman soldier’s daily allowance or pay. “Sin pays a wage, and the wage is death” (NEB). Death is not so much the outcome of sinning, but is paid by sin (Satan) for our service to him. It is not mere physical dissolution, but the “second death” from which there is no salvation for ever. Men would fain cancel the contract, but it stands more binding than any soldier’s ever!

“The gift of God” — by contrast, grace gives eternal life to His loyal soldiers true. “Eternal” is not an adjective of quantity, but of quality. It is not a time word, but describes the life of God Himself. Here again, as in v. 11, it is in Jesus Christ our Lord.

Remember, Remember

Words and drawing by Sheila Price

BECAUSE November the fifth fell on a Sunday this year, Sally and Simon celebrated Guy Fawkes' night on the Saturday. Mr. Smith piled up all the newspapers boxes and branches which the children had collected, and on the top of the pile he sat a large Guy which Mrs. Smith had made with some old clothes.

It was a very cold evening, so the children dressed up warmly and sat on the step at the bottom of the garden. Their father put a match to the bonfire and very soon it was burning brightly.

"Isn't this exciting!" said Simon, warming his hands by the bonfire. "The flames have nearly reached the Guy!"

"Can I come nearer the bonfire, daddy?" Sally asked.

"No! You must stay on the step with your brother," said Mr. Smith. "It is far too dangerous for children to be near fire. You could get burned. A spark might fly out and set your clothes alight. I have to stay by the bonfire to see that it does not get out of control."

"Fire can cause a lot of damage, can't it, daddy?" said Simon.

"It certainly can," said Mr. Smith. "Just one tiny spark is sufficient to destroy a whole forest. Once alight, fire spreads very quickly. It can get out of control and destroy everything in its path, leaving a terrible mess. Sin is like this. Just one selfish thought or an unkind word can very soon spread. Only in Jesus can we find the power to overcome sin and temptation. With His help we can grow into worthy Christians. Now then, pass me the box of fireworks and I will set them off for you."

"Here you are daddy," said Sally.

"Will you light the Golden Fountain first, daddy?" asked Simon.

"Very well, but remember what I told you, children — stand well back!"

PRAYER AND PRAISE

by F. H. Coleman

THE Book of Exodus records that Moses climbed Mount Sinai to meet with God on a number of occasions. He also erected a tent of meeting and, when he went into it, the presence of God came down and Moses talked with God as a man speaks to his friend face to face.

Moses had an audience with God about grave issues. His requests were granted. I am quite sure that Moses did not waste precious time talking pleasantries to God. He wanted more than an angel to lead the children of Israel through that great, terrible wilderness; he wanted God to be with them in the midst. The result of his audience with God gave him this assurance.

A Pentecostal friend of mine was visiting a country which still had a monarchy. It was believed by many that the real power behind the throne was the king's mother. My friend asked for an audience of the Queen Mother and it was granted. A day or two later my friend was at the royal residence of the Queen Mother. He was ushered into an audience chamber and was given fifteen minutes with Her Majesty. He was determined to use those minutes to the full. He told her that he was a minister of the gospel and talked to her of salvation through Christ. Suddenly the door was opened by a servant. This was the signal that the audience was over. The Queen Mother asked who was waiting and was told that it was a famous politician. "He can wait", said the Queen Mother, "I grant this man another fifteen minutes, for he has told me of things that I have never heard anyone speak of before." My friend used those extra minutes to the greatest advantage.

When you seek an audience with the King of kings in the prayer chamber, do you waste time or do you use it to the full?

The Light of the World

by Malcolm Frith

Pastor of Elim Pentecostal Church, Wellington, New Zealand

DESPITE the many, varied attacks made on the Book of Genesis, none can hide the fact that it points so often and so clearly to Christ and the gospel message.

Take Genesis 1:3 for example: "God said Let there be light: and there was light", a verse which John re-echoed of Christ in his words: "That was the true Light, which lighteth every man that cometh into the world." Before God spoke this majestic word, darkness was everywhere. The earth was like a rude quarry. God spoke and an indescribable transformation took place. A world of great beauty came to be.

When God looked upon the wickedness and hopelessness of man some twenty centuries ago and said again, "Let there be light", Christ was born as that Light. The world to which He came was again like a rude quarry, but soon He was fashioning man into His own image again, like the disciples, Mary, Nicodemus and many others who followed Him. The transformations which He made banished the veils of spiritual darkness surrounding their formerly rough souls. God made them to be new creations, people who will stand perfect before Him one day.

Light and Christ closely compare. Jesus said, "I am the light of the world: he that followeth Me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life." The Bible urges us to "shew forth the praises of Him who hath called you out of darkness into His marvellous light", for "God, who commanded the light to shine out of darkness, has shined in our hearts, to give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ." God said, "Let there be light", and it shone forth.

The light was pure, for light cannot defile anything. Darkness and gloom must flee before the shining rays of light. It cannot be compared with snow, for, though snow is brilliantly bright, man can mar it. Water sparkles brightly from a spring, but man can pollute it. We cannot pollute light.

Such was the purity of Christ, the great Light. He passed through a sinful earth, as a sunbeam through a vile hovel, but He never knew the stain of sin. He was able to take the form of sinful man and to receive sin's due, but He was unspoiled by sin's darkness. He returned to heaven in holy triumph, a holy Conqueror.

Light is so bright that, if we look towards the sun, we are dazzled. Put a cloud or mist between us and the sun, however, and its brilliance is lost. Satan realised this when he saw the brilliance of Christ. When He was on earth, both Satan and men tried to dim that brightness, but without success.

Christ was indeed a bright light. He longs for every Christian to reflect that brightness. A Bishop of Gloucester well said "The brightest life is that life in which most of Christ is seen. The brightest time is the time in which the Lord is nearest and the brightest sermon is the one in which most of Christ is set forth".

Light is powerful, just how powerful is now being discovered by the laser beam experts. The possibility that one day it could replace nuclear weapons shows how powerful it is, and how completely it could destroy the work of men and of the Devil.

Paul experienced the power of light as it blazed from heaven brighter than the noonday sun and toppled him into the dust.

John Wesley has given us those immortal words:

*Thine eye diffused a quickening ray
I woke, the dungeon flamed with light,
My chains fell off, my heart was free,
I rose, went forth, and followed Thee.*

Paul also writes of the power which Christ has placed within us, which is able to do infinitely more than we ever dare to ask or imagine (Ephesians 3:20, Phillips). Today we are fighting in the battle of the ages and we need to have this power released within us as never before. Tragically, many Christians have not yet recognised that the whole power of Christ is ours and is in us. It can do beyond our wildest dreams.

Light is free, one of God's free gifts to mankind. The wealthy cannot purchase it nor can the skill of the skilful, the labour of the labourer, or the deeds of saintly men. It comes to all, free, unbought by toil and price.

What a picture this is of the salvation which Christ offers. Isaiah cried, "Come, buy wine and milk without money and without price". Sin's darkness cried out for light, and Christ came in answer to the need, a Light whose beam of salvation is free and cannot be earned. Like any gift, it must be accepted to be of use to us.

Light also brings comforts. How disconcerting it is to be in a cave when the lights go off and someone touches you. You cannot see the hand that touches you or the person who is standing nearby. It is a strange sensation to be in a lift when the light goes off. Even the smallest light, a luminous watch or a match, is a comfort and makes all the difference.

When comfort is needed, having Christ makes all the difference. Things might never have seemed darker, but as we commit the hour to Him, light will come. It may seem faint, flickering and small, but what a comfort it is, and, as we hold on to the Lord, that light will grow in brightness until we feel we have Christ standing right beside us.

Light is all-revealing, as every housewife discovers to her dismay from time to time, when it shows tiny specks of dust on a highly-polished surface that has just been dusted!

Scripture makes it plain that nothing is hidden from the gaze of Christ, as His all-revealing light searches the world and each heart. Specks of impurity and the dust of sin are clearly revealed to Him. Perhaps at this moment God is talking to you about some sin that you have been glossing over for a time. Praise God if He is, for the next step is to show you a pardoning God, ready to view you through the shed blood of the cross as you confess your shortcomings to Him.

Elim Eventide Home

AFTER fourteen years of service as the matron of the Elim Eventide Home in Eastbourne, Mrs. Dorothy Barrett is retiring. Our sister came to know the Lord through the ministry of Dr. Billy Graham at Harringay. She has a wonderful testimony to the grace of God in leading her to Himself. She was a student at Kenley Bible College and also worked at a Home for young women in Croydon before going to Eastbourne in 1958.

During her years as matron Mrs. Barrett has worked hard to make 12 College Road a comfortable home for the elderly folk in her care. She is to be complimented on the many improvements to the furnishings and equipment of the Home which she has introduced, including such important items as central heating throughout the house. As a regular visitor to the Home, I have seen a little of the exacting nature of such a work and many of the residents have spoken to me gratefully of the kindly, sacrificial ministry which Mrs. Barrett has fulfilled, often under great pressure due to shortage of staff and also due to her own ill-health.

The important work of caring for those in the later years of life will continue, but we would like to take this opportunity of thanking Mrs. Barrett for her many years of devoted service. We pray that God will continue to bless her and provide her with the opportunities of serving Him which we know she will desire.

JOHN LANCASTER

Mrs. D. Barrett

Miss M. Hopper

FOR fourteen years Mrs. D. Barrett has dedicated herself unreservedly to ministering to senior citizens in our Eventide Home at Eastbourne. Our sister has faithfully discharged her duties as Matron during these years and has not spared herself in so doing. We have pleasure to acknowledge our gratitude as a Movement to Mrs. Barrett.

As successor to Mrs. D. Barrett, Miss Maisie Hopper, S.R.N., S.C.M., R.C.N.T., F.E.T.C., of our Ilford church, a fully qualified nursing sister and hospital matron will take over duties as Matron from November 6th. We praise God that He has undertaken for us in this way. Readers will recall Miss Hopper's period of service as a missionary on our Rhodesia field. Circumstances militated against her return after her first term. Now Miss Hopper feels that this ministry to senior citizens is a God-given opportunity to devote her abilities to help to meet a great social need. We know that Miss Hopper will value your prayer co-operation as she takes on these new responsibilities.

From T. H. Stevenson

THE Olympic Games have ended seemingly a considerable while ago. As every reader knows, they ended on a tragic note. The distressing Arab-Israeli feud overshadowed and clouded out the victories and efforts of the world's athletes. These affairs occupied the attention of millions.

Comparatively few may have known of the intensive evangelistic effort which took place in Munich during the Games when 2,000 young Christians from thirty countries united to witness for Christ. The organisation YOUTH WITH A MISSION, a Pentecostal revival fellowship, but, as with other Pentecostal outpourings today, described as "Charismatic", joined with many other JESUS PEOPLE. My brief account of God's blessing has come to me from a young, full-time Christian worker who took part.

From the beginning of the crusade there was blessing as many personal contacts were made with local citizens, tourists, and athletes, but, out of the tragic killing of Jews by Arab terrorists, strangely came the wide open door of opportunity for the Christian witness. An amphitheatre seating 3,000, which had been set aside for entertainments, including nude shows, and which was not available to the Christian leaders who wanted an evangelistic rally there, was suddenly closed for entertainment purposes. The German civic authorities, deeply grieved that Jews should again be slain on their soil, considered their entertainment programme out of place. The lovely amphitheatre became the centre of evangelistic rallies instead.

In addition, because of the changed atmosphere, public parades were banned, but the 2,000 young Christians were urgently invited to have a peace parade. As a gesture of peace, they had the joyful task of cutting the innumerable flowers that bedecked Munich's gardens and roadsides to distribute them to the multitude of residents and visitors lining the route. People left their flats to receive the peace tokens.

Perhaps the incident that made the greatest impression, and which certainly received the widest television coverage, was an Arab Christian and a Jewish Christian side by side giving their youthful testimony to their oneness with Christ and their oneness with each other in Christ.

All must rejoice that evangelism is alive in many ways today and that, by the opportunity taken at the Olympic Games, many people from many countries were reached and won for Christ, the Prince of Peace.

FIGHT EVIL

This is the Last Will and Testament

WITH A WILL!

Do not leave the distribution of your estate to chance. Here are some reasons why you should make a will:

1. It prevents misunderstanding over your intentions about your estate.
2. It provides opportunity for you to continue to exercise Christian stewardship.
3. It helps to avoid heavy expenses, which can sometimes drain away valuable assets.
4. It gives you opportunity to designate who shall benefit from your possessions.

You can show your gratitude for blessings received and also continue the fight against evil by making a gift to the Elim work in your will.

The following wording can be incorporated in a will or codicil:

I bequeath to the Elim Pentecostal Church, of 117 St. George's Road, Cheltenham, Glos, the sum of £ free of duty for the general purpose of its work, and I declare that the receipt of the Secretary-General for the time being shall be a good discharge for the said legacy.

Is it not better to know that your possessions will be used for the Lord's work rather than be spent by those who have never honoured or revered His name?

The two crosses

ON our journey south from Scotland, the R.A.C. routed us through Banbury. It was a golden day in late September. My husband parked the car and we went to view the famous cross before having a picnic lunch in the sunny churchyard of St. Mary's. It is not the original Banbury Cross of nursery rhyme fame, for the ancient cross was pulled down by the Puritans probably in 1600 or a little earlier. Those were the days of furious zeal for the Protestant cause and of a return to simple Christianity untrammelled by the gaudy trimmings and idolatry of Roman Catholicism.

When I was a little girl, my mother, who in her early years lived in that part of Oxfordshire, used to repeat a rhyme written by Richard Braithwaite in 1616 in which he immortalised Banbury and its Puritans as follows:

*To Banbury came I, O profane one,
And there I saw a Puritan-one Hanging his cat on Monday
For killing a mouse on Sunday.*

Various explanations of the meaning of "ride a cock-horse" have been given. In the Middle Ages "cock-horse" was the name given to a child's hobby-horse. In later years in a collection of nursery rhymes, it was stated that to ride a cock-horse meant to ride pillion — two people on one horse. Another more likely suggestion is that, as every road out of Banbury is uphill, a cock-horse was a spare horse or trace horse which was used to help heavy drays and coaches up the steep hills.

The present Cross was erected in 1859 to commemorate the marriage of Prince Frederick of Prussia and the Princess Royal of England. It must have been comparatively fresh and unaffected by wind and weather when my dear grandfather visited it on a market day and listened to a group of earnest believers telling the old, old story of Jesus and His love. On his five-mile journey back to his Oxfordshire village home, so great was the conviction that he needed a Saviour, that he entered a field and, kneeling down, cried to God to save his soul. He rose from his knees a converted man, fully committed to Christ. Thus began a long life of Christian service.

His first sphere of service was in the Railwaymen's Mission. Later, in the Wesleyan Methodist Church, he was a Sunday school superintendent and local preacher. He went out preaching until God called him home. He spent only one Sunday in bed at the end of a long, lovely life. My mother tells me that she never remembers his getting impatient or losing his temper. He was gracious, kindly, a first-class Christian, yet I doubt that the little band of open-air workers ever knew how fruitful was their witness that day at Banbury Cross.

This must encourage witnesses for Christ. Be bold, do not hesitate, speak, sing, testify, distribute gospel literature, be faithful and leave the results with the great Husbandman! The Holy Spirit is active in every endeavour to spread the gospel. We are not "loners"; the Lord is working with us.

*Just to tell the Saviour's story,
Just to witness for His glory,
There are many waiting in their doubt and blindness,
Speak a word to friend and neighbour,
Joyous for the Master labour,
Telling of His joy divine, His lovingkindness.*

*Just a word, the King confessing,
Just to point the path to blessing,
Some have never heard the call so tender,
There is work that waits your doing,
Eager haste, your strength renewing,
Service for the Master you can daily render.*

*Serve Him, labour for His glory
And your witness He will bless,
Serve Him, tell the wondrous story
And His love divine confess.*

Eastern Presbytery Youth Camp

FOR the first time for several years, the Eastern Presbytery directed its own Youth camp for eight days during August. Approximately sixty campers and staff, drawn entirely from the East Anglian churches, enjoyed a pleasant period of relaxation, recreation, and spiritual renewal, under the capable leadership of Pastors John Harrison (Lowestoft), Peter Hill (Basildon) and Paul Atkinson (Braintree).

It is a pleasure to be able to report that lives were transformed by the Gospel and to learn since camp of the ongoing work in the hearts of these young people, drawn from varying backgrounds. About a dozen committed their lives to Christ. Others felt the need for a deeper walk with Him.

A happy, united staff added to the enjoyment of this camp. Probably the busiest members of our staff were our two nurses from Basildon, Mrs. Lucas and Mrs. Racine, who ably and gladly cared for a number of our company who caught a local “bug” during camp. We were also indebted to the fine assistance of Pastor Archie Nicholson.

Next year, why not come camping in Anglia?

P.J. HILL

I.O.W. Junior Camp

A Padre’s Eye-view.

A FIRST visit to the Isle of Wight Junior Camp is full of surprises. This was my experience when I served as Padre at this year’s camp.

What can one say about camp? I was impressed by the number of children. There were well over 200 for the two weeks. I was amazed by the efficient organisation and fattened by the excellent food (ever tried spaghetti rings and fish fingers for breakfast?). Perhaps above all on the organisational side was the fact that all the folk serve voluntarily and in many cases forgo their holidays.

The ultimate aim of camp is to introduce youngsters to Jesus Christ. Probably eighty per cent of those present were unconverted. Many came from difficult home backgrounds. We could not possibly have achieved our aim without the work of the Tent Officers who, in my view, have the toughest, yet the most rewarding job in camp. It was a thrill to meet and to work with some fine young people who made nonsense of the rather foolish claims of some that young Christians are interested only in Gospel pop and Jesus stickers. Our prayer times were among the best that I have ever experienced.

I must point out that I was only Assistant Padre to that “old hand” Padre, Derek Green, surely one of Elim’s finest youth workers. He has done a tremendous work for the Lord at camp for the past three years.

The result of all this organising, teaching, activity, prayer and sacrifice was glory to the name of the Lord as some sixty young folk made serious enquiries about salvation. All were counselled and the follow up work is now going on. It would be foolish to state that all were genuine decisions but many with whom I talked had a real experience with the Lord Jesus. I think especially of one lad, a trouble-maker for the first week, who gave his life to Christ and was heard to pray in public at the communion service and then testified in the final rally.

Thank God for all our camps. The full results will be revealed only in eternity.

North-East Presbytery Camp

HOLES, back-ache, sore hands, ended the advance team’s first week’s work. Then the campers arrived at the canvass village. From all over the country they came, though mostly from the North East Presbytery’s own churches, a collection of new names and people all to be met within the fortnight.

There were endless volley-ball, table tennis, coach-trips, staff versus campers net-ball fight, fishing trips, the beach, swimming, practical jokes (though why practical, I’ll never know!), big meals, washing-up,

by
D.J. Ayling

Monday, November 6th

Psalm 71:1–24

“Be thou my strong habitation, whereunto I may continually resort” (v.3)

WE shall never weary God with our coming to Him. He has heard us bring the same problems many times in different situations, yet He never grows impatient. It is we who tire of coming.

David was writing this in his old age (v.18). He had had plenty of practice in fleeing to his strong habitation, but he had not been disappointed. His continual resort (v.3) brought him continual hope (v.14).

Tuesday, November 7th

Psalm 72:1–20

“Blessed be His glorious name for ever” (v.19)

WE are told (v.17) “His name shall endure for ever”. Here we find that His name is blessed for ever. Time will only add to the lustre of Christ. Other names may rise and fall. Some ascend into fame like a meteor and fade as quickly. The name we reverence will live for ever and be glorious for ever, too. May we seek to add to its fame by our living today!

Wednesday, November 8th

1 Timothy 1:1–11

“A pure heart . . . faith unfeigned” (v.5)

IT is comparatively easy to pretend to have faith when circumstances are easy, even to pretend to have more faith than we have, but real faith springs from the heart. Get that pure heart and a good conscience and faith will have a good soil to grow into strength and reality. If you desire more faith than you have, remember: “Faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the Word of God” (Romans 10:17).

Thursday, November 9th

1 Timothy 1:12–20

“Putting me into the ministry” (v.12)

ANY man in the work of God must be recruited by the Master Himself. To seek to put yourself into the ministry is to lay yourself open to bitter disappointment. The work of God lays demands on a man that no industrial court would ever allow for a man in a secular job. When Christ brings us into His service, however, the onus is upon Him to strengthen us to meet every eventuality. Paul is able to say in the same verse that He “hath enabled me”.

Have you prayed for your pastor or missionary today?

Friday, November 10th

1 Timothy 2:1–15

“I will therefore that men pray everywhere . . . without wrath or doubting” (v.8)

THERE are two obstacles to real prayer: one comes between the Christian and his brother, the other comes between the Christian and his God. Without wrath: “If I regard iniquity in my heart, the Lord will not hear me” we are told. Without doubting: James tells us that the doubting man cannot expect anything from God.

Putting these things aside, “With confidence I now draw nigh — and ‘Father, Abba, Father’ cry”.

Saturday, November 11th

1 Timothy 3:1–16

“A good report of them which are without” (v.7)

IT is often fashionable to think that, if you are a Christian, the world will despise you anyway. No doubt there are times when we shall come under their scorn and testing and this is only to be expected, but what they may say to others about you after you have stood the test is often very different. Those who hurt us most would be most disappointed if we did not stand the test. Remember Jesus grew “in favour with God and man”. They do not always mean that we are wrong!

Sunday, November 12th

1 Timothy 4:1–16

“We both labour and suffer reproach” (v.10)

ON reading notes of Adoniram Judson of Burma, I came across the account of his imprisonment for twenty-one months. At night his feet were tied together, a bamboo pole was put between his legs, and he was hung upside down. He had a raging fever. Mosquitoes sucked blood from his bleeding feet.

Timothy had walked too close to Paul to expect anything else for himself. What gives us the prerogative to expect that ours should be an easy pathway? It is as we bleed that we can bless!

duties, rain and some sunshine, endless pulling on ropes, first up to tighten, then down to loosen, as the weather kept changing, the hunt for pegs to make the night warm in your corner of the tent, new songs, new experiences, new friends — all part of camp.

There are other parts though in the realisation that Christians have something, life in every dimension, new knowledge from the studies, new discoveries, new in-fillings of the Holy Spirit, new challenges to be obeyed later, to take home and to the churches, new dedication and determination, new revelations of Him, the perfect Friend and Companion.

To see it all happening, to be part of it, is to be at camp and it is a privilege.

THE eleventh hour of the eleventh day of the eleventh month is a deeply evocative statement for an older generation.

The fateful year of 1918 and all the terrible aftermath come all too readily to mind. While not wanting to glory in war or militarism, it must be said that something has been lost by the under-playing of what we used to call "Armistice Day". The two minutes' silence was a moving experience. The stopping of "the mighty roar of London's traffic", as the B.B.C. used to describe it, was symptomatic of a whole nation stopping to think and, it must be said of many, to pray. The whole thing is now in a low key. It makes little impact.

A recent report demonstrates with saddening emphasis that the general mockery of standards of all kinds, especially moral and spiritual ones, is reaping a terrible harvest. The Report of Religious Education in Primary Schools (published by Evans, Methuen), as detailed by press and television, makes sobering reading. Teachers cite the poor moral standards of parents, a more materialistic society and growing religious scepticism as among the biggest problems facing religious education. A team from Leeds University studied 200 primary schools, fifty-six of them in depth, over a three-year period. Surprisingly, the number of atheists or non-believers among head teachers and staff was found to be very low. Humanists formed 16.7 per cent of teachers in county primary schools and 10.3 per cent in voluntary-aided, non-Catholic schools. Children were said to consider heart transplants as achievements of a far more exciting nature "than the far-away stories of the miracles of Jesus". "Against a background of getting and spending and preoccupation with pleasure and the dominance of physical things", teaching moral and religious values has become increasingly difficult.
Problem homes, preoccupied parents, lack of example, double standards on the part of adults, are all castigated as contributory factors.

We in Elim have preached and written for well over half a century as to the urgent need to pay heed to the signs of the times. We find no joy in observing that these warnings are coming all too literally true.
These must be the last days.

Our lands needs a resurgence of faith. Perhaps the most dangerous aspect of the report is the revelation of the apathy of most parents. It must be stated, however, that many of the poorly thought out ideas of two generations have had their devastating effect. The mocking and knocking of so much in these last ten years have only made a bad situation much worse.

On Remembrance Day, remember and pray.

Church Reports

PETERBOROUGH

Pastor: K.J. Cave

OUR first church anniversary was an effective answer to those who were saying a year ago, "It won't last. We've seen it all before." For us it was an opportunity to thank the Lord for all that He has done during the past year.

The key word in the assembly is "growth". This manifests itself in increased attendances at the Sunday services, in steady increase in the weekly offerings, in the Sunday school work, which has gone from seventeen to seventy in eight months, in the commencement in September of a midweek fellowship for ladies, and in the launching of full midweek youth activities for Sunshine Corner, junior and senior Crusaders, which are already showing signs of healthy growth. These are all signs that the blessing of God is upon the church. We continually thank God. He has given us "a mind to work", but He alone gives the increase.

A holiday Bible club was held for one week when up to sixty children gathered every morning. The time was fully occupied with singing, stories, games, practical activities and teaching. Teachers and pupils found the week very profitable. On the Friday evening many parents came to see the work carried out during the week, resulting in some very encouraging contacts. The holiday Bible club has become a "must" for next year.

A baptistry has been constructed by our Pastor assisted by members and friends. The first baptismal service to take place since the building was erected in 1898 was held recently (see front cover). For a previous service, a local Baptist church was made available for us. Our church was filled to witness ten people following the Lord through the waters of baptism. Some had been converted for many years, but they have only recently come to realise the truth of water baptism. Others have not long been saved. All showed a deep sincerity, which made a lasting impression on everyone present.

We take courage from the many churches in the Elim family that have stood firm over the years and continue to be blessed of God. May our presence, along with that of other "youngsters" in the Movement, encourage you to pray more earnestly for the country for the glory of God.

JOHN L. STEWARD

SWINDON

Pastor: W.R. McKibbin

IT was my pleasure to be present along with my wife and family at the wedding of Pastor W.R. McKibbin and Mrs. Patricia Evans on Saturday, October 21st. The church was crowded for the occasion. A great sense of the blessing of God rested upon the service, which was conducted by Pastor Douglas O. Ward. Mr. Ward spoke feelingly of the way in which the bride and groom had been brought together in the will of God, both having suffered the loss of their partners at almost the same time. During the signing of the register, Mrs. Ward added much to the blessing by her ministry in song.

After the service a very happy, informal reception was attended by a large number representing among others, our Brighton (The Lanes), Burton upon Trent and Swindon Churches and the Burton upon Trent and Brighton Bible Pattern Churches. More than one speaker suggested that there existed a deep desire in the hearts of many for the uniting of the two groups as symbolised in the union of the bride and groom.

May God bless our brother and sister as they labour together for the Master in Swindon.

T.J. BROOMHALL.

A WONDERFUL time of blessing was enjoyed when Pastor G.N. Backhouse preached the Word of God. His themes included Saviour, Healer, Baptiser and coming King. Souls were saved, many went forward for prayer for healing and lives were re-dedicated to God.

We give God the glory for the way in which His Spirit is moving in our area. Jesus is truly alive today!

Pastor: L.P. Cowdery

WHEN I first met Sam Phillips, he was a massive man weighing twenty stones and as strong as an ox. I was soon to discover, however, that he had a heart of gentleness and compassion.

He was a link between the work of Elim in 1972 and the first days of Pentecost in Plymouth.

In 1906, Charlie Phillips, Sam's father, returned from an afternoon of poaching from the Earl of Mount Edgumbe's estate across the Plymouth Sound in Cornwall. He disembarked to discover an open-air meeting in progress on the quay. He stood to listen, his gun at his side, half a dozen rabbits under his coat. The Lord took hold of his life there and then. He asked the preacher, "Can I have this salvation you are talking about?" On being assured that he could, he knelt there on the side of Sutton Harbour and was born again. Sam, at six years old, found their home transformed. It became the meeting place for prayer meetings, a place where Christ reigned.

In 1914 Charlie Phillips was one of a group who invited George Jeffreys, before he founded the Elim Movement, to Plymouth for a series of meetings.

Thus young Sam had his first taste of Pentecost. He received the Baptism in the Holy Spirit in 1916 at the age of sixteen. The first world war was raging at the time and soon the younger Phillips found himself in the Royal Marines, in which Corps he served for twenty-nine long years. He travelled all over the world.

After leaving the Marines at the end of the second world war, he spent the rest of his working days at the Royal Naval Barracks, Plymouth, where he was an outstanding witness for his Master.

He served the Elim Pentecostal Church as Deacon, Trustee, Lay Representative and Head Steward. He also served the Devon and Cornwall Presbytery as Treasurer. He filled each office with exemplary efficiency.

A good man has gone to his reward. He will be missed. One does not meet men of his calibre often in a life-time.

THE day was Saturday. The time was 9.45 a.m. I stood not far from York Minster wondering how many would turn up for the march of witness due to commence at 10 a.m. The numbers increased considerably

Crowds listening from Ouse Bridge

United march of witness at York by ten o'clock, when the square was crowded with young and older people, some children and one or two babies in prams. I was impressed by the orderly behaviour of this crowd of witnesses for Jesus. This same orderly behaviour prevailed through the whole day of activity.

I wandered into the Catacombs, a coffee bar run by Christians and found the place packed to capacity with marchers enjoying refreshments. The place soon emptied when it was learned that an open-air meeting was going to be held nearby.

In the afternoon another open-air service was held by the river and scores of people stopped to listen from the nearby Ouse Bridge.

A rally was arranged for 7.30 p.m. in the Salvation Army Citadel. Long before that time the place was full to capacity. To enable everyone to get in, the seats were removed from the body of the hall and several hundred young people stood for some three and a half hours of singing, preaching and testimony. It is some time since my emotions were so stirred. There were so many people being so enthusiastic for the cause of Jesus Christ. May others catch the spirit of witnessing for Jesus and of standing in public testimony for the cause of the Gospel!

I wandered into our York church the other Wednesday afternoon and found about a hundred ladies enjoying tea together. The occasion was the annual rally of our women's fellowship. The visiting preacher was R.B. Chapman, the Field Superintendent, who was accompanied by his wife, who ministered in song, bringing added blessing to that experienced through her husband's preaching. I had not attended the afternoon rally, but I learned that Mr. Chapman had chosen a woman of the Bible as his subject — Mary of Bethany, the woman who everybody loved.

At the evening rally I had the privilege of enjoying Mrs. Chapman's solos and the preaching of Pastor Chapman.

Pastor and Mrs. Chapman stayed to minister on the Thursday evening and again their ministry brought blessing.

BELFAST, Alexandra Park Avenue.

"A DAY long to be remembered" was heard from many lips on Pastor P.E. Streeter's farewell Sunday as our Minister. In the morning service a real sense of God's presence was felt. The Gifts of the Spirit were in operation. The minibus purchased to convey members who have moved from the district was dedicated.

In the evening the church was packed. Three new members were received into fellowship. The anointed message challenged the church to endure suffering like good soldiers. The oversight prayed and laid hands on the Pastor and his wife, seeking God's richest blessing on their ministry at Romford.

Over seventy remained for tea. A cheque was presented to Pastor Streeter by the Treasurer, Mr. R.H. Robinson, as a token of the church's love and gratitude for four and a half years of faithful ministry. Further tributes were paid by Mr. F. Best, the Secretary, and by Mr. Davey, a Deacon, who both presented Mrs. Streeter with a writing case and little Simon with a teddy bear.

THE warm evening, star-filled sky, and brightly burning bonfire, provided an apt setting for the glowing message of God's greatness in creation and His love towards man delivered by Pastor T.G. Hills of High Wycombe, on the occasion of Lane End's annual bar-becue.

Members and friends joined with the High Wycombe church to participate in an evening of fellowship and witness, which included choruses, solos and testimonies around the bonfire. The church members provided a really appetizing spread.

Those who know the Lord enjoyed an uplifting evening and it is hoped that the unsaved among the sixty or more persons present will have found something attractive about God's people and the message of His love.

Pastor: S. Hilliard

RECENTLY, every evening for a week, children of all ages crowded into the Elim Pentecostal Church, Leigh Road, Wimborne to compete with each other in a "Young Folk's Special."

Inside the church were games, quizzes, a serial story and singing. Prizes were awarded to winners of each game.

Pastor Stephen Hilliard and his five helpers were thrilled by the response, for although on the first night only twenty four children turned up, on the final night the church was filled to capacity with eighty-eight children.

On the final evening special prizes were given to the child who brought most friends along.

Prizes were also given to the child with most points throughout the week in the games, and to the child who had attended every evening.

The Youth Special, being such a success, is to continue at the church every Tuesday evening. It is open to children of all ages. Children aged 2½ years to 15 attended during the special week.

The Letter to the Romans

15 The Preventative to Holiness

by J. Alexander Wright

WE have been examining different viewpoints on this much disputed passage. Over against these, and having regard to the context of Scripture which goes before, we ask, "What is the theme that Paul has been pursuing?"

The answer is simple and clear. He is not writing about two kinds of Christians, defeated ones in Chapter 7 and, to anticipate, the victorious ones in Chapter 8. If, in Chapter 7, he is giving his experience as a Christian to illustrate what he has been writing about in the previous chapters, then he is quite irrelevant and has forgotten his theme, which was about Law-men and Grace-men, those who sought to be justified by the law and those who are justified by faith.

The writer thinks that Saul, the earnest, religious Pharisee, is speaking here; Paul writes in retrospect of before his conversion to Christ, of how he strove to keep that Law of God which he so admired and approved, but which he was unable to fulfil. A generation before him, Ovid, one of his own Roman poets had written,

I see the right, and I approve it, too,

Condemn the wrong, and yet the wrong pursue.

This was exactly Saul's position. A fitting illustration is provided in the experience of John Wesley (Journal, vol. 1) who, as a clergyman of the Church of England, in his own words, "went to America to convert the Indians, only to find that he himself needed to be converted". He wrote: "All the time I was in Savannah, I was thus beating the air. Being ignorant of the righteousness of Christ, I sought to establish my own righteousness, and so laboured in the fire all my days. I was now properly under the Law. I knew that the Law was spiritual. I consented to it that it was good. I delighted in the Law of God after the inward man, yet was I carnal, sold under sin. Every day I was constrained to cry out [and here follow vv. 15-23]. In this vile, abject state of bondage to sin I was indeed fighting continually, but not conquering. Before, I had willingly served sin, now it was unwillingly, but I still served it. I fell, and rose, and fell again. Sometimes I was overcome and was in heaviness, sometimes I overcame and was in joy, but I was still under the Law, and not under Grace."

This spirit of legalism is ever with us and in every generation takes on a new lease of life. "The righteousness which is by the law" still commands millions in Christendom. "The paradox of the Law is that man's greatest danger lies precisely in the keeping of it! In this odd world that God has made, it is much more dangerous to be good than to be bad. The Law provides man with a sphere of achievement; it gives him something of which he can be proud within the world of human reckoning. But this puts him in the position of reproducing exactly the primal sin of Adam. It gives him something on which he can stand in the presence of God. This is pride, the root and origin of every other sin. The Law is holy, and just, and good, but it was not given as a means of salvation. It is when it is so taken as an instrument through which a man can commend himself to God, that it becomes the source of slavery and disaster." (Bishop Stephen Neil in Christian Holiness).

Let us then consider the passage in this light. "There was a time, when, in the absence of law, I was fully alive" (v.9, NEB), those blithe days of childhood and youth ere his spiritual struggles began, before he had been awakened to feel the full force of the Law's condemnation, like that loveable rich young ruler in the Gospel story, who said, "All these things have I kept". Paul could not mean that he was once spiritually alive, in the sense of being born again, since he goes on to say, "and I died". He must have meant that, as the sunbeams reveal the otherwise unseen motes, so it was when the light of God's Law, in itself powerless to save, shone upon his life and conduct. When the full force of that tenth commandment "Thou shalt not covet" came, it showed him that he was guilty of all kinds of covetousness (vv. 7,8 ARV). One is tempted to wonder whether covetousness was Paul's besetting sin? "Sin revived" (v.9), "sprang to life" (NEB), as a serpent, motionless and apparently dead, might. Someone has said that nothing resembles a dead serpent more than a live one. "I" was slain, "I died," i.e. the self-complacent "I" of v.9a (Ephesians 2:1).

Testimony Time

by Gwen Haynes

I CAME to know the Lord Jesus Christ in my late twenties.

I first entered into spiritism, believing that I would find the answer to life. Instead I found greater darkness. I became more confused and very frightened. I found myself further from satisfaction and far from God.

Born of Christian parents, I was one of a family of seven. My mother and father taught me how to pray and tried to lead us in the right way. Praying did not really mean much to me then, though. I heard one day that God is Love and that He is all-powerful. I thought, "Why was I born to be a mere three feet nine inches?" The fact that there were other people who suffered, perhaps more than I, did nothing to take away the bitter feelings in my own personality. I reached my teens and I really had to face the fact I was born to be small. My friends, sisters and brothers all grew normally leaving me at three feet nine inches — WHY remained the unanswered question!

My whole ambition was to grow. Often I would come home from school in tears unable to forget the inevitable unkindness as mothers would point me out to their children and children in their turn would make many unkind remarks. Children can be very cruel, I found.

Now, by God's wonderful grace and love, I am well able to accept such things because my heart is filled with Christ's love. My ambition now is to win others for Him.

After leaving school, numerous interviews showed that I was unable to get employment. Each interview ended with, "You are too small!" Not only was I born small, there seemed to be no useful purpose to my life. I wished and prayed that I might die, for of what use was I to anyone? Eventually I found employment and was happy in a measure. My employer accepted me on the merits of my intelligence and not of my size.

One day my youngest sister became ill and her life was despaired of. Due to the prayers of one of my older sisters (a Pentecostal Christian) my sister was seen to recover and because of this I became a child of God.

At this time of crisis, I promised an Elim minister, Pastor E.F. Cole, that I would go to church. I went to hear the missionary from the former Belgian Congo, Pastor L. Wigglesworth. I could not sing or pray during the meeting. At the end the pastor invited me to give my heart to the Lord. I nodded in answer, for no words would come. Then, in the church office, I heard the wonderful words, "If thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised Him from the dead, thou shalt be saved." It was great! Jesus was alive! That meant that I could talk to Him. I got down on my knees in front of all who were there and said, "Lord save me!" and he did!

Bitterness has now left me. God has opened many doors and provided opportunities to speak for Him in churches of many denominations. My size is now a useful thing, for people's curiosity can often be turned into a chance to speak for Jesus.

Book Review

Evangelism Explosion, by D. James Kennedy. Published by Coverdale House Publishers. Price 60p, postage and packing 8p extra.

THIS is a spiritual success story. There are two ways in which the Church propagates itself. One is revival, when the Spirit of God takes hold of a church or a district and turns it upside down, but, while anticipating such miracles, the regular service of the Church is evangelism. It is always our hope and prayer that the one will be superseded by the other.

Dr. Kennedy lays down a system of personal evangelism which has revolutionised his church and built it up to over 2,000 members. Others have proved its worth in their churches and such evidence deserves our careful consideration.

This is personal evangelism with a difference — not the haphazard knocking of doors around a district, but a carefully prepared plan of approach and follow up in which every lead feeds into the local church. To embark on putting the scheme into operation would need a church of considerable size to start with. I suspect that Dr. Kennedy evolved the scheme as his church progressed.

These plans, however, contain many parts that even the smallest church could put into practice with benefit.

The chapters on training personal evangelists are very good indeed and I certainly benefitted from reading them. The style, print and format make it a book not to be read at a sitting, but rather to be treated as a study book.

The Pombe Demon

Pastor Joseph tells the story

I HAVE many visitors to my home at Msolwa. Often it is packed with people, many of whom are Masai. The Masai are arrogant, boastful, quarrelsome and fierce. I hated them before Yesu transformed my life, but now I love them. Truly this is the work of God. Mind you, if you want to draw the Masai to Yesu, you must go with His blessing and use the power of His name. I know of other sincere Christians in Tanzania who have failed to win the Masai because they do not have Pentecostal power.

I entertained Lukoi, a Masai warrior, who had brought his wife to be baptised. Lukoi's wife had been demon possessed for a long period. Lukoi had tried many of the medicines of many witch doctors and sorcerers, but they had been unable even to quieten the demons which possessed her. Then he heard of a new medicine. Some people said that a European called Bulu had the medicine. Others said that it was not Bulu, but his God called Yesu or Kristo. They all agreed that no fee was charged for the help given.

So, on one of my safaris some months before, I met Lukoi in the Chamakweza church. Soon, having cut the many spell charms from around her neck, I was praying for his wife. The Lord gave her complete deliverance and she surrendered herself to Yesu. Lukoi marvelled and rejoiced. I said to him, "Lukoi, what about you? You need Yesu."

"Do I have demons? Am I a woman? I have no need of Kristo," he scornfully replied.

That evening, as Lukoi and I ate together (a Masai man cannot eat with a woman), we talked of the cattle and the grazing and rainfall, but, as we shook the water off our hands at the end of the meal, I said, "How did you get that injury to your foot?"

"In a drunken brawl two days ago," he said. "Truly, if I continue as at present I will destroy all my property. But I cannot give up pombe [drink]: it is my life."

"No," I answered, "You cannot give it up, but Jesu can heal you of your life of unrest. He can give you victory over all."

"No! it is impossible" he replied, "Am I not a Masai warrior?"

I pointed out that Chales a fellow warrior, who had excelled many and impoverished himself with his dissipations, had laid his sword, spear and shield at the feet of Yesu. Yesu had completely delivered him

Pastor Joseph with his wife and family from every uncleanness. Now he is at Bible School.

"Kweli! That was a wondrous thing!" Lukoi replied, "I will try Yesu, but can I leave pombe and women?"

"Give yourself completely to Yesu. He will heal you. You must make a full surrender to Him. He is not a food or sugar in tea to try. If Yesu comes in, He will drive out the demon of drink and give complete victory"

"I have great need," he answered. We knelt in my home and I prayed that he might be delivered from the power of drink.

Next day, as Lukoi and his wife were returning home, Lukoi became thirsty and went into a beershed. He sat down and ordered a bowl of maize beer. As he raised the bowl to his lips, he became sick and was unable even to sip the beer. He left the hut cursing the seller for her rotten beer. A little later he obtained a bottle of ale. This also he was unable to drink; it revolted him. He returned to his wife and said, "What medicine have they given me at Msolwa? I cannot drink any beer, this is sorcery." "No" said his wife, "You asked Bwana Yesu for help and He has set you free. He has healed you of the desire for drink."

Lukoi is now attending the services with his wife. His testimony is that a Masai warrior does need Yesu in his life. The demon drink has gone. Peace reigns in his hut and family. The medicine which healed his wife had healing for him, too.

Children's Corner

Words and drawing by Sheila Price

"HURRY up, Carol, or we will be late for Sunday school."

"I won't be a minute, Brian. I'm just going to get my umbrella."

"It isn't raining," said Brian impatiently.

"Not now," said Carol, "but it might rain later. The sky looks very dull and there are some big black clouds about."

"Well do hurry," said Brian. "It is nearly half-past two."

Carol and her brother hurried along the pavement, hoping to reach the church before the rain came, but, just before they reached the corner, Brian felt a few spots on his face.

The two children pulled their hoods over their heads and Carol opened her blue umbrella, shielding herself and her brother from the rain.

"It's a good thing you went back for the umbrella," said Brian. "That big black cloud is right over us now."

Have you noticed, that sometimes on a nice sunny day a big black cloud will suddenly move across the sky and blot out the sun?

God tells us that sin is like a big black cloud hanging over us, blotting out the sunshine of heaven. Sin is black in the sight of God, a big black obstacle between us and our Saviour.

When we ask Jesus to live in our hearts, He removes our sins, no matter how big or how small. His great, wonderful love blots them all out, letting His heavenly sunshine reach us. Just as our umbrellas protect us from the rain, so the love of God protects us from the dangers of sin.

"We haven't got too wet," said Carol, as she took off her raincoat. "Perhaps the rain will stop by the time Sunday school is over."

"Oh, it will," said Brian. "Look! The black cloud is blowing away!"

Channel Islands Missionary Week

THE churches of the Channel Islands Presbytery were delighted to receive a visit from the Missionary Secretary and his wife for a week of special missionary meetings. They will long remember the blessings received.

Pastor and Mrs. Wigglesworth ministered with great fervour and enthusiasm. They gave a panoramic view of our mission stations, highlighting events in our missionary outreach. National "characters" came alive as our Missionary Secretary drew from his experience and told many moving stories of how the Lord has blessed.

The missionary pageant costumes and lights did not arrive owing to a transport hitch but this did not perturb our visitors nor the churches of Jersey and Guernsey. The fine congregations assembled were amply rewarded by inspired preaching and singing. The comments by Pastor Wigglesworth reflected his twenty years of missionary experience and his recent visits to our fields, as through the medium of the projector we were thrilled to see new churches, converts, and ventures. We rejoiced at the views of Ghana with its extended opportunities, yet we were mindful of the problems facing our workers in more difficult situations.

After a great weekend in Jersey, we held united rallies in Guernsey including one especially for the ladies when Mrs. Wigglesworth ministered appropriately.

These special missionary meetings brought a great stimulus to our faith and a real challenge to pray, to give and to work while the opportunities are available.

The rally in St. Peter Port of the united churches of Vazon, Delancey and Eldad was a great finale. A full vista of all our mission fields on the screen gave us an extended vision. The Word was ministered with pathos, humour and missionary enthusiasm. We were left with a sense of thankfulness to the Lord for such God-given ministry.

ARTHUR ANSTEY.

The Content of the Evangelistic Message

by G. Wesley Gilpin Principal of Elim Bible College
The paper given at the Evangelistic Conference in Birmingham

MANY books have been written, reports submitted and conferences held, yet we keep returning to this vital subject that Jesus made to look so simple.

This is not surprising, for the task of evangelism is the absorbing commission of the Church's great Head and Founder to those whom He elected to carry on the work He began.

Definitions of evangelism are many and vary from the pithy words of Daniel Niles, who said, "Evangelism is one poor beggar telling another poor beggar where to get bread", through the more ponderous definitions of C.H. Dodd in his definition of the kerygma in his book The Apostolic Preaching and its Development, to that of Canon Douglas Webster in What is Evangelism? One of the most accurate and succinct is that given by the Archbishop's Committee in its report on the evangelistic work of the Church in 1918. This and a useful comment is set out in full in Evangelism and the Sovereignty of God, by J.I. Packer, pages 37, 38. One of the most up to date is contained in the report of the Commission on Evangelism (1968), On the other Side, page 62. Distinguished from witness and mission it is stated: "Evangelism takes place only when a particular message is delivered and delivered in such a way that with the help of the Holy Spirit the hearers may understand both the message itself and its bearing upon their lives."

A specially qualifying definition is given by Dr. A. Skevington Wood in his book Mass Evangelism Today: "Evangelism is not to be measured or defined merely in terms of statistical success. Evangelism is offering Christ to men that they may accept Him."

As in New Testament times, results have ranged from no apparent response, through scattered isolated cases (as with Paul at Athens) to groups and great masses as on the day of Pentecost and in Moody, Jeffreys, Brewster, Tee and Billy Graham campaigns, but throughout the work of evangelism has gone on.

My duty is to define what is the content of this message that proclaims the Gospel.

DOCTRINE

This aspect has never changed since New Testament days and the pioneer period of Peter and Paul. It is a truism to speak of "the unchanging Gospel in a changing age". Paul's bold, apposite claims are as valid today as when he defined them to his hearers. In 1 Corinthians 15:1-8; Galatians 1:7,8,11,12, he enunciates both by statement and implication what is necessary in the preaching of the Gospel. An evangelistic message that leaves out these essentials falls short of proclaiming the Gospel.

The report of the Commission on Evangelism referred to an "irreducible minimum" in these terms: "The first essential is belief in Jesus Christ as fully man and fully God. The second is a realistic understanding of the plight of man as a helpless sinner before a Holy God. The third essential is a belief in the atoning death and resurrection of Christ as the sole means of man's redemption from sin and reconciliation to God. The fourth essential is the response to the work of the Holy Spirit, the response of repentance and faith as a genuine turning from sin and an act of trust in God. These are the bare essentials of the Gospel; they can neither be reduced nor altered. They do not by any means comprise the whole Christian faith, but without them Christian faith does not exist. The larger outline from which this essential minimum is deduced includes what the Bible has to say about GOD, MAN, SALVATION, REPENTANCE and FAITH, FORGIVENESS and the NEW LIFE and THE HOPE OF CHRIST'S RETURN" (On the Other Side pages 60-68).

We do not say that all this should be covered in a single address, but none of it should be missing in the totality of the evangelistic message proclaimed in balance over a period of time. The appeal of the evangelist should be made back to the case he has built up for repentance and faith. I am disturbed when an appeal is made with little reference to what has been said before. The Gospel appeals to reason and to conscience. This is evident as early as Isaiah 1:18 and as recently as Hebrews 2:1-3. It is unjust, unethical and inadequate to appeal for response, promising salvation, by inviting a nod of the head or a hand raised in reply to a promise "to pray for you", "to remember you in my morning devotions" or "to send you some literature." It is set down in Scriptural fashion in 2 Corinthians 5:11-21. "If the Church would effectively evangelise it must do so from a strong theological base. It has been quite correctly stated that there can be no effective and permanent evangelism without theology and there would soon be few persons ready to study theology without evangelism. If evangelism loses sight of theology it does so at its own peril, and theology divorced from the fervour of evangelism is dry and tasteless. It cannot be stated too strongly that the two disciplines, if ever severed, part to their mutual detriment." (Evangelism, the Counter-revolution by Lewis A. Drummond, page 41).

RELEVANCE

This great body of truth must take account of the special situations in which human need manifests itself. Throughout the centuries this has varied in line with social and cultural changes locally and universally. Human need and sin are not geographical, but they show themselves in one way or another against the background of conditions. The message must be relevant.

Consider the message of Paul to the idolatrous worshippers on Mars Hill, the ministry of Jesus to an exploited, tax-ridden people, writhing under daily injustices, the message of Luther to a generation held captive in credal, ritualistic bondage and the sermons of the Wesleys and George Whitefield preached against a background of social oppression and industrial injustice, messages of emancipation, epitomised in the hymnology of the day, which led the way to the emancipation of a generation that would otherwise have suffered the fate of its neighbours across the channel in the French Revolution. In 1859 and later with Evan Roberts and the Jeffreys the practical emphases were appropriate and, under God, blessed in the comfort and uplift of a people numbed by privation and hardship caused by unemployment and the effects of (in the case of the Jeffreys) a war that was to end wars. The Jeffreys' message of the miraculous saving, healing, baptising and returning Saviour, with special emphases on Retribution and the Future Life, promised what no politician or party could carry through.

In like fashion today the slant of our message must meet the situation as we find it in society both religious and secular. The cutting edge of the Church's writing has been blunted by the incidence of Modernism, the Humanist experiment, the "God is dead" theory and Existentialism (where man is the measure of himself). Boredom resulting from extreme automatism has robbed life of a sense of purpose for many. Its meaning has become blurred and this has resulted in a disillusionment, of youth with parents and the older generation and the middle-aged with themselves and their leaders. The resulting cynicism has led not a few to opt out of the rat race. All this has produced absorption with material things and the seeking of a palliative or alternatively a way out in alcoholism and drug addiction with the subsequent results of careless abandon to fate and various forms of permissiveness.

The answer lies in the same message, with the limitations of the irreducible minimum, with less than which we have no message, but this must be presented in terms and categories which match the remedy to present day needs in the contemporary situation.

Taking account of this I can see the special emphases as requiring: the presentation of a living, personal Christ (Acts 8:35, Hebrews 1:1). Closely allied to this should be the emphases on miracles as accompanying the work of Christ. The wheel of time has made a complete circle and we are back in those early days when the message of the risen Saviour was at the very heart of their preaching, presented, not in a vacuum, but in a situation where only this message could bridge the gulf between the days of His flesh and the subsequent perpetuation of His teaching.

The treatment of sin needs to be stressed, not as an unfortunate kink, but as the transgression of the law of God, the consequences of which do not die off in a "trip" or finish with death, but which must be faced in the Day of judgment.

The truth of the Second Coming must be underlined. It is noteworthy that this aspect of truth is coming into its own again if for no other reason than that it holds the key to the future.

The Jesus Revolution is not an aberration, but a reaction in a situation of disillusionment. In Jesus is the totality of the evangelistic message. See Luke chapter 9 for a history of the beginning of this movement, set into the context of personal responsibility and theological understanding. On the negative and positive sides see The Church before the watching world by Francis Schaeffer (page 32) and A faith to proclaim by James S. Stewart (page 143).

R. B. Chapman

Evangelistic Conference. EXPRESSIONS from everywhere have applauded this particular effort which proved itself to be stimulating and challenging. Our thanks are extended to all who were engaged in organising the affair, who contributed to the high quality programme and who accommodated so splendidly the many visitors.

Your ardent prayers will be appreciated for Pastor David Hathaway. News is to hand that on October 27th a court in Czechoslovakia sentenced him to two years' imprisonment. At the time of writing an appeal is being considered. Pray for his wife and family who naturally are feeling the great strain of this situation.

Family News. Recently a number of our young ministers have married and among them are: E.A. Cole, E. Gaudion, J.J. Glass, P. Epton and G.S. Wyborn. Babies have also arrived at the homes of Pastors M.J. Baker, P. McCann, A.L. Hawkes and I.S. Rickard. Sickness has struck at the ranks of the ministry and we ask your prayers for Pastors K.J. Marriott, H. Palliser, and W.J. Allen. Some of our ministers have retired recently, among them F.J. Slemming, W.J. Hilliard, R.D. Bradley and T.H. Stevenson (due to ill-health).

Changes of Appointment. There have been several moves among the pastors and these include: G. Harpin to Barnsley; A.C. Jarvis to Vazon; A.J. Downes to Cheltenham; P. Watson to Carlisle; F.F. Frost to Ealing; A.S.F. Horne to Ipswich; E. Dainton to Hastings; P.E.

Stormont to St. Peter Port; D.E. Edmonds to Leigh; P.G. Parsons to Romsey; P.E. Streeter to Romford; A.K. Chamberlain to Selly Oak, Birmingham; F. Waite to Wimbledon; F.K. Harvey to Mosborough; J.A. Austin to Bolton; R. Smith to Caterham; A.B. Tee to Southport; J. Ward to Hayes; D. Beresford to Macclesfield; G.S. Wyborn to Aberystwyth; S. Blake to Chesham; E.A. Cole to Falmouth; E. Gaudion to Eastbourne (Assistant); L. Magee to Lane End, High Wycombe; T.G. Hills to High Wycombe; C.J. Watkins to Hull City Temple; P. Smith to Rotherham; S. Penney to Scarborough; J. Hyde to Oxford; S.D. Huntly to Smethwick; M.A. Drew to Stowmarket and W.J. Hilliard to Kirkintilloch following his retirement. Included in this list are a number who have recently graduated from Elim Bible College and who have accepted their first appointments. Please pray for all these ministers with their new responsibilities.

Pioneer Crusades. The Campaigns in Epping and Broadstairs have been launched and we are looking to the Lord for the establishment of these new centres for full gospel ministry.

COMMUNICATION

"The greatest threat to the Gospel today in our Western industrial societies is not communism, apathy, humanism, impurity of doctrine or wordly compromise. It is the breakdown of communication, not only from the Church to those outside, but also a breakdown of communications in every field of life. Unless Christians can find a way of saying things to modern non-community man, then not only is modern man in a desperate plight, and not only is the Church facing extinction, but Almighty God Himself is gagged." (The Gaggling of God, by Gavin Reid, (page 143). In this context the breakdown of the tribal set-up in living and the almost complete urbanisation of the masses with the incidence of T.V. are important factors.

Two aspects of the content of the evangelistic message are language (where simplicity and the updating of speech patterns are important) and the spirit of the message where ministry gifts should play an important part, particularly prophecy (see The Gifts of the Spirit in the Work of the Ministry by Donald Gee).

The allying of sound doctrine, presented in the context of pressing current needs and couched in language which is generally understood, can be raised to a level of conviction and inspiration by a word from the Lord that will satisfy Paul's definition of the Gospel when he said that it is the power of God unto salvation to everyone who believes.

Greetings from Jerusalem!

from L. V. Darlington Tiller

PERHAPS I should say, "Happy New Year!" or "Shana Tova!" as we say it, but I wonder if I will ever get used to the New Year beginning in September! 5733 sounds much more impressive than 1972! I would rather date my time from the Messiah's coming than from the Creation; not only does it make one feel somewhat younger, it is much more of a blessing, too. This is Israel's sorrow — without God, without the Messiah and without hope in the world.

Living here, one certainly can relive Biblical times. September has been a Holy-holiday month. It starts with the New Year celebrations and then the Ten Terrible Days of prayer and fasting in preparation for the Day of Atonement (Yom Kippur). This needs to be seen to be believed. It is the holiest day of the year and literally everything in the country closes down, all businesses, shops and transport. I would not even drive my own private car in the streets or it would be stoned. There is even the shutdown of the great International Airport at Lod, and of radio and television. There is just nothing. The sudden quietness is something to be appreciated.

The Jews keep a strict twenty-five hour complete fast. They wash only the tips of their fingers and their eyes. They do not even clean their teeth lest a drop of water accidentally passes their lips. All this and they still cannot see Jesus their Messiah as the great once and for all Sin Offering.

This is followed by the happy Holiday of Succot or the Feast of Tabernacles. Many houses have their little Booths or Succa built on the balcony, in the garden or even on the pavement. They take all meals in these for a whole week. All shops and businesses close for half of each day. It is all very Biblical, but all of the letter and without the spirit which makes it live. In some ways I wonder if we Christians have lost some of the expressions of the communal joy of our faith? I think that there are many of these Jewish Feasts that Christians could wholeheartedly share with sincerity and faith. I still prefer a Jewish Sabbath to the Christian (?) Sunday!

Soon now we can expect our early rain and the beginning of winter, though at the moment there is no sign of it. Temperatures have been up in the nineties (F) this last week or so, even on the heights of Jerusalem, but it will be summer's last fling. Even winter will not be cold, however, for there is never a frost, even though we may have snow.

They were the twelve men who were sent to spy out the land of Canaan.

THE DYING HERO

(2 Timothy 4:6-8)

1. A farewell recognition

"I am now ready to be offered up, and the time of my departure is at hand."

2. A satisfactory reflection

- (a) "I have fought a good fight."
- (b) "I have finished the course."
- (c) "I have kept the faith."

3. A glorious anticipation

"Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give me in that day."

CLARENCE H. BENSON.

The concepts of right and wrong

From George Canty, Secretary of the Birmingham Presbytery of Elim Pentecostal Churches.

FOLLOWING Lord Longford's report, thousands of Pentecostal members in the Midlands hope that I may be allowed to put forward their views.

For them, the significance is the reintroduction into contemporary debate of two lost concepts, right and wrong.

True, it is only in one sector, but it is a start. Relative morals, adaptable standards, have become the popular "wisdom."

Judgments based on art, economics, expediency, general political considerations, or on "nature", leave us in our present floundering state, with Christian chart and compass tossed overboard.

It is time to insist that "The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom."

"Right" has degenerated into "my rights" — bringing social pile-ups as we overtake one another.

The little man learns from Big Business to snatch his share of the swag. If "religion doesn't mix with business" why be moral about wage claims?

The mindless worship of physical prowess, and of the gods of entertainment, and of "luck", brings immoral wealth to some while the masses are imbued with rising envy and covetousness. What is right in all this?

The cult of nudity denies the image of God in man. Pleasure in the shame and humiliation of the most attractive women is a trade for money. "Right" — where does that apply?

Religion is almost always misrepresented. Many are proud about their deliberate ignorance of Christianity.

But they know about the power game and accept without protest its double talk, promise-breaking and intransigent unreason.

Perverted men with mind-bending "radical" or "progressive" philosophies are given constant hearing as if presenting a mere divergent approach.

If society had not lost the clear insights of Christian faith, it would call these agents of social disruption what they are.

The new, non-moralistic leadership is achieving results. We witness open evil and hatred over issues that amount to no more than extra beer money.

Mouthing regrets about "inconvenience", they exploit inconvenience — literally misery and ruin — for a temporary advantage on the road to national disaster. The social spirit disappeared with church congregations.

The country is sick, heartsore, insecure, bruised by injustices. The cure is national repentance and a return to God and absolute Christian standards.

"Righteousness exalts a nation, but sin is a reproach to any people."

Right and wrong — let us face up to this challenge in every discussion on every issue, public and private — or we're done for.

George Canty

We Know

DURING the delightful autumn season it was my joy to travel from Scotland on the A.74 road, which has been described as the finest scenic motor route in Britain. The perfect weather revealed the lovely border country in all its splendour and I read with nostalgic pleasure all the well-remembered names on the sign-posts.

Midway between Lockerbie and Gretna is the village of Ecclefechan, where was born one of Scotland's most illustrious sons, the great Thomas Carlyle. He was a writer, an historian, a philosopher, and a wise and godly man. He has been called the Prophet of Sincerity, the most powerful teacher of righteousness and truth that his generation knew and one of the greatest moral forces of all time.

How did this rugged scholar reach such heights of nobility? I am certain that it began with the training he received in his godly home. It was a humble home. His father was a stone-mason, with little money and a large family, but the home was rich in love and prayer and they worshipped God together and learned the Scriptures. His mother's favourite text was Romans 8:28. Thomas Carlyle made it his very own and quoted it repeatedly in letters to his mother, to his brother and to his contemporary, Emerson, to whom he made frequent references to the all-enfolding goodness of God. On sleepless nights he found comfort in meditating on the fatherly love of God.

Writing to his mother, who had been saddened by the emigration of one of her boys, he sought to console her by reminding her of what she had taught him. "You always say, as all of us should say, 'Have we not many mercies, too?' Is there not above all, and in all, a Father watching over us, through whom all sorrows shall yet work together for good? Yes, it is even so. Let us try to hold by that, as an anchor both sure and steadfast!"

Thomas Carlyle was offered a peerage and a pension and a grave in Westminster Abbey. He refused all three and asked to be buried beside his father and mother in the old churchyard at Ecclefechan. His memorial stands today by the roadside. He was a man of the upland countryside, a man who wrote of the old scenes of the Solway. "In the poorest cottages", he said "are books and is one book, a noble book wherein for several thousand years the spirit of man has found light and nourishment. My creed is a certainty with me". He knew that all things were working together for good to them that love God.

Have we this supreme confidence? Can we cry with him, "We know that God is good?"

I am glad that I passed by Ecclefechan and saw the beautiful harvest in the fields, a product of many things, seed and sowing, sunshine and shower, wind and weather, soil and toil, all working together.

Mattie D. Babcock has said precisely what I've been trying to convey:

*Back of the loaf is the snowy flour,
And back of the flour the mill,
And back of the mill is the wheat and the shower
And the sun, and the Father's will.*

Heart's Desire

by David G. Butcher

Transvaal, S. Africa

THE desire was within King David's heart, as sure and strong as the pull of gravity. He wanted to build a house.

David was no ordinary man. He was a man whom God had chosen. God guided him, in fact God planned his every step. This was to be no ordinary house. David would never be able to advertise "a desirable property, 4 beds 2 reception". This would be God's house, a dwelling-place for the Almighty. He said, "I intended to build a house of rest for the ark of the covenant of the Lord, as a footstool for our God."

The Holy Spirit gave David the Divine plan for this wonderful building (1 Chronicles 28:12). The size, construction methods, decor and interior fittings were all in his mind. He was ready to go on his building (v.2).

Suddenly, with heart-breaking effectiveness, God stepped in. He declared, "You shall not build a house for My name" (v.3). David was not God's choice. He had been used in another field of service and now God's word was final on the matter.

Disappointed, disturbed, but not moping, he was determined to do what he could within the bounds of God's will. The vision, as bright as the sun, was still embedded within the king's mind.

The king passed the Lord's directive on to the people and to his heir. God wanted Solomon to reign over the land and also to build the temple. As far as the construction work was concerned, God's way was not what David wanted, but God's will was accepted without question.

David's vision was impressed on his heart. It became his conversation, dream and meditation. Everything revolved around the building of God's house. David wanted it built and he wanted to be personally involved in it.

How was this possible? How could he play his part without going directly against God's crystal clear instructions? The answer was simple. "So I have prepared with all my might" (29:2). He gave from his own personal treasure a great amount, which today we can hardly comprehend (29:4). His vision spilled and bubbled over, inspiring many others to give "for the service of the house of God" (29:6,7).

Exciting missionary evangelistic work is easy to present and often a vision for missionary work is stirred up by the written word. Many have been thrilled and inspired by the dedicated life of Jim Elliot, one of the five American missionaries slaughtered by the Auca Indians in 1956. Many have been taken to similar heights of inspiration by our own Elim pioneer missionaries.

Have you personally had a vision for the many without God in lands across the seas? South Africa is a fine example of the great need. Here we have an ultra-modern society rubbing shoulders with primitive heathen. Here the witch doctor and other forms of superstition are as important to many natives as is the G.P. in your home town. The need here is great. There is much to be done. Could it be that you have been prevented from coming? Has the Lord stopped you in some way, either by Divine word or by circumstances? Don't mope! Keep that desire to see souls saved before your eyes and set out to play YOUR part.

Elim missionaries are working towards one goal, the extension of His kingdom. Work of such a nature is expensive work, but the spiritual rewards are great. Are you playing your part in Elim's missionary evangelistic programme? Have you received that necessary vision yet? The scope is vast; children, vital, energetic young people and older age groups must be won for Jesus. Expensive literature and radio are tools which must be used to reach many more with the gospel. The Elim Missionary Society and the individual missionaries have a big vision and we must support them in a big way.

Some were sent, others need sending. Can you say that you are rejoicing because you have given willingly? Elim missionary work is a double-sided affair: you give, the missionary goes. Best of all, "the victory is the Lord's." (29:11).

Keep up the good work! Keep the vision clear!

Notes
by
D.J. Ayling

Monday, November 13th 1 Timothy 5:1-16

"Intreat him as a father" (v.1).

THAT the Church was a family under God was already clear in the mind of Paul. Higher standards of dealing with your own family are to be expected than those obtaining in the world. How often we let this slip when dealing with each other in the church! One hears someone say, "They would not have done that in the world." Our dealings with each other in Christ should be better, more loving, more understanding than with others in business or secular occupations. We are the family of God.

Tuesday, November 14th 1 Timothy 5:17-25

"I charge thee before God" (v.21).

PAUL, in writing to the younger Timothy, brings home three times the solemn nature of his holy calling by charging him before God as if in a court of law. Here are three things to keep in mind in our service for God: impartiality in dealings with others (5:21); truth in witness to Christ (6:13); consistency in preaching the Word (2 Timothy 4:1)

Wednesday, November 15th 1 Timothy 6:1-10

"Supposing that gain is godliness" (v.5).

HAVE you come across the deceiving half truth that is popular nowadays that, if you give to God (usually through the medium of some particular evangelist), then you can expect God to start pouring prosperity into your lap?

I was interested to see this little phrase in today's reading and to contrast it with the next verse: "Godliness . . . is great gain." We have our priorities wrong if we feel that our worldly goods are God's currency. God's bank deals in different investments, like the sterling qualities of a transformed character.

Thursday, November 16th 1 Timothy 6: 11-21

"Lay hold on eternal life" (v.12, v.19).

WE cannot live as those who have only time to enjoy. The Christian must always look at his present joys or sorrows in the light of eternal life. How can I join the man in the street in his frantic rat race to accomplish so much in the space of his life's span? I have the whole of eternity to enjoy! There are many things which I have not seen yet, many places I have never seen, but I can take my time. Eternity is on my side. Then I shall know as I am known. With the passing of years I must take a firmer grip of that hope so that the rushing tide of frantic pleasure-seeking does not dislodge it from my heart.

2 Timothy 1:1-7

"Stir up the gift of God" (v.6).

HOW often we rely on God to stir us up. When He doesn't, we slumber on, allowing the fire of devotion in our souls to become dull. There is a place in the spiritual life for rising and stirring your own soul. Start afresh today in witness. Give your testimony anew. Plan to be there at the Table next Lord's Day morning. Do not say that it is up to God. God has given you this impetus to do it yourself. God was in it in making you willing to want to start afresh.

Saturday, November 18th

2 Timothy 1:8-18

"I know whom I have believed" (v.12).

MANY a Christian is unwittingly guilty of adding to God's Word. I have heard this text quoted in many a meeting with a little addition. People often say, "I know in whom I have believed." Surely this destroys the very power of the text. Paul did not claim that he knew who it was in whom he believed. Any one could say this. The power of the gospel is that we know whom we have believed. It is our personal knowledge of Christ that gives us our confidence in Him.

Sunday, November 19th

2 Timothy 2:1-13

"If we suffer, we shall also reign" (v.12).

OUR suffering is but the apprenticeship of the saint. Here we go through the school of testing, assured at the end of our course that we shall reign. Graduation day may seem a long way off in the midst of our trials, but our mastery of the subject brings it progressively nearer. Towards the end of any course the student begins to anticipate what he will feel like on its completion. The Christian should begin to live for God royally here on earth before men. Then the crowning day will not arrive before he has learned some princely graces.

CHRISTMAS APPEAL FOR MISSIONARIES

They were so grateful for the Christmas extra last year and the link with home is strengthened as they see that they are being remembered.

The children who are so far away from families and relations can have an added thrill because of our gifts.

News from Northern Transvaal from George and Betty Gemmell

THE drawings for the complex of nine buildings for the Northern Transvaal Bible College at Lenyeenye have been approved by the government department without any alterations. After the drawings had been submitted we were informed that a new site had been granted. This is the best site in the township and surrounds the new church on two sides. Isn't God wonderful? We intend to use the church as the college chapel anyway. I will have to draw a new site plan, but I don't need to resubmit this for approval so there will be no delay. All plans here must now be submitted in metric sizes. One has to think twice on every size. I suppose that you will also be paying the price of progress soon! I am glad to say that work has recommenced on Lenyeenye church, so I will be able to visit both projects together. This building has taken much longer than I anticipated and it has meant a return journey of 160 miles on every visit.

My last report told of God's blessings and souls saved here at the teachers training college. Doubts are often voiced as to whether decisions among Africans stand. I praise God that here they are not standing, but growing. Including the few who belonged to the Lord previously, there are now forty active Christians in the college. We believe that the growth will continue.

The first African ministers' fellowship was held at Seshego, Pietersburg. Previously they had met for district councils in business sessions. For four years we have prayed that they might instead meet for ministry. I was invited to be their speaker. I felt the responsibility tremendously and sought the Lord mightily for the right messages. Right from the beginning the Lord's presence was felt in a real way and the spirit of unity was evident. In the closing moments of the last session on the Sunday, the Lord broke through. The message had been on "Blood-stained Hands". During the appeal for rededication almost the entire congregation were on their knees seeking God in a new way. A pastor from Louis Trichardt came to the front and testified that a short time ago he was given opportunity to witness to a commissioner of Bantu affairs. He failed to witness and the commissioner was killed in a car accident a little later. The pastor was so broken that he finished his story only with difficulty. As the pastors said their farewells to go back to their flocks, one felt that the move is on in Northern Transvaal.

The Transvaal youth convention was held in the North for the first time. Thousands of mostly young people from all over the Transvaal made their way to Phalaborwa. The singing was tremendous, especially the youth choir from the various townships in Soweta in Johannesburg. On Sunday morning they sang the Hallelujah Chorus and were asked to repeat it in the afternoon. The guest speaker was Nicholas Bhengu one of the finest preachers South Africa has known and a man who has been used mightily of God especially among his own people. Many decisions were recorded and many Christians were led into a closer walk with God.

As Mrs. Gemmell continues her course in college at Johannesburg she finds many opportunities to testify. The studies are very hard and she would value your prayers. I continue to look after the work and I find a little time to help the European Church in outreach to the lost in Pietersburg.

IT has been called the "season of mists and mellow fruitfulness", but this time of year has brought a new hazard. It is variously called, "motorway madness" being the most polite of the descriptions. The trouble is fog.

If you do much travelling on our motorways at this time of year, you cannot fail to agree that such madness exists. I drove down the M.6 in a thick, freezing fog. I could just catch sight of one cat's eye at a time. The wipers really were doing little more than swish ice about. When I stopped at one of the motorway cafes it was so slippery that I could hardly stand up. I found the parking place only with the greatest difficulty. Yet lorries and coaches had gone past me in the middle lane with such speed that my car swayed in their slipstreams. I could only do 28 m.p.h. and that with the greatest difficulty. Some of the big vehicles must have been doing 50 m.p.h. at least. Granted that higher vehicles provide a better view for their drivers, but such driving was none the less crass, not to say criminal, stupidity. No wonder you read of fifty or more vehicles in these terrible pile-ups.

Psychologists are deeply concerned and have advanced many theories. Some think that speed being a relative thing—we discern acceleration and deceleration rather than actual speed—drivers who have travelled for many miles on motorways are oblivious to the speed they are doing. Others think that drivers are comfortable, warm, relaxed in their upholstered tin boxes, the radio is probably playing, they feel secure, at home, in a cocoon almost, and the possibility of their being involved in an accident does not occur to them.

Don't you think that the car has made us selfish? We have come to depend on it for door-to-door access and we plan our schedules tightly so that we must drive ourselves as well as our cars to keep up. Anything or anyone getting in our way is not only a frustration, it becomes an affront.

Selfishness, unfortunately, is a symptom of our times any way. I agree with what a speaker at our Birmingham nation-wide evangelistic conference said, "'Right' has become 'my rights'".

A businessman once said to me that he would love to be a Christian, but he was in business, and there it was. He would not or could not allow for what God's grace could do even in modern commercial affairs.

Are we honest enough to admit that consecration, concern for others, true Christian grace, are difficult fellow-travellers when we are at the wheel of a car?

Pauline Evangelism

by George Canty

A paper given at the Elim Nationwide Evangelistic Conference

Mark 4: 26-29

UNDER a new law, it is considered safe to open archives of State after thirty years. By the same token I can now speak of my first four churches. To each I went with the clear understanding that I should expect no congregation, or no building, or neither.

I was told to take up (D.V. or not) these glorious opportunities in pioneer evangelism without funds, by a good brother who later told me that his opinion had been that the most ideal place for me was where I could lose nobody, i.e. where there was nobody. When I survived and left churches behind, he admitted that he was mystified at least.

Frankly, Pauline evangelism, or something as potent, was badly needed during those fourteen years, but I hadn't studied it. I felt that I was not equal to it anyway. All I could do was just anything I could. I tried everything and stopped at nothing. The more I study Paul's evangelism, the more I am convinced that this was exactly what he did. His "methods" were not heaven-sent mimeographed schemes, but the natural thought, "that I might by all means save some", with the corollary, "I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me".

From boyhood I've carried the picture of a preacher I heard whose text, "I bear in my body the marks of the Lord Jesus", brought his comment, "I think that Paul's hands were not so soft as mine". At heart I've always been a preacher, but Paul stitched tents, which seems a far cry from the flaming oratory of the mass evangelist, as also was carpentry from the Redeemer's work, but Pauline evangelism is like this. It tackles any problem involved, whatever the scars it leaves behind. Much was humdrum, unglamorous, not a magic formula creating a pressure wave of success on which one could ride comfortably forward, as some visualise revival. It was Paul making the most of his chances and God making the most of what Paul did.

Pauline evangelism takes God's activity for granted. The key to the parable in Mark 4 is the phrase "the earth brings forth fruit of itself" (the Greek is the word for automatically). Paul's sowing was conditioned by the conviction that if the seed was sown the harvest would follow automatically. "Paul planted, Apollos watered, but God gave the increase". We are often anxious to convert people and don't trust God to do the converting. "He shall convict the world", not we. Get the Gospel into a man's head, then tell him to tell others, for "If thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus and believe"; the telling reacts upon ourselves. We work on too slow and too canny a scale. Pauline evangelism means preaching the Gospel to as many as possible in the shortest possible time by any means.

Pauline evangelism was not based on Paul, but on God. I "lived" with Paul, constantly reading what he did. This, they say, is the best way to know a man. It may be true with a saint, but it is often the best way to know the worst of a man, and some bring out the worst in the people with whom they live. I couldn't affect Paul, but others who actually were with him did not seem to appreciate his stature. They didn't know who they had with them. A common sin to this day is to canonise the dead and cane the living. All the great are dead, by certain estimations.

There were those who wanted somebody more exciting than Paul. They "suffered fools gladly" even fools who "spoiled their goods", a situation we are familiar with today among our own hard-won converts. We have those who follow star personalities and think nothing of ordinary Christian pastors and church members. They'll give their goods away for the startling visitor, but see their own church in need.

When Paul went to Jerusalem to tell the immortal story now recorded in Acts, they seemed far more interested in telling Paul about how the Christians in Jerusalem all kept to the Temple (Acts 21:20-24). "Thou seest, brother"; this must have cut him down to size. Ananias had once called him "Brother" in a triumph of grace. Now they called him "brother", but what were they getting at? It is some folks' way of letting a preacher know that they are as good as he. Luke noted it!

Paul let them do it! He was unassertive: "I was among you in fear and trembling". Brashness and cheek were not his qualities. They are not necessary to make an evangelist. Stephen Jeffreys left one campaign out of nervousness when a neighbour complained about his shouting. George Jeffreys hugged his stomach in fear as huge crowds gathered to hear him. Frederick Cloke told me so.

Paul seems to have been like Moses, not a speaker, until the flaming truth lighted him up and loosened his tongue: "in speech contemptible", whereas Apollos is described as "an eloquent man". Truth liberates, however, and in Lystra they thought that Paul's speech was that of a god. Fire in the belly is better than a glib tongue in the head.

Pauline evangelism is linked with deep affection not with affectation. He was a lonely man at heart; he had no wife or family. He developed this affectionate quality after his conversion, saying "the love of God is shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Ghost". Evangelism without this capacity might produce good propaganda, salesmanship, promotion, excessive bonhomie, the evangelical smile, interest in a man as a customer or potential pew-filler, but Paul's once murderous little soul was possessed of a vast compassion. He loved the world like his Lord. If the world didn't love him, it made no difference.

In Philippians 4 he lets it out that everybody except the Philippians had forgotten him in his need. He indicates that he had clung to a lad called Epaphroditus for companionship and to young Timothy. Epaphroditus himself had nearly died with homesickness, so he sent him back, and, because they needed a minister, he also sacrificed Timothy for the Philippians. We have the touching scene of a lonely old man, forgotten, giving up his last comfort for his beloved converts: love indeed!

We like to romanticise about the past great, "Ten cities claimed great Homer dead, Through which the living Homer begged his bread". We build up Paul into a king-like, magnetic personality preaching exalted messages like an angel, a kind of lofty figure by whom common trivialities were unnoticed. Read Romans 15 (or Philemon, or Timothy). In fifteen verses he names twenty-seven otherwise unknown people with affection: "my beloved", my "longed for", he calls them. Every little service he remembers with deep appreciation. He was a man who had time to stand and talk to the nobody without fidgetting to get on.

Evangelism is not Gospel-mongering. It is liking individuals too much to let them perish without Jesus. I recall meeting a friend of Albert Schweitzer. He instantly wanted to do something for me and all he had was a box of matches. So he gave me this. He "was compounded all of love", amusing and yet majestically suggestive of what graciousness and love really are. So was Paul. He melted hearts by a love which astonished the heathen.

Pauline evangelism includes revival. It is an axiom to say that a campaign is one thing and a revival another, that evangelism is human and revival Divine. Certainly evangelism can be as revivalistic as selling furniture. Duncan Campbell describes revival as "God laying hold of a community". Well, that is revival.

The nearest word to revival in the New Testament means only one thing — the quickening of one sinner into life, and this is produced by the power of the Spirit. Is there anything else greater than this super-action, this special effort of God? I don't believe that God makes special efforts, however. We do. He's always at the zenith of effort. Whatever your own special theory about what a revival is — and everybody has a different idea — evangelism is the instituted method of Christ for saving this world in the power of the Spirit.

God won't save the world by everybody sitting at home praying, nor should we credit any revival to such as have done only this. It is for men to pray and labour. The Authorised Version translates several Hebrew and Greek words relating to the spread of the Gospel with the word "publish". Mark 13:10 translates kerusso this way, and the kerygma is a published word.

Paul was a revivalist all right, but, running swiftly through the Acts, one finds that many of his efforts were without sensational results, the majority in fact. He plodded on: eighteen months in Corinth, two years in Rome, three years in Ephesus, weeping, working, visiting, praying, and after it all the congregations created were contained in one upper room in Troas (Acts 20). There is simply nothing that corresponds to the ministry of Finney, Evan Roberts or Duncan Campbell in the sense of mass conviction and agonies of repentance. Indeed we read that they "received the word with joy", rather than screams of conviction and fear of hell. Clearly God works differently in different times and different areas.

Pauline evangelism preached the whole counsel of God. He made it plain that there was no other Gospel, but he preached across the whole spectrum of light, using the entire Bible. We know that there is an essential minimum which can be called the Gospel, but he did not limit himself to that minimum, nor use every Scripture merely to prove the three basic concepts of sinnership, atonement and faith. He didn't make the Bible exactly the same thing all the time. He let the Word say what it did say and did not interpret it to reiterate only the Gospel formula endlessly.

Whatever nineteenth century men did in perfecting the sermon, it is time for a pulpit revolution towards expository preaching. God knows how to argue men into salvation and His argument is His word. "Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word of God". The Gospel is boule (Ephesians 1:11; Acts 20:27), the whole thought of God revealed in His Word. Paul, like Finney, Luther and Wesley, was a theologian as well as a Gospel preacher. He was an evangelist because he was full of the knowledge of God. The Bible fed the flames of his passion.

Pauline evangelism was guided but enterprising. Paul's reliance upon God's guidance was implicit. He never looked back to see if he had been in the will of God. He often went out somewhere without any definite leading of the Spirit. This is obvious, because more than once the Spirit stopped him en route. To some of the hyper-spiritual, knowing the will of God is a major occupation and a specialised part of their spiritual sophistication. It becomes a nagging anxiety with others, but Paul was almost blithely free of such distracting uncertainties. God, perhaps three or four times, gave clear guidance, but when God didn't, Paul didn't worry. He didn't hammer every hour at God's office door demanding to see His blue-prints, but expected that God would set him right if he put a foot wrong.

Today's anxious drivers along God's road are as tense as yokels at Hyde Park corner. Paul simply followed the plainly written sign-post of the Word of God, "Go ye into all the world" and did his common duty. God respected Paul's own desires, honoured his enterprise as a free personality and directed him as little as necessary.

Studious calculations and speculations about what God might be planning to do with us, based on fleeces, evidences, clues, messages in tongues and chance readings of texts, were not Paul's evangelism. A little more examining of heart-motivations would be better. Frankly, God doesn't normally care whether we are in London or Lilliput if we are there with the right attitude of soul. Any special schemes that God may have He will make known. He can hardly expect us to do what He wants if He doesn't tell us. That is His business; ours is to be willing when He calls.

Pauline evangelism was doing his humble duty. He was a debtor to Jews and to Greeks. He knew no call to one place or to one type. He was called to everywhere, all the world. Whatever his hand found to do he did it. He didn't always wait for a Macedonian call. Some regard every call as Macedonian and neglect their humble duty. One man told me that if he was invited to sing somewhere, that was God's call. This disrupted my own Sunday evening programmes. So I invited him to book up at his own church for the next fifty-two Sundays. Somehow he did not regard my invitation to sing at his own church as the same Divine call as going to half a dozen torpid denominational members twenty miles away.

Jesus said, "Go ye into all the world . . . and lo I am with you . . . even unto the end of the world". Note that He said, "I am with you". Allowing for His everlasting initiative, it is true here that WE lead and He follows — He goes where we go. This seems to me to be the faith of Paul, that, if he went out, anywhere, God would bless Him — and God did.

The Letter to the Romans

Romans 7:7-24

by J. Alexander Wright

VERSES 15–20 reveal a conflict between the two “I’s” which men recognise as being present in themselves, the higher or better self which approves the right, though it does not always perform it, and the lower self, which, against conscience, often gives way to the wrong. That same “I” which delights in the law of God also obeys the law of sin and death (vv. 22–23). Many are perplexed by the “woulds” and “will” of these verses. If one has a free will at all and is not a mere automaton, can one really do the thing that one does not will to do? Is it not a manifest absurdity to will to do something that you did not will to do? C.G. Finney, with his incisive lawyer-mind, points this out in his Systematic Theology. In several versions of the New Testament including Bagster’s Greek-English literal translation by Dr. A. Marshall, these words are rendered “want”, “wish”, or “desire”. This certainly answers the perplexity. Whatever Paul means to say in v.17 (“Now then it is no more I that do it”), he does not, here or anywhere else, mean to deny or to disavow his personal guilt or responsibility, saying, as worldlings sometimes do, by way of excusing themselves, “That wasn’t me”. All sin is inexcusable (2:1). Accounting for his godly life and actions, Paul said, “Not I, but Christ [who] liveth in me” (Galatians 2:28). Is not Romans 7:17 the exact contrast? “No more I, but sin [personified] that dwelleth in me” accounts for his ungodly life and actions. It is 6:16 again; which is to be sovereign master of the life, Christ or sin? “I delight in the law of God” (v.22), but can an unregenerate man say this? Indeed! This was the very sin of Israel and is common to all who are merely “religious”. “They take delight in approaching Me” (Isaiah 58:2, Romans 2:18, 10:2). How many unsaved people love to go to church! The inward man of this verse is not necessarily the new man, but the mind (nous), the intelligence. Such a man, Saul, the Jewish rabbi, was zealous for God. “I see another law” (v.23), another rule or principle, hostile to his better self, the law of sin and death (8:2) which powerfully holds him captive. This is the bondage of sin. Of all the forms of capital punishment that men and nations have devised, one of the most fiendish, worse than burning or butchery, was practised by the Romans. The guilty murderer was lashed face to face to the body of his victim until the contagion of corruption overcame him and he died. Sometimes he found relief in insanity. The Roman poet Virgil wrote of this,

*The living and the dead at his command,
Were coupled face to face and hand to hand,
Till, choked with stench, in loathed embraces tied,
The lingering wretches pined away and died.*

Was Paul thinking of this when he wrote, “O wretched man, who on earth can set me free from the clutches of my own sinful nature?” (v.24, Phillips)? He did not seek freedom from his physical body. Some of the medievallists misunderstood this, as though there was something intrinsically evil in the temple of clay. As Paul wrote, that physical body of his was all on the altar for God, a living sacrifice (12:1). He writes, not as a “wretched man”, but as the “blessed man” of 4:6. Though the cry is couched in the present tense, it is but an echo from the past, from one for whom that struggle had long ceased and who had found the way of victory and peace (v.25).

The chapter has a strange conclusion: “So then with the mind I myself serve the law of God; but with the flesh the law of sin” (v.25). So Jesus Christ the Lord did not deliver him after all? Was it but a pipe-dream? It is inconceivable that, after giving God thanks for deliverance, he should describe himself as being exactly where he was before. It would be impossible for the two states to co-exist. “No man can serve two masters”.

Without actual textual authority, Dr. James Moffatt, Canon J.B. Phillips, and the Jewish translator, Dr. H. Sconfield, all transpose the last sentence of v.25. Phillips puts it after v.23 as belonging there and the others make it the first sentence of v.25, joining the sentence beginning “I thank God” to 8:1. We will have another instance of transposition, upon which all Bible translators are agreed, when we come to 8:1.

Taking the text where it stands, however, the Jerusalem Bible renders it as a brief summary or conclusion to the whole chapter: “In short, it is I, who, with my reason, serve the law of God, and no less I who serve, in my unspiritual self, the law of sin”, and here is “The Preventative of Holiness”.

Addition and Multiplication

by Ian MacInnes

Elim Missionary, Guyana

PENTECOST had come and 120 had been filled with the Holy Spirit out of nearly 500 who had seen and heard Christ after He had risen from the dead. Many of this larger group knew that He desired that they should tarry in Jerusalem for the Holy Spirit. Some of those in the Upper Room might have been dejected at the few who tarried, but the Lord had greater plans.

The Lord blessed that group in ways far above their expectation. They had a new experience with God and of God, for they were supernaturally empowered by Him to carry the Gospel message throughout the world. Peter, who earlier was so unreliable, became their spokesman. His apology that day before the Jews at the festival resulted in 3,000 being saved and it is said that the Lord ADDED this number to the church.

The 3,000 showed by changed lives that they were saved. They now had a purpose in life. They yearned to know more of the Word of God. They found joy in being with people of like mind. Prayer became a way of life. Such characteristics are always seen when the Lord adds.

No society can be the same when there is regular and faithful attendance at God's house. At Pentecost "fear came upon every soul". The apostles did not need to worry about petty problems, as are often seen in new converts. They were able to go about their other duties and "many wonders and signs were done by the apostles".

The converts progressed in their new-found faith, the apostles did the work which God had called them to do and this resulted in the populace having a fear of God. Again we see that "the Lord ADDED to the church daily such as should be saved." This Divine addition can always be seen when the people in the pew and the pastor in the pulpit are doing what God would have them to do.

Following this addition some in the Church felt that particular widows were not receiving from the apostles the attention which was their right. The apostles themselves felt that it was their duty to persevere in prayer and to minister the Word and so it was agreed that seven men of the Church of the highest spiritual calibre should be chosen to attend to the needs of these widows. These brethren worked with the apostles to increase the strength of the Church. One was not working against the other, but both were working together for the glory of God. The result was that "the word of God increased; and the number of the disciples MULTIPLIED greatly". Even bigoted priests came to know the Lord.

Christ always spoke the truth, for He is the Truth. He left us an example that we should follow in His steps. The devil abode not in the truth, for he is a liar and the father of lies.

Let us never seek to increase the Kingdom of God by exaggeration. This draws people to ourselves. Let us humbly pray that God will continue to add to and to multiply those who are delivered from sin and Satan.

COVENTRY

Pastor: J.W. Newman

PASTOR John William (Jack) Newman recently completed forty years in the Elim ministry and a weekend of special services was held to celebrate this occasion.

Pastor David E. Dean was booked as the speaker for the weekend, but there were many surprises. At the moment when Pastor Dean was to speak on the Saturday evening, he turned to Pastor Newman and presented him with "This is Your Life". Friends and relatives had secretly gathered in the side room. They included Pastor W. Evans from Porth, Pastor John Fry from Huddersfield (who was converted under Pastor Newman's ministry), Pastor Newman's daughter Joy and family from Wimborne, and friends who had travelled from as far as Looe in Cornwall. Greetings came on tape from Southampton, from the Pastor's brother, Pastor A.H.C. Newman, and from his parents, who, because of their age, were unable to travel from Dorset. At the end of the meeting Pastor Newman was presented with a cheque as a token of gratitude for his work and ministry in Coventry over the years.

Our soloist was Jim Roberson from Leeds. The preacher on the Sunday was Pastor J.C. Smyth, whose ministry brought great blessing. Pastor Evans was the speaker on Monday and his message in word and song will long be remembered.

We thank God for His many blessings and pray that He will continue to bless Pastor and Mrs. Newman in their future ministry.

ANDREA WILLIAMS

STOCKPORT

Pastor: E. Snelling

IT was a wonderful weekend when we held our first anniversary services in the new church building. New members who had come into our fellowship over the past year joined with others to fill the church to its capacity. Some even had to sit on the floor. We gave God the glory for the great things He had done.

The Tamworth choir thrilled our hearts as they sang four pieces and finalised with the soulstirring "Hallelujah Chorus". Mrs. Pat Frost sang so beautifully, accompanied by guitar, "The crown of thorns", which fitted the theme of the service. We were blessed by the ministry of God's Word by Pastors S. Beresford and F.J. Slemming. Having received such blessing, how else could we close such a weekend except by singing that great anthem, "How great Thou art"?

FOR our harvest thanksgiving services the church was tastefully decorated with greenery, fruit and flowers. Considerable hard work and ingenuity went into the preparation and display. The centre piece was a cascading waterfall effect.

Mr. Clive Bowring of Caerphilly spoke on the theme of answered prayer and thankfulness. One of the young folk from Caerphilly recited. Members of the Sunday school staff and scholars took part in singing items and Mrs. K. Hammon, who has recently moved from Yorkshire to Barry, gave her testimony.

It was encouraging to see a number of parents and visitors present. The services were convened throughout by our Pastor.

WE have a Youth for Christ meeting on Tuesday and Wednesday nights. The Lord is working wonderfully. We get an average of forty young people every week. We have lively choruses and sometimes gospel groups sing for us. We encourage other churches to send groups of teenagers to sing, talk and give testimonies. Mr. Robinson, our youth leader, preaches the Word of the Lord at these meetings.

We are arranging a big Youth for Christ campaign. It is wonderful to see how the Lord is working.

ILKESTON

PASTOR Waite's farewell service was attended by over 100 people, including members of the local presbytery churches, the Church of Nazarene and the Assemblies of God. Tributes were paid to Pastor and Mrs. Waite for their eleven years faithful ministry and presentations were made on behalf of the church and its Sunday schools. The pulpit was decorated by a large, beautiful bouquet which was presented to Pastor and Mrs. Waite by the local florist on South Street. The Church of Nazarene presented a book of Scripture readings. The meeting was convened by Pastor J. H. Hunt and a moving message on God's call to service was preached by Pastor B.G. Edwards, the District Superintendent.

The Sunday gospel service marked the church's eleventh anniversary. Pastor Waite dedicated two infants to the Lord. Their parents were recent converts under his ministry. After the anointed preaching of the Word, a visitor made his decision for Christ, a wonderful send-off for our beloved Pastor. As he takes up his full-time service in Wimbledon we wish him God-speed and join with him in giving God all the glory for his ministry at Ilkeston.

The 1972 Ordination Service

Report by James F. Hardman

THE Clapham Elim Pentecostal Church, which during the last month has been celebrating its Golden Jubilee, swung wide its doors to admit a large crowd of members and friends of the Elim family on Saturday, October 28th, for the annual ordination service. There is no doubt that the ordination of men to the Christian ministry is one of the most impressive of services and this year's was certainly no exception. What a great joy to see the Church — newly and tastefully decorated — full to capacity.

The President, T.W. Walker, proved to be an excellent chairman and, as we joined in the opening hymn: "Burn, fire of God! my ransomed soul possessing", we immediately felt the presence of the living Christ in our midst. "This is an important night in the lives of a number of young men", said the President, "and we extend a special welcome to them, to their relatives and members of their congregations, who have travelled long distances to witness their ordination."

It was most fitting that the Students of the Elim Bible College were in the service and their singing brought much blessing. It was stated that the Principal of the College, G. Wesley Gilpin, was in Northern Ireland taking part in special gatherings of the Irish Churches and I am sure that many silent prayers were offered that God would bless, preserve and strengthen our beloved Elim friends in that needy, troubled area.

Pastor Joseph Smith, our youthful veteran preacher, led us in prayer. How passionately and fervently he prayed that God would send forth more labourers into the great harvest field. After the hymn, "Lord, speak to me, that I may speak" (Tune: Maryton), our esteemed brother, Pastor C.J.E. Kingston read the Scripture, 1 Timothy 6:1-12.

One of our senior Ministers, Pastor G.L.W. Ladlow, of Salisbury, was the preacher for this important occasion, his subject being, "The Man of God" (1 Timothy 6:11). Obviously preaching with God's anointing upon him, he reminded the ordinands and every other person in the service, of the Scriptural teaching concerning the Minister's calling, responsibilities, dangers and privileges. Quoting Thomas Goodwin, the eminent theologian of an earlier age, Mr. Ladlow said: "God had only one Son and He made Him a preacher". The sermon was indeed a Bible-based message and found a response in the hearts of all.

After a brief prayer by the President, a holy, healthy hush settled upon the meeting. Eight ordinands stood before us: M.J. Baker (Hadley), D. Beresford (Macclesfield), E.T. Carter (Grimsby), A.L. Hawkes (Grange-town), M. Jones (Eastleigh), R.T. McDonald (Gosport), M.E. Sherwood (Sowerby Bridge) and B.H. Tween (Finchley). These brethren were introduced by the Field Superintendent, Pastor R.B. Chapman, and, after testifying to a personal salvation, each pledged his loyalty to the Lord Jesus, the Head of the Church, to His holy Word, and then to the Elim Constitution, in response to questions asked by the President. Their call by the Lord to the ministry had been fully recognised by their fellow-ministers at the General Conference at Blackpool last May and now, in solemn, yet joyful moments, they were ordained by the laying on of hands by members of the Executive Council. The congregation bowed in God's presence, offered silent, fervent prayer that these young men might know the ordination and the anointing of the mighty Lord, as they continue to labour in God's harvest field.

The final hymn was surely appropriate: "Send the gospel of salvation to a world of dying men", and then Pastor J. Lancaster (President Elect) committed us all to the love and care of the Lord.

"Take Heed"

1 Timothy 4:6

by
Warwick Shenton

Warwick Shenton, pastor of Prestatyn Assembly of God Church, was born in 1943, the son of a Staffordshire miner. Converted at the age of eleven through the ministry of Finkhull Assembly of God Church, baptised in the Spirit at the age of fourteen and called to the ministry in the same year, after a period at college and as a ceramic technician in industry, he entered the ministry as assistant pastor at Ball Green, Stoke-on-Trent, moving five years later to his present pastorate. Secretary of the National Youth Council for the past three years, he has also served as District Council secretary to the North West Midlands District of Assemblies of God.

WE need men of God to love and serve amid a lost generation! Our need is not for men of talent, or oratory, of great potential, of singing ability or of preaching talent, but for men of God.

Paul, the old campaigner, the old man of God, is sending a letter of useful advice to Timothy, the younger, aspiring man of God. Encased within its text is this gem of Godly counsel: "Take heed to thyself, and unto the doctrine". In the light of the near return of our Saviour and the challenge of Scripture, "What manner of persons ought ye to be." It seems like a reiteration of heaven's call for personal and doctrinal purity. If we are to be more than ordinary Christians, if we are to affect our generation for the Lord, if we are to make an impact on the godless, seething masses of humanity, let us "take heed" to ourselves and "to the doctrine".

"Take heed to thyself"

How relevant is the call for personal purity in a day when the battalions of hell are loosed in the world to attack individual uprightness and social morality. Sensationalism and a preoccupation with sex and violence, aided and abetted by the high pressure news media, seem to be the curse of our society. We must keep ourselves unspotted and unspoiled amid all this moral decay.

Purity of self involves both negative and positive aspects: a flight from sin and a following after righteousness. In this same Letter, Paul advises Timothy to flee from conceit (6:4), a corrupt mind (6:5), a discontented spirit (6:6), foolish and hurtful lusts (6:9), and the love of money (6:10). Meditation reveals this to be a comprehensive list indeed: conceit, the cause of envy, strife, railings, evil surmising; a corrupt mind, that which always proceeds outward falls, a discontented spirit, the cause of unrest in our soul, division in the church and dishonour to the Lord; foolish and hurtful lusts, which if unleashed can, in a moment of time, ruin a life and drown a man in destruction and perdition; the love of money, which is the root of all evil. Personal purity, if it is anything, is a fleeing away from these things.

If it ended here, however, what a drab, empty, colourless life it would produce. There is a great need for a positive following after "righteousness, godliness, faith, love, patience, meekness" (6:11). To seek after righteousness is to seek a right relationship with God and with men. It involves being just and right. It includes integrity and openness, always being what we appear to be. We must pursue godliness or Christ-likeness. Our lives should be liberally laced with dependability (faith or faithfulness). We should be motivated by love, loving, according to John 13:34,35, as Jesus loved, possessed by patience and characterised by meekness. Self-purity therefore involves a continual flight and an intense and perpetual pursuit.

*Oh for a heart to praise my God,
A heart from sin set free,
A heart that always feels the blood,
So freely shed for me.*

*A heart resigned, submissive, meek,
My great Redeemer's throne,
Where only Christ is heard to speak,
Where Jesus reigns alone.*

*A humble, holy contrite heart,
Believing, true and clean,
Which neither life nor death can part
From Him that dwells within.*

*A heart in every thought renewed
And full of love divine,
Perfect, and right, and pure and good,
A copy, Lord of Thine!*

"Take heed unto the doctrine"

We are surrounded by a trend to liberalism. There is a drift towards doing and thinking "our own thing". The Word of God will allow none of this in respect of doctrine. Most doctrine is absolutely vital and men of God are called upon to be pure in belief and the proclamation of it.

Our purity in doctrine is under attack in these ecumenical days. There are those who would erode the doctrine of the Inspiration of the Word. Modernists and the purveyors of tradition are in the forefront of those who cut the Bible to suit their creed. We must cut our creed to suit the Bible, for the Scripture is our text book and constitution. The Trinity is challenged by unitarians of many shades, from "Jesus only" to all the cults. We may not understand Three who are One and yet are Three, but it is scriptural and vital to our faith and for our salvation. The doctrine of God must be pursued and studied with all diligence if our reverence and love for Him are not to be shifting, transient, affected by circumstances. We must build our affection and allegiance upon a clear understanding of the great doctrines surrounding His Person, His Power, His Providence. The doctrines of Christ and His substitutionary death are attacked more than most by those who seek to appease the masses and please everyone but ruin by the fall, redemption by the blood, and regeneration by the Holy Spirit are still paramount to the conversion of the lost. Jesus Christ is the Son of God and the Son of Man. He is Divine and human, eternal and incarnate, glorious, mysterious, beyond human understanding and yet clearly unmistakably, revealed in Scripture. The call is for purity in our doctrine, in its understanding, believing, and its preaching.

*Oh, wonderful, wonderful Word of the Lord,
The hope of our friends in the past;
Its truth where so firmly they anchored their trust,
Through ages eternal shall last,
Oh wonderful, wonderful Word of the Lord!
Unchanging, abiding and sure;
For we know that when time and the world pass
God's Word shall for ever endure.* away,

"Take heed to thyself and unto the doctrine"

People are quick to detect personal decadence and loss of spiritual power. Paul links personal and doctrinal purity, because the one (personal) directly affects the power of the other (declaration of doctrinal truth). Our doctrinal purity may be of a supreme standard but without personal purity we shall be powerless and ineffective in our task to win the lost. On the other hand our personal purity may be exemplary, but, without doctrinal purity, our ministries will never be successful in Divine terms. We must take heed to ourselves and to the doctrine.

EVERY day, except Sunday, Stephen left his home and hurried to the station to meet the five o'clock train. When the train pulled in, the guard tossed a large bundle of newspapers on to the platform, and Stephen counted the number of newspapers he required for his paper-round, popped them into his bag, and made his way through the streets, folding each newspaper neatly as he went.

Several of his customers waited eagerly on their doorsteps for their copies, but most of the time Stephen pushed the newspapers through the letterboxes and gave a little knock on the doors to let his customers know that their evening paper had arrived.

Stephen loved to do his paper-round and he knew that his customers relied on him to bring them the latest news, whatever the weather.

One day, when Stephen had finished his round, he saw that he had one newspaper left. "That's odd," he thought, "I haven't missed anyone. I must have counted wrongly at the station."

Points for Preachers

An Outline

Full Provision for all Time

"The Lord is my Shepherd, therefore can I lack nothing" (Psalm 23:1, P.V.B.).

I shall not lack rest, for He makes me to lie down in green pastures, refreshment, for He leads me beside still waters, forgiveness, for He restores my soul, guidance, for He leads me, courage, for He is with me, protection, for His rod and staff comfort me, healing, for He anoints my head with oil, fulness of blessing, for my cup runs over, care, for goodness and mercy follow me all the days of my life, and an eternal home, for I shall dwell in the House of the Lord for ever.

All the money in the world could never buy these ten boundless blessings.

Gold for Iron

EARLY in the nineteenth century, Frederick William III, king of Prussia, needed money for the defence of his country. So serious was the situation, that he asked all the women who were willing to help the country, to bring their jewellery of gold and silver to be melted and made into money. In exchange for their precious ornaments, they received a bronze or iron casting which bore this inscription: "I gave gold for iron, 1813". So the Order of the Iron Cross was born, symbolizing that the luxury of gold and silver was exchanged for the iron of service and sacrifice. Frances Ridley Havergal referred to this when she wrote the great line of her famous hymn, "Take my silver and my gold, not a mite would I withhold".

"Men and women alike came and freely brought clasps, earrings, finger rings, and pendants, gold ornaments of every kind, every one of them presenting a special gift of gold to the Lord." (Exodus 35:22).

A Poem

Pray about it

MANY times I hear a saint, when to him I make complaint,

Say, "You need not fear or faint, pray about it."

And that counsel, that refrain, ever rings in heart and brain.

Now I, rather than complain, — pray about it!

Nothing is too small to bring to our blessed Lord and King,

We may tell Him everything — pray about it!

So I pass this word to you; if you listen and are true,
He will show you what to do — pray about it!

Are you alone and need a friend? God can just the right one send,

One on whom you can depend — pray about it!

Is the testing time severe? Are you full of doubt and fear?

Faint not, trust Him now and here — pray about it!

Supplicate at His behest; with thanksgiving make request,

He will give to you the best—pray about it!

Prayer and Praise

by F. H. Coleman

PENTECOSTAL people are always praising the Lord and they have good reason to praise Him, for He is indeed wonderful.

Some weeks ago a woman told me of her great financial need. Quite unexpectedly she needed a fairly large sum of money by a certain date. She gathered as much cash as she could, but it was three pounds short of the total required. Taking her Bible, she read one of the Psalms and had a time of prayer. She had barely finished praying when there was a knock on her flat door. There stood the gas man to collect the money in her meter. On leaving, he handed her almost five pounds. Her heart rejoiced.

In the little things that God does for us, we feel humbled before Him. That the God who put the stars in space and made the sun to shine by day and the moon by night should condescend to do for us the little things we ask of Him makes us love Him and adore Him.

A great king, who ruled over a mighty empire, received his subjects and listened to their requests. One of his subjects was in great need of money and astonished the people of the king's court by asking the king to grant him his request. The king smiled and ordered the money to be given to him. Turning to his courtiers he told them that most of his subjects did not do him honour by asking for small things, but this man honoured him by believing in his generosity.

A multi-millionaire who was approached by a business man for the loan of a few thousand pounds was furious. Who did this man think he was who asked for so paltry a sum? He felt dishonoured.

The One who loves us will give us what we need if we ask Him and give if it be little or much.

Ten or Eleven?

by William Dunn

second year student, Elim Bible College

HOW many commandments are there?

You would probably answer, "There are ten, the ten Commandments which Moses received from the Lord on Mount Sinai."

In answering ten, however, you would fall short.

In accepting the Bible as our guide we believe both the Old and the New Testaments, the Law of Moses and the teaching of Jesus Christ. Many of us know the ten Commandments given in the Law of Moses, but we seem to have forgotten the eleventh Commandment given by Jesus Christ. Jesus said, "A new commandment I give unto you, That ye love one another... By this shall all men know that ye are My disciples, if ye have love one to another." (John 13:34,35).

Here is one of the secrets of reaching the ungodly for the Saviour. It is good to put on special series of meetings, to have coffee bars and youth efforts in the hope of winning the lost to Christ, but if we do not have love one for another, the ungodly will see through our activities, and become indifferent or hardened to the gospel. The world is seeking for genuine love, that is not in word only, but that is lived out before others. Non-Christians sometimes say, "If that is Christianity, you can keep it!" Bitterness has been engendered by religious controversy. Churches have been split. Young and older believers have been set back in the faith. While this goes on, the world becomes more indifferent towards what it sees in the Church.

Samuel Rutherford, whose last words are embodied in that beautiful hymn, "Immanuel's Land", the author of a volume of heavenly letters that bear the celestial aroma, was a Church of Scotland minister. His place of ministry was in the little Scottish town of Anstruther where he laboured among a happy group of earnest believers.

The British Government, however, declared that the Scottish Church must no longer follow the Presbyterian order, which Rutherford used, and sought to impose an altogether different and, as the Scots thought, a foreign order of things upon them. Rutherford was one of the devoted ministers who, for conscience sake, refused to admit or acknowledge the authority of the king's bishops. Because he refused to conform, Rutherford was banished to Aberdeen and put in prison there. He always said he would not permit a bishop of any kind to stand in his pulpit.

Before he left and while he was still Pastor of the Church, one night there came to the manse a stranger. Rutherford himself welcomed him. The stranger did not give his name, but said that he was on a journey and would be glad of accommodation for the night. They ate together. Afterwards, Rutherford took up the Word of God. He said, "Now we have the Catholicism, the reading of the Scriptures and prayer. We expect everyone, even visitors, to participate." The servants were called in and Rutherford read the Scriptures. Then he began to catechise the whole house and turned eventually to the stranger. He said, "How many commandments are there?" The stranger looked up and answered, "Eleven!" Rutherford looked abashed. "I asked, 'How many commandments are there?'" he repeated.

"Yes, I understand. Eleven!" came the reply.

"I am surprised that in all the Scottish realm there should be found a man so ignorant that he does not know that there are only ten Commandments," Rutherford rejoined.

The stranger looked up and said, "A new commandment I give unto you, That ye love one another."

"Oh," asked Rutherford, "What is your name, stranger?"

He replied, "My name is Ussher. I am Archbishop of Ireland."

An archbishop was in Rutherford's home; the home of the man who had said that he would have no fellowship with anyone who held to another ecclesiastical order than his own! Broken, ashamed of his harshness, Rutherford begged the stranger to lead them in prayer and responded fervently as the Archbishop bore them all up before God.

We need to be reminded of this eleventh Commandment. It is important that we stand for the fundamental truths, but this is not enough. Back of all fundamental truth there is fundamental experience and expression.

"A new commandment give I unto you, That ye love one another."

Thought. Cecil Rhodes, as he lay dying, looked out of the window and sighed: "There's so much to do and little time to do it."

From T. H. Stevenson

STAYING for a few weeks at the home of our daughter and son-in-law in the small Sussex village of Bolney, we enjoyed the fellowship of a few young Christian friends one evening. Two of the visitors were members of the staff of SOON, a truly undenominational missionary fellowship which does not send out missionaries, yet reaches many parts of the world by a wonderfully effective and most economic method of evangelism. Living and working in "Vicotts", a house freely made available by a local Christian gentleman, a staff of six publish a gospel newsheet bi-monthly. It is printed in English and limited to a basic vocabulary of one thousand words. 400,000 copies are sent to "Friends of SOON" scattered throughout Britain. These volunteer despatch units, almost exclusively at their own expense, send them out in units of two copies to the people they have on their postal list. Eight copies can be sent to any address abroad at the reduced rate of 1½p. As English is the world's most universal language, people everywhere eagerly receive the news-sheet even if they are more interested in the language than in the gospel, but each week more than four hundred letters are received at Bolney from enquirers seeking salvation or further information and from the few thousand who have taken up the Bible correspondence studies which cater even for many who do not possess a Bible.

A new point of interest arises here. From areas near Bolney helpers give voluntary service in typing in duplicate the correspondence received, which in turn is sent to many other voluntary workers throughout the country who perform the work of counsellors or deal with the marking of papers received from the students of the correspondence studies.

This ever-expanding work was founded not many years ago by Mr. J. Lewis. He is still actively engaged in it. It is a shining example of quite spectacular results from unspectacular methods. Not the least interesting aspect is the involvement of so many voluntary helpers in doing a work for God and so few full-time workers. While admiring this enterprise for God, it is natural for me to wonder whether here is an inspiration for Elim to explore such lines or other lines of evangelism, whether at home or overseas, demanding more involvement from many members as a first priority even over the need for more ministers or more money.

The HAMMOND ORGAN

- ★ Requires the minimum of maintenance and the tone wheel generator cannot go out of tune.
- ★ Remains unaffected by changes in temperature and humidity.
- ★ Provides extreme variety of tones with the simplest method of selection.
- ★ Has a specification to satisfy the accomplished organist.
- ★ Can be transported for trouble-free use on any location.
- ★ Represents a lifetime investment with a negligible depreciation factor.

The Hammond Organ has found an important place in the Pentecostal church with its unique tonal quality. The very nature of the harmonic tone registration allows the instrument to be played in direct keeping with the service without distracting from it. We are therefore convinced that a Hammond can make an essential contribution which renders it a sound investment in the Lord's work, and to this end Sharon Music welcome your consultation as to the most suitable model for your church.

With experience gained from many church installations throughout the country we feel confident to select an instrument certain to meet your requirements.

Our showroom stock of ORGANS and PIANOS includes the entire range of Hammond Organs, consisting of 18 different models from £265 to £5,500. Special financial arrangements are available to your church and we shall be happy to supply further details relating to any specific model on request.

"The Lord be magnified"

DAVID the psalmist, Mary the mother of our Lord and Paul the Apostle had one thing in common — a desire to magnify the Lord of earth and heaven.

David penned a call to Israel in Psalm 34:3: "O magnify the Lord with me, and let us exalt His name together." In Psalm 69:30 he wrote, "I will praise the name of God with a song, and will magnify Him with thanksgiving."

Mary cried in Luke 1:46,47: "My soul doth magnify the Lord, And my spirit hath rejoiced in God my Saviour."

The Apostle Paul writing to the Philippians told of his determination that "Christ shall be magnified in my body" (Philippians 1:20).

Thus we have a composite picture of the perfection of worship in the life of the Christian, the voice, the soul and the body all blending into a life of continual praise.

To magnify means to increase the apparent size, to extol, to make great or greater. Our aim should ever be to exalt the name of the Lord and emphasise His importance, His magnitude. Our living should show that He is absolutely supreme in our lives.

I remember a comment made by the late William Burton of the C.E.M. when he was staying in our home in Ireland: "When anything is magnified its actual size remains the same, but in the view of the onlooker it becomes larger and more easily discerned and appreciated. We cannot make our God any bigger than He is, but by our praise and by our living witness we can make His greatness to be appreciated by others. Thus we can magnify the Lord."

I have in my hand a pair of beautiful cuff-links which were presented to my husband last July by the members of the Church of Pentecost, Kaneshie Assembly, Accra, the capital city of Ghana, at the conclusion of his week of Bible studies.

They are made of Ghana gold and their design is most unusual and significant. The larger section is a circle enclosing the Adinkra symbol for God, the great Spirit, "Nyame", and the other much smaller part is in the shape of the sword of the Asantehene, the King of the Ashanti, Ghana's greatest chief. The deaconess who made the public presentation explained the spiritual significance of the cuff-links. The symbol "Nyame" alone means "except God" or "God is supreme". She pointed out that the almighty God, maker of heaven and earth, is far greater by comparison than the most important tribal king, though he be considered to be the greatest human personality. Thus this treasured gift is an object lesson. God is magnified and this is surely an indication that our whole being should have the same object in view.

In the book of Job, Elihu, the young man who counselled Job, spoke some wise words which we must heed: "Remember that thou magnify His work which men behold". On two occasions in the Acts of the Apostles we have helpful examples of New Testament believers magnifying God's great works. When Peter preached to the company assembled in the house of Cornelius the Holy Spirit was outpoured and the Gentile seekers after God "spoke with tongues and magnified God". In Acts 19 a rather strange incident occurred concerning some Jewish exorcists whose deception and insincerity were unmasked. This caused the name of Jesus to be magnified and many hesitant believers entirely discarded their pagan practices.

God's will for all Christians is for them to magnify the name of the Lord by word and deed. Remember this at next Sunday morning's worship service and each day of the week when by your words and your actions you must demonstrate and reveal "How great is our God".

Book Reviews

Island Treasure, by Eric Gunn. Published by Victory Press. Price 40p, postage and packing 7p extra.

Island Treasure is a very interesting story of a group of young boys on a camping holiday on an island with hidden treasure. Another treasure is discussed, the gospel, and one of the boys accepts Christ. It would be an advantage to have some of the words explained, either at the end of the book or at the bottom of each page, e.g. "ornithologists", "isthmus", "manoeuvrable". This is a good book for boys who do not know Christ as their Saviour.

G.J. Swaffield

Sea Spray, by A.C. Hayes. Published by Victory Press. Price 40p, postage and packing 7p extra.

Sea Spray is an unusual but well written story. A Christian family seeking refuge for a night were able by their witness and testimony to bring peace and happiness to the chaotic lives and quarrelsome children of a sick man, whose wife was also rather harassed by the situation. The author clearly states the way of salvation and the change that takes place when Jesus takes control of lives seeking to love and serve Him. It is particularly suitable for the age group suggested (girls 9-12) and is recommended for Sunday school prizes.

Lily Twydoll

Stolen Journey, by Dennis Boreham. Published by Victory Press. Price 45p, postage and packing 8p extra. Many and various are the ways by which the Lord draws young people to Himself. Dennis Boreham tells of a boy who runs away from boarding school in an attempt to save his pet dog which has been wrongly accused of biting a little girl. In the course of his adventures he finds himself listening to the story of the Prodigal Son and learns that God cares for runaways. As a result, he comes to accept the Lord Jesus Christ as his Saviour and goes back to school, not without having his new found faith tested on the way. The story will grip the imagination of the average 9-12 year old, especially those who like small dogs.

Roger Lockyer

The Toll-house Treasure, by Dorothy Webb. Published by Victory Press. Price 45p, postage and packing 8p extra.

Dorothy Webb obviously knows just how children think and talk. These children are boisterous and very real; you soon feel part of the family. This is a book full of fun and hidden treasure. The gospel is revealed slowly and clearly among every day activities. Written in a matter of fact style, so suitable for early teenagers, this is a particularly good book for a child who does not know why we need Jesus, or Who He is. The price is not cheap for a children's book without illustrations, but it is a story that would make a child think and that is valuable.

I finished this book wanting to know more about the difference being a Christian would make in Celia's life and more about Jesus, and I think that's good.

I fully recommend it for a birthday or Christmas present.

Diane Mathes

Little Owl series: I like, God loves, God knows, I'm sorry, It's fun, and Please God. Published by Scripture Union. Price 6p each, postage and packing 3p. each extra or 4p for the series.

The Scripture Union is to be congratulated on producing this series. They are designed for young children and put across in a most commendable way the various activities of their lives in relation to God, others and things. In each booklet you have a drawing on one page with a descriptive sentence on the opposite page. The drawings are really good; they are in colour and really do connect well with the thoughts on the facing pages. These booklets are a very welcome help to teachers and parents in applying to young minds such subjects as prayer, God's love, repentance, happiness, creation and God's provision. The language is simple enough for any child to read and, coupled with the drawings, makes the message clear and plain. They are good value at 6p each and I hope that they have a wide circulation.

D.J. Ayling

Monday, November 20th 2 Timothy 2:14-19
"A workman that needeth not to be ashamed" (v.15).

IN his Letters to Timothy Paul has much to say about those who are not founded on Scripture. "Fables", "vain jangling", "profane and vain babblings" are just some of the terms he uses to describe the teaching of those who subverted the Scripture to their own destruction. Against this background we can understand his desire that Timothy should be well grounded. A good workman is willing for inspection from any source. He even takes pleasure in showing his workmanship to others. Our sound knowledge of God's Word can keep us from temptation. Christ was able to say, "The prince of this world cometh, and hath nothing in Me" (John 14:30). We are able to stand against the Accuser only to the degree that we know we are approved unto God.

Tuesday, November 21st 2 Timothy 2:20-26
"Flee also youthful lusts: but follow righteousness" (v.22).

Do not leave a spiritual vacuum in your soul.

It is right that we turn from evil, but we must also turn to the good. It is right to flee from youthful lusts, but, unless we fill that space with something better, we shall leave a vacuum in the soul and tempt other devils worse than the first to enter. Fill the gap with righteousness, faith, charity and peace. "Be not conformed... but be ye transformed" (Romans 12:2).

Wednesday, November 22nd 2 Timothy 3:1-9
"Ever learning, and never able to come to the knowledge of the truth." (v.7).

ONE of the signs of the last days is the constant spirit of enquiry after God, but the total unwillingness to commit oneself to a real experience of Christ. Some who claim to be interested in the gospel remind me of a swimmer trying to come up a pebbly beach. They are always seeking the easiest way and so never take the step. Their minds are sponges that drink in all that they can learn of the gospel, yet they never come to personal faith in Christ. Our prayer for today must be that those to whom we speak shall become not only almost but altogether persuaded in Christ.

Thursday, November 23rd 2 Timothy 3:10-17
"From a child thou hast known the holy scriptures" (v.15).

THESE notes are for the family altar, those precious moments when we gather as a family at some part of the day. The foundation which we lay in the hearts and minds of children in these moments will always remain. We are sowing seed that will flourish in the future. We are letting the Word of God mould lives for future days. How we treat the Book will be impressed on them as well as the truths we teach. The Bible's aim is to bring us from the child of v.15 to "the man of God" of v.17.

Friday, November 24th 2 Timothy 4:1-8
"Be instant in season, out of season" (v.2)

WE cannot always expect that the preached word will fall into the ground and spring up immediately. Some seed we sow is a pledge to our faith in the future. Stored grain waits for sowing, the right balance of moisture, heat and earth to bring it to life. Some of our witnessing appears to be out of season. It was not very well received. We felt foolish in giving it. Only the Lord of the harvest can tell what fruit has grown from out-of-season sowing. I was encouraged by hearing recently of someone who was saved through a word of witness given by me in what I had felt was a very barren service. "God giveth the increase".

Saturday, November 25th 2 Timothy 4:9-22
"I was delivered... and the Lord shall deliver" (vv. 17,18).

PAUL'S first experience of standing trial before Nero had been a test. Forsaken by the Christians for various reasons, in this supreme test of his life he had found that the Lord had stood with him and brought him through. His recent experience made him say that, if God had brought him out of that, then He would yet deliver him and keep him unto His heavenly kingdom. The worst that could happen to him now would only spur him onward towards heaven. The winds of trouble that blew would only fill his sails and carry him forward to heaven's shore. If God has taken the time to deliver us once, then He surely will not fail us now.

Sunday, November 26th James 1:1-8
"God... upbraideth not" (v.5).

OF some people it is very difficult to ask advice, especially after you have ignored it once. You expect them to say, "I told you so", and generally you are not disappointed. It is different with our heavenly Father. Whenever we come to ask wisdom He "upbraideth not". I often rejoice in Isaiah 35:8 that tells of the way of God and adds "Wayfaring men, though fools, shall not err therein." How good God is, even with the weakest of us.

He tempted Jesus

Luke 10:25-37

by Hugh Sawyer

NAMELESS and unhonoured, recorded in Biblical history, his trickery his only claim to all-time publicity, cunning and of ill repute, was a certain lawyer.

Recognising the outstanding ability of Jesus he sought to entrap Him by asking an apparently straightforward question: "Master, what shall I do to inherit eternal life?"

Luke, writing under the inspiration of the Holy Spirit, exposes the trickery of the enquirer by declaring, "And, behold, a certain lawyer stood up, and tempted him". "What shall I do" was the snare. At a cursory glance this question would not appear to be out of place, but fully considered it is entirely so.

This man was not in need of advice, neither was he seeking genuine guidance. He was an astute lawyer with a perfect understanding of the rudiments of the Mosaic Law and all its perplexities. He was fully aware that, according to the Law, no individual action was necessary to receive an inheritance. His legal training assured him that an inheritance was a gift freely bestowed by the grace of one person towards another. He also realised that by labouring to attain an inheritance caused it to cease to be such. It then came under the category of wages for work accomplished.

Well aware of all this, he cunningly sought to trap Jesus with the insidious question, "Master, what shall I do?"

Jesus, always so cool, calm and collected, plumbed the depths of the man's cunning heart, read his innermost thoughts and instantly became aware of the evil intention behind that loaded question. Without hesitation the piercing eyes of Jesus, glowing like living coals of fire, bored deeply into the eyes of the other. With His usual direct manner, He replied, "What is written in the Law? how readest thou?"

Jesus was reminding the man, "You are a lawyer fully aware of the Mosaic Law, an experienced teacher, a leader of the people, yet you have the effrontery to ask Me such a foolish question? 'What shall I do to inherit?' Surely your professional knowledge assured you that one can do nothing to inherit something, that an inheritance is something freely given!"

Many professing Christians follow that legal expert of long ago, not with his cunning, but through misinterpreting the Scriptures. They sincerely desire the inheritance, but, confused by misleading doctrine such as the preaching of salvation by grace plus the doing of good works; they cannot grasp the fact of the meaning of an inheritance and that seeking to do something to attain it constitutes good works.

This is contrary to the teaching of Paul who, writing on the election of grace, states, "If by grace, then it is no more of works: otherwise grace is no more grace. But if it be of works, then is it no more grace: otherwise work is no more work." Simplified, this means: "If you are saved by grace, then salvation does not rest on deeds done, or grace would cease to be grace."

Ignoring the gospel of the finished work of Christ Jesus, erroneous teachers deprive seeking Christians of this blessing by adding to it, such as salvation by grace plus "the law", — good works or church membership.

The only difference between frustrated Christians and that crafty lawyer asking, "What must I do to inherit eternal life?" is that they are expressing a theory which is their belief and not setting a snare.

Paul clarifies the situation by stating, "For by grace are ye saved through faith; and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God: not of works, lest any man should boast." (Ephesians 2 : 8,9).

Good works certainly follow salvation, but they have no part in earning it. Only the shed Blood of Christ upon Calvary's tree can give us salvation and only by the grace of God do we inherit eternal life.

With this wonderful assurance in mind, let us give thanks and press on to victory!

He took the newspaper out of his bag and glanced through its pages. "There's not much in this newspaper," he said to himself. "It is mostly advertisements, and what news there is is of wars, disasters and vandalism."

There is wonderful news in the Word of God. We need to read it for ourselves, because it concerns every one of us. There is sad news in the Bible, too, for we read of the danger and destruction that sin brings to our lives. There is also happy and wonderful news. We read that our sins can be forgiven and that we can have everlasting life.

"I must take this spare paper to the newsagent," said Stephen, "just in case one of the other boys finds that he is a paper short." Off he went, singing to himself,

*We are taught to love the Lord
We are taught to read His Word.*

"DAVID'S psalm of praise" says the title to Psalm 145. For sheer exultation in the being and acts of God it is hard to surpass. "I will extol Thee"; "I will bless Thy name"; "Every day will I bless Thee"; "I will praise Thy name for ever and ever" he carols. "Great is the Lord, and greatly to be praised" he happily proclaims. He is plainly excited, thrilled, uplifted by the majestic greatness of God. "They shall abundantly utter [margin: boil up] the memory of Thy great goodness" claims the psalmist, adding later, "They shall speak of the glory of Thy kingdom, and talk of Thy power".

A recent television documentary on Vietnam included the pathetic, poignant comment of an American G.I., who whined in a stunned voice, "I don't believe in God no longer. Mah buddies died calling for His help and none came. I don't believe no longer." The absolute terror of the whole Indo-Chinese situation and the history of the wars there which have lasted for thirty years or so provide a sombre background accompaniment to this shattered young man's complaint. Human reasoning leads to such disastrous decisions.

*Faith, mighty faith the promise sees
And looks to that alone,
Laughs at impossibilities
And cries, "It shall be done!"*

We Christians need to boast in God more than we do. It was my joy to share worship with our Smethwick Church on a recent Sunday morning. The time of worship was hallowed, choice. Folk lost sight of needs, even perhaps of themselves; God was all and in all. We glorified Him, magnified Him, rejoiced in Him, delighted in Him. Exultation is indeed the word to describe it. We felt better for it. We were better for it.

Such lovely times of fellowship are obvious opportunities for abandonment in the wonder of God. It is different when you are racked with pain, lonely, weak, forlorn, but God is the same. He is worthy to be praised. Let our hallelujahs ring!

"My mouth shall speak the praise of the Lord: and let all flesh bless His holy name for ever and ever." So ends Psalm 145. "Amen!" we respond, "And amen!"

SMETHWICK

Pastor: S.D. Huntly, B.D.

IT is a tremendous thrill to look out on a sea of faces as children listen intently to the Gospel, as any evangelist knows. This thrill was ours during the Good News Crusade conducted by our Pastor assisted by Mr. H. Nicholls.

Despite heavy rain, over 200 children attended on the opening night. Attendances reached a peak of 360 by the end of the first week. During the second week attendances averaged 240 each evening. Over the two-week period nearly 500 different children heard the Good News of Jesus Christ.

Each evening the children were shepherded in by Mr. A. Monk (Sunday school superintendent) and Mr. D. Hodgkins (Crusader leader) assisted by an army of Sunday school teachers and Crusaders. On some nights parents sat throughout the services and enjoyed the singing and the stories.

The immediate effects of the crusade have been that Sunday school attendances have increased and many new families have been contacted. On the first Wednesday following the crusade 108 children attended the newly formed Good News Club.

Each evening during the crusade a number of children sought out the Pastor to ask how to give their hearts to Jesus. We pray that these childhood decisions will bear fruit in the future days.

WATFORD

Pastor: R. Rees

IN 1925, Mr. William Parslay, a young Christian, started meetings in his home in Lowestoft Road, Watford. Some months later, an old hall was rented in a cul-de-sac off St. Alban's Road, known as Penn Road. Thus the Elim Pentecostal Church in Watford was established. The surroundings were not elaborate, but the blessing of God was wonderful. In 1926, for example, Mrs. Mabel Hodson was miraculously healed of tuberculosis and a severe heart disease. She is still an active member of the Church today.

After some years, the members had to vacate these premises. They had to hold their meetings in various halls. The Bible study was held each week in one of the halls of our new Church, which was then a Methodist Church. A building fund was introduced, but no land was available at the time for building. Two years later the local council allocated to the Church a plot of land on the corner of Hillrise Avenue and Douglas Avenue. Building was completed in 1953, when the new Church premises were officially opened. The work continued in this building. Many came to know Jesus Christ as their Saviour, Healer and Baptiser in the Holy Spirit, in this Church.

Over the past eight to ten years it was felt increasingly that larger premises were required to cope with the growing needs of the Church. Many schemes were put forward for extending the existing building and for erecting a minor hall. All these plans have been discarded for various reasons.

Our previous minister, Pastor Brian A. Barnett, and the Deacons began to look elsewhere. They felt that the Lord was directing them towards purchasing the Methodist Church in St. Alban's Road, which was not available at the time.

Pastor Robin Rees, our present minister, continued to pray with the Church and eventually the way opened for us to purchase this very building which is being opened as an Elim Pentecostal Church this weekend. This large, attractive building is a far cry from the rented hall in Penn Road. We thank God for it and for the way in which He has blessed our Church over the years. Our prayer is that this large building will be filled with the blessing of God and men and women, boys and girls will hear the Word of God and find new life in Christ Jesus.

SOUTHEND-ON-SEA

Pastor: A. Nicolson

OVER 700 gathered for a festival of song in the Cliff Town Congregational Church, which was kindly loaned for the occasion. The festival planned as an outreach endeavour, featured the highly regarded London Crusader Choir who were warmly welcomed to Southend by the chairman for the evening, Pastor A. Nicolson.

Under the perceptive leadership of Pastor Douglas B. Gray, the choir presented a purposeful programme of music and song from its extensive repertoire. Also taking part was the Westcliff Male Voice Praise Choir, who, under its conductor, Mr. A.E.B. Gauden, contributed four well-sung items.

It was particularly pleasing to see the conductors of both choirs actively participating after their recent indispositions. Sensitive renderings by the choirs were followed by a concise, challenging message by Pastor D.E. Edmonds of Leigh-on-Sea.

On Sunday, services were well attended when the London Crusader Choir's dedicated singing was again greatly appreciated. We were also privileged to enjoy the ministry of the President, Pastor T.W. Walker, whose stimulating preaching brought much blessing. After the evening service one young man accepted Christ.

We praise God for His goodness and blessing. We are grateful to the London Crusader Choir and to all whose efforts helped to make the weekend of special meetings possible.

ANTICIPATION is often more thrilling than the event, but our ladies' weekend was an exception. On the Sunday evening the service was convened by our Pastor's wife. Items included a recitation by Miss P. Goldingay, a duet by Mrs. M. Goldingay and Mrs. K. Smith, and two choir pieces under Mrs. Goldingay's direction. Our guest speaker, Mrs. L. Cartwright, gave a wonderful message on "Faith in God".

On the Monday evening about eighty attended representing various sisterhoods. A recitation by Miss P. Goldingay, a solo by Mrs. M. Goldingay, a duet by Mrs. M. Goldingay and Mrs. K. Smith, two choir pieces and a song by the girls' guild made up the programme. Mrs. Cartwright gave an outstanding testimony to Christ's saving, keeping and healing power.

On the following Sunday we had our harvest thanksgiving and gift day, which was well attended by members, friends and Sunday school children. The ladies' choir sang and items were rendered by Sunday school children and girls' guild members. Pastor W.J. Patterson provided us with food for thought as he spoke about the produce displayed before us.

KENSINGTON TEMPLE

Pastors: E.R. Corsie
L. Bowring

"A BUILDING set upon a hill" is an apt description of Kensington Temple. It is eight years since the Temple re-opened, providentially, under the hand of God. "Notting Hill!" – what pictures are conjured up by the mention of its name. It is well known, notorious, cosmopolitan, busy, but described as "the loneliest place in London". It is a place of contrasts; residential properties adjoin the area of the bed-sitter, wealth resides next to poverty. In common with other places it has its problems, including drug addiction, vice of every kind and evil cults. It is a mission field on the door step of the home church. The "uttermost parts of the earth" have surely come to us. How has the Church responded to the challenge?

The local Church must be strong, so emphasis is put on prayer, Bible study and fellowship, the essentials for a thriving Church ministry, and to enable the Church to become the spring-board for the outreach activities, so necessary in today's ministry.

There is only one remedy for the needs of the world – preaching, by word and life, the Gospel of salvation through the Lord Jesus Christ. So by all means we seek to win some.

Our outreach includes visits to colleges, hospitals, business houses, late night coffee bars, early evening youth meetings. Witness groups venture forth to other areas, both indoor and in the open-air. Tract distribution and door to door visitations are all part of the activities.

Is the effort worth while? The results are seen in the growth of our congregations, particularly on Sundays. The evening service is very informal yet inspiring, enthusiastic but with due reverence. It is rewarding after all the effort to see men, women, boys girls, all ages, all classes, coming to know the Lord Jesus Christ as personal Saviour.

Changing times give rise to different methods, but we proclaim the same Gospel, for we preach Christ and Him crucified.

Yes, indeed, "a building set on a hill" brings the light of the Gospel to a darkened city.

SCOTTISH YOUTH RALLY

THE Greenock church was the venue for this year's Scottish Presbytery youth rally. It was a delight to see this large building full at both services.

Young people gave testimonies to Christ's power to save and to the blessing that comes through walking in obedience to His Word. Ministry in song came from Joyce Porter of Paisley, Linda Bell and Sybil McKillop of Motherwell, the youth group from Edinburgh, the Greenock Choir, and the Kilsyth Trio. Pastor Derek J. Green in the afternoon challenged the congregation as to how the various aspects of our living stood the test of God's plumbline. In the evening he made it clear that God needed each one of us in these last days. Many young people responded to the call to give themselves afresh to God.

The meetings were convened by Pastor Eric Garner, the recently-elected Scottish Youth Commissioner. He introduced the new Scottish District Superintendent Pastor F.W. Jones and the new Minister of our Carlisle Church, Pastor P. Watson.

The building of our new church is going ahead steadily. The walls and roof are on and work is concentrated on the interior. God has blessed as to finance; half the cost of the building has already come to hand and we are looking to God with confidence for the rest.

The official opening will coincide with the Presbytery rally on December 2nd.

The opening will be by Pastor C.J.E. Kingston at 3 p.m. and a public meeting will follow at which he will be the speaker. The evening service will be at 6.30 when Pastors Kingston and H. Burton Haynes will both minister.

The church will have central heating installed and is wired with amplifiers to the adjoining youth hall in case of an overflow.

We look forward to great times of blessing and outreach in the district.

ANTRIM, N. Ireland

WITH gratitude to God we report the commencement of regular services here following the recent tent crusade conducted by Pastor A.D. Sandford and party, ably supported by Pastor G.Hawes, and brethren on furlough from the Elim Bible College. It was a joy to see the crowd gathering night after night. In this hardened town which the '59 revival of Ireland bypassed, though it started only four miles away, God graciously poured out His blessing in the saving of souls and the healing of bodies. Since the commencement of regular meetings, God has been filling people with the Holy Spirit and good numbers are attending. It is encouraging to see those who are willing to go on with God. Some are shortly to follow the Lord through the waters of baptism.

Thank you, friends of Elim, for your prayer support. Now as the new church becomes established our prayer is that Antrim may flourish by the preaching of the Word and the praising of His name.

S. McBURNEY

SHREWSBURY

Pastor: M.J. Baker

AT a recent harvest and prize-giving day, the first for some time, we enjoyed the blessing of the Lord. The theme was, "This is my Father's World", and, with the display before us, we were left in no doubt of God's goodness.

The Sunday school, which we started in January, took a very active part in both afternoon and evening services. Mr. L. Bradley from Macclesfield was our preacher and he ably presented the Gospel to an encouraging congregation of friends and parents.

The highlight of the day was when our Sunday school superintendent, Mr. J. Bradley, son of the preacher, presented New Testaments to the children for good attendance.

We give thanks to God for all He has done. This is indeed, my Father's world!

The Minister and his Work

by A. S. F. Horne Pastor of Elim Pentecostal Church, Ipswich

WHEN I was the minister of a church in the centre of England a rough man called to see me. Could I help him? "Come in, please, sit down and tell me your trouble," I said — and he did. It went something like this: "You see, sir, my son is in prison in the condemned cell and I wondered if you could help me. We are not church people, but I know now that no one else can help but God."

This young man had thumbed a lift. He shot the driver, dumped his body in a ditch and made off with his car.

I spent hours with the family and I remember the joy that was mine when I led them to Christ.

We tried to save this young man's life but failed.

One day in my life that I shall never forget is the day that this young man of twenty-one was hanged. I can hear even now, after all these years, the ticking of that clock as the minutes passed and the hour of execution approached. No one but God could help this family and He did in a most wonderful way.

How wonderful to know that I had the message. What could the politician or the social worker say to a family at such a time? I turned them to the comfort of God's promises, like "The eternal God is thy refuge, and underneath are the everlasting arms". They found this to be true.

"Cast thy burden upon the Lord, and He shall sustain thee," meaning "hold thee up". When we commit our burden or our lot unto the Lord, He will hold us up. He has promised to uphold those who fall and to raise up all those who are bowed down. He has just the right words to help us. "I will uphold thee with the right hand," He declares.

We are all like children and need someone to hold us by the hand. Let us go forth and tell the people that there is a hand to hold, that there is Someone who cares, God who is ready to pardon, gracious, merciful, slow to anger and of great kindness.

Children's Corner

The Remedy

by Sheila Price

TIMOTHY took his handkerchief from his pocket and blew his nose. "Atishoo! Atishoo!" he sneezed.

"Oh dear," said his mother, "you have a nasty cold!"

"My throat feels quite sore, too, mother."

"Well, sit here by the fire, Timothy, and I'll ask Doctor Brown to call."

Mrs. Jones telephoned the doctor. In a little while he arrived and he soon examined Timothy. "I will write out a prescription for some medicine that will ease your throat, Timothy, and I want you to stay indoors for a few days and keep warm. I will call again tomorrow to see how you are," he said.

"Thank you, Doctor Brown," said Timothy.

Mrs. Jones later returned from the chemist with the medicine. She poured a little into a spoon.

"I do wish I didn't have to take that medicine," said Timothy, pulling a face.

"Oh, it isn't nasty," said his mother. "It tastes just like cherries. You do want to get better, don't you, Timothy?"

"Oh, yes mother," said Timothy.

"Well, you must trust the doctor, dear. He knows what is best for you."

* * * *

Did you know that another name for "doctor" is "physician"? The Bible tells us of Jesus, the great Physician. We sometimes need to call the doctor to tend to the aches, pains and diseases of our bodies. We need to call on Jesus, the great Physician, to tend our sin-sick souls. Sin is a terrible disease. We must call on Jesus without delay and take, in faith, His wonderful salvation, then, like the man in John 5:1-16, we will be able to say, "Jesus has made me whole."

The Epping Crusade

Reported by Charles Johnson

THE prophet saw "a man with a measuring line in his hand" and we are so prone to measure evangelistic campaigns by human understanding.

Many factors of great significance contributed towards this united endeavour, not the least of these being the willingness of the Caerphilly church to release their pastor, John Cooper, and his readiness to accept the challenge. He was joined during the first week by Granville Tyler, a deacon at Caerphilly and a gifted Welsh tenor.

Each church of the East London Presbytery was responsible to support on a certain night. Many travelled long distances quite frequently to give of their untiring efforts which added to the inspiration experienced by those who came to the services. The guest evangelist was Robin Rees, our minister in Watford, and on each occasion he attended his timely exposition of God's Word was powerful and uplifting.

The Public Hall, Epping, centrally situated and tastefully decorated, was well filled when we had a visit from our beloved Ron Jones and a crowd of young people who were staying at a nearby farm. Eleven decisions were registered that night and at an after-meeting one young person was baptised in the Holy Spirit.

Although the London Crusader Choir have very few free Sundays, they reserved one evening to journey to Epping. Their ministry in word and song brought untold blessing. Their much-loved conductor, Douglas B. Gray, reminded us that the Choir was born as a direct result of pioneer campaigns. Their leading soprano, Marie Hamilton, sang night after night as the guest soloist and, after a beautiful rendering of "I walked today where Jesus walked", a lady from the congregation presented Mrs. Hamilton with a bouquet, which was indicative of the appreciation of all who were present.

Everyone was deeply moved when a young man from Caerphilly who is totally blind gave his testimony. He gave thanks that once he was blind spiritually but now he could see. An intense interest and a genuine search for truth was evident among a number of young people with an Exclusive Brethren background.

John Cooper, the evangelist, endeared himself to those who came to hear him. His preaching is characterised by fearlessness, his presentation of Scripture is uncompromising and the clarity of his message is unmistakable. An appeal to Christians when he spoke unforgettably on "The Message of the Cross" resulted in eleven deciding to rededicate their lives to Christ.

Mr. Cooper was moved with compassion when he received news from his assembly that one of his faithful members had been suddenly rushed to hospital. The husband was told that his wife could live for only six to eight weeks. He requested the whole congregation to stand with upraised hands as he led us in prayer. On the last night of the crusade he received word that the sister concerned had been to the hospital that day and had been finally discharged without any trace of the previous illness and with no cause for anxiety. "To God be the Glory, great things He has done."

Please pray for the follow-up meetings being conducted by Pastor L.N. Knipe that an Elim Pentecostal witness may be established in the needy district of Epping.

Thoughts from the Book of Genesis

1 "God said..." (Genesis 1:3)

by F. Lavender

THE words: "God said..." occur ten times in the first chapter of Genesis. What impresses is the authority of God's words, for whatever He declared came to pass as He had planned — light instead of darkness, order in place of chaos and confusion.

This thought of Divine authority is constantly confirmed in experience.

God gave Abraham the promises of a son and of a country. Abraham believed God's word although both promises seemed impossible and at the time appointed God brought His word to pass.

In the book of Kings we read that God rejected the rebellious king Saul and promised the throne of Israel to David the shepherd boy. In spite of many distresses troubles and persecutions, David finally came to the throne as God had declared.

What seemed more impossible than the resurrection of the Lord Jesus? Yet God had spoken the word, so, when Satan and men had done their worst, God gloriously intervened and raised His Son from the dead to be a Prince and a Saviour (Acts 5:31).

The word of man is uncertain, unreliable, untrustworthy; even when he gives a promise in good faith he cannot know what may happen to frustrate his intention. When God speaks, He does so in full knowledge both of all that the future holds and of His power to shape the future. His promise is therefore sure; His Word will certainly be established. God does not change; the Word that He speaks is certain to be accomplished. We can trust Him implicitly even as Abraham did.

In these restless, changing times the Word is the true Rock on which we may stand securely.

The Letter to the Romans

17 The Power of Holiness

by J. Alexander Wright

FOLLOWING the theme of Sanctification, 6:1–8:11, we come to The Power of Holiness (7:25–8:11).

"I thank God through Jesus Christ our Lord" (7:25): here lies the way of deliverance and here the power of holiness resides. "There is therefore now no condemnation" (8:1) is an absolute statement that admits of no modification. Some mistakenly make the second part of the verse, "who walk not after the flesh", qualify the first part, implying that there are Christians who do so walk, but this is a misunderstanding. For a Christian to "walk after the flesh" would be a contradiction in terms, a moral and psychological impossibility (v.9), for "walk" in the Scriptures indicates not a temporary lapse, but a settled habit of life. The second part of v.1 is a description of those in the first part for whom there is no condemnation: they "walk not after the flesh" — of course they do not, though they once did. That second part of v.1 is interpolated from v.4 and rightly belongs there. All Bible translators are agreed on this point. "No condemnation" from the Law's penalty and that inward bondage of guilt so terrifically described in chapter 7 now exists for the Christian. It's all gone. Hallelujah!

"The law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus" (v.2) is the Spirit's law, the ultimate law! By the law of gravity all material things tend downward, yet there is a higher law or process by which the mineral kingdom, the lowest, may be raised to the vegetable kingdom, and that in turn to the animal, and the animal to the human, and so inanimate mineral becomes brain, thought, and skill. There is a still higher law by which the natural man of the flesh, tainted, weakened, vitiated by sin, can be set free from the law of sin and death and transformed to God-likeness. This is the law of the Spirit — life in Christ Jesus! Of the twenty-three references to the Holy Spirit in Romans, twenty of them are found in this, the chapter of the Spirit! Here we may trace His sevenfold attributes as foretold by our Lord in John chapters 14–16.

"God has done what the Law, weakened by the flesh, could not do" (v.2, R.S.V.). What did He do, and how did He do it? He sent His own Son (compare the "adopted" sons, v.15), who came "in the likeness of sinful flesh" — "that human nature which causes the trouble" (Phillips). Differentiate between "the flesh" and "the sin". The flesh itself is not sinful. Sin is something IN the flesh, an intruder, like a dictator ruling over a country. The flesh is the country (5:21). His flesh, his human nature, was sinless.

Verse 3 continues "and for sin" ("as a sacrifice for sin", N.E.B., "as an offering for sin", Amp.), thus He "condemned sin in the flesh", He damned it (same word) to destruction.

Christ effected this in three ways: in His pure life, a living condemnation of sin, demonstrating that sinning is not necessary to human nature; in His atoning death, redeeming us from a guilty past, buying us back to God; in His resurrection and ascension, imparting to us, by "the law of the Spirit" His own triumphant "life in Christ Jesus" (v.2).

"Us, who walk not after the flesh" (v.4) is not selective, as though there were Christians who do; it is descriptive of all Christians. They walk not after the flesh because "they that are Christ's have crucified the flesh with its affections and lusts" (Galatians 5:24). The contrast in vv. 5–8 is not between two kinds of Christians, but between the regenerate and the unregenerate. This is plainly shown in v.7: the "carnal" are enemies of God. We WERE enemies of God, but now we are reconciled (Colossians 1:21).

"Enmity against God" shows how depraved men can become and "cannot please God" reveals their inability. The final proof of our proposition that the unregenerate are in view here is shown in v.9. Christ does not dwell in such, but He does dwell in His own, who "are not in the flesh, but in the Spirit".

A Life restored

The Testimony of Jenny Warrilow

ON Saturday, July 1st, at 10.40 p.m., the siren sounded in the little seaside town of Ilfracombe in Devon. The fire brigade rushed through the dusk to a country road on the hills a few miles from the town where two cars had collided head on.

They found that two badly injured teenage girls had been removed from one car, but rescuers had not been able to release the driver, a lad of 17, from the mangled wreck. Swift action was taken to extract him as both vehicles were locked together and the danger of fire was serious.

As he was being removed, a young girl of 15 was discovered crushed behind the driver's seat, apparently dead, with blood trickling from her nose and mouth. Frantic efforts were made to release her and, after a nightmare of tension, she was finally cut from the wreckage.

With a police escort, ambulances rushed the five seriously injured persons to the North Devon Infirmary, but on arrival the 15-year-old girl, Jenny, was found to be clinically dead. Doctors said that she would have been taken straight to the mortuary had she been admitted thus a few years previously, but they worked on her immediately, using the latest methods known to science to restore life. After one and a half hours there was a slender chance that, if they could sufficiently combat the bleeding from the lungs, her life might be saved. She had serious head injuries, however, the outcome of which could not be predicted, plus broken ribs, collar bone and shoulder blade, together with multiple bruising. Some twenty-one stitches were inserted in her face. Her back had also been terribly torn in the accident.

These four young people from the one car, now so critically injured, were members of The Brookdale Evangelical Church Youth Club in Ilfracombe and had just returned from an evening's club activity, the fortnightly gardening for old age pensioners.

On Sunday morning, July 2nd, Jenny's father should have taken his place for the first time as a Deacon at the church. Instead, he and his wife sat by their child's bed as the blood was being sucked from her lungs and as she fought for her life.

By 11.30 a.m. the struggle appeared to be nearly over. The pauses between her choking gasps grew longer and longer. A general emergency ensued and, as once more the doctors used all the techniques available, I (yes, I am her father) looked at my watch and knew that the local churches would even at that moment be in prayer for us all. My wife and I realised that Jenny was probably dying and could only say, "Thy will be done"

Early that morning, when we had stood stunned and drained of life as we gazed unbelievably at the disfigured form of our unconscious daughter, I had laid my hand on her head and began to say the name of Jesus. As I did so, I was amazed at a sudden awareness of His presence and an infilling of His Holy Spirit that restored life to my shattered body and soul. We left her bedside. I had tearfully prayed, both with my minister and with my wife that, if it please the Lord, He would either take Jenny to be with Himself or fully restore her. We would rather that she went to be with the Lord than live her life as a "cabbage". Now it really seemed that she was going and, though we were grief-stricken, we knew that "He doeth all things well".

By midday, however the crises had passed and, with her lungs connected to a breathing machine, her life was sustained. We thanked God for the care and compassion of the medical staff as for nearly two weeks the machine controlled the breathing of the unconscious girl.

During this time her lungs healed and she was weaned off the respirator, but, as degrees of consciousness returned, we were again told to be prepared for the possibility of permanent brain damage. The doctors were worried as it was apparent that her right side was completely paralysed. "She may never be the same again," one said.

In an incredible way, however, she began to show signs of returning intelligence and, to the wonder of all, movement began to come back to the right leg. Normal body functions returned. The tracheotomy opening in her throat was stitched up, her bones healed, and the day came when she was put into a wheel-chair for her first ride out in the park opposite the hospital.

Now we could see how twisted and distressed she looked. Her right arm still hung limp, totally paralysed, her head dangled on one side, her legs were tied to the foot-rests to keep them on, her throat and wrists were bandaged, and, perhaps worst of all, was her mental distress as she rambled on in a disturbed and often wild manner, unaware of her whereabouts

Beginning at Jerusalem

The Paper given at our Nationwide Evangelistic Conference

by
Alfred Webb

THERE is a sense in which not only the first, but successive pastorates, can be likened to beginning at Jerusalem.

The Church within

It must be far removed from cold formality. The presence of the mighty Holy Spirit must be felt in every meeting and this can easily be attained by each believer bringing with him the fulness of the Spirit.

The local church is like a business, the Master's Business, so we need to have plenty of the right goods in stock. What are these?

The Initial Evidence

Perhaps a better phrase would be "The Initial Influence", for we need far more than speaking with tongues to have any impact upon the community. Right from the start in the Early Church there were conversions, healings and baptisms in the Spirit. Healings played an enormous part. It must be so now. Many of our churches were initiated largely as a result of the healings which confirmed the preaching of the Word. It will always be so, for the signs following are the real credentials of the Gospel. People will come to see the miraculous, so we must not allow ourselves to treat this issue casually. Let the praying for the sick be as public as the preaching itself and not in some little private room of the church. The churches which evidence healings will always be the churches which have conversions.

New converts need to be led into the fulness of the Spirit as soon as possible. They should never need to wait for someone else's annual convention. They should be instructed as to the real purpose of the Baptism, not only to speak in tongues, but also to obtain power to win souls.

Preaching the Gospel in Faith

It is not enough merely to preach the Gospel faithfully and to be satisfied to leave it there. We must wait on God, not only for the message itself, but also for the faith to deliver it. The breakdown occurs very often, not so much in the content of the message, but in the spirit of faith required to go with it. There is no reason why conversions should not take place regularly. According to our faith (or unbelief) it shall be given unto us.

The same need applies also in making the Gospel appeal. Without doubt this is the all-important moment of the week for getting sinners saved. There is no room for an inferiority complex, but exactly the opposite. We must have the full assurance of faith that the work which has been put in during the week — door-to-door, coffee bar, Sunday school, etc. — will culminate in the salvation of souls.

We must get Results

We are as much in God's business to get results as are commercial travellers in the business world. We too are out to get customers. At least one meeting per week should be set aside for preaching to the unsaved. In our country, in Pentecostal Churches at least, this is mainly on Sunday evenings. It is a great mistake not to do so, even if there is no unsaved person present. There is a danger of this happening. If it does, then those in the church who are keen to win souls will be tempted to take their contacts elsewhere. Jesus said, "From henceforth thou shalt catch men". The setting of these words was when the disciples had been fishing all night. They had caught nothing and He had bidden them, in spite of this, to launch forth again, and with what thrilling success!

Jesus not only wants us to go for men, but to go for them until we catch some. There is not much fun in going fishing and catching nothing at all, nor is there in going for weeks without seeing any conversions.

Emphasise Personal Evangelism

It will be a happy day for the Church when this becomes the order of the day. New converts particularly need to be encouraged to win souls. It is my opinion, arrived at after long years of careful observation, that if Christians do not swing into action within the first three years, most likely they never will. This can easily be tested in our prayer meetings, during periods of public testimony, and in door-to-door work.

It is not possible to be successful in pastoral ministry unless we are able to produce soul-winners.

C.H. Spurgeon has well said, "A Christian should be bound apprentice to Jesus to learn the trade of a saviour; if you yourself are saved, the work is but half done until you bring others to Christ". Physically God has endowed us with procreative power; the same can be said spiritually, for the procreative power of the Holy Spirit dwells in us. Paul expresses the thought well to the Galatians: "My little children, of whom I travail in birth again until Christ be formed in you". We all have the ability to be fruitful and to replenish the Church.

Regular Campaigns are needed

Some churches hardly ever have them. Apart from getting souls saved, campaigns always act as a boost to the believers and provide a good outlet of activity for them. If every Church had a campaign every two years we could easily maintain a number of full-time evangelists. The same must be said about full-time Bible teachers. They could contribute much to the blessing of the local church and thus to the Movement.

The Church Without

Any church destined to succeed must have a full programme of activity to win the outsider. The following suggestions have been proved successful and are submitted for your consideration.

Branch Sisterhoods

A small team from the local church can enjoy good success in this direction. Unsaved women can be persuaded to attend such meetings much more easily than on Sunday evenings, when so many of them feel it is their duty to be with husbands. This particular arm of evangelism is perhaps the least difficult to launch and therefore should be attempted. One thing is certain; it will prove its worth and opens up many useful contacts that would otherwise never have been made. In Dagenham, if we could get the halls to hire, we would have many branch sisterhood meetings. Enormous activity goes on every afternoon, attracting womenfolk all over the country. We too must have a programme to offer in the afternoons.

Rallies in nearby Halls

These boost the local church or establish branch works. Only a small proportion of churches have launched forth in this way, but this method is well worth trying. Such rallies could be ideal occasions for developing outstanding talent. The more evangelistic the emphasis, the more surely God will call out key workers from the mother church. Pastors must avoid being too possessive in holding on to our best, most gifted members for "There is that scattereth, and yet increaseth; and there is that withholdeth more than is meet, but it tendeth to poverty." The more outward our vision, the more God will bless within the local Church. "Give and it shall be given unto you".

Branch Churches through Branch Sunday Schools

Initially the scheme would be to get the youngsters into the church services until they were grounded in the faith and then, within three years or thereabouts, to launch a branch church. It should be the norm of any Pentecostal church to produce pastors, evangelists, missionaries, etc., whether via Bible college or otherwise. The local church should be an ideal training ground. It cannot be questioned that there are far too few branch churches. Often, such branches are more strategically placed on the doorstep of very needy areas. The overall influence is that the assembly can be richly enhanced.

Sinners only Meetings

We have an important responsibility toward the worst type of people in town, especially these days when it has become the norm to look as untidy and unpresentable as possible for so many young people. We can be tempted to by-pass these people, but we are confronted with the fact that Jesus went for the worst as well as the best. We must do the same. Get after the drug pushers and addicts, the alcoholics and the rest of them. Be sure that our efforts are not made in a condescending manner. There will have need to be warmth of heart about us. A night set apart in the church for this special attention must surely be part of the aim of an evangelistic church. Coffee tables and refreshments, good literature and frank discussion of Bible truths are much more interesting to this section of our society than is generally supposed.

Cars to bring the Aged, Sick and the Lonely

Many Christians never think of filling up the empty seats in their cars. The people thus brought would not only add to the numbers in our congregations, but would be deeply moved at such personal interest being shown in their welfare. Be very careful lest we be guilty of completely ignoring the words of the Lord Jesus: "I was sick and ye visited me not". How many lonely and sick people would have been saved and healed if motor cars had been dedicated as vehicles of evangelism. These are sobering thoughts and we all need to be sure that in this direction we are not behaving in a heartless manner.

Door-to-door Evangelism

In this work on no account must we lose heart. It remains — and always will be — one of the most

A Great Man

by Bernard J. Epton Pastor of Elim Pentecostal Church, Liverpool

IN 1941 I was privileged to join one of the most exciting projects ever undertaken by man.

I turned up one day at the heavily-guarded gate of what had once been a foundry. After my credentials had been examined, I was shown into the works and to the department which I was destined to join. I was in the works of a firm called Power Jets Limited in the Leicestershire town of Lutterworth where John Wycliffe, the great reformer of the fourteenth century, had been the Rector.

There I met a great man, Sir Frank Whittle, the inventor of the British jet engine. We worked day and night to perfect this new invention. Many were the disappointments. The new materials that had to be produced to stand up to the intense heat and the tremendous stresses and strains that this type of engine caused, brought about a technological revolution. As a direct result, not only have we the modern aircraft and even the moon landings, but also medical science has benefitted greatly. New materials and techniques have resulted in new equipment for hospitals and medical research. The side products of such progress are unnumerable.

I look back on those days with gratitude and pride that I was there. In a very small measure, I contributed to this marvellous achievement. Right up to 1963 I was involved in the production of jet engines, and, as the chief inspector of one of the main sub-contractors of Rolls-Royce, I was still encountering the problems of continuous development and technological advances. There is no end to development. The more one knows, the more there is to know.

Working in the shadow of a great man, a modern pioneer, is tremendously exhilarating and exciting. Even the youngest and most insignificant member of the team cannot help but feel some of the pride and satisfaction in the success of the project. When the first jet plane took off on its short experimental flight, I think that everyone went mad with joy.

I cannot get away from working with great men. Now I am working with and for the Greatest of them all. What a thrill it is to see the success that He has! Everything that He has made He has perfected. All that we have to do is to help to maintain and to run what He has made. Jesus of Nazareth was a great Man, a great Pioneer, the Son of God. He made it possible for men really to live. He said that He came to give us life and that more abundantly. He did exactly what He said He would do and He gave us adequate instructions to enable us to get the best performance possible out of His provisions. The manual (and you need a manual for jet engines, motor cars, or even your lawnmower) that He prepared is called the Bible and it contains all the guidance and help that you need. Follow Him. Start by accepting Him as your Saviour, Friend and Guide. Let Him live in you and then you will live indeed, for "In Him was life; and the life was the light of men" (John 1:4).

You and I need Jesus more now than ever before.

*The need of the world is Jesus
To satisfy its longing soul.*

*The need of the world is Jesus
To make it every whit whole.*

*The need of the world is Jesus
To bear its burden and cares.*

*The need of the world is Jesus
To answer its many prayers.*

important and Scriptural methods of spreading the Gospel. Many have tried with great enthusiasm and then, because of lack of success, have given up the fight. At all cost we must not be put off.

Personal Initiative

The church that is determined to grow will always be able to hit on ways and means whereby people will be drawn in. The human touch in itself will go a long way towards bringing success. An invitation to tea, for example, will go a long way to getting older scholars from the Sunday school into the evening service. Using hospitality one to another without grudging can be a very powerful influence in helping to bring people to Christ.

Taking part in the local town show either by display or contact work can create a very desirable impact. The Elim Pentecostal Church in Dagenham scored a fine goal in this respect this year and many talked about it. I might even call that stealing the initiative!

Let us constantly provoke one another to good works both inside and outside the church; if we really work and really pray in the fullest sense we are bound to succeed.

Our bountiful God

by James McAvoy

"HOW great, how powerful, how purposeful, how good, how loving, how liberal Thou art!" we cry in adoration. We can add to this blessed list because God's attributes are inexhaustible. "He giveth and giveth and giveth again," sings the hymnist.

This theme was recounted frequently in prayer and praise during the evangelistic conference in Birmingham.¹ The full-handed, large-hearted generosity of our Creator filled us with wonder, love and praise during four days of spiritual communication with God and with each other.

Eight papers were read by experienced ministers on many aspects of evangelism. They were followed by discussions, interspersed with workshops which demonstrated various avenues of Christian service. Lessons, for those who are not work-shy were learned and will be applied in many spheres.

Pastor A. Webb's paper (see page 10) on "Beginning at Jerusalem" and the debate which followed impressed me and has continued to cause me to reflect on the Scriptures, Church history and my experiences. I would like to share my meditations with you.

Paul yearned for fruit among the Gentiles and wrote to the Romans: "I am debtor both to the Greeks, and to the Barbarians; both to the wise, and to the unwise... I am ready to preach the gospel to you that are at Rome also. For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ." (Romans 1:14-16). Moffat renders "I am not ashamed" as "I am proud of". Note "I am debtor", "I am ready", "I am not ashamed". The Amplified Bible states: "I have an obligation to discharge and a duty to perform and a debt to pay". May this spirit and attitude be deeply planted in our hearts and spread to other believers.

God is bountiful in the natural realm. "Seedtime and harvest...shall not cease" (Genesis 8:22). Our Lord has endowed us all, saints and sinners alike, with material benefits, like health, food, friends, for which we should be truly thankful.

God is bountiful in the spiritual realm, too. "How much more shall your Father...give good things?" (Matthew 7:11). "How much more will your Father... give good and advantageous things?" (Amplified Bible). "God so loved...that He gave His only begotten Son" (John 3:16). God and the risen Son gave the Holy Ghost (John 15:26; 16:7). The ascended Lord gave men to the Church (Ephesians 4:8-11); "He Himself appointed and gave men to us" (Amplified Bible). The Holy Ghost gives gifts to individuals. "There are diversities of gifts, but the same Spirit", "but the manifestation of the Spirit is given to every man to profit withal". (1 Corinthians 12:4,7). These gifts should be eagerly desired: "Covet earnestly" (1 Corinthians 12:31); "Zealously cultivate the greatest and best — the higher (gifts) and the choicest (graces)" (Amplified Bible) as Paul's command to the Corinthians.

In some quarters these precious endowments are despised as if they were of no value. They are abused and misused by the foolish and ignorant. When used in the Scriptural manner, what a tonic they are to humble, obedient children of God. They edify, comfort and encourage the sincere, active sons of light.

Too many with healthy bodies and hearty appetites never bow their heads to say Grace nor express any sense of gratitude to God or man, mother or wife. Harvests are taken for granted by the ungrateful who live like beasts, as if they were all body, with no soul or spirit. "Let us eat, drink and be merry" is their only concern; they are oblivious to the benefits which their Maker has liberally provided.

Some religious folk recognise God in nature and overflow with thankfulness for creature benefits, but they never eat of the Bread of Life, the true Bread, the Lord Jesus. They never sing of the unspeakable, inexpressible, precious indescribable free gift of eternal life through Jesus Christ.

Many Christians are full of thanks for the bread that perishes and for the living Bread, but they are indifferent to the Holy Spirit's activities and to His miraculous power. Perhaps because of lack of spiritual knowledge or the foolish conduct of some who profess to be filled but who spoil their witness, they are robbed of so much.

We should render our tender thankfulness for every good and every perfect gift that comes from above, from the Father of us all.

The exhortation of the older Paul to the younger Timothy was: "Stir up - rekindle the embers, fan the flame and keep burning - the gracious gift of God (the inner fire)" (2 Timothy 2:1-6, Amplified Bible).

*Shall we neglect God's glorious plan
His gospel grace to speed?
Shall we despise rare instruments
Of evangelic deed?
Lord, once again give gifts to men
In this late hour of need.*

As the years go by

BIRTHDAYS come round with unfailing regularity. When recently celebrating my own I realised with a jolt that I am definitely in the upper middle-age bracket. Being a grandmother puts one in another category, making one feel a little more mature and rather self-satisfied at times. Proverbs 17 contains an observation that "Children's children are the crown of old men". I would like to add "of old women also", but I make allowances for the writer, he being a man and perhaps a little prejudiced. Nevertheless middle age and old age have compensations for both sexes. Nowhere is this better illustrated than in the Bible. The grand old Book is very age conscious about many of its characters and is most cheering in its insistence that age is no barrier to serving God.

What a mighty catalogue of veterans we find; like Enoch, Noah, Abraham, Jacob, Moses, Caleb, Samuel, David, Simeon and Anna, but I would like to draw your attention to an obscure follower of Jesus. He is described as "an old disciple". His name is Mnason of Cyprus. He is mentioned by Luke in Acts 21:16 as one who travelled to Jerusalem with Paul and his company and gave them hospitality.

The Bible is not partial, nor did the Holy Spirit allow mention of only the great heroes of faith. A devoted old disciple is given a place and a record of his kindness and generosity is made. We must remember that it may well have been dangerous to take the notorious apostle into his home.

There is a trend nowadays to put the accent on youth to the exclusion of everyone else. I feel that there should be a wise balance between young and old and that our attitudes should be gracious, loving and understanding, as taught in the Bible. I think that it is abominable that the age-gap rubbish has invaded the Church and that the lambs are allowed to dictate to the sheep. If only mutual tolerance and loving respect were in vogue and Paul still had his Timothy and Barnabas his John Mark! If only the young men would invite the older ones to share in their enterprises as did the school of the prophets when they besought Elisha to go with them! If only we were all more humble and meek and not so self-opinionated! If only we were more like Jesus!

A friend sent me a copy of this prayer. It came in time for my birthday so maybe it was a timely admonition for me to heed.

A Prayer for the Middle Aged

"Lord, Thou knowest better than I know myself that I am growing older and will some day be old. Keep me from the fatal habit of thinking that I must say something on every subject and on every occasion. Release me from craving to straighten out everybody's affairs. Make me thoughtful but not moody, helpful but not bossy. With my vast store of wisdom, it seems a pity not to use it all, but thou knowest, Lord, that I want a few friends at the end.

"Keep my mind free from the recital of endless details; give me wings to get to the point. Seal my lips on my aches and pains. They are increasing and love of rehearsing them is becoming sweeter as the years go by. I dare not ask for grace enough to enjoy the tales of others' pains, but help me to endure them with patience.

"I dare not ask for improved memory, but for a growing humility, and a lessening cocksureness when my memory seems to clash with the memories of others. Teach me the glorious lesson that occasionally I may be mistaken.

"Keep me reasonably sweet. I do not want to be a saint — some of them are so hard to live with — but a sour person is one of the crowning works of the devil. Give me the ability to see good things in unexpected places and talents in unexpected people. And give me, Lord, the grace to tell them so. Amen."

and struggling to regain something that she knew she had lost.

Here our faith was at times sorely tested. Would this poor, crippled girl ever be the old Jenny again, full of life and happiness?

Earnest prayer continued in churches in many parts of the country and we were touched at the loving concern showed by so many who were burdened to pray for these young people. Some three months after the accident, they are all out of hospital and well on the road to full recovery.

A tiny flicker of movement began in Jenny's right hand and little increased until now she can do simple exercises with it. Her intelligence has returned, her wound is healing and she can walk quite well with the aid of a stick. There is now no medical reason to doubt that she will be fully restored in time.

Again and again we thank God for His goodness, for the prayers of His children and for His healing touch, which has been manifested through the medical skill of the doctors and nurses, plus the fact that He has sustained and accelerated the normal, God-given, processes of natural healing.

(Among those who shared in prayer were the members and friends of our Leyton Church, whose Pastor, G.L. Taylor, kindly submitted this moving testimony. EDITOR.)

"The Lord's doing marvellous"

A report on the Isle of Wight senior camp by Denzil Jarvis

"GREAT"; "Really fantastic, nothing could improve it"; "Perfect, under the guidance of the Holy Spirit" were some of the comments from this year's campers. Many of the staff and campers agree that the 1972 camp was the best for some years.

A handful of workers drove into the sixteen-acre site to prepare for the 735 people who were to come and go during the next four weeks — no small task! Prolonged heavy showers during the open-air Sunday lunch may have been inconvenient, sending the diners scurrying for cover, but we praised the Lord for the softened earth as seventy-one tents were erected during the next few days!

What made this year's camp so special?

Firstly, I believe, the tremendous unity among the workers. They came from the north and the south, from differing walks of life, with a diversity of personalities and ideas on achieving the task, a motley crew perhaps, but brought together in the unity of the Spirit to labour together with Him. It was thrilling that through this harmony individual campers felt able to approach staff engaged in daily tasks and talk about the Lord. The campers showed a great openness and a desire to talk of spiritual things. It became as natural to discuss Christian things over a game of table-tennis as in the counselling tent. There is sometimes a tendency to segregate the spiritual and the recreational in our lives, but the Lord wants to enter our every activity.

Some campers had no knowledge of spiritual things on arrival, while others had known Him for many years, yet all received a blessing, campers and workers alike. One camper could not comprehend how the commandant could be a "vicar" without a clerical collar and robes or how he could have a proper church without a graveyard! Her knowledge of church was limited to the exterior of a stone building. Another girl confessed that she had determined to know nothing of the gospel. Intentionally she looked around while others prayed, refused to sing and fidgeted during the messages. How annoying she found it to discover herself humming choruses during the day! Praise God that stubborn hearts were broken and spiritual eyes were opened by the Holy Spirit.

I stopped one camper to ask how she was enjoying camp. She replied, "Great". Enquiring why it was so great, she replied, "Because I met Jesus three nights ago and was baptised in the Holy Spirit last night."

During the fortnight some twenty made decisions for the Lord and about forty received the baptism in the Holy Spirit. The Lord spoke to many through the ministry of the padres, Pastors Bryan Vidamour and Wynne Lewis. Others were encouraged to participate in public prayer and testimony whereas before camp they had been silent.

During the final evening a great singspiration and testimony meeting was held, when dozens testified to God's blessing. "I had never been able to pray in public before, but praise God for this encouragement at camp,"; "I got saved last night,"; "I received the Baptism in the Holy Spirit at 2 a.m. on Wednesday morning,"; "I have been terrified of testifying, but now I can't keep quiet," — testimonies like these flowed. Prayers ascended until 11.15 p.m.

A mixture of tears and laughter accompanied the farewells, but the joy of the Lord was there. At Ryde, the London-bound party awaited their ferry while the south coast group boarded their boat. As the guitarist played, "This is the Day that the Lord has made" the boat and the quayside rang with praises to God. As the boat drew away, a great shout sounded from the ferry: "Give me a J" and the quay-side party responded "J.E.S.U.S." "Whom do we love?" "Jesus". "Whom do those around need?" "Jesus" — the shouts faded, but the praises continue.

The commandant of the senior camp was Pastor Brian Richardson of Barking.

James 1:9-18

"No variableness, neither shadow of turning" (v.17). EVERY other light gradually changes. The moon waxes and wanes. The sun rises and goes down. The pale light of the stars is sometimes beclouded, sometimes bright. The most constant things in this world change. The hills, that always seem the same, are gradually being eroded away and their substance is being broken down. From these untrustworthy things, we turn afresh to the Father of Lights who changes not. He is the same as ever. He still pours upon us every good and perfect gift. "From the best bliss that earth imparts we turn unfilled to Thee again."

Tuesday, November 28th

James 1:19-27

"Receive with meekness the engrafted word" (v.21). THE body's rejection of heart transplants has presented medical science with a new problem. The rejection of the Word by the natural man is a battle as old as the gospel. We cringe from the standards of holiness that the Word of God demands. We could not attain to such things ourselves, so the Word is grafted into our hearts. By meek acceptance of the truth emplanting within, we grow in God. The acceptance of the truth opens to us new horizons of power and possibility. New life given to a heart-transplant patient cannot equal the experience of being able to say: "The will of God...nothing less, nothing more, and nothing else!"

Wednesday, November 29th

James 2:1-13

"The Lord of glory" (v.1). JAMES includes this great description of Christ's majesty to contrast His position with those in the assembly who are better off than others. Before His majesty what difference is made by a few coins of gold more or less? To the Lord our careful distinctions of class and privilege must seem poor indeed. He is the Lord of eternal glory. Before Him we all must bow. Our carefully-drawn lines between wealth and poverty, wisdom and foolishness, are as nothing to Him. If you feel the tendency in your soul carefully to deal with some rather than with others because of their social status, correct this by even more careful attendance to the One who is always in our midst, the Lord of glory Himself!

Thursday, November 30th

James 2:14-26

"He was called the Friend of God" (v.23). WHAT a privilege that God should call a man His friend! Often a man will show his desire to be recognised even with reflected glory by the number of names that he drops in his conversations. Some would even dare to name God among their friends. Abraham had the privilege that God named him as His friend. What higher accolade for a life's service can one ask than this? The words of Christ point the way even to this great privilege: "Ye are My friends, if ye do whatsoever I command you." (John 15:14).

James 3:1-12

"Doth a fountain send forth...sweet water and bitter?" (v.11). IN the Valley Gardens at Harrogate scores of springs bubble up; each has a slightly different mineral content. None of them produces bitter and sweet water from the same spring, but the tongue has a double property. With it I can bless God or curse man. Only as I control my tongue, as I am constant in the outflow of what will bless others, will thirsty souls come to me to drink from my experience.

Saturday, December 2nd

James 3:13-18

"The wisdom from above...easy to be intreated" (v.17). THE first rule of battle is to dig your trenches. Often the first rule of strife is nearly the same. We get entrenched in our views. Opposition only makes us dig down more deeply. We now call our views "principles". This wisdom, says James, is earthly and sensual (v.15), but the wisdom from God is easily entreated. Do not make it harder for the person with whom you disagree to approach you. It is not soft to be quick to make peace. It is sensible to know that to harbour strife damages my soul before it touches any one else's. For my spiritual health's sake I cannot afford to give such things room. Bitterness corrodes like acid in the soul. It is wisdom indeed to be easily entreated.

Sunday, December 3rd

James 4:1-10

"Draw nigh to God" (v.8). THIS Sunday will differ from any other if I am willing to draw nigh to God. If I treat it as simply another Lord's Day in my pilgrimage, then this is what it will be. In the degree that I draw nigh to God, God will meet me today. Many a Jacob has suddenly found the "gate to Heaven" when he thought that he was in a wilderness. Always try to get something out of a service, whoever is the preacher, whatever are the hymns or my personal preference. God is there and if I will draw nigh to Him, then God will draw nigh to me.

Life in outer Space?

by R. J. Niles

"What is man, that Thou art mindful of him?"
(Psalm 8:4)

CHRISTIANS are sometimes disturbed by the frequent emphasis these days on the vastness of the universe and the claims of life "out there". There is no need to be concerned.

Man is at fault when he tries to fathom the mysteries of God. He is not only out of his depth, he does not even realise that the facilities he has available are inadequate for the task. As well to try to measure the glory of the sunset in a bucket as to try to measure the extent of God's kingdom with the fallible, limited capacity of the human mind.

A sincere Christian once said that he realised that God was all-powerful, but that when he let his mind reach out to the bewildering enormity of outer space of which scientists speak, he was disturbed.

This is a very old problem. The psalmist in Psalm 8 raises the same question. He had the answer, however. He realised that the heavens and the stars are the work of God's fingers. God created them. It follows that the farther out you let your imagination go, the greater our God must be, for He made it all.

How big is your God?

People are impressed by size, but who ever heard of a mother preferring an elephant to her baby because the elephant is bigger? One does not measure love in pounds or inches.

Many years ago an aged friend came to me in great distress. There had been an earthquake in California. Her daughter lived there. Do you think it would have helped the old lady if I had said, "California is 5,000 miles away. Don't worry!"? A few days later, she showed me a cablegram which said "Unharmed. Olive". There was a mighty transformation in my friend. Distance had nothing to do with her joy.

Neither space, distance, weight, size nor any material measure have any ability to value or measure the kingdom of God.

Those who still cannot shake off the feeling of the insignificance of man in the face of the vastness of the universe should notice the great size of man in relation to the infinitely small. Scientists are now investigating the infinitesimal. They press further and further until it quite hurts our minds to think of it. They find wonders in atoms and electrons obeying laws which God has laid down. They also find shattering power. God is there also.

Man is beautifully poised between the infinite and the infinitesimal. As God moves from the vastness of space down to the microscopic, He finds time to paint the butterfly's wing in gold and silver, to clothe the lily of the field in greater glory than Solomon's and to watch the sparrow's fall. He is wonderfully ready also to meet our needs.

We need not be disturbed by human exploitation of the things of this world. "Wherefore, if God so clothe the grass of the field, which today is, and tomorrow is cast into the oven, shall He not much more clothe you, O ye of little faith?" (Matthew 6:30). You are not lost sight of in the vastness. God did not send a physical giant to stride about dominating men by great strength. He sent One who was touched with the feeling of our infirmities.

Read what is said about Him, however, in Colossians 1:15-19: "who is the image of the invisible God, the firstborn of every creature, for in Him all things were created in heaven and on earth, visible and invisible, whether thrones or dominions or principalities or authorities". The New English Bible puts it: "The whole universe has been created through Him and for Him".

This leaves us mentally stunned. All human reasoning limps to a halt at such wonder. We can only bow and worship.

There is a deeper mystery still, however. Read verse 20: "and through Him . . . this One who is Lord of creation . . . through Him to reconcile to Himself all things whether in heaven or on earth, making peace by the blood of the cross."

Have you realised that the sacrifice on Calvary has a value beyond the confines of this world? Principalities and powers and the whole universe are involved. Scripture affirms this in the plainest terms.

I do not know whether life exists in the apparent hostilities of outer space, but I know on the authority of God's Word that the blood of Christ, God's Son, avails to bring peace and reconciliation even there.

CHRISTMAS APPEAL FOR MISSIONARIES

They were so grateful for the Christmas extra last year and the link with home is strengthened as they see that they are being remembered.

The children who are so far away from families and relations can have an added thrill because of our gifts.

A Call to Prayer

OUR Executive Council have been much exercised as to how to seek to guide and direct our Movement in the matter of united, concentrated intercession. We have had a number of schemes in our Fellowship in previous years and there are many who feel that blessing and benefit resulted.

The tremendous need of the hour must be obvious to us all. The commands of Scripture that God's people should pray are equally plain to us. Our Council knew that we could count on the ready co-operation of all our Elim friends. The only question was how to co-ordinate such intercessory efforts throughout our Movement.

The Council decided that a minimum of organisation would best serve the purpose. They further felt that the best means would be to call our churches and people to prayer for one week in the months of January, April, July and October 1973.

We carefully considered that the Evangelical Alliance have a week of prayer from JANUARY 7th-14th, 1973 D.V. A number of our churches support this in various ways. The E.
A. tell us that the Evangelical Alliances of Germany, Switzerland and Scandinavia also make this week one of united prayer in their countries. It was therefore decided to make our week of prayer in January to coincide with these dates, viz. January 7th-14th.

It will be deeply appreciated if our ministers, elders, deacons and members in the United Kingdom and all our colleagues and co-workers in our sister fellowships overseas make plans to join in this week of special intercession.

Simple posters will be displayed in our churches to remind you and our Secretary-General will be sending letters to our churches suggesting topics for prayer.

Our continuous years of prayer used to go under the title, "POWER FOR THE HOUR". The need is now greater; the power is just the same, for it cannot be greater than it always is!

"Men ought always to pray, and not to faint."

DAGENHAM

Pastor: J. McBurney

AT our very first harvest thanksgiving services, a large variety of flowers, fruit and groceries was displayed. Rev. Leslie Burton, Superintendent Minister of the Clerkenwell Medical Mission, was the preacher for the day. He ministered with great blessing to the whole congregation, which was enlarged by a large number of the parents of the Sunday school scholars.

The remainder of the service was taken by the children of the Sunday school, with the Bible class giving readings. Even the smallest children of the primary department took part. During the sermon the children were taken into the outer hall to hear Bible stories from their teachers. To make it a complete children's evening, our Pastor dedicated one-year-old twin girls whose sisters belong to the Sunday school.

The following week-end was also a memorable one for a number of Elim Bible College students visited us. They engaged in door-to-door visitation and ministered with benefit to good congregations.

(Miss) CHRISTINE STICKSON

THE Church in Dagenham would appreciate the prayers of the members of the Elim family at this time. Their church building, which was erected in the days of the revival under the late Stephen Jeffreys some forty years ago, has to be pulled down because of serious movement in the foundations. Either a new building has to be erected on the site or another building found for the housing of the people. The members and friends of the church have rallied to the challenge which this presents and the Lord is blessing, but we do need your prayers. Many thanks in anticipation!

JAMES MCBURNEY

WOOLWICH

Pastor: L. Jones

THE Sunday school harvest thanksgiving service was conducted by "The Foursquares" from Dagenham, whose ministry in word and song was a blessing to all. The service was ably convened by Mr. David Tattersall, the Superintendent, who received gifts from the children for the aged and sick in the church and district. It was a joy to see the parents of our scholars in the large gathering.

We recently celebrated our Pastor's second anniversary, thanking God for two happy years of ministry and presenting a gift of money as a token of the congregation's appreciation and affection.

Two of our members, David and Carol Tattersall provided two singing items in a half hour religious programme broadcast at Sunday lunch-time on local television called "Cablevision". The company has 13,000 subscribers who receive their programmes, but the number increases every month. It is planned to cover the whole of Woolwich and district in time. A local Evangelical minister is in charge of the religious programmes and in the near future we shall have opportunity to take part in another programme.

We thank God for these opportunities and seek the prayers of the Lord's people in this new avenue of service in this needy area of London.

Pastor: R. Clarke

FOR our Pastor's first anniversary, on Saturday a coach load came with Pastor and Mrs. D.W. Cartwright from Rowley Regis. They brought many singing items, showing great talent. A group of children sang and played musical instruments. Pastor Cartwright then brought the meeting to a climax with a rich, inspired word. The church was full and overflowing.

On the Sunday and Monday the meetings were well attended and we received a great blessing from the ministry of Pastor A. Lambie.

During the past year God has blessed our church, especially through the difficult times encountered during re-building and extension work. The numbers attending the services have increased under our keen young minister's untiring efforts.

JACK BANCROFT

BRIGHTON, The Lanes

Pastor: F.A. Hodge

OVER the past two months we have seen many new Christians, mostly young people, follow the Lord Jesus through the waters of baptism at three baptismal services.

We have seen a great increase in numbers among young people as well as a continued zeal to reach those outside God's kingdom. Their most recent contacts have been made through the "One Way" coffee house in the upper hall of the church. It has been open for only a short time, but God is already blessing greatly. We give praise to God for souls saved and lives changed.

During the week other members of the church are actively engaged in door to door visitation and in writing letters to those recently bereaved as announced in the obituary column of our local paper. These forms of outreach go on seemingly unnoticed, but many contacts have been made.

In September we enjoyed blessing from the messages of Pastor Albion Gaunt and American evangelist Arne Vic, who ministered to us during our crusade.

L. STONE

HADLEIGH

Pastor: R.F. Stripp

WE are grateful to God for His blessing upon the Pentecostal testimony in this growing dormitory town which overlooks the Thames Estuary, famous for its Castle and historic Norman Church.

Through forty nine years of witness the strength of the testimony has ebbed and flowed like the tide, at times a very low tide, but praise His name, the tide is now coming in and we are believing for waters to swim in!

A new baptistry has been installed (our first), complete with heating and drainage facilities and at our first baptismal service five candidates obeyed the Lord before a crowded congregation. Our District Superintendent, Pastor H. Burton-Haynes dedicated the pool for the glory of God and preached with great blessing. The anointed singing of the Westcliff Male Voice Choir was very much appreciated.

Our Church anniversary services were a cause for rejoicing. We were privileged to have Pastor L.W. Green and his ministry was rich and fruitful. The Gospel Folk Singers, George and Pat Baxter of Chelmsford, sang with great feeling and blessing.

We had a children's campaign by Pastor Vernon Ralphs of Brentwood Assemblies of God this October. Robert, his talking robot, proved to be a great attraction to the children, many of whom gave their hearts to Christ. The backing of a loyal band of youth workers from the Church greatly contributed to a successful campaign.

We believe that the anointing of the Holy Ghost will rest upon us as we reach out for souls in the light of Christ's near return.

RON STRIPP

WIMBLEDON

Pastor: F. Waite

"BOISTEROUSLY happy, yet in perfect control" would sum up a week's Junior Special at our church. Attendances grew from forty seven to sixty eight. The enthusiasm was evident as Leslie Todd, supported by a ready band of local helpers, made this week a time to be remembered. For some it proved to be the beginning of a new life in God.

This week coincided with Pastor C.J.E. Kingston's farewell. We wish to place on record our thanks to Pastor and Mrs. Kingston for their great effort over the past eighteen months. We were greatly thrilled by the Lord's presence on their farewell day; in tone it was more in keeping with an induction service. The Assembly is under the blessing of God.

Another happy event was the introduction of our new minister. Mr. Kingston convened the service. Words of welcome were given by Mr. Frost, our church secretary, and Mr. C. Shute, President of the Wimbledon Evangelical Fellowship. The charge to Pastor and Assembly was given by Pastor Ian R. Moore.

We now look forward to a time of activity and advance for the Kingdom of God.

ALDERSHOT

Pastor: M.J. Tilley

THE Elim testimony came to our town in 1952 in the form of a tent campaign. The converts formed the nucleus of our new church. They met in the Rechabite Hall. Later it was possible to buy the Red Cross hut situated next to the Bus Station. The simple building has been our meeting-place ever since. Aldershot being a military town, much of the work has been among soldiers. One such lad gave his heart to the Lord on the day when our Pastor first came to preach at the church. These converts move on in their Army career and we support them in prayer.

For some years the size and location of our building has restricted the type of Christian activity we have been able to undertake.

With much joy we welcomed friends from a wide area to the opening of our new building in Holly Road. This was the culmination of many months waiting and working by our members. The local people had seen us wielding tools inside and outside the building and contacts were made because of this practical activity. We welcomed Pastors C.J.E. Kingston and R.B. Chapman and it was good to renew fellowship with former members and Ministers of our Church. The local Anglican Vicar accepted a place on our platform and was greatly impressed by the Pentecostal enthusiasm of our congregation.

Our new building is situated in a residential part of the town. Please pray for the work we are seeking to do in this new area.

R.A. ELSEGOOD

ALDERSHOT'S first new church for several years was opened on Saturday, when the Aldershot Elim Pentecostal Church moved from its wooden building in The Grove to a new church in Holly Road.

The new system-built church, three times the size of the old church, was crowded for the opening service led by the minister, Rev. Mervyn Tilley.

The opening ceremony was performed by a retired minister, Rev. Charles Kingston, and the speaker at a second service on Saturday was Rev. R.B. Chapman from Elim Church headquarters.

The new £9,000 church is also being used for the Sunday school and its completion means the church can cope with its expanding membership more easily.

The cost was met by the congregation of the church, assisted by a grant from headquarters.

Officials hope to sell the old church.

The Elim Pentecostal Church has been established in Aldershot for 20 years.

KIDDERMINSTER

Pastor: H. Jeffery

FOLLOWING much prayer and preparation, we welcomed Allan Ball, a former church member now resident in Old Colwyn, to conduct our crusade. Our brother has been much used by the Lord as an evangelist and soloist. He was accompanied on the new Hammond organ by a fellow church member, Joe Bellamy.

The blessing of God and the power of the Holy Spirit were present during the whole crusade which extended into seventeen nights. At each meeting following the preaching of the Word, there were those who accepted Christ as Saviour. Thirty-eight signed decision cards. The majority were young folk. Each night the sick were prayed for and we praise God that many testified to the healing touch of God upon their bodies.

We experienced much liberty in the Spirit and praised God for the joy and gladness of our salvation. Much blessing was felt in the singing of praise to our God, particularly two choruses from Psalm 3 and Psalm 30.

Following the campaign special classes for the new converts were held and, three weeks later, eleven followed the Lord through the waters of baptism. During these three weeks five received the Baptism in the Holy Spirit. To God be all the glory!

The Letter to the Romans

18. The Power of Holiness (continued)

by J. Alexander Wright

"THE Spirit of God", "the Spirit of Christ", "The Spirit [of the Father] in you", "Christ in you", (vv. 9-11) appear to be used interchangeably. Some earlier Pentecostal teachers saw here, and elsewhere, two Spirits, and to avoid the difficulty of Ephesians 4:4 ("one Spirit") "Spirit of Christ" was written with a small "s" and the phrase was explained as meaning the nature of Christ.

The writer feels that the view was mistaken. This is not to say that at Pentecost the Holy Spirit became Jesus, or that Jesus became the Holy Spirit. Such a merging has been adduced from this passage and from our Lord's words in John 14:18, compare v.16. "Comfortless" does not refer to the absence of the Holy Spirit; it is a different word ("orphans") from that used for Comforter. The reference is surely to His post-resurrection appearances (compare John 16:16-22; 20:20).

These expressions have also been used to obviate the need for an experience of the Holy Spirit subsequent to conversion, the baptism, or falling-upon, of the Spirit, which experience is called "the coming of the Holy Spirit" to those to whom Christ has already come in saving grace. Acts chapter 8 illustrates. Years after the day of Pentecost the people of Samaria "received the Word of God", "believed", and were baptised in the name of the Lord Jesus, but they had not yet received the Holy Spirit.

There are not two Spirits then, but two aspects of the ministry of the third Person of the Holy Trinity, who has been called "The Executive of the Godhead". "With us personality is divisive and exclusive. Each is separate and must always be . . . Personality in the Trinity is inclusive, not divisive. In each is All, and in All is each." (S. Chadwick, The Way to Pentecost). To say that in receiving Christ we necessarily receive the Holy Spirit in the Pentecostal manner — and we stress this — is to confuse what the Scriptures make distinct. The Holy Spirit is "The Spirit of your Father" (Matthew 10:20) and "The Spirit of His Son" (Romans 8:15; Galatians 4:6; compare 1 Peter 1:11; 2 Peter 1:21) and to be "in the Spirit" is to have "the Spirit dwell in you" (Romans 8:9). The Scofield Bible says (p.1150) that there is a three-fold presence or mode of the Spirit's ministry to the believer indicated by the prepositions "with", "in" and "upon". The author expounds the first two, but somehow omits the third, the Pentecostal gift of power (Acts 1:8).

"The body is dead because of sin" (Romans 8:10). The presence of Christ all-glorious within us means death to "the body of sin" (6:6), "the sinful flesh" (8:3), "the body of this death" (7:24), "your bodily self" (Way), "your sinful nature" (Phillips). "The body, as a vehicle of sin, is dead" (Schonfield). These variants gather up and repeat the teaching of 6:6 about the destruction of the old self-life and the implanting of the new life in Christ. "The Spirit is life because of righteousness" (8:10). That "gift of righteousness" brings the kingly life of Christ into the soul (5:17).

This is not a doctrine of eradication (so-called), which seeks to level up experience to the text, or of counter-action, which seeks to level down the text to experience, or even of the suppression of the "old man", nor is it of the mortification of the body (rather than its misdeeds) as practised by some. The indwelling Spirit is the true power of holiness. There is no "sinful nature" that is beyond His sanctifying power.

"Be filled with the Spirit" (Ephesians 5:18).

The Minister and his Books

by A. S. F. Horne Pastor of Elim Pentecostal Church, Ipswich

WE read that the tongue is a small organ, a fire. How much wood or how great a forest a tiny spark can set ablaze. It was Quarles who said, "Give not the tongue too great a liberty, lest it take thee prisoner. An unspoken word is like a sword in the scabbard; if vented, thy sword is in another's hand. So if thou desire to be held wise, be so wise as to hold thy tongue."

The Psalmist said, "Keep thy tongue from evil, and thy life from speaking guile (or deceit)" (Psalm 34:13). Justin said, "By examining the tongue of a patient, physicians find out the diseases of the body, and philosophers the diseases of the mind." So our spiritual state will be known by our words.

Socrates pointed out, "The tongue of a fool is the key of his counsel, which in a wise man wisdom hath in keeping."

"Whoever keepeth his mouth and his tongue keepeth his soul from troubles." (Proverbs 21:23).

Anacharsis said, "The tongue is at the same time, the best part of man, and his worst; with good government, none is more useful and, without it, none is more mischievous".

"He that keepeth his mouth keepeth his life: but he that openeth wide his lips shall have destruction." (Proverbs 13:3).

Paul calls them "busybodies" who go from house to house. They are never more happy than when they can talk. It does not really matter what they say, but talk they must. May God deliver us from them.

I remember going to six houses in one day and hearing the same tale in each. Mrs. So-and-So was going on ahead. She did more harm that day than she will ever know.

*She cheered each dry Committee,
With tales of absent folk,
And let not truth nor pity,
Impair her little joke,
Till loves were soiled,
And lives were spoiled,
By every word she spoke.*

William Penn wrote, "Believe nothing against another, but on good authority; nor report what may hurt another, unless it be a greater hurt to another to conceal it."

It was Beecher who said, "Life would be a perpetual flea hunt if a man were obliged to run down all the innuendoes, inveracities, insinuations, and suspicions which are uttered against him."

Jesus said, "Happy are you when people insult you, persecute you, lie and tell only evil about you on account of Me. Be happy and delighted because you have a great reward in heaven. That's how they persecuted the prophets who were before you" (Beck).

F. Pegou in "Odds and Ends" tells of an ignorant but godly man who, in the ancient days when the Bible was not in the hands of the people, came to one of the church fathers, desiring to be taught the Scriptures. His first lesson was "I will take heed to my ways, that I sin not with my tongue" (Psalm 39:1). He went away and did not return for his second lesson. Many years passed before his teacher saw him and asked him, "How is it that you never came back for further instruction?" He answered, "Because, though I have been trying hard, I have not yet learned to keep the first verse that you taught me." He found the taming of the tongue to be a task as difficult as James reports it to be!

"Thou man of God"

Notes of the address given by G. L. W. Ladlow
 Pastor of Elim Pentecostal Church, Salisbury, at the Ordination service at Clapham, London.

1 Timothy 6:11,12

"GOD had only one Son and He made Him a preacher" said Thomas Goodwin, the eminent theologian of the Puritans, and, in these words, he lifted the ministerial calling to its highest level. The Christian ministry is the greatest vocation in the world, for it is a sharing in the calling of the Son of God Himself. So conscious and so certain of this were the first Christian preachers that they were able to say that they stood in Christ's stead and that God did beseech men by them. It is obvious then that to occupy such a position necessitates having more than human desire or ambition; the will of man alone can never make a man the representative of almighty God. It is surely the prerogative of God to choose His own delegates. Paul is able to say that God put him in the ministry. In the New Testament the ministry is always the outcome of a Divine call. We do not wonder that Paul, when issuing his challenge to Timothy, addressed him as "Thou man of God", for in truth the minister is God's man.

Such a goal cannot easily be achieved; there is opposition to face from the world, the flesh and the devil. The man of God runs with a sword in his hand and has to fight the fight of faith. In Ephesians chapter 6 the description of the Christian soldier ends with these words: "taking the sword of the Spirit . . . praying always with all prayer and supplication in the Spirit", so the Christian soldier is shown to advance upon his knees. The man of God must be a man of prayer; he neglects the prayer closet at his own peril. There he comes to grips with the evil powers of the unseen world and puts the enemy to flight in the name of Jesus.

Human strength, power, or determination cannot enable us to be successful in such a conflict nor to obey the exhortations given here. We are all too conscious of human frailty and inherent weakness, but the apostle concludes by urging the man of God to "Lay hold of eternal life", that is, "keep a firm grip on that life eternal to which you are called".

Eternal life is life of a different quality, life of a higher nature, the life of the eternal God. As we grasp it and translate it into practical experience, that inflow of the life of God makes it possible for these things to be accomplished. We become spiritual men and thus are worthy of the title "man of God". At the end of life we are able to cry with Paul, "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith: Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness".

This title was first given to Moses. There in the backside of the desert, from the midst of the flaming bush, came the call of God which brought Moses out of obscurity as a shepherd into the limelight as the emancipator and leader of the people of God. From that time onwards he is referred to as "Moses, the man of God". It is the title given to Samuel, Shemaiah, Elijah, Elisha and a host of unnamed prophets who brought the message of God to men. They were God's men for that hour, His mouthpieces, His servants, performing His will. What a title; what a dignity and honour it confers! As Dr. Barclay so ably puts it: "If any man can arrive at the consciousness of being despatched by God, then a new splendour and a new magnificence enter into life".

*Life can never be dull again,
 When once we've thrown our windows open wide
 And seen the mighty world outside
 And whispered to ourselves this wondrous thing,
 We've wanted for the business of the King.*

Yet there is no room for pride or boasting, for we are what we are only by the grace of God. When a congregation recognises the implications of this wonderful title a right relationship between shepherd and flock is bound to follow.

To maintain that position, we are reminded that there are things from which the man of God must flee, there are things that he must follow and there are things that he must fight. This challenge to Timothy follows the description of those Christian preachers who had copied the Sophists of the heathen world and preached novel doctrines, attracting a following for financial gain, debasing the ministry until it was nothing more than a well-paid profession. "Thou man of God flee these things".

The temptation to seek the exaltation of man and the encouragement of the personality cult have always been a peril of the ministry. Ever since folk at Corinth gathered themselves around Paul, Peter and Apollos, there have been those ready to give their first allegiance to man rather than to Jesus Christ. Whenever preachers have built the work around their own personalities, when they have gone, their work has gone, too. When Michaelangelo was busy at his canvas he wore a lamp on his cap to prevent his own shadow being thrown upon the picture of Christ that he was painting. The preacher must have the lamp of the Spirit burning brightly so that his own personality does not prevent men from seeing the full beauty of Jesus. In v.4 Paul describes these men as being "proud and knowing nothing". I understand that this is strong language in the original Greek; the N.E.B. translates it: "he is a pompous ignoramus" and J.B. Phillips has it: "he is a conceited idiot".

The second warning to the man of God concerns the temptation to preach a popular message. The Christian pulpit is not the place for airing intellectual cleverness or expressing pleasing platitudes, but for the declaration of the whole counsel of God. The message must ever be cross-centric; we must preach a full salvation.

Dr. Dinsdale Young, making his plea for the preaching of the full gospel at a time when other methods were in vogue, said, "O, preacher, preach to rich and poor, young and old, educated and ignorant, the message of full salvation, and your preaching will have the silvery dew always lying on its branches. If the pulpit dilates on social matters and political issues, if it prescribes ethical laws, if it speaks on current topics, if it codifies and expounds 'modern thinking' the Holy Spirit may or may not effectuate its utterances. But if the pulpit persists to preach salvation by the Lamb of God, the Holy Spirit, I repeat, is pledged to confirm the word". After preaching with little success an intellectual message at Athens, Paul went to Corinth "determined to know nothing . . . save Christ . . . crucified". He later wrote "my speech and my preaching was not with the enticing words of man's wisdom, but in demonstration of the Spirit and of power."

Now comes a warning concerning the motive of the preacher. These teachers of whom Paul wrote, were preaching for financial gain. We live in a materialistic age; it is so easy to compare the remuneration of the ministry with the high wages of those in industry and become dissatisfied. The man of God must have as his motive the performance of God's will, the winning of souls for whom Christ died; his attitude must ever be, "Woe is unto me if I preach not the gospel". Paul reminds us that if we have food and raiment then we should be content. Let us see that our motives are always pure.

The man of God is not to flee as a man fleeing from danger, but as a runner in the race with his eye upon the goal. He must have his sights on higher things; he must have his objectives for which he strives. The things he is told to flee from are all connected with the carnal life, the satisfaction of the physical senses and the pleasing of the human spirit. As a spiritual man he must follow the things of the Spirit. There are six things mentioned here. Righteousness means to be absolutely straight in all things. I like Moffat's translation of this verse: "follow after integrity". Godliness is translated by J.B. Phillips "Christ-likeness"; it is striving in all things to be like Christ, looking unto Him as the preacher's great Exemplar. Faith as used here means loyalty, as in the N.E.B. "fidelity". The man of God must strive to be loyal to God, to the truth, to the church, even when the congregation is small and unresponsive and the work unrewarding. Love is the mainspring of all true Christian service, love to God and to our fellow men. Patience means victorious endurance even under trial. Meekness in other translations is gentleness. Someone has said, "This is the virtue by which at all times a man is enabled rightly to treat his fellow men and rightly to regard himself". The man of God must set his target high and follow after it with all the strength and concentration of the man who is in a great race.

Outline of the Paper given at our nationwide Evangelistic Conference held in Birmingham

Mobilising our Membership by W. T. H. Richards

ONE of the main functions of the ministry gifts of Christ to the Church is to train all members to serve in one capacity or another. Ephesians 4:11,12 says "He gave some apostles, prophets, evangelists, pastors, teachers", but for what purpose? See the Amplified version: "HIS INTENTION WAS THE PERFECTING AND FULL EQUIPPING OF THE SAINTS. THAT THEY SHOULD DO THE WORK OF MINISTERING TOWARDS BUILDING UP CHRIST'S BODY", in other words, to train believers for service. The task of a minister of Christ according to the New Testament is threefold: to heed the flock (Acts 20:28), to feed the flock (1 Peter 5:2) and to lead the flock (1 Corinthians 4:16; 11:1, Philippians 3:17).

These activities are equally important. Paul is an example on all three points. In each Scripture relating to leading the flock he says, "Be ye followers of me" and the context shows that he is saying, "Follow my lead in sacrifice and serving the Lord."

Paul did his utmost to get the rank and file believers to participate in the Church's ministry. This should be the aim of all Ministers. There will be no lack of growth when we do this. If we teach the people correctly we will have sound, balanced, expanding churches which will be a power for good in the community.

We should mobilise the members of each local church so that they may function in three ways. Only as we so do shall we have churches according to the New Testament pattern.

Mobilise our Members to become Worshipers

Some may think that to talk about worship is out of place; on the contrary, it is very closely related to evangelism. I have learned by experience, and maintain that, before we can speak with deep conviction about God, we must know something about Him. The most effective way of achieving this is through the ministry of worship. The constant practice of this will bring about a transformation in a believer and will lead to a life of usefulness. There are four main aspects of worship.

MEDITATION. There is more to worship than is generally realised. Probably the most important aspect of it is meditation. "Be still and know that I am God" is a command which the Church has neglected. This is one of the main reasons why she is spiritually impoverished. The cry everywhere to the Church today is "Get active"; "Start a crusade"; "Let's organise a conference"; "Hold protest meetings"; "Get involved with people". All this is good in its place, but so many are like the man in 2 Samuel 18, a messenger with no message. He had received no commission and had nothing to impart to a troubled soul. We so easily forget that, before we can work effectively among men, we must spend time in the sanctuary before the Master. Before we can talk with conviction about Christ, we must get to know Him. This knowledge does not come through rushing around busying ourselves in various forms of activity. We can be too busy to be really useful. The result is we miss so much and remain spiritually impotent and ignorant. Knowledge is associated with stillness. It comes through meditation, through worship, when we are speechless before Him, when we stop talking and start listening. Then we begin to understand His Word and what His will for our lives is. Then we can play our part with a sense of real purpose.

THANKSGIVING. Another important part of worship is being thankful to God for His goodness. "Worship" was originally "worthship", so worship is realising the worth of God and being grateful to Him, rejoicing in the "riches of His grace" and in the realisation that "if God be for us, who can be against us?". We need a fresh vision of the greatness of God. Then there would be less murmuring among us; instead a song of praise would be heard and a shout of victory in the Church. A true worshipper can never be a defeatist. He is ever ready to do and to dare for God. He is ever grateful for the Church, the Word, fellow-believers and the love of God that has been manifested in Christ Jesus. To such believers the joy of the Lord is their strength. They have come to the realisation that man's chief aim is to worship God and to enjoy Him for ever.

CONSISTENCY OF LIFE. Worship is living a godly and consistent life. "By faith Jacob, when he was dying, blessed both the sons of Joseph; and worshipped, strengthening himself with his staff." (Hebrews 11:21). True worship includes being true to the end, being an example to one's family. Godly consistency is worship. Living to inspire others is worship. Leaving a spiritual legacy to the next generation is worship.

CORPORATE WORSHIP. The whole church should be involved. The ministry is not a one man band affair. The Early Church made room for all to participate. Their services were alive with plenty of variety. They made their contributions by praying, exhortation, testimony, singing, speaking in tongues, interpretation, prophecy. Read 1 Corinthians 14:26. Phillips makes it clearer: "Well then, my brothers, whenever you meet let everyone be ready to contribute". How refreshing, blessed, and God-honouring it is when all believers in a local church take part in united worship adoring the Lord of glory, "lost in wonder, love and praise".

Mobilise our Members to become Workers

WHEN we train people to worship, there will be little difficulty in getting them to work within and on behalf of the local Church. There should be something for each member to do, no matter how small. Jesus referred to giving a cup of cold water to a thirsty person; even that would merit a reward (Matthew 10:42). Every community where the Church is should be able to see a demonstration of practical Christianity; then they will be likely to listen to the message the Church has to give.

Many Christians forget or ignore the Bible doctrine of good works, even though emphasis is laid upon this teaching by Christ and the apostles. "Let us consider one another to provoke unto love and good works" (Hebrews 10:24). Those who are well off are charged to be "rich in good works, ready to distribute, willing to communicate". There can be no excuse for any Christian to remain idle. The Bible gives us a clear guide as to what we may do.

Here are some of the activities which the Bible lists.

GIVING HOSPITALITY. What a great need there is today! This is mentioned no less than four times in the New Testament: Romans 12:13; 1 Timothy 3:2; Titus 1:8; 1 Peter 4:9. What a wonderful job many are doing by opening their homes for young people to gather for fellowship.

TEACHING (Romans 12:7). There is a great need for teachers among children and young people especially.

Then there is sick visitation (Matthew 25:36), a grand work and very rewarding.

We are also exhorted to show interest in the outcasts of society, such as prisoners (Matthew 25:36) to care for orphans and widows (James 1:27), to give clothes to the poor (Matthew 25:43), and food to the hungry (Matthew 25:35).

Much is included in the word "helps", (1 Corinthians 12:28): making ourselves generally useful in the church, being stewards, comforters, counsellors, those who do the menial tasks, such as keeping the church clean and in good decorative order.

Mobilise our Members to become Witnesses

Every believer should be a witness and should constantly be challenged along this line. One of the main purposes of the Baptism in the Spirit is to enable believers effectively to witness to the power of Christ, as Acts 1:8 tells us clearly. Wherever there were baptized believers, they were expected to proclaim the truth about Christ, to tell forth the full Gospel of Christ simply, clearly and powerfully.

A WITNESS SHOULD PROCLAIM THE WHOLE TRUTH. A sugary, sentimental message is being put over today, like, "Smile, Jesus loves you" painted on a badge with the face to go with it that looks like a clown. This mushy message of love is misleading and can do harm to the cause of Christ. Our job is not to make sinners smile, but to make them weep, if anything. The message is still "repent and be baptized" (Acts 2:38). There is the joy aspect to the Gospel, but this comes after repentance and conversion and not before.

It is strange how the Church goes to extremes. Years ago the love of God was hardly mentioned on text carriers' banners. It was "Flee from the wrath to come"; "The wicked shall be turned into hell"; "The wages of sin is death"; "After death the judgment". Today with some groups who are supposedly evangelising there is nothing in their Gospel that mentions hell, sin or judgment. It is all love that is often foolishly emotional. It is certainly not the love that is mentioned in 1 Corinthians 13 which "rejoices in the truth". A true witness proclaims the "whole counsel of God" (Acts 20:27, R.S.V.).

Thoughts from the Book of Genesis

2 "God breathed..." (Genesis 2:7)

by F. Lavender

WE are told that man had been formed from the dust, but he was without life. Then God breathed into him the "breath of lives" and man lived, possessing both natural, physical life and also spiritual life. God imparted to him His own life in order that man might live.

Ezekiel described how he stood in a valley full of the very dry bones of a great army that had been destroyed and how, in response to the creative Word of God, they were renewed in form and substance. One thing was still lacking, however, for the re-formed men were lifeless. When God breathed His Spirit into ner; we are born again of water and the Spirit (John 3:5).

Those things upon which God breathes become living and vital. We can make our plans and schemes but, without His living breath, they are lifeless and powerless. We need the anointing of the Spirit of God on all the things that we do. Then they will come them, however, they lived again and stood on their feet.

God looked out over our earth and saw the death and desolation caused by sin, for all had sinned and, because of sin, death reigned over the whole of mankind. Man died spiritually immediately, for he was cut off from God, and mankind became a dying race physically. God, however, sent His only begotten Son to impart life to all who would put their trust in Him. The Lord Jesus poured out His own life in death so that we might have His eternal life. At the new birth, God breathes the breath of life into the repentant sinner and glorify Him. They will throb with Divine energy and vitality.

Children's Corner

Donkey Rides

Words and drawing by
Sheila Price

"Just think of it! Up and down the hot sand, day after day. I must have covered hundreds of miles!" said Pip.

"But the children do like to ride on us, don't they?" said Fred. "Have you noticed how happy they are when Mr. Dan lifts them on to our backs?"

"Yes," said Pip. "The children treat us kindly, too, and often give us some of their ice cream. I am proud to share in their fun, but, now I could do with a rest."

"Think how proud that donkey must have been when it carried Jesus on its back," said Fred.

"Which donkey was that?" asked Pip.

"I'm glad the holidays are over," said Pip.

"Me, too," said Fred. "I have been looking forward to a rest for ages."

Fred explained, "I don't know its name. It was many years ago, when Jesus was going to Jerusalem. Jesus wanted a donkey on which to ride through the streets of the city, so He told His disciples to go to a nearby village, where they would find a donkey tied to a doorpost. 'When you find it,' said Jesus, 'free it and bring it to Me.' The disciples did as their Master told them and soon returned with the donkey. Out of all the animals, Jesus chose a donkey to carry Him through Jerusalem! How happy that little donkey must have been as it bore Jesus along the streets which were filled with cheering people. How thrilled that donkey must have been to hear the shouts of 'Hosanna!' ring in its ears! How proud it must have been to know that it had been specially chosen to serve Jesus!"

* * * * *

Just as Jesus wanted that little donkey, Jesus wants us. He sent His disciples to free the donkey, but He came Himself to die on the cross to set us free. Each one of us can find great happiness in serving our Master.

From T. H. Stevenson

ALL who know, or know of, our brother David Hathaway will, we trust, continue to pray earnestly for an early end to his imprisonment and for his repatriation, or extradition from Czechoslovakia. The television statement of his brother Kenneth clarified the seemingly true position that David sought to transport, or if you prefer, smuggle 5,000 Bibles into or through a communist country where such an act is an offence, though David was acquitted on this charge. God can undertake for our brother and his loved-ones.

For many it has limelighted the question of the correctness of such methods. For or against, the evangelical Christian will turn to the Bible for confirmation of his conviction.

Some quote Peter's words, "We ought to obey God rather than men". They could also include his words, "There is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved", for this defied not only Judaism, but also the Roman decree which allowed any man anywhere to worship any god so long as the deity of Caesar was also accepted.

Christians with reservations would also quote Peter's words, "Submit yourselves to every ordinance of man for the Lord's sake...to the king...or unto governors." (1 Peter 2:13). Paul exhorted in like words in his letters, but Daniel openly defied the king's edict forbidding prayer to Jehovah. He prayed regularly where his enemies would see him. Paul's words of guidance concerning "days" and "foods" seem applicable to conviction about service for God: "Let every man be fully persuaded in his own mind" (Romans 14:5).

There is much that is not just black or white. Some things are even greyish. Paul rejected Mark at an early stage and requested his ministry later. Mark had changed, but so had Paul. Peter also changed, for Paul declared "I withstood him to the face, because he was to be blamed. For before that certain came from James he did eat with the Gentiles: but when they were come, he withdrew and separated himself, fearing them which were of the circumcision." (Galatians 2:11,12).

*To thine ownself be true
For then must follow as night the day
Thou canst not then be false to any man.*

PRAYER and PRAISE

by F. H. Coleman

DOES God always answer prayer? Do we get what we want from God when we pray?

God does always answer prayer, but not always in the way we want Him to answer. His way is always the best way.

I want to tell you of two instances of this, one of which I heard, the other of which I know personally. Each story concerns a mother and her baby son.

A woman lived in a poor district of London and she was expecting her first child. Great was her joy when a boy was born to her. A few months later, dark clouds began to cover her sky. Her husband was taken ill and died, then the baby was taken ill. This poor woman was sick with fear. She prayed earnestly that her boy would be spared to her, for he was all she had. The child's life was spared and he grew to manhood. It would have been better if his life had been taken, however, for that poor woman later stood outside a prison to read the notice posted up to say that her son had been hanged for a brutal murder.

A lady I knew well had gone to live in New York, as her husband's firm had posted him there as their representative. A baby boy was born to her in a hospital there. The doctor broke the news to her that her son had been born with a serious deformity and was likely to die. God spared her baby and granted her desire, but fourteen years later the boy had grown to almost six foot tall and had to be put into a home for incurables. This almost broke her heart.

Yes, God always answers prayers, but the way He plans is always the best way. Trust Him and accept His answer.

Still growing strong!

IN the beautiful gardens of Bemerton Rectory, Salisbury, pride of place is given to the 350 year old medlar tree which was planted by George Herbert, man of God, rector and poet. I was interested to learn recently from local sources, that, many years ago, it was blown down. Only one limb showed signs of life, but a stout hawthorn sapling was planted below this still living branch, which was then grafted into the young, vigorous tree. The old medlar tree quickly absorbed all the nourishment that the hawthorn could supply. Other records tell of experts from Kew Gardens who helped to save the tree by planting a whitehorn and grafting the medlar to it in 1907. The medlar tree is still growing, twisted and gnarled. It bears white flowers in June and a hard type of fruit which is not gathered until the end of October when it has to be kept until soft or "bletted" before it can be used to make preserves. The successful grafting can be clearly seen, for, from the ground extending two feet up the trunk, the bark is that of the whitethorn and above this the medlar flourishes.

Nurserymen employ grafting to improve fruit trees by using healthy stocks with strong fibrous roots and grafting on to them good, new varieties of apples and pears. The stock is carefully prepared by cutting, the scion or shoot is introduced and the graft closely sealed with wax and bound round with raffia. The operation takes place in the spring when the sap is rising and when the tree to be grafted is ready and able to supply nourishment to the young shoot.

In only one part of the Bible do we find reference to this horticultural practice, thus indicating that such skills have been known and used for many centuries. Romans 11:17-24 gives a wonderful soliloquy by Paul on this very subject. Surprisingly, the grafting procedure mentioned by Paul is a reversal of the usual practice, for it is the wild, unproductive olive that is grafted on to the good, fruit-bearing stock, but the point that Paul makes is quite clear. The Gentile believers had been out in the wilderness among the wild briars and they are shown to be taken by God and grafted into what the prophet Jeremiah calls "a green olive tree, fair and of goodly fruit". This act was accomplished by the grace of God and the Gentile Christians were able to share in the richness of the root and sap of the blessings of mercy and salvation promised to Israel. Paul is under no delusions, for in v.24 he says that all this is "contrary to nature", yet God does it still. Even today His life, all the depth of riches and wisdom and knowledge of God first revealed to His own chosen people, can flow into our impoverished lives.

There is a vein of sadness running through Paul's soliloquy, for he admits that his own people, the unbelieving Jews, were severed from the olive tree of the Lord. There is a real longing in his heart for the glorious day when the vigorous Gentile shoots and the restored Jewish branches will reach the perfection of growth and maturity as promised in Hosea 14:6: "His branches shall spread, and his beauty shall be as the olive tree, and his smell as Lebanon."

William Barclay D.D. comments: "Here in this passage is the answer to those who discard the Old Testament as merely a Jewish book which is irrelevant for Christianity. He is a foolish man who kicks away the ladder which has raised him to the height which he has reached. It would be a foolish branch which cut itself off from its stem. The new faith grew from the old. The Jewish faith is the root from which Christianity grew. The consummation will only come when the wild olive and the garden olive are altogether one, and when there are no branches at all left unengrafted on the parent stem."

A WITNESS SHOULD BE PREPARED TO SACRIFICE FOR CHRIST. The Greek word for witness means martyr and, as Alexander Cruden points out, "signifies one that gives testimony to the truth at the expense of his life". This is what the Christians in the early Church were prepared to be and many of them were martyrs for the truth. They were not ashamed of the truth, which is never popular with the masses. They emulated their Lord and Master who Himself is referred to in the Word as a Witness (Isaiah 55:4), a faithful Witness, (Revelation 1:5) and a good Witness (1 Timothy 6:13), who "fearlessly witnessed to the truth before Pontius Pilate" (Phillips). This is the role we are called upon to play. Are we prepared to pay the sacrifice, to live or die for the cause of Christ? Never has there been a time when the Church needed faithful witnesses more than today.

Fishing for Men by Sumrall, says that the world "witness" occurs 175 times in the New Testament relating to preaching 112 times and 106 times in relationship to personal witness for Christ. Preachers need to be reminded of this. Our job is not only preaching the Gospel in the pulpit, but also personally contacting men to proclaim Christ. Are we good and faithful witnesses in this respect?

WE SHOULD TRAIN BELIEVERS TO BE EFFECTIVE WITNESSES. They should constantly be doing it. Holding a campaign or crusade is not a substitute for personal evangelism by each member of the local church, but a supplement to the activity. Members trained in personal witnessing are a great asset to an evangelist holding a campaign. Both should work together.

The New Testament teaches that each believer should become an effective witness. We have the examples of Christ, Paul and others. In practically all the Epistles there is reference to this subject. The members in all the New Testament churches were expected to witness. See Acts 8:4; Ephesians 4:12; Philippians 2:16; 1 Thessalonians 1:8.

There are three ways to get members of local churches moving along this line: by teaching from Scripture, showing our responsibility to the lost; by participation, example and experience; by organising, having a plan and working to it (see my book on Doorbell Evangelism).

"Witnessing is the whole work of the whole Church for the whole age."

The challenge facing the Church is a formidable one. To meet it we need to mobilize all our members to become WORSHIPPERS, WORKERS, WITNESSES. In doing this we will bring glory and honour to God, blessing and expansion to the Church and salvation to the lost.

Nonentity

by Ron Williams

Pastor of our Rochester church

I COULDN'T really understand what was going on as I turned my car into what is locally known as "nobs' row". You know the sort of place. Estate agents would describe it as "a much sought-after locality".

This day it was different. The residential character gave way to something that looked like a motorway shambles. My wife said, "There's been a smash!"

Then a man called me on with extravagant gestures. As I drew up I queried, "Been an accident, has there?"

"No, nothing special," he replied, "just John Vassall the spy. He's in that house there, that's all."

"Nothing special", "that's all": the words are still ringing loudly in my ears. This explained the cameras and the huddle of about twenty men at the entrance of the drive. I had heard about an hour earlier that Vassall had been paroled, but I hardly imagined that our paths would have been so close that day.

He had my sympathy. The reporters were like flies round a jam-pot. Inside the house was a man eating a civilian breakfast, his first in ten years. He was wondering, the press said later, about how he would make ends meet in the future.

I cannot erase the scene from my mind, nor stop my ears to that man's words: "Nothing special", "That's all". Vassall was at least special enough to get them out of a warm bed, early, on a misty morning; some had even been there all night.

I wonder how Jesus must have felt, for, in a sense, did He not have someone of similar qualification in His band? Forget the news value and the dubious pleasure of hounding an ordinary man from a penal institution to a domiciled prison; here was someone who had feelings, fears that were real, a soul, that's it, a soul. On that score he's no different from you and me.

Feelings take a long time to die with some of us and I wonder if society will ever be big enough to forgive a man who has paid the price for his crime? The Scripture forcibly says something about if we don't forgive, we shall not be forgiven. Man today is pursued by a host of things that would enslave him eternally and Satan would see to it our deeds were public enough to make us shy of society for ever. Is this what God has in mind?

I am a follower of Jesus Christ because I accept all that evangelical theology says about His deity, death and resurrection, but particularly because He gave me a chance to live again, an opportunity extended to all who will believe.

Christ came to a world of no-hopers and gave them hope. This was done, not by reminding us of our persistent sinning, but by the good news of full release from sin's thralldom.

A significant aspect of Christ's ministry was lifting the fallen. Take the incident in John 8, the woman taken in adultery. The Scribes and Pharisees were there in menacing manner to see justice done, but when Jesus finished writing on the ground, He asked, "Hath no man condemned thee?" She replied, "No man, Lord". Jesus said to her, "Neither do I condemn thee: go, and sin no more."

I can't help it, but I keep seeing those men with all their paraphernalia, watching and waiting, yet I know that if John Vassall, or anyone for that matter, was to stand before Jesus Christ as a repentant sinner, I am sure that Jesus would say, "Neither do I condemn thee: go, and sin no more." This is fact. The Bible says that "If we confess our sins, He is faithful and just to forgive us our sins".

D.J. Ayling

Monday, December 4th

James 4: 11–17

“If the Lord will, we shall live, and do this” (v.15). DOING the will of the Lord is far more than putting D.V. after any notice or arrangement; sometimes this can be simply asking God to rubber stamp what we have already arranged. It must be a whole mode of life, which expects the will of God to open out before us every day. Many Christians expect guidance for great events in their life, but they forget that the everyday things also have a place in our heavenly Father’s plan. He who notes the lily of the field delights in leading His children every day through their lives. This is the secret in which Paul delights: “Thanks be unto God, which always causeth us to triumph in Christ . . . in every place” (2 Corinthians: v.14).

Tuesday, December 5th

James 5: 1–11

“Be patient therefore, brethren, unto the coming of the Lord” (v.7).

THERE are three examples of patience in this passage: the patience of the husbandman waiting for fruition (v.7); the patience of the prophets waiting for the fulfilment of their words (v.10); the patience of Job waiting for the completion of God’s purposes in his affliction (v.11). Surely we are waiting for all three: to see the fruit of our works for Christ; to see the fulfilment of prophecy at His coming; to see the great plan of God coming to pass in our afflictions. Best of all, we wait to see Christ.

Wednesday, December 6th

James 5:12–20

“The effectual fervent prayer . . . availeth much” (v.16).

MY Bible margin translates “effectual” as “practical”. Practical, fervent prayer is our thought today. So often our lack of prayer for specific needs is an easy way to cover unbelief. To pray in a general way does not need much faith. It is when we ask directly in prayer and ask specifically that our faith is evident. Elijah prayed “that it might not rain: and it rained not”. You could not get anything more direct than this. In our prayer lives today dare we ask God practically for what we need? We should not be surprised to find that direct asking obtains direct answers.

Thursday, December 7th

Psalm 73:1–12

“My steps had well nigh slipped. For I was envious at the foolish” (v.2,3).

IN reading this passage, one must bear in mind that God’s answer to the seeming success of the wicked comes in tomorrow’s reading. There are, however, many spiritual principles that are important here. The psalmist confesses that he nearly slipped through watching the wicked. The Christian is never asked to peer into the ways of the wicked. Only by keeping our gaze steadfastly on Christ shall we be victorious. We shall not convict the wicked by our round denunciation of their sins alone, but lives that have looked on Christ will have a convicting effect far more effective than any other.

Friday, December 8th

Psalm 73:13–28

“I am continually with thee” (v.23).

THE psalmist has been to God and has now seen the end of the wicked. How quickly they slip down to destruction and are gone! Then he compares this with the believer’s hope. We are continually with God. Every experience can only go on to bring us more into His presence and blessing: “Thou hast holden me . . . shall guide me . . . afterward receive me to glory” (vv. 23,24). What more can our hearts desire than this? May we be ever conscious that our God is continually with us!

Saturday, December 9th

Psalm 74:1–23

“Remember thy congregation, which Thou hast purchased of old” (v.2).

THIS day is my spiritual birthday. I was converted twenty-seven years ago on this date. How far God has led me since those days, yet how thrilling it is to go back further and to realise that God’s plans did not start then. They only came to fruition in my life at that moment — or started to — but God’s planning and purposes for us stretch back into eternity. The cross of our salvation was no rush plan to patch up a crumbling situation, but the eternal plan of God to bring us nearer to Him than even Eden could have brought us.

Am I as real now as in that first simple coming to Christ? God is!

Sunday, December 10th

Psalm 75:1–10

“For that Thy name is near Thy wondrous works declare” (v.1).

THE sinner looks at the great works of God in creation and the world around and declares that God is great, but too great to be interested in such as he. The saint looks at the same glories and wonders and cries that this is his Father’s world and he has a place in it. He uses the wondrous works of God to realise that God is close to him. If our God is so great as to make all things, then He is too great not to be close to those who trust in Him. The very wonder of His workings on our behalf brings Him near to us, but even more importantly, they bring us near to Him.

Another Slant

THE receptionist at the Regional Hospital Board offices was not at the desk, so I asked two men how I could find an architect with whom I had an appointment, mentioning his name. "He's been dead for about three months" one replied, to which I responded, "I was talking to him on the phone THIS MORNING!" They looked non-plussed, so I thanked them, realising that there there must be some explanation of it all.

"He's been dead..." says the world about our Saviour, but I talked to Him this morning. Did you? I know this answer would not satisfy the sceptics. For many of them nothing would, but it satisfies me, praise God. I am naif, simple, when it comes to spiritual things. Is this what Jesus meant when He talked about becoming "as little children"?

Incidentally the explanation was simple. The man whom they mentioned was the father who had died some months ago, but they did not know that his son, of the same name, had recently joined the architects' department. To some "mod" theologians God is dead (that's a contradiction of terms if you like — work it out!), but to us the Son is very much alive!

Waiting to interview one architect I picked up a recent copy of Building Specification and to my delight found an interesting feature on the Elim Pentecostal Church at Halifax, from every building angle. It certainly will prove a useful opening for witnessing to that profession: "Did you see the new Elim Church featured in Specification?" You have to find the point of contact that can get you talking naturally, so that you can introduce Christ, and it is there if we look.

Thinking of buildings, one remembers that some of the places in which Pentecostals of earlier days gathered were ghastly to say the least. Some nostalgically claim that "the blessing" was there, and how right they are, but on the whole I feel that the emphasis on better buildings is good. The spirit that inspired the erection of some of our lovely Anglican churches ought to be ours. God is worthy of the best that we can do for Him.

This has not always been the motive behind generous giving, as I was reminded the other day. A certain brewery family in Birmingham at the turn of the century donated the pulpit for the local parish church. Having spent some years in Burton upon Trent I know of other instances, too. God grant that our work will never be floated on beer barrels or on any other dubious form of acquiring wealth either. It's the sacrifice that makes the giving worth while, from His point of view and ours. I am sure that the Lord does not set a premium on fine architecture, or expensive buildings, but neither does He on dirty hovels which dishonour His name, for a clean heart ought to ensure that His house is in order. How many people would be horrified if their homes were left in the condition in which they worship. Haggai had quite a bit to say to the "do it yourself" worshipper who neglects the Lord's house in maintaining his own. Have a look round the church next time you go and see what you can do on this very practical point. It will cheer your pastor no end, I am sure. On the other hand thank God for those, both brethren and sisters, who, often unseen and unsung, ensure that their church is a credit to them and the Lord whom they love. There are those in my church, fortunately, and it is a joy to see the satisfaction their service gives them.

Working as an assistant health visitor in Sutton Coldfield, in a part-time capacity, my wife speaks of the many whom she visits, often elderly or infirm, who need a word of cheer and the assurance of God's love. She is discovering that affluence does not, of itself, bring contentment. I would add, however, that poverty can bring discontent. Enough and some to spare for others, seems a good maxim to me.

THE marvellous thing about our salvation is the desire of God that there should exist a relationship between us and our Saviour, on His part "as steadfast as the eternal throne", on our part developing, deepening, becoming ever fuller, richer, more absorbing.

Religion is so often so impersonal. How can you have an on-going experience with an idol or an image? Some weird kind of dialogue with the Devil and his agents might well ensue from idol worship, but the alleged object or representation which is "worshipped", being inanimate, can offer nothing of warmth or of real involvement.

The so-called gods or prophets of history who ever did live and who founded religions are dead. They can produce no direct response, no intimate fellowship with their followers and successors, for they have gone.

Jesus Christ our Lord, however, is eternal. He was before He came. He became incarnate; He was "made flesh and dwelt among us". There were those who "beheld His glory", who were able to examine, even to touch the very physical evidences of His suffering. They were those of whom men "took knowledge... that they had been with Jesus". More even than this, Jesus our Lord is alive now in the power of an endless life. Jesus is alive... alive!

"Our fellowship is with the Father and with His Son". Eternal life is knowing "the only true God, and Jesus Christ" whom He sent. There is no wonder that our devotional hymns are so intensely, intensively personal. "Jesus the very thought of Thee with sweetness fills my breast"; "Jesus, Jesus, Jesus... Saviour, Lover, Lord"; "I cannot breathe enough of Thee"; "O wonderful glorious Redeemer, I would worship Thee, Saviour divine, and rejoice, though surrounded with praises, Thou wilt still hear a song such as mine" — these are the very expression of worship and fellowship. Deep calls to deep. Heart beats with heart. Jesus is near. Nothing else signifies at those moments.

"Let me touch Him... let me touch Jesus!"

YORK

Pastor: A. Brooks

A SUNDAY school anniversary can bring surprises. Our branch school at Acomb held their anniversary in the church recently and some eighty children packed the pulpit and platform for the occasion. The primary children were there, too, and, after they had done their part by singing some choruses to us in a lusty manner, they sat very patiently through the remainder of the service.

Who would have thought that the Olympic Games could have anything to do with an anniversary service? There were three winners on the rostrum, first second and third in the walking race, proudly receiving gold, silver, and bronze medals. There is another race to be won — for Jesus! Witnessing was a feature at the Olympic Games. The point is made and we remember that we must all run in this race for Jesus and we must train to run well.

Thank you, children, for good singing. May you grow in grace in the service of the Lord Jesus. Your Sunday school teachers do a good job with the lessons. We have learned a little from you. May all that you are taught remain in your hearts and fortify you in your future life.

U.D.A. Members at Crusade

PASTOR S. Shaw recently concluded a two weeks' campaign in Lurgan, Co. Armagh, named "South Lurgan for Christ Crusade".

We were privileged to have in the congregation on one of the nights about twenty members of the First Battalion (Lurgan) Ulster Defence Association (U.D.A.). They came in full battle-dress. The photograph shows the Campaign Committee along with some of the U.D.A. members. Pastor and Mrs. Shaw are in the centre. The service was not in any way political. The U.D.A. members were confronted with the Gospel and the claims of Christ just as were the rest of the congregation.

ABERDARE

IN September we united with our Mountain Ash Church for a baptismal service at the local A.o.G. Mission. There were three candidates from each church. Two of our ladies are over seventy. Pastor S.C. Squire baptised the candidates and Pastor Gwilym Jones gave the baptismal promises.

In October, one of the Ten Towns Crusades was held here. It was conducted by Pastor Paul Epton. Nothing was spared as we endeavoured to bring Christ to this godless area. Over £140 was spent on the fortnight's varied activities. Thanks to gifts from local people not a penny of the church's finance needed to be spent. God will surely bless such splendid sacrificial giving.

We used six types of advertising to bring the Crusade to public notice. Over 200 individuals attended the services at least once. Many came again and again. Anglicans and Roman Catholics attended, as did people from all the major Nonconformist denominations, even the Unitarians! Our greatest thrill was to see the unchurched come in to hear the gospel and some go out with Christ in their hearts. Over forty decisions were recorded, the greatest response coming from the 13-16 age group, though mothers and grandmothers were also saved. Over 100 children packed the hall for the Children's Specials, all nine of them. The Sunday school has increased by twenty in consequence. Fifty teenagers attended the "Teenage Crowd-In", including Grammar School sixth-formers who taxed us to the full with their searching questions.

Several bodies were healed. One lady with a dislocated wrist was prayed for on the second evening. By the fourteenth she had crotched a shawl, which she brought for display. This resulted in a great shout of praise to God.

Many thanks go to Pastors Squire and Jones for their lively convening of the services. God bless you, Paul Epton, for your marathon efforts, which often lasted from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. May God equally bless our follow-up programme.

PALMERS GREEN

Pastor: J.G. Patterson

THE following appeared in Southgate Gazette in their Opinion column under the title, "The man with a message":

"ONE of the most oft-repeated criticism of the Church is that it is too pre-occupied with its own internal affairs and with liturgy and not sufficiently alive to the hard realities of life.

"No one who has met Jim Patterson, pastor of the Elim Pentecostal Church in Palmers Green, could say that applied to him. Mr. Patterson, an eager and practical young minister, is not remote man of the cloth. He has experienced life in the Services, and in a wide range of civilian occupations which have brought him in close contact with people in all walks of life.

"Mr Patterson is intensely sympathetic to the problems and difficulties of his fellows. It is a sympathy born of his own personal problems which once found him close to suicide.

"It was his enthusiasm and desire to help others which recently brought him into court when he unwittingly broke the law in using a pirate radio station to broadcast the Christian message.

"Anxious to continue this branch of his evangelistic work without infringing the regulations Mr. Patterson has now come up with a scheme.

"Already several hundred people have tried out the idea of dialling a number to hear a three minute message of hope and inspiration, recorded by the minister. A different message is broadcast each day and already many people, some unhappy and depressed, have testified to the uplift the message has given them.

Photograph: Kelvin Studios

"There is nothing in this idea for Jim Patterson except the satisfaction of helping those who need it. In fact the scheme is something of a financial headache, which it is hoped may be eased by gifts from well wishers.

"Those who criticise the church for its stuffiness and lack of imagination should meet Jim Patterson. He's not the sort who merely waits; he goes out looking for people to help."

Jim Patterson adds:

ALL the local newspapers gave this venture maximum publicity. Radio London broadcast a ten-minute interview on two occasions. In the first month we received over 2,200 calls and as many as 150 in one day. A number have written or 'phoned me requesting prayer and a visit. I went to one home and showed a thirty-minute gospel film. By adding a loud-speaker to our equipment we plan to broadcast live a thirty-minute service into local old people's homes and flats and common rooms.

GOSPORT

Pastor: R.T. McDonald

AT an outreach to the youth of our town, a local cafe was rented for a week and was open for business each evening from 7.45 p.m. Coffee was only a minor detail. Our real aim was to present the good news to everyone who came in and to urge them to come alive in Christ.

Pastor Adrian L. Hawkes led the crusade which started with a teach-in on evangelism. The same evening a youth rally was held with Pastor Maldwyn Jones, the Presbyterian Youth Director, as the speaker.

During the following week the "Come Alive" coffee bar was well attended. Each evening the gospel was sung by visiting groups, who also testified of God's saving power. The epilogue every night by Pastor Hawkes gave opportunity for personal witnessing. Seven decisions were made and fifteen indicated that they would like to know more.

The coffee bar was staffed by our young people and the remainder of the church gave their support as well. Members promised to pray for half an hour at a time so that every evening for the whole week was covered by someone praying. Practical help was given in the form of baby-sitters for those who needed them.

The coffee bar has closed, but, we know this was only the beginning. Many more will "come alive" through our witness.

WESTON-SUPER-MARE Pastor: J.B.D. Ritchie
AT our Sunday school prizegiving the prizes were presented by Mr. R. Mainstone and our Pastor. There were many lovely books. Bibles were given to children who had good attendance. A good Gospel message was then given by our Pastor.

We were very pleased to see so many parents and we pray that they will come again to our services.

The Sunday school has an attendance of about thirty-five to forty children each week. Please pray for them and the teachers.

FRANCES BOARD

CLAPHAM, London Pastor: I.R. Moore
"IF the Pentecostal experience stays with the older members of the church and is not manifested in the youth, then it will not be long before the ministry of the Gifts and all that goes with them will be a thing of the past." This is the gist of what Pastor J. Lancaster said on the final day of our golden jubilee celebrations.

We were reminded over the five weeks again and again that our commission is to preach a complete Foursquare Gospel. Upon such a foundation Elim was built, with the Lord confirming the Word with signs following.

Looking back can be destructive, but there are times when it is productive, and our jubilee services have been like this. We have had a few of our past ministers to preach and by listening to reminiscences we have become aware of the power of God in the past and the need for more of that power in the future. We have been very much blessed and challenged by the ministry of the Word from Pastors E.F. Cole, C.J. E. Kingston, The President (T.W. Walker), and J.C. Kennedy, not to mention our very dear brother Joseph Smith (who is affectionately known as "the evergreen" by our assembly). The jubilee would not have been complete without a visit from the London Crusader choir under the direction of Pastor Douglas B. Gray.

The month was completed by the ordination service and by the ministry of Pastor Lancaster, our President-Elect.

It has been a time of fellowship and hard work and it would not be fitting to close this report without mentioning all the efforts of our brothers and sisters to clean and beautify the church building, following the redecoration.

We much enjoyed the ministry in song by our special soloists for the month.

What has it all achieved? We believe that it has been a time of stocktaking, a halting-place where we looked back over the past years to see where the Hand of God was leading us and to see also where the efforts were of the flesh.

Jubilee Year is a time of restitution, remarrying and rededication. We are still at war. The enemy has not changed. The heart of man is still the same. The remedy is still the same. Let us go forward still preaching "This same Jesus" who is the same today as yesterday, and will be unto the end.

VAZON, Guernsey Pastor: A.C. Jarvis
TWO weeks of intensive outreach have just been completed in Vazon. The first was for boys and girls. Besides the usual stories, quizzes, etc., a series of sound filmstrips on the life of Christ proved to be an attraction and crowds of youngsters came. A number of children made decisions for the Lord and there has since been an improvement in Sunday school attendance.

The second week was a successful outreach by the Crusaders, through film and coffee bar evangelism. Guest preacher was Pastor David Beresford of Macclesfield, whose ministry to the church and to the youth was much appreciated.

Vazon children's crusade on the first night — the least attended. The editor of the Island's newspaper's children's column included a write-up of the crusade in his weekly feature.

The Minister and his Work

by A. S. F. Horne

Pastor of Elim Pentecostal Church, Ipswich

A MINISTER is one charged with the performance of a duty or the execution of a will. It is God's will that all men should be saved. We are charged with the performance of the duty to preach the Gospel and it is through the foolishness of preaching that men are saved.

If in our travels we see a tree to all appearances withered and dry, the vital principle having fled, we conclude that it has lost the power of reproduction and will soon die. New buds and the formation of new branches would speak of life, freshness and vigour. We would expect that tree to live and multiply itself for years to come.

By the same rule of reasoning, if we discover a church, a movement, which has lost its vitalising energy and, as a consequence, is seeing no conversions, we will be certain that that Church, that movement, will become extinct.

While efforts are being put forth that can only originate in vigorous life — new churches being opened, congregations being held and enlarged, holy lives being lived — we can be certain that that church, that movement, will be around for a long time.

Will you please look at your church, our movement, your life? It is good to be still and to know God; really to know God is to know oneself.

For fifty years we have been building on the foundations laid by our founder ministers and members. We must lay foundations so that operations in the future will be crowned with great and glorious success.

We must be baptised with the same Spirit as in time past. We must devote ourselves to the work with the same earnestness and perseverance. The same glorious results will follow.

What reason can any man advance as to why piety should not be as deep, zeal as ardent, and the spirit of self-sacrifice as great, in this generation as in the last?

I believe that God has a man for every emergency and an emergency for every man. There are no small things in the Divine Economy. Never let us talk about our small work for God. There is "an empty niche in the file of royal status" which only the proportions of your personality will fit and fill. No one else can do your work. In the car of humanity there is always room for one more. The size of the room depends on the man. Someone has said, "Man is the biggest circumstance in the realm of the circumstantial". A man makes a place in the world and then fills it.

Let us as members, as a church, as a movement, make a place in which to work and then fill it with service to God. The surging waves of humanity will give every man just as much room as he really demands.

When we plunge into the ocean of human achievement, we will make and fill our own island where the waters touch our individuality on every side.

Testimony Time

IN February 1972, X-Ray plates showed that I had a large stone in my left kidney. These plates were seen by two local doctors and myself.

In August this year I had to go into hospital for internal examinations and further X-Rays to clarify whether the kidney would have to be removed or only the stone. Before going into hospital, however, prayer was made in Jesus' name according to His Word.

In October I had the results of the hospital's findings. Both kidneys were functioning perfectly, with no trace of a stone.

God still works miracles today and honours prayer in the mighty name of Jesus!

I thank the Lord for His care. To Him be the praise and glory!

Mountain Rescue

Words and

MR and Mrs. Smith were worried. Their children were nowhere to be found.

After dinner, Sandra and David had decided to take their dog, Rover, for a walk, and had told their parents that they would not be long. Now it was very late in the afternoon and snow had begun to fall.

"We will search the mountain," said the policeman, "but, as it will be far too dangerous to go on foot, I will send for the air rescue team."

He flashed an S.O.S. message to the R.A.F. station and soon a helicopter had taken off with the pilot and his assistant on board.

The pilot flew low over the mountain, searching the snow-covered ground for a sign of the children.

On the mountain, Sandra and David sheltered beneath a rock. "We should never have come so far," said Sandra. "I do wish we could find our way home."

"So do I," said David, "but we'll have to wait until the snow stops. Listen! Can you hear that noise?"

"It's a sort of humming sound," said David. "Oh, look! It's a helicopter! Give me your scarf, Sandra, and I'll wave it to attract the pilot's attention."

The helicopter hovered above them for a few moments and, when the pilot spotted the children, he landed near them. Sandra and David climbed up into the machine and they were soon on their way home.

"Thank you for coming to our rescue," said David. "We might have been stranded on the mountain all night."

"I would have kept searching until I had found you," said the pilot. "But you must never wander so far from home again."

"Oh, now we won't," said the children, "we have learned our lesson."

This is like the wonderful truth of the Gospel. The Bible tells us that Jesus came to seek the lost. He is ever ready to hear our cries and comes to our help straightaway. The most wonderful thing of all is that Jesus never gives up. He keeps on searching until He finds, and rescues, those who are lost.

From the Secretary-General

ROYAL ALBERT HALL TRAFALGAR SQUARE ANNUAL CONFERENCE

OUR greatest need is a continuous revival in every one of us as members of Christ's body. In our beloved Movement, in all our churches, in every church department, our great need and prayer is, "Lord, send revival; Lord, send a mighty revival." Times of fellowship stimulate revival, inspire confidence, release joy and gratify the heart of God. On the great occasions, and all the time, let us pray for, work for, and come for revival.

God is in the midst of His people and working His purposes out. Going after the unconverted and bringing them under the sound of the Gospel is surely God's call to us today.

On these great soul saving occasions let us prepare a great harvest field ready for reaping by bringing the unconverted. Let us move with the times, move with God and with His Spirit. God indeed is moving by His Spirit, and in unexpected ways and places. He surely has moved upon us in the great Easter conventions and Rallies, and the Annual Conferences. Had more unconverted been under the sound of the Gospel greater would have been the ingathering. Reserve places for the unconverted with your coach parties. Let us pack our Easter Conventions and Rallies everywhere, and our Annual Conference, and believe for healings, Baptisms in the Holy Spirit and salvation according to His promise. "God is moving by His Spirit". He will move upon us as we meet in fellowship.

The gentle Giant

HEAD and shoulders above the people, like Saul of old, Jaksoni stood before the full church in distress of mind and spirit. The very sight of him evoked memories of his great strength. Had I not heard of how he could compete with five ordinary men, of his feats with cattle? Now he was in distress. He asked for counsel and help.

"Brethren", he began, "I was at my house sitting in the sun. A man appeared before me, a pagan I had known years before. He said to me, 'Bwana, do you remember how you treated me, what you did to me long ago? This very day I will take my vengeance. I will give you a severe beating.' I looked at him and saw that he was bent on quarrelling and filled with a desire for revenge. I looked into my own heart and saw only peace in Yesu. I had no quarrel with anyone. Am I not a son of God now? I leapt to my feet and ran. The man pursued me round my house, round the garden, through the fields. I dived into the bush. He followed. He almost caught me as I eluded him around a large tree. I climbed on to an anthill and then down the other side. I was weary. I stopped and faced him. He came up, saying 'Now I have you, fool: now I will take my vengeance.' He struck me with his stick. I never moved. He struck me a second time with all his strength. I thought that he would be satisfied, but, as he got ready to strike again, I was overcome by my pain and felt that I could bear no more. I hit him just once and knocked him out. I then stood looking at him. I had great grief in my heart, because I had struck a man. He began to come round and I thought, 'Surely he will cease. Surely his anger must be finished?'. But no, he began to strike me again. I hit him once more and he did not recover consciousness until after he had been carried home by his people.

"So today, brethren, I stand before you to tell you all the troubles of my heart. I did not want to strike that man, but, even if I did not want to, I have hurt him. My hands are soiled. I ask help here before the church and before God."

The Christians were astonished and sorrowful. Some said, "Brother, I do not know if I would have run so far or born so much as you did. I fear I would have retaliated quickly." Others were moved to tears as they heard the story of his endurance. Others visualised the giant fleeing before the small man and laughed aloud. All were sympathetic and began to pray for Jaksoni.

Eventually, the church elders said, "We have sought the face of the Lord. The thing is cleansed in the blood of Yesu. Jaksoni, when that man is healed and his anger has cooled, take two of us and go to him and ask his pardon. If he agrees, you will rejoice; if he refuses, it will be his fault. Go in peace! The Lord bless you!"

Christ my Lord was there

I lost my way. Ahead of me was darkness.
My soul cried out in anguish and despair,
I knew not where to turn nor who could help
me—

But Christ my Lord was there.

Yes, He was there, but in my hour of weakness

I could not see nor feel His presence near,
What hope had I of finding peace in turmoil?

Yet Christ my Lord was there.

And when I felt my very heart was breaking,
No further anguish could my spirit bear,
I cried, "Dear Saviour, in Thy mercy help me"—

And knew my Lord was there.

What joy was mine when Jesus stooped and touched me,

What peace to know that He was in control!
My heart rejoiced that He had sought and found me

And He had saved my soul.

RUTH WILSON.

Elim - what's that?

asks George Canty

ONE woman thought that Elim was a new patent medicine. Another (like me at first) thought that it was the "healing church". How hopeless it would be to let Elim be no more than a rubber-stamped name across the back of a tract in people's minds. This came home to me as I listened to a real expert on communications, the B.B.C. Religious Organiser.

The Gospel may be well set out in a tract, but it tends to be abstract, just a church doctrine. Truth needs to be personalised. In the highest form, this means person to person confrontation, the Gospel tied up with the presenter as an individual witness. So the B.B.C. expert made me to understand. The better people know you, the more effective is your truth.

The literature of a church often lacks this essential: the outsider doesn't "know" the church. It is an unknown quantity to him. To get into the mind of the unconverted that "Jesus saves", it is important also to get across that your church is a wonderful, living embodiment of that Gospel, warm, alive, and relevant. This is effective communication. Otherwise the message doesn't have the human throb about it which is so vital.

If the people are to believe the Gospel, they must believe in the sincerity and vitality of the church that presents the Gospel. But how can this be if they don't know anything about that church?

To get this feeling across is, for an individual church, generally far too costly, and the writing is hard. Some think that they know what is the best and how to "put it across", but they think in Christian language and idioms. What they like to read, they suppose that the unsaved will also like. This is the great problem for those who write for the unsaved directly. What they write has to be approved by the Christian who buys it, who has very likely never made any study of the essentials of communicating the Gospel in print.

In my own case, it looked easy, until I tried. Then I knew that I had much to learn. It took years of writing and experiment.

Then I attempted to produce a propaganda sheet to tell folk what Elim was and what it believed and did, to explain in terms the unconverted could understand what were ideas like salvation, Pentecost, the Second Advent, repentance and so on.

After consultation with others on the Publicity board — all experienced writers — I worked for months and came up at last with Issue no 3 of Elim News. I wanted it to be a very cheap piece of literature which would describe all about Elim, get its teaching across, and most of all get the Gospel across. Elim had no such piece of literature, not even in expensive book form.

From it, people can learn of Elim's work, its friendliness, and that it isn't just a local huddle of holy Joes, but a representative part of a world-wide, significant, very much alive movement. It contains ten times more matter than most other single pamphlets costing the same; for example, it includes three Gospel articles which alone would cost more than Elim News.

Already over 40,000 copies have been distributed. Since the last issue (No.2.) six years ago, newsprint paper has risen in cost about six times, but Elim News is still only 1p and is equal to a sixteen-page booklet, which usually costs about 5p because it is mass produced.

Elim News is intended to supplement other Gospel literature. It is a complete summary of things that people must know about Elim in every way, which, once people know, they will accept as groundwork to the Gospel Elim preaches.

The ruling Principle of Christianity

IT is clearly evident from the New Testament that the ruling principle in the everyday life of Christians is the will of God.

Nowhere is this more amply and emphatically demonstrated than in the life and ministry of the Lord Jesus. He was the perfect and pattern Servant, for He unhesitatingly accepted the will of God as the ruling principle in every department of His daily life. He said: "I came down from heaven, not to do Mine own will, but the will of Him that sent Me" (John 6:38).

His supreme aspiration, the passionate desire of His soul, was to live His life in obedience to God. He alone in the highest sense could say: "Lo, I come: in the volume of the book it is written of Me, I delight to do Thy will, O My God" (Psalm 40:7,8). He did not do the will of God merely as a duty; He found the greatest joy in living in the centre of God's perfect will. "I delight to do Thy will" literally means, "I am bent to do Thy will". All His desires were instinctively, distinctively set to do the Father's will. He did not obey God's will by constraint or with reluctance, but ever wholeheartedly. It did not always lead Him into pleasant, peaceful pastures of plentifulness, but, more often than not, He followed paths of persecution, misunderstanding and finally death, yet the bent of His whole life was to fulfil the Divine plan.

The Master would have His disciples emulate Him in obedience to the will of God for their lives. He taught His first disciples to do this by exhorting them to direct their aspirations and ambitions into the channel of God's will. The forceful challenge to all followers of Jesus is so to be gripped by the governing principle of obedience, that they will do God's will daily without hesitation or complaint.

A telling illustration of this is the record of the living creatures in Ezekiel's vision. They so delighted in obeying the voice of the Spirit that, as soon as they completed a given task, they returned like a flash of lightning to receive further instructions. They delighted in the ministry of obedience. The true disciple seeks to do the will of God promptly, continually; he is never happier than when thus engaged.

The great antidote to a life of spiritual starvation and the means to a life of spiritual strength is to do the will of God. Every Christian should aspire to do this, for in so doing there is enrichment of soul, the magnifying of the Lord Jesus in his life, and the glorification of God in his daily walk and witness.

Obedience to the will of God is the basis of spiritual knowledge. Jesus said so: "My doctrine is not Mine, but His that sent Me. If any man will do His will, he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God, or whether I speak of myself" (John 7:16, 17). These words were addressed to Jews who considered that the only source of wisdom was learning. They looked upon Jesus as only the son of Joseph, and one who to their knowledge had received no scholastic education, hence their amazement at the depth of wisdom and knowledge contained in His discourses. They said: "How knoweth this man letters, having never learned?" The secret lay in His absorption of the Father's will. Jesus wanted them to understand that obedience to the Divine will was the basis of wisdom and knowledge.

Professor Henry Drummond wrote: "Obedience, as it is sometimes expressed, is the organ of spiritual knowledge. As the eye is the organ of physical sight and the mind of intellectual sight so the organ of spiritual vision is this strange power, obedience."

The condition on which knowledge of the truth is obtainable is obedience to the will of God. The knowledge of God's will not only relates to truth, but also to judgment and practice. To know it in relation to these three things one must obey God; His will must have pre-eminence and predominance.

Firstly, this must be so in the counsels of the mind. On reading the life of Jesus recorded in the Gospels one marvels, as did those who heard Him, at His unerring judgment. One incident will suffice to illustrate this. When questioned by the Pharisees concerning the tribute money He said: "Render therefore unto Caesar the things which are Caesar's; and unto God the things that are God's." The Pharisees had hoped that, in answering this question, He would bring Himself into disfavour either with the people or the Roman authorities. If He had answered, "Render it to Caesar", they would have stirred up the people against Him, saying that He put Caesar before Jehovah. If He had said, "Render it to God", they would have accused Him before Pilate of speaking against the dignity and power of Caesar. The wisdom of Jesus outwitted them. What was the secret of the Lord's unerring judgment? He Himself supplied the answer: "My judgment is just; because I seek not Mine own will, but the will of the Father which hath sent Me" (John 5:30). He could not make a mistake or give an unwise, untimely answer, because he lived and moved in the atmosphere of God's will. This comes not by learning or study (except that portion of it already revealed in the Bible), but by obeying His voice and the leading of the Holy Spirit.

Much good work for God is spoiled through ill-judged method because of a lack of knowledge concerning the Divine will. A man may perform some particular ministry for the extension of God's kingdom and yet act unwisely in the performance of it through not seeking to know and act according to the will of God concerning the procedure He should adopt. For instance, a man is prompted by the Holy Spirit to speak to another concerning the salvation of His soul, but, without waiting for the Spirit's leading regarding the manner of approach, he rushes up to the individual and issues in a commanding tone the challenge, "Are you saved?" The other person is ruffled and immediately adopts an independent, indignant attitude, thus further conversation is impaired or rendered impossible. Such unwise methods witness to the necessity of one's judgment being according to the will of God.

Secondly, God's will must be pre-eminent and predominant in the formation of character. God desires and decrees that His children should be holy, that they should live well-pleasing in His sight, and that they should be as epistles read by men to the glory of His name. Such a standard can only be attained and maintained in the life where the Father's will predominates. Strong Christian character accrues from the knowledge of God's will and the translation of it into holy living. In this connection the will of God is already largely revealed in the Word of God, but, to be Christ-like in character, the onus rests upon the Christian to submit daily to the revealed will. Such passages of Scripture as, "God hath not called us unto uncleanness, but unto holiness" and "For this is the will of God, even your sanctification", show the character of life Christians are to manifest before God and men.

Thirdly, God's will must be pre-eminent and predominant in the circumstances of life. To possess spiritual knowledge, His will must be sought and accepted as the ruling factor in every detail of life. It may be definitely made known beforehand concerning some of the circumstances of life. Jesus knew beforehand the circumstances surrounding His betrayal, trial and death. Paul knew beforehand certain circumstances of his life. The significant forecast of Jesus concerning him was: "I will shew him how great things he must suffer for My name's sake" (Acts 9:16). Possibly that revelation contained some of the things narrated by Paul in later years when writing to the Corinthians: "In perils of waters, in perils of robbers, in perils by my own countrymen, in perils by the heathen, in perils in the city, in perils in the wilderness, in perils in the sea, in perils among false brethren" (2 Corinthians 11:26).

On the other hand the will of God may only become intelligible in the process of some circumstance of life. Philip was commanded by the angelic messenger of God to go to the Gaza desert. He was not told why, but he immediately went without questioning the mind of God. In the desert he met the Ethiopian eunuch and pointed him to Christ. On the outward journey from Samaria he may have wondered what could be God's purpose in this sudden change of events, but the meeting with the eunuch answered all the reasonings of his mind and heart; he then understood God's plan.

John may have wondered at first concerning his banishment to the lonely island of Patmos, but he understood later, for in the circumstances of Patmos he received and wrote The Revelation of Jesus Christ.

Bunyan may have wondered why God permitted his imprisonment in Bedford jail at a time of persecution when the weak in the faith needed his help, but in the gloom of his cell he wrote Pilgrim's Progress, a book that has been an inspiration and blessing to many thousands.

Christian, if you are passing the way of trial and difficulty and seeking the will of God without receiving any indication of it, whatever your circumstances may be, rest in His love and He will make Himself known to you by perfecting that which concerns you. In seeking to follow in the Master's steps the Christian's prayer should be: "Help me Lord to conform more and more to Thy perfect will."

The Letter to the Romans

19. Glorification (Romans 8:11-30)

The Evidence of coming Glory

Romans 8:12-17

by J. Alexander Wright

UNDER the title and text, "THE RIGHTEOUSNESS OF GOD" (1:16, 17), which we offered as the theme of Romans, we have considered under "DOCTRINAL", three divisions — the Righteousness of God in CONDEMNATION (1:8-3:20) of Jews and Gentiles alike; JUSTIFICATION (3:21-5:11), its ground, means, and effects; and SANCTIFICATION (6:1-8:10) the principle, practice, preventative, and power of holiness; and a supplementary on the TWO HUMANITIES (5:12-21). We now come to the fourth and last division of the doctrinal section and think about the Righteousness of God in GLORIFICATION (8:11-30). Here is the Evidence of coming Glory (8:12-17).

The Spirit "shall also quicken your mortal bodies" (v.11) is sometimes interpreted as a prophecy about the resurrection of believers at the coming of the Lord, when "This mortal shall put on immortality" (1 Corinthians 15:33), a blessed truth, but the obvious, more immediate meaning is that of the Spirit's quickening and energising power for life and service in the bodies of those in whom He dwells, as Lord of the temples of clay (1 Corinthians 6:19). "Mortal" means not dead, but subject to death; compare "the life of Jesus made manifest in mortal flesh" (2 Corinthians 4:11).

This is not only a prophecy, but also a pledge and a foretaste of glory to come, in the redemption that is to be, "the earnest of the inheritance" into which we fully enter at His coming (Ephesians 1:13, 14). "This, this is the foretaste, but that is the Feast!"

"Therefore we are debtors" (v.12), as Paul was (1:14), but not to the old life, which brought us only misery, pain, and spiritual death (v.13). To the Holy Spirit, who brought us new life from above (v.13), we owe all.

"For as many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God." (v.14) is a puzzling verse to some, who observe that some "sons" are not so led! The word "sons" qualifies not only our relationship to God, but also our state, and denotes those who have "come of age". Different words, not always apparent in the A.V., are used to distinguish "children". from "sons" (see other versions). All the born-again are children (John 1:12 should read "children"), but "sons" are the mature, the grown-up. They follow the Spirit's leading, for this is a mark of maturity. I hear my heavenly Father say to me, "Son, be your age!"

The Holy Spirit who so leads the sons is that Spirit of adoption by whose inspiration we cry, "Abba, Father" (v.15). This refers to a practice common to Romans, but unknown in Jewry, whereby an adopted child always took full rights with the natural heirs of name, property, and status. The Roman parent, or indeed any adoptive parent, could never, though fain he would, impart his own nature to his adopted child, however, even though with all his worldly goods he endowed him. Here then is the wonder of our Father's grace in His "gift of righteousness": we share His nature as well as His name! "Consider the incredible love that the Father has shown us in allowing us to be called 'the children of God' — and that is not just what we are called, but what we ARE" (1 John 3:1, Phillips). Paul did not write "Abba" (in the Palestinian dialect) as merely the equivalent of "Father", to which it is joined. It means that, but more. It is the more intimate form of address, the first utterance of infant speech, the equivalent of our "daddy" or "dada". "My own dear Father" says A.S. Way. Dr. W. Barclay tells us that it is used to this very day by children in the Middle East.

Some will remember the stammering affliction of our late King George VI. Until he was thirty, there was little hope that he could ever master it, but he was taken in hand by an Australian specialist, who warned him that there could be no progress unless he forgot all that he had ever learned about voice production. The specialist took him right back to the beginning and trained him to say, "mama" and

The Spirit-filled Student by Valentine Cunningham. Published by the Students' Pentecostal Fellowship, price 12p, postage and packing 3p extra.

THIS booklet introduces the prospective student to life at college. The Christian Union is shown to be a means of Christian testimony there, but the need for Pentecostal fellowship in a local church is also stressed. The student is a witness at college — after all that's what the Baptism in the Holy Spirit is for — but his studies are also equipping him for effective service afterwards. Guidance is given on the holding of Pentecostal meetings in college and on the place of public lectures, private studies and personal devotions in the student's life. The booklet concludes with a list of recommended books for further reading.

As "first-aid begins at home and in the home church", get it, read it and give it! P.N. MacINNES

The real Christmas? by Pat Boone. Published by Lake-land Paperbacks. Price 25p, postage and packing 3p extra.

THE real Christmas, as seen through the eyes of Pat Boone, is a wonderful excursion through the wonderland of myth and reality. This little book suggests throughout how men should view the Christmas story. Wonderful anecdotes and poetic illustrations make the reader aware of the love of God in simple yet real terms. The questions asked and answered are many and varied, seeking to make one ponder on God's goodness. Many Scriptures assist the writer to portray the real Christmas. This little book contains great wealth and is suitable for most age groups. It would make a good gift for Christmas for a believer or a non-believer. Some gem of truth may well move any reader's heart to a closer walk with God.

"dada" and we know how well he progressed. So the Holy Spirit deals with us. There can be no beginning of the Christian life until we learn, "Abba", "Abba, Father", the prayer of the Son in Gethsemane's agony (Mark 14:36). The Spirit of His Son likewise prays within us (Galatians 4:6).

This form of address to God was unparalleled in all previous Jewish literature and no devout Jew would dare use it. That "the high and lofty One, that inhabiteth eternity, whose name is Holy" might be so approached was unthinkable. Evangelicals are sometimes charged with being over-familiar with the Divine name, but could anything be more familiar than this?

Turning the World upside down. Published by Prophetic Witness Publishing House, price £3, postage and packing 25p extra.

THIS massive volume of 663 pages and 137 photographs contains the record of a hundred years of "Assembly" (Brethren) missionary work. All told it is a remarkable, moving story of personal sacrifice and devotion. Giving rose from £163 in 1872 to £305,289 in 1971. One man began to study to be a doctor at the age of 36 and had to start by taking "O" levels. Another, whose property was threatened by fire, cried "to the Lord who made heaven and earth". The wind suddenly changed direction and the building was saved as by a miracle. Here is a record of a band of men and women, most of whom unknown to the reviewer, but we are proud to call them brethren and sisters. The price, no doubt, will deter many from purchasing this book, but one can always ask for a copy at the local library.

D.W. CARTWRIGHT

Help, by Alice Hill. Published by Coverdale House Publishers Ltd. Price 30p, postage and packing 4p extra.

THERE have been times when all of us have wondered what the Bible has to say about a particular problem or situation. This excellent little book has been written for just such occasions. Appropriately sub-titled The Yellow Pages to the Living Bible, it is designed to help the reader quickly and easily to find what the Word of God says about such things as authority, death miracles, prayer, faith, friendship, work, love, family life, temptation, and many other things. The subjects are arranged alphabetically and under each heading are relevant verses quoted from the Living Bible. The use of this paraphrase makes the Scriptures both enjoyable and easy to accept and to obey.

This book will be of value to all who read it — to the new convert who wants to know what standards God sets, to the Pastor or personal worker who needs the right word to help someone and to the ordinary Christian who requires sound advice from the Scriptures, but is not sure where to begin looking.

Thoughts from the Book of Genesis

3 The Lie of the Serpent (Genesis 3:4)

by F. Lavender

UNTIL the serpent came to Eve, man and woman were ideally happy, for they knew nothing of the shame and corruption of sin. They enjoyed the perfect beauty and goodness of the unspoiled Creation and, above all, they had unbroken, unclouded fellowship with their loving Creator, for they knew and obeyed His just commands.

The lie of the serpent struck at the very heart of this relationship for this creature said: "Do not believe Him, He doesn't really mean what He says; He is only trying to keep you down!" Eve believed the serpent and disobeyed the Lord God, only to find to her sorrow that He meant exactly what He said.

Satan has filled the minds of men with a false idea of God, a picture of a benevolent, kindly, weak old man who "would not hurt a fly". When you declare: "The soul that sinneth it shall die", people reject it. They are shocked if you tell them that the lot of the unrepentant sinner is everlasting misery. They will not believe that God is righteous and holy as well as loving. Like Eve, they will all finally believe this truth, but too late (Luke 16:22,23).

It is said that many who say that they are Christians show by the way they live that they believe the serpent's lie. The truth of the Judgment Seat of Christ, with rewards and rebukes, is clearly shown in the Word, yet many Christians live second-rate, mean, petty, selfish, even shameful lives. It is clear that they believe Satan rather than God.

We should pray for a spirit of conviction to come upon professing Christians. As a result, conviction must surely come upon those who do not believe.

One of our retired pastors shares with us a wonderful experience

Transatlantic Travels

by Henry Haith

WE have recently returned from a tour in the U.S.A.. Our son met us at Los Angeles Airport and, after a weekend with friends in the city, we commenced a 2,800 mile tour of California and Nevada.

Every weekend we found a place of spiritual refreshment. The first Sunday we went to the famous Angelus Temple, Los Angeles, Headquarters of the International Church of the Foursquare Gospel, where we enjoyed the ministry of the Word and the music by a large orchestra and choir.

Later, amid beautiful mountain scenery at over 6,000 feet, the Lord guided us to a Christian camp ground. It was founded by some Christian business men who gave 30,000 dollars to purchase this lovely site near a lake. The purpose was to give not only pleasure, but spiritual help to young people from the various churches.

We went to the Sunday morning service. There were over 600 present, mostly young people. The preacher was Rev. J. MacArthur. We were told that every Sunday he has a congregation of over 2,000 in his church in Los Angeles. He asked if there were any there for the first time, so we stood up with a few others. He requested that we state where we came from, what church and our names. I stated that we came from England, that we were Pentecostals and that my name was Pastor Haith, B.A. — born again.

Immediately the whole crowd roared and clapped. They seemed to indicate that my version of B.A. was of more importance than the Bachelor of Arts degree.

We later enjoyed a fine address on "The Committed Christian". In the evening the place was packed with over 600 young people for Bible study and what a thrill it was to see every one with a large, open Bible drinking in the Word.

On the next Sunday we were in San Francisco, where we heard the remarkable testimony of a converted drug addict. He was serving a prison sentence, but the authorities had seen such a change in his life that they had allowed him out on parole. He said, "From the first jab of the needle you are hooked for life. You would rob your own mother to get money for drugs. I sank to the depths of sin and vice but (and here his face lit up) Jesus has saved me. I'm redeemed! The power of God is wonderful!"

After hearing him, I thought of that crowd of teenagers at that camp and thought, yes, God can save a hopeless drug addict and by His power He can also save and preserve our youth from sinking into the pit of sin.

We thank the Lord for enabling us to make this trip. My wife was just recovering from a serious operation and I was eighty years young last birthday. Praise the Lord!

Just a Housewife?

by Jenny A. Pearson

IT could be that in your younger, single days you had visions of yourself as a missionary in some far-off land, or your desires may have been toward launching out in some other sphere of full-time service in the Lord's work. Things just didn't turn out that way, however. Your desires may not have been what God required of you, or perhaps disobedience to God's call was the reason. God alone is the Judge and to Him alone must we give account of our lives.

Now you find yourself in the happy position of being a housewife, but perhaps you feel rather frustrated by what you may think is a very limited field of service. Ladies whose families have grown up have more opportunities for outside work, but for those, like myself, who have small children, and for those, who for other reasons, are unable to go out much there is a work for Jesus none but we can do, and this work is right on our own doorsteps.

This vital work is to witness to the many who call at our doors every day, e.g. the milkman, the gas meter reader, the door to door salesman, etc. We have the most glorious and important news to proclaim and the most precious Saviour of whom to speak. He gave His all for us; is it too much to ask that we witness for Him? I say no, a thousand times no. We cannot, we must not keep this life-saving message to ourselves.

There are at least six basic essentials for this work:

- (1) Prayerful preparation at the commencement of each day;
- (2) Regular reading and study of the Word of God;
- (3) Continually being filled to overflowing with the Holy Spirit and the consequent power;
- (4) Having within easy access suitable tracts, invitations, literature, etc., essential contacts with those who cannot stay to talk;
- (5) Always being able to say to God in all honesty, "Lord, I'm available!"
- (6) Having a passion for souls.

I am not going to try to make you believe that it is always just a case of giving a tract and a brief word of testimony. This is not true, indeed frequently one's routine is completely put out and the "extra mile" becomes inevitable.

It is impossible for me to give you more than one of the many experiences which I have encountered in this work. One Monday lunch-time, just after my husband had gone on a brief errand, the front door bell rang. On opening the door, I was confronted by a young gypsy girl. She said, "You have a happy face, but you will not end your days in this house!" I quickly assured her that it did not matter where I ended my days, because I knew where my eternal destiny was. Before we had time for further conversation, we were joined by two older gypsies, one of whom complained of toothache. After sending up a silent prayer for guidance, I invited them in, made some coffee and gave them something to eat. It was my privilege to spend half an hour telling of the way of salvation. They were totally illiterate. They freely offered the information that all that they told people was just made up. Eternity alone will reveal the outcome. I thank God for the opportunity to witness to them. The possibility is that this may be the only occasion when they will clearly hear the gospel message.

This is by no means an isolated case. Thousands have never heard the true gospel message. In all probability, one of those folk who knock at your door may never hear it if you miss your opportunity. That person's soul may be damned for ever. The Bible states: "He that winneth souls is wise" (Proverbs 11:30). The importance of winning the lost for Christ cannot be over-emphasized.

Stop being "just a housewife" and become a wife who wins souls on her own doorstep.

Mrs. Jenny A. Pearson, who is a trained nurse, is a member of our Northampton Church.

Patterns of Thought

by Peter Smith Pastor of our Rotherham church

"As he thinketh in his heart, so is he" (Proverbs 23:7)

ISN'T it amazing how varied life can be? There are times when we don't seem to have a care in the world. At other times we feel bent almost double under the load of our problems.

Talking about problems (and all of us have them), how do you go about solving them? Do you approach the difficulty logically, reason it through and expect to see the right answer at the end of the exercise, or do you blunder on, hoping that everything will work out in the long run? The way in which you tackle the problem may not be a conscious decision on your part. You simply recognise the circumstances which require an answer quickly and you go ahead and produce some kind of a solution. What has happened? Well, in effect, it's just the same as when you do I.Q. tests at school or when you go for a job. The coding mechanism in your mind takes over. Let me explain.

I say, "RED" and you immediately think of a host of things, like traffic lights, fire engines or a new coat. It depends on what you have learned about things which are red. If I say, "GREEN", you may well think about grass. You see, your mind has been coded to produce a certain response to certain words. The important thing is that this coding has been learned. Just as a computer can only produce a response based on what has been fed into it, so we produce responses based on what we have learned from life.

Various responses can be produced by the same stimulus or key word. If I could ask a Victorian lady about SUNDAY, she might well launch into a discourse on church-going, quietness in the home, no work being done, etc. Today the response might well be bingo, washing the car, gardening. Over the years, bit by bit, our patterns of thought have changed. Some things, which would have been considered by our Victorian forefathers to have been atrocious, abominable or downright sinful, are now generally accepted by reason of use. The stimulus may be the same; it's the response that's different.

Here's the crunch. The response is different because we, as individuals, have allowed ourselves to be programmed differently. Computer people have a word, "GIGO", it means "Garbage in, Garbage out". If you put nonsense in, you'll get nonsense out.

It seems to me that all this is highly relevant to young folk today. If you fill your mind with rubbish, you can be sure you'll get nothing but rubbish out. If you fill your life with things which are wholesome, then you will produce wholesomeness in your life. We have no control over some of the input, but surely this is more reason than ever to fill our lives with things which are honouring to God. What you read, do, or watch on television all serve to reinforce the thought patterns which are building in your mind every day. Remember, "As he thinketh in his heart, so is he."

We have a responsibility before God to monitor the input to our minds, to veto the garbage and to ensure that we are properly "programmed" to produce "fruit unto holiness", so that in the end, we may enjoy "everlasting life" (Romans 6:22).

The Family Altar—from page 19

The saint has a tender conscience regarding sin. Satan would love to have us cowering under the accusing finger of our conscience unnecessarily. There is nothing that destroys a Christian's usefulness more than a guilt complex. If we love in deed and word, John says, we "shall assure our hearts before Him" (v.19). "Love covereth a multitude of sins". God did it first with the floodtide of love at Calvary. May that tide flow over our lives continually today!

Psalms 76:1-12

"Surely the wrath of man shall praise Thee" (v.10).

GOD can transmute the most unlikely substances into praise. The alchemist of past centuries tried to refine gold from lead and many other substances; our miracle-working God can bring the sweetness of His praise out of such dark, terrible substances as the deep anger of men. Out of the malice of Joseph's brothers He saved His people alive in famine. Out of the gathering threat of the nations of Canaan declaring war on Israel, He gave the land to His people. Out of the black thunderclouds around Christ's cross, He made sweet forgiveness and fellowship with heaven a glorious reality.

Tuesday, December 12th

1 John 1:1-10

"God is light, and in Him is no darkness at all" (v.5).

GOD'S perfect, natural light is composed of all the colours of the rainbow. Omit one of those colours and you cannot have perfect, white light. In God we have perfection. He is perfect in justice, truth, grace, love and in all the other attributes of Deity. "As for God, His way is perfect" (2 Samuel 22:31).

We are told that we are the light of the world. We must strive to ensure that all the colours of the full-orbed Christian life are seen in us in perfect balance or else we shall cast a shadow that will obscure the light we wish to show.

Wednesday, December 13th

1 John 2:1-11

"He that saith . . . ought himself also so to walk" (v.6).

THERE is nothing that the sinner is so quick to take hold of as an excuse for refusing the gospel as the inconsistent walk of a Christian. Very few people would now claim ours to be a Christian country; then the only message that the man in the street has is what we say and how we live. Let our lives and our lips be at cross purpose and he feels that he has an excuse for putting off doing anything about Jesus Christ. Let our lives and lips agree in their testimony, however, and we can be a doubled-edged sword in the hands of the Master.

We are writing a gospel, a chapter each day,

By the things that we do and the things that we say.

Folk read what we write there whether faithless or true;

Say what is the gospel according to you?

Thursday, December 14th

1 John 2:12-17

"The world passeth away, and the lust thereof" (v.17).

PAUL B. Smith, in his book Naked Truth, remarks on the fact that there are two ways of getting victory over temptation. One is to conquer it. The second is to outgrow it.

Many things that trouble a young Christian fall away as the result of a steady growth in God. From the secure heights of experience, we look back and wonder that such things could have charmed or worried us before. This was John's experience. He compares the Christian's state with the things that will pass away. He who does the will of God will abide for ever. What more can we want?

Friday, December 15th

1 John 2:18-29

"Let that therefore abide in you, which ye have heard from the beginning" (v.24).

IN the smallest acorn is all the possibility of a great oak. The tiniest new-born baby contains all the potential of a great man. It only needs time, growth, food and care to bring him to maturity. So it is at our new birth. Those who would try in John's day and in ours to sidetrack the saints into some cult or other will say, "But this also you must do or have". The Christian does not need to fear any of these. At the moment of his salvation, God gave him all that he will need. The following steps of dedication and anointing should come naturally to the growing soul of the saint.

Saturday, December 16th

1 John 3:1-10

"It doth not yet appear what we shall be" (v.2).

THERE are many mysteries about the future and heaven, but what we know is sufficient for us to trust for what we do not know. We know that we are the sons of God. We know that Christ will come. We know that that coming will change us into His likeness. What more do we need to know? "Such knowledge is too wonderful for me; it is high, I cannot attain unto it" (Psalm 139:6). God has a few surprises for us to take our breath away, yet how glorious they must be. We have some idea of their glory from what we know already. God will have to go a long way to overwhelm us with joy after all He has already given us, but, knowing God, He will!

Sunday, December 17th

1 John 3:11-24

"If our heart condemn us, God is greater than our heart" (v.20).

THERE is one work of Satan that we Christians often forget. He is the "accuser of the brethren" (Revelation 12:10). He likes to bring before us the things that God had already forgiven and forgotten.

Hong Kong Vision

by Charles J. Pendrill

I HAVE recently had the privilege of spending two Sundays with Miss Vera McGillivray, our Missionary in Hong Kong. On each occasion I attended the Wai Tsun Church and enjoyed the able ministry of the local Minister, Pastor Chang. Miss McGillivray sat next to me and interpreted the messages from the Word of God for me. I sensed the anointing of the Holy Spirit on the inspired preaching. Pastor Chang is a dedicated servant of the Lord and is proving to be a great asset to the Church there.

In addition to her involvement in the work of the Church, Vera McGillivray is also a teacher of Scripture to G.C.E. "O" level at Tsung Tsin College, where she takes five sessions daily, covering a total of 650 students. What an opportunity this is, but what tremendous demands this makes on the physical and spiritual strength of our missionary, especially with the marking of test papers etc. We should be proud of the work gladly undertaken. For much of the year, the heat and humidity are almost unbearable. I just about managed as winter was coming on!

This all serves to commend the work here to the prayers of our great Elim family. After visiting Hong Kong I was able to spend three days with Ken and Wyn McGillivray in Taiwan.

Remember your missionaries. They are doing a wonderful job for God!

I HEARD a fine young man of seventeen giving his testimony the other day. His sincere, unsophisticated delivery added to the poignancy of his words. He has known the Saviour for about six months. Radiant of countenance, he said, "For the first time in my life, I feel loved, wanted for myself." He had had unhappy events in his home and had been turned out by his mother. The drug scene unfortunately appeared to provide some kind of companionship and escape and he had sadly experimented. He was delivered from this menace on the very night of his conversion.

While listening to this deeply moving account, which was given in an ordinary Crusader meeting, I could not help reflecting that outward habits may seem to change, but the basic needs remain the same. Human beings need love and they need to give love. Frustration, disappointment, rejection, insecurity can have lasting effects. Disaster can stalk through a life as a result of such things.

"The Son of man is come to seek and to save that which was lost" declares Luke 19:10, and the words fell from the lips of the Saviour Himself. They followed the marvellous conversion of little Zacchaeus.

This is what Christmas is all about. The seeking Shepherd came that He might find the lambs which had strayed. He is still doing it. This increasingly urbanised society of ours has perhaps a great proportion of drop-outs, misfits, unwanted, than ever before or at least for several generations. Apparently novel methods of luring them to their sad state sometimes blind us to the fundamental needs. We are sinners. We are capable, however, of outgoing love and of receiving affection. Christ loves us. He can save us. He can provide a fulfilment in and of life that can arise in no other way. Loving Him we love one another.

The old-fashioned Gospel is more up-to-date than tomorrow's newspaper. We often hear of older people blaming the younger, of younger folk seemingly despising or ignoring the older. Each can help the other. Older folk often have a greater spiritual inheritance than the younger. Younger people often have a more disarming frankness and freshness of approach than the older. We ought to pray for one another that the Divine love will be shed abroad in our hearts. The Gospel unites us, for the same Saviour loves us.

Remember our week of prayer — January 7th-14th, 1973, D.V.

Church Reports

MOSBOROUGH

Pastor: R. Harvey

OUR Saturday rally on November 4th commenced our first ladies' weekend ever. We expected great things from God, for we had prayed much and our ladies had put in a lot of work.

We were thrilled at the support we received from Elim and Assemblies of God churches in our presbytery and beyond. We packed in 220 adults and a number of children, the largest crowd ever seen in our church. Our speaker for the weekend was Mrs. Wallace, wife of the Pastor of our Halifax Church, who spoke on how God had miraculously healed her of multiple sclerosis. Singing items were rendered by Mrs. Jennifer Jennings, one of our members, and by the ladies from our Rotherham Church. Our ladies are commencing an E.W.M.A. branch and Mrs. G.M. Gorton gave a comprehensive outline on E.W.M.A. activities and achievements.

Our special services continued on the Sunday evening when the speaker again was Mrs. Wallace. Singing items were rendered by our own ladies and by Miss Pauline Wallace, daughter of our speaker. A testimony was given by Miss Mildred Thompson, a student at Elim Bible College.

Mrs. Wallace spoke in both meetings in the liberty of the Holy Spirit. We were blessed and thrilled as we saw the unsaved come to hear the old-fashioned gospel proclaimed in old-fashioned power.

The services were convened by Mrs. Harvey, wife of the Pastor.

OLDHAM

AT our crusade, Pastor D.S. Williams was the leader and preacher. God richly blessed his ministry. We enjoyed items from various churches. Pastor W. Hunter was the soloist, while the "Jesus saves" guitar group and the Silverdale timbrel band also ministered musically. We rejoiced in the testimonies and in those who came to know Christ as Saviour, a number of whom are still attending our services. We felt that the prayer and hard work were rewarded as God moved in our midst.

During the crusade nearly fifty names and addresses of people who were attending for the first time were recorded. This has greatly encouraged us. We give God all the glory for the great things He has done.

NORMA S. RIDDALL

BARKING

Pastor: B.C. Richardson

"JESUS loves you" was the theme of the float we entered in the town carnival. At least 50,000 people watched the procession and over 4,000 pieces of Christian literature were handed out to the spectators by our Minister and young people who marched alongside the float with their placards, stickers and tracts.

Carefully disguised for the occasion was the Church coach. No effort or expense was spared in its decoration. Hours of labour were spent in constructing the wooden framework which was finally adorned by 12-15,000 paper flowers. This combined effort received a just reward; it was good enough to win second prize, no small achievement in such a large carnival.

Reactions as the float passed were mixed. Most of those who watched became hushed, almost silent, perhaps embarrassed, by this unashamed, blunt presentation of the Gospel. One old gentleman, impressed by the photograph and comment in the local paper, wrote expressing his desire to "love Jesus as we obviously did". How many other hearts were touched that afternoon we may never know.

Our Church made front page news again recently when the local paper ran an exclusive report on our late-night coffee-bar evangelism. In a two-page spread the reporter told (with only a few inaccuracies) of the Church's efforts to reach the young people of the area on their way home from the local public houses and discotheques.

We praise God for these opportunities to share with many the thrilling experience of our salvation.

NEWTOWNARDS

Pastor: W.H. Holohan

THE ninth annual Elim women's fellowship rally was held in St. Mark's Parochial Hall, Newtownards (kindly loaned for the occasion). Despite the present unrest in our Province, the hall was well filled. Support from the provincial and Belfast Elim churches was very encouraging and most of the local denominations were well represented. The programme was of a very high standard and the presence of the Lord was felt from the commencement. The guest speaker was Mrs. H.W. Fardell, who ministered with great blessing both at the rally and at the Sunday services. Mrs. David Ayling's missionary report on her recent visit to Guyana was really thrilling. Mrs. H. Gray (elocutionist) and Mrs. M. McCarroll (soloist) gave of their best.

Mrs. W.H. Holohan convened the meeting in her own inimitable way which always brings blessing. The offering for E.W.M.A. amounted to £75, for which we praise God. The sisters of the church again rose to the occasion in providing a delightful supper for all present.

W. Midlands Presbytery youth quiz.

DURING the last year the West Midlands Presbytery held an inter-church bible quiz for young people in the twelve to fourteen age group. Three young people from each church took part. In the four qualifying rounds before the final, which was held at our Longton Church, questions were set on the books of Jonah, John and Ruth, and on the Acts of the Apostles.

Hanley and Stafford churches reached the final. The quiz teams had been asked to study 1 Thessalonians. Questions were put to them in the style of University Challenge. There were starter questions and each young person had a buzzer to press, if they knew the answer! Seen in our front cover photograph, together with their minister, Pastor T. Partington, is the winning team from Stafford. A shield had been kindly made by a member of our Crewe Church, and this, with gift vouchers, was presented to the winners. The three young folk from Hanley also received gift vouchers.

This inter-church quiz has given the young people involved in it a greater interest in the study of the bible. It was a source of real blessing to all our churches. A similar contest is to be held next year.

A MOVE OF THE SPIRIT

Southminster/Burnham-on-Crouch, Essex.

THE Bible speaks of joy in Heaven by the angels over one sinner that repenteth. There was joy in many a heart when two years ago the then joint Secretary of the local United Reform Church (formerly Congregational) was converted in a morning service under the anointed ministry of the former Pastor, Bryan H. Tween, now in charge of Elim Pentecostal Church, Finchley, North London.

As a result of this, Mrs. Patricia Martin with her husband, Graham, already a dedicated Christian, were reading the Acts and came to realise that there was more to follow in the Christian experience. They met regularly with two other Deacons and the Pastor and his wife, they having been baptised in the Spirit some years previously, to seek the Lord's face. After a few months they were gloriously baptised. From this, Pat and Graham, both teachers and with two small children, opened their home on Tuesday evenings. With other Christians from the district, they met for prayer. Though the "Group", as they are known, come from different backgrounds and denominations, they are united in the Lord Jesus and rejoice in the baptism in the Holy Spirit.

These meetings have gone on from strength to strength, the Lord adding abundant blessing, with the gifts of the Spirit much in evidence. Visiting Elim ministers come from time to time. The local vicar, who has given encouragement from the start, was himself baptised in the Spirit some months ago. His eldest son gave his heart to the Lord recently and has been a means of much blessing in his school. It is a real joy to see his radiant faith and witness.

Friday evenings finds them at Burnham-on-Crouch in the home of Mr. and Mrs. David Scott. David, a quantity surveyor, leads the Bible study, giving much of his time and devotion in an already busy life. He has led them in series on the Second Coming, the Tabernacle in the Wilderness, the Feasts of the Lord, etc. With the help of his wife, Pauline, they made a large model of the Tabernacle with its intricate parts and a table laid out depicting a Jewish table for one of the Feasts, a "real labour of love". At the moment they are studying the spirit world.

They launched out with two rallies in the spring and are in the midst of another series this autumn/winter including Billy Graham films, testimonies, groups, special speakers, etc. as means of outreach, all financed by themselves and other interested friends. As yet they have no church building of their own and are looking to the Lord as the homes are bursting at the seams. Pray that the Lord may guide and lead them further as they seek to work and witness for Him in this part of Essex which will be in the region of the new London Airport at Foulness.

The Expectation of coming Glory

Romans 8:18-27

by J. Alexander Wright

"THE sufferings of this present time" (v. 18) Paul wrote, and how much he had suffered already! Yet that thirty years or more of intensive service and sacrifice are dismissed as "less than nothing compared with the magnificent future God has planned for us" (Phillips). "The earnest expectation of the creature [the created universe, N.E.B.] waiteth" is literally: "The created universe waits with craned necks". What a vivid picture Paul painted! As for long hours men await with eagerness a royal procession, so the world is portrayed as waiting for "the manifestation [apocalypse] of the sons of God". This is the coming of the Lord whereat "we shall be changed, in a moment".

The destiny of the world is bound up with that of the Church. The day that marks the glorious liberation of the sons of God marks also the emancipation of creation from the bondage of corruption (v. 21). The world's age-long suffering is likened to travail, that is, suffering with hope, as are the pangs of child-birth (John 16:27; Matthew 24:8 [birth-pangs]). How great and immeasurable has been the world's long agony. The mind reels and staggers in contemplation of its immensity. What a deliverance there will be however! "O wondrous day, O glorious morning, when the Son of Man shall come" the hymnist lyricises.

"The whole creation groans" (v. 22) and "even we ourselves groan", though in the enjoyment of heaven's foretaste, because of the limitations of the body (v. 23). "Things which are not now, nor could be, then shall be our own" in that lovely new body like His (Philippians 3:21). Glorious liberty shall have a glorious body. "Saved by hope" (v. 24) means saved "in" hope. Merely hoping never saved anybody. We are saved and this great, glad hope awaits us at the end of the way.

"The Spirit helpeth our infirmities" (v. 26), better, "infirmity" (singular), a reference not to our respective individual infirmity, but to the common infirmity, which we all share, that we all are so ignorant about prayer, its matter and manner (v. 26). Since prayer is our "vital breath", we may die, unless we have help, and we have Him; from within us, the Comforter (paraclete = one alongside to help) enables us to pray according to the will of God (v. 27).

The world groans, we groan, and the Holy Spirit groans (v. 26). "There is a cross in the heart of God" (T.R. Glover). Soon, however, the groans will turn to glory, the travail to triumph, and ruin to eternal redemption. Hallelujah!

D.2592

From T. H. Stevenson

IT has been said concerning the date of the birth of Christ that the only certainty is that He was not born on December 25th. To that could be added with equal force that the year, the undated year between B.C.1 and A.D.1 is also an error.

The Bible as History, by Werner Keller, acceptable to evangelicals for its reliability, is perhaps the most readable book on this subject. It points out that the traditional date is referred to as Christmas Day in A.D. 354 for the first time, purposely coinciding with the Roman festival of "The birthday of the unconquered", which degenerated into "a week of unbridled carnival".

The Bible narrative of the shepherds minding their flocks in the field is interesting, December not being, even now, a time like this. The Jewish Talmud observes that in the neighbourhood the flocks were put out to grass from March to November. Concerning the year, we know that Herod, who reigned at that time, died in the year now dated B.C.4. The important factor is "When the fulness of time was come, God sent forth His son".

Greater than the ancient mistake relating to dates is the modern misuse of the observance of Christmas. Many seem to agree with the remark that Christmas is being spoiled by bringing religion into it! Like the ancient Roman feast day on which Christmas Day is fixed, the so-called Christian observance is widely become an "unbridled carnival". We would not be like Scrooge, but, as Christians, we should set an example and not follow the example of the world and its trends.

Despite the foregoing remarks, let us recognise that far more damaging than such mistakes and misuse is the misrepresentation and mischief concerning the very person of Christ at the hands of prominent Bible scholars and preachers in these days. These men deny the miraculous manner of the birth of our Lord of a virgin, and the essential deity of the Babe: "Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God". With the approach of Christmas we have been saddened and concerned while listening to the daily B.B.C. Thought for the Day, as the well known David Winter, formerly of the Evangelical Alliance, and of Crusade magazine, introduced Professor William Barclay and Lord Soper to speak on "The Miracles of Jesus". Each equalled the other, not in explaining, but in explaining away the miraculous by the substitution simply of a moral. To dispel the miracles of Christ is to deny the miraculous Christ. All this is not news. Lord Soper has long since denied concerning Christ, His virgin birth, atoning death, physical resurrection and personal return.

"O COME, LET US ADORE HIM, CHRIST THE LORD".

Thoughts from the Book of Genesis

4 The Cry of the Blood (Genesis 4:10)

by F. Lavender

WHEN man sinned, God gave the promise of a Deliverer, the "Seed of the woman", who would crush the Serpent. Eve, therefore, was elated when she bore her first son. She cried: "I have obtained a man from the Lord" and she called his name Cain, "Possession".

Eve was soon disillusioned, however. She named her second son Abel, "Vanity". The effect of sin must have shown clearly in Cain. It was revealed by his hatred of Abel; when God rejected Cain's works and accepted Abel's sacrifice, Cain slew his brother. God gave Cain the opportunity to repent, but he hardened himself. The Lord declared that Abel's blood cried out to Him for justice, so He punished Cain by perpetual banishment from His presence.

We read that wicked men slew Jesus Christ, God's Son, on a criminal's cross and His blood, like Abel's, was shed by men. Hebrews 12:24 tells us that Christ's blood cries out to the Father but, unlike Abel's, it does not cry for vengeance, but for the forgiveness of the guilty ones. The shed blood of Jesus is the token that the just price of sin has been paid. Because His righteous blood has been willingly shed, our sin can now be taken away.

We sometimes feel that men have done us an injustice or an injury, or have treated us badly. When such things happen, we can either cry out for apologies or revenge, or else pray for the forgiveness of those who have hurt us. As Stephen was being stoned he cried out: "Lay not this sin to their charge"! Let us, too, reveal the Spirit of the Lord Jesus who sought our pardon, for, as we manifest His Spirit, we shall reveal our sonship (Matthew 5:43-45).

"Given by Inspiration"

by David Petts, M.A.

David Petts was brought up among the Baptists and was saved and baptized in water at the age of 14. He was called to the ministry at the age of 16, but it was not until he was 19 that he first heard of the Baptism in the Holy Spirit. After seeking the experience for several months, he was filled with the Spirit just one month prior to going up to Oxford University where he read Philosophy, Politics and Economics and gained the Honours Degree of Master of Arts. He is at present Pastor of the Basingstoke Assembly of God, having previously held the pastorate of the Assembly at Colchester. He has undertaken numerous preaching engagements in colleges and universities in his capacity as Travelling Secretary of the Students' Pentecostal Fellowship, and lectures regularly at Kenley Bible College on Comparative Religion, the Major Prophets and New Testament Greek.

PENTECOSTAL people love the Bible. We teach our converts to read it. All our doctrines are based upon it. There are few other sections of the Christian Church where every minister and every member believes that "the Bible is the inspired Word of God." We rejoice in our evangelical inheritance. On what basis do we hold these doctrines, however? Why do we believe that the Bible is the inspired Word of God? It is important that we should know. There are four main reasons.

The Bible claims to be inspired

"From a child thou hast known the holy scriptures, which are able to make thee wise unto salvation through faith which is in Christ Jesus. All scripture is given, by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness: that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works." declares 2 Timothy 3:15-17. Adds 2 Peter 1:21: "For the prophecy came not in old time [or at any time] by the will of man: but holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost."

The Bible claims to be accurate, inspired by God, and it also claims to be all that we need, all-sufficient. "The secret things belong unto the Lord our God: but those things which are revealed belong unto us and to our children for ever, that we may do all the words of this law." (Deuteronomy 29:29). All we need to know is the "things which are revealed". This principle is true "for ever" and the things which are revealed are "all the words of this law".

The Bible, then, claims to be the inspired Word of God and to be all that we need for faith and practice. Is it fair, however, to accept the Bible's testimony of itself?

Jesus claimed the Bible to be inspired

With regard to the Old Testament, Jesus asserted that "the scripture cannot be broken" (John 10:35). The Sadducees were in error because they were ignorant of the Scriptures (Mark 12:24). Indeed, "It is easier for heaven and earth to pass, than one tittle of the law to fail" (Luke 16:17, compare Matthew 5:17,18). As far as Jesus was concerned, when the Bible spoke, GOD spoke. In Genesis 2:24 the Scripture states that a man shall leave his father and mother and shall cleave unto his wife; in Matthew 19:4,5 Jesus said that God said this. It is surely enough for us, as His disciples, to believe as Jesus believed. The following Scriptures make it clear that Jesus accepted unquestioningly as fact the stories and miracles of the Old Testament: the creation of man (Matthew 19:4,5); Noah, the ark, the flood (Luke 17:27); the destruction of Sodom (Luke 17:29); Moses and the brasn serpent (John 3:14); David eating the shewbread (Matthew 12:3,4); Elijah and the widow of Zarephath (Luke 4:26); Elisha and Naaman (Luke 4:27); and Jonah and the great fish (Matthew 12:40).

Further, in Luke 24:27 we read that on the road to Emmaus "beginning at Moses and all the prophets, He expounded unto them in all the scriptures the things concerning Himself."

The New Testament, of course, had not been written at the time of Christ, but Jesus promised His disciples that the Holy Spirit would accurately remind them of His teachings and would lead them into further truth for which they were not yet ready. Notice the all-sufficiency of the revelation that the Spirit would bring. "The Comforter, which is the Holy Ghost, whom the Father will send in My name, He shall teach you all things, and bring all things to your remembrance, whatsoever I have said unto you." (John 14:26). "I have many things to say unto you but you cannot bear them now. Howbeit, when He, the Spirit of truth, is come, He will guide you into all [the] truth [Greek]" (John 16:12,13). All Christians should believe the Bible, then, if for no other reason than that Jesus Himself claimed it to be inspired by God Himself.

The Apostles claimed the Bible to be inspired

As we read the New Testament, we realise that the writers were aware of direct inspiration and authority from God. Their writings were not a product of their own wisdom or ability. "Which things also we speak, not in the words which man's wisdom teacheth, but which the Holy Ghost teacheth" (1 Corinthians 2:13). "If any man think himself to be a prophet, or spiritual, let him acknowledge that the things that I write unto you are the commandments of the Lord" (1 Corinthians 14:37). "And if any man obey not our word by this epistle, note that man, and have no company with him, that he may be ashamed" (2 Thessalonians 3:14).

Moreover, the apostles did not merely claim inspiration for their own writings; they also acknowledged the inspiration of other New Testament writers as equal to that of the Old Testament. "For the scripture saith, Thou shalt not muzzle the ox that treadeth out the corn. [Deuteronomy 25:4] And, The labourer is worthy of his reward. [Matthew 10:10]" (1 Timothy 5:18). Here Paul quotes Matthew alongside of Deuteronomy and evidently considers both as an integral part of the whole, i.e. the Scriptures.

The same attitude is adopted by Peter: "Our beloved brother Paul also according to the wisdom given unto him, hath written unto you; As also in all his epistles... which they that are unlearned and unstable wrest [twist], as they do also the other scriptures unto their own destruction." (2 Peter 3:15,16).

It is clear, then, that the three major sources of Christian teaching available to us — the Bible, the Early Church, the Saviour Himself — all declare that the Bible is the inspired Word of God. So-called Christians who question the authority of the Bible make nonsense of Christianity, therefore, for they implicitly attribute error to God Himself. To reject the Bible is to reject Christianity.

There is one final evidence of the Bible's authority.

Christian Experience proves the Bible to be inspired

The Bible is not merely a textbook for Christian doctrine, it is a guide-book for life, a handbook for Christian living. The driver of a new car knows that the maker's handbook is the real thing if the car works when he does what the handbook tells him. So with the Bible: when we put it into practice, it works. Its promises are fulfilled when we meet the conditions. Prayers are answered. Lives are changed. The sick are healed. Mark 16, one of the most disputed passages in the whole of Scripture — see, for example, the Revised Standard Version and the New English Bible — has been proved gloriously true in the experience of men like W.F.P. Burton and scores of others.

The Bible is the inspired Word of God. If you want to be sure, test it and see for yourself!

The HAMMOND ORGAN

- * Requires the minimum of maintenance and the tone wheel generator cannot go out of tune.
- * Remains unaffected by changes in temperature and humidity.
- * Provides extreme variety of tones with the simplest method of selection.
- * Has a specification to satisfy the accomplished organist.
- * Can be transported for trouble-free use on any location.
- * Represents a lifetime investment with a negligible depreciation factor.

The Hammond Organ has found an important place in the Pentecostal church with its unique tonal quality. The very nature of the harmonic tone registration allows the instrument to be played in direct keeping with the service without distracting from it. We are therefore convinced that a Hammond can make an essential contribution which renders it a sound investment in the Lord's work, and to this end Sharon Music welcome your consultation as to the most suitable model for your church.

With experience gained from many church installations throughout the country we feel confident to select an instrument certain to meet your requirements. Our showroom stock of ORGANS and PIANOS includes the entire range of Hammond Organs, consisting of 18 different models from £265 to £5,500. Special financial arrangements are available to your church and we shall be happy to supply further details relating to any specific model on request.

The Secrets of the Ancients

"There came

PERHAPS The Boys' Magazine and its marvellous yarns about Egyptian tombs produced the fascination with long-past logical books about Assyria, Babylon, Egypt, Greece, etc. while I ate my meals. I know it was rude, but I wasn't old now, I suppose, mentioning "The Boys' Mag"!

There is still a feeling that special knowledge was buried which, could it be found, would jerk us all on to a new religions, for example. What did their initiates learn? Magi? The East had its great sages, and wise men — history and legend points to actuality and potent knowledge oriented a building as the Great Pyramid before even behind the stone circles, Stonehenge, and those strange than 1,000 miles across the American continent as str

A Gospel Message preached in Elin Sparkbrook
by George Canty

Today many are turning to the Eastern mystics (as did the Beatle pop singers), to Yoga and quietest theories, to Buddhism and even Moslemism to achieve a higher consciousness and nature-power.

Educators study the writings of Greece, which pre-date Christianity by centuries — Zenophon, Zeno of Citium, and his namesake of Elea, and Aristotle. Only this week I have put Plato's Theory of Knowledge on my bookshelf. The middle ages swore by these men as holding the key of truth and they deeply affect Western thinking today.

Ezra the scribe lived in an age of wise men, five hundred years before Christ, in Babylonia, but he was a Bible man. He must have been aware of the teachings of the old world, so I am deeply impressed when standing close to the scene, he testified, "I understand more than the ancients through Thy precepts". Of all the wise, Solomon has the reputation of being the wisest. He said, "The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom".

We have learned to read the once dark words on the tombs and papyrus of Egypt and on the monuments of Assyria. What revelations have we gained from the locked up hieroglyphics and cuneiform languages of three milleniums ago?

From The Book of the Dead, we can hear again the worship offered to the great god Osiris: "Homage to thee, O great God! I have come. . . I have not sinned . . . not wrought evil, not caused pain . . . made no one weep. . . I am pure". This is the same old self-deception that half the British nation suffers from, the same con-trick of the devil — that we are good folk and God ought to be proud of our coming to Him, for look who were are! There's your wisdom of the East — man, needing no repentance, no saving, no forgiving, no changing.

The history of the lost empires, with cruelty, oppression, poverty and wealth side by side, and their parasitical preying upon weaker nations, however, shows them as deceived. Did wisdom die with them? Their writings and their records prove again that "all have sinned and come short of the glory of God". They perished for lack of the knowledge of God. While men trek to the British Museum to gaze in awe at the treasures of Tutankhamun, they forget that Moses lived in his times and talked about Egypt's evils, diseases and superstitions. They produced their magicians to baffle him, but Moses knew a superior secret — the Lord God of Abraham — and He brought judgment on Egypt's gods.

Our men of learning today do not turn the pages of Scripture, but the name of Socrates is revered, despite his depraved outlook on morals and his vague gropings for God and a future life. Compared to him, the Bible ancients walked in light. A thousand years before Socrates, the Hebrews knew the secret of the Lord, and produced documents of hope for mankind vastly more potent than the political theories of democratic Greece, which are so much lauded today.

The ancients who had the secret were the Hebrews. Abraham was the first man with a vision of a kingdom based on righteousness and built by God, a better country than had even occurred to thinkers two thousand years later. Look at those pinnacles of sanity and justice standing out amid the seas of superstition three thousand years ago, the prophets of Israel, Elijah, Elisha, Nathan! David, and Solomon, whose greatness was exceeded only by Jesus, manifested moral qualities unknown throughout the East and were possessed of concrete certainties about life and God when all nations about them were lost in hopeless ignorance and barbarity.

At a time when the priests of Thebes chanted their pagan Litany of the Sun, Israel was singing, "The Lord is my Shepherd". While Homer wrote credulous tales of the amours of goddesses and soldiers at Troy, Isaiah was penning the blazing truths of God's suffering Servant bearing our sins.

These men had the secret. Their first discovery was that "the secret of the Lord is with them that love him" and "The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom". Nobody has ever trusted God and gone to the dogs. Always the fear of the Lord proves to be wise. Let contrary evidence be produced — but it doesn't exist. Without God, civilisations perish and each of us dies and is swallowed by the unlighted grave, but the true light now shines. We must repent. We must look to God, not to the philosophers of this world, of yesterday or today, none of whom know certainty. Only God can save. The world's wisdom and ways are madness. Every man must turn, change, be converted. "We speak wisdom".

The second discovery of the truly wise was that Christ was the wisdom of God. That cross of His trumpets our folly to the heavens. All the vaunted greatness of the past is exposed here, with wickedness, ignorance and unbelief found at its heart. That cross, set in Eastern soil, darkened with His life-blood, this foolishness of un-armed love, this common hanging of a helpless victim of political wisdom, proves to be the rock on which human pride and self-sufficiency break up in mere sound and fury. The world will never get over it. The cross is the secret, flashing forth the light of love amid the roaring seas of restless humanity. God is love! Believe it and live. Reject it and perish.

All the lure and lore of the East fades for me when I see the cross. Unclean I come, but I go washed by the blood. Dead in sins, at the cross I break out of the tomb of guilt into a new life, a new world.

The third secret was that by faith the ancients received a good report. How did Moses create a nation? How did Nehemiah rebuild a kingdom? From where flowed David's statesmanship, law and poetry? How did Amos, Nahum, Jonah, and Haggai become immortal in times of defeat and decadence? How did Galilean fishermen begin to change world history, cow rulers, defy timeless institutions? Faith in God is the answer. The rulers of worldly wisdom failed. Nonentities conquered without force, except that of faith which worked by love.

Unbeliever, this is your sin — unbelief! This is the madness which blinds — unbelief. This is what you must weep for — unbelief. You are cursed by it, shackled by it. Your life is darkened by the wrath of God because of it. Give up your unbelief! One half of it is pride and the other half devil-inspired prejudice. That's the world — and what's wrong with it. There's a new way, a rational order — faith in Jesus Christ. He'll tear the roots of evil and unbelief out of your life. He'll reverse your outlook. My prayer is that He will perform this miracle for some individual reading my words, now!

Children's Corner

One of the Family

by Sheila Price

"I'VE been thinking," said Brian to his sister, "that when Jesus was born it must have been a very lonely Christmas."

"What makes you think that?" asked Carol.

"Well," said Brian, "No-one troubled to go to His birthday, did they?"

"That's not quite true," said Mrs. Brown, who had overheard her children talking. "Although no kings, princes or high priests went to His birthday, Jesus had visitors a thousand times greater."

"Who were they, mummy?"

"Well," said Mrs. Brown, "for many years the angels of heaven had been watching and waiting and then, when the great moment came for Jesus to go down to earth, they could not help but rejoice. They broke through in their gladness to tell the world that their Lord, the King of Heaven, had been born. Sounds of sweetest music swept over the hills of Bethlehem and all around the air was filled with angels singing their songs of welcome."

"But why wasn't Jesus born in a palace, mummy? After all, He was King!"

"I think," said Mrs. Brown, "that by being born in a stable, He was trusting Himself to us, as if to say, 'Here I am, a humble, helpless Baby. I want you to love Me and care for Me.' If Jesus had come as a Stranger, feeling pity and compassion for us, perhaps the world would have thought of Him only as a do-gooder who felt sorry for us. If Jesus had come as a Visitor, staying with us for only a little while before returning to heaven, perhaps the world would have thought that He did not care and that He was leaving it to let us get on with our own lives. Because He wants us to be happy, because He wants to help us up to heaven, however, He wasn't concerned for a little time only; He cares for us always. He cares so much that He gave His life for us so that He could keep us on His heart for ever. Just think of Jesus lying in His mother's lap, smiling up into her face, unable to do anything for Himself, as we once were, just a helpless little Baby who wants to come right into our lives, not a stranger, not a visitor, but our Saviour and One of the family."

"I am with thee and will keep thee in all places whither thou goest."

PRAYER AND PRAISE

by F. H. Coleman

FOR some of us, a testimony of God's goodness or of an answer to prayer is always a blessing. To those who are younger in the faith, it can be a source of encouragement, for they feel that their experiences are not peculiar to them, but are also and often the lot of other Christians.

It is my privilege to share with you some of my joys when I receive a letter which tells of an answer to prayer. Our letter this week tells of an amazing healing of a young woman who was in an advanced stage of cancer.

"Praise God from whom all blessings flow! I have some wonderful news. Mary has been made every whit whole. She went to hospital today and the X-ray showed two perfect lungs and two perfect kidneys and there is no trace of cancer in her blood-stream.

"During the night on Monday, Mary woke up several times to find the Lord standing by her bedside. He said to her, 'I am doing a new thing for you; I am giving you a new body.'

"When she woke up on Tuesday morning, she read Daily Light for that day. It was all about healing and she thanked the Lord for this Word. As she stepped out of bed, she felt her old life ebbing away and the new life of Jesus flowing into her body. This went on until about 3 p.m. until all the pain left her and she was fully restored to health.

"When I came here on Sunday, she did not have the strength to stand up on her own, her whole body was racked with pain, her face was yellow and drawn, and there were big black shadows around her eyes. Ill as she was, her minister said that she never wavered from the Lord's promise to heal her.

"The hospital said last week that in order to save her life, they would have to remove her left kidney. This would not have cured her, however, but would have prolonged her life for only a little longer.

"My sister and I wish to thank you and our praying friends for all your love and prayers.

"We stand amazed in His wonderful presence, giving Him the love and adoration of our hearts and to Him be all the glory."

We too say, "Glory to God!" for this wonderful healing, which took place a few weeks ago.

Points for Preachers

by J. Alexander Wright

An Outline

"Prayer and . . ."

OTHER factors are needed for revival and blessing beside prayer. Prayer is seldom mentioned in isolation in the New Testament; it is mostly linked with an additional requirement.

1. Prayer and abiding (John 15:7);
2. Prayer and ministry (Acts 6:4);
3. Prayer and fasting (Acts 13:3);
4. Prayer and giving (Acts 10:4);
5. Prayer and confessing (James 5:16);
6. Prayer and the resources of the Spirit (Philippians 1:10, Phillips);
7. Prayer and supplication (Acts 1:14; Philippians 4:6).

An Incident

"Channels Only"

IN 1872, a small congregation gathered in a barn. A quiet-spoken preacher called Henry Varley was concluding on 1 John 2:17. Lifting his eyes to the nearby haymow where an interested youth was seated, he said, with emphasis, "The world has yet to see what God can do with, for, in and through one man who is fully consecrated to Him!" The young man was strangely stirred and convicted by the challenging words. "Varley meant any man" he said to himself. "He didn't say that he had to be educated or brilliant or anything else - just a man who is willing to be used. Well, by the Holy Spirit in me, I'll try to be such a man!" Within a few years the world felt the impact of the great evangelist, Dwight L. Moody, the lad in the barn.

A Poem

God's Best

GOD has His best for the few who dare to stand the test.
 God has His second choice for those who will not have the best.
 It is not always sin that risks the promised rest,
 The better sometimes is the foe that keeps us from the best.
 There's scarcely one, but vaguely wants in some way to be blest,
 "'Tis not a blessing, Lord, I seek, I want Thy very best.
 I want in this short life of mine, as much as may be pressed
 Of service true to God and man; help me to love Thy best.
 I want, amid the victor throng to know my name confessed.
 And hear my Saviour say, at last, "Well done, you took the best".
 Give me, my Lord, the highest choice, though others take the rest,
 These good things have no charm for me, since I have found Thy best.

*When the Creator created things,
Then the manifold Creator created things,
What did he create?
He created the court crier
He created the drummer . . .*

From "The Awakening", an Akan drum poem

ONE of my son's prized possessions is a talking drum. He brought it from Ghana, West Africa. It is shaped like an hour-glass and is a double-headed drum, known as a donno. This type is often made by the people of Hausaland and Yorubaland and is played with a single curved stick.

We always associate such drums with Africa. To this day they play a great part in the pageantry of tribal life and culture. The talking drum illustrated on this page is held in the left armpit while the arm squeezes the strings which hold the drum heads together. Thus the donno can make a wide range of tones. When drums speak, they are made to imitate the natural rise and fall of the voice. Drummers can therefore call people by name, summon people to the chief's court, and warn when fire breaks out and when an enemy is near, as well as giving a greeting, praise or blame. All this is performed by the drummer imitating the way of speech, its cadence and the rhythm of a sentence. Here is a lovely poem which is played on the talking drums:

*The path has crossed the river,
The river has crossed the path,
Which is the elder?
We made the path and found the river
The river is from long ago
From the Creator of the Universe.*

When I was in Ghana I was very happy to discover that the drum can be used in the service of God. Some of my readers will remember the story of Ebenezer, evangelist, church builder, farmer and charcoal burner. He is also a skilled drummer. I have a photograph of him playing his drum to call the people to worship. It is good to know that God has always accepted service and praise when rendered sincerely, no matter how unusual the medium.

The Old Testament has a striking example of this in the Book of Numbers. Almighty God Himself instructed Moses to order the making of two silver trumpets to be specifically used in a similar way to the talking drum, namely, to call a national meeting, to signify the breaking up of Israel's camp in the wilderness ready to move onwards and to assemble the tribal leaders together. Moreover they were to be used to sound an alarm when enemies threatened and, on the day of battle, that God should remember His people and deliver them. The trumpets were to be blown singly or together, the notes to be of varying duration. Clear and precise instructions were given by God so that the silver trumpets really talked to the whole camp of Israel. Their sweetest voice was heard when they summoned the people of God to worship. Their sound was heard in times of rejoicing, on feast days, at the beginning of each month and, when the burnt offerings and peace offerings were sacrificed, the priests stood close by and blew the trumpets.

Best of all, the sound of the trumpets heralded the Sabbatical month of the Jewish year wherein the Day of Atonement was held. This great occasion was known as the Feast of Trumpets and many trumpets were blown.

Every repentant sinner from that far-off time to this very moment has had cause to thank God for the rousing call of God's message of pardon and peace through the offering of a sacrifice for sin. The message of this dispensation is the most joyful of all though, for it tells that Jesus, by the sacrifice of Himself, has made one offering for sin for ever. All we need to do is to put our faith in Him. Like the Thessalonians we should in turn "sound the gospel of Grace abroad" (1 Thessalonians 1:8).

Wanted Dead AND Alive!

by Michael Carr, B.Sc.

Pastor of our Church at King's Heath, Birmingham

HAVE you noticed how God tumbles in reverse all our pet notions, causing embarrassed sighs of bewilderment over seemingly insoluble statements?

The one which evokes puzzlement in many is this: "and whosoever will lose his life for My sake shall find it". This paradox crushes our logic and defies synthesis, but it is the principle which initiates spiritual birth. To clutch at life is to get a handful of misery, but to throw it into Gethsemane's tomb is to emerge in the resurrection likeness of Christ.

This Christian generation is striving for the ultimate and struggling for nobler concepts. There appears to be a yearning among young people for fulness that is often translated into zealous response to His will. It seems as if language and prayer are directed into pondering the SOURCE and MANNER of vital living.

If the "spirit of the age" can be conquered, then the secret will be yours, but the all-devouring formula of the world sets an imperative on forsaking the cross. Listen to what Paul says to young Timothy: "This is a faithful saying: for IF we be dead with Him, we shall also live with Him". From the volume of personal theology this old warrior speaks out a warning. The life that is not crucified will soon find an excuse for skirting Golgotha's mount and will track round the perimeter of victory. To die in Christ and be reborn into a new kingdom is the gospel basic, but to die DAILY is the quintessence of the doctrine.

A morning visitation to that cursed tree is the prelude to a joyful testimony. Circumstances cannot affect a corpse, so, when you start the day, choke off the "old nature", cutting the air supply with the ligature of grace. Begin dead and you will live a brimful experience.

To interpret the gospel mystery of sanctification is not reserved for an elite few; it is the heritage of those born of blood. The narrow way leads to a broad adventure with God. Those who seek to be disciples must take up the cross and follow him. He expects nothing more and certainly nothing less.

With an emphasis being laid today upon the glee of grace, let memory recall the history of Christ's sacrifice. The "oil of gladness" came to Him only after the brutal cross had lifted Him before the untutored gaze of rebel men.

There is a vast difference between Christ reigning in the universe and ruling in your heart. His sovereignty is the result of WHO He is, His kingship in human lives because of WHAT He did. The real value of accepting Christ is not the experience that manifests itself in fringe emotions, but the opportunity to nullify detestable traits of sinful nature. If His sceptre stands supreme, then sin is doomed. Cling to the meaning of the rough-hewn tree and the marvellous power it holds. Let Christ secure a vast foothold in your life and past disappointments will be changed into dynamic deeds. Allow the virtue of victory to course through every decision and show the world that spiritual standards are obtained through Christ and His death.

Mankind, pleasure drunk, seeks excitement to numb the harsh reality of life, but the Christian is well settled in Jesus Christ. The walking dead are living to die, but the saints of God are dying to live a life that abounds with all the thrill of birthful wonder in grace. Cascades of blessing stream across the pathway of peace abundantly satisfying and filling with a fulness that far exceeds the taunting tinsel of Satan's soiled wares.

ALIVE unto God is the message of joy and anything less is only half truth. Learn to trust Him fully, living above the fear of losing life by giving it into His safe keeping. He will bury it by the folded grave-clothes and roll away the stone ushering you into a new dimension where angels like flames of fire serve the praising sons of God.

1 John 4:1-12

"Ye are of God, little children" (v.4).

NO phrase in Scripture more clearly illustrates the difference between the Christian and others. Though in His sight we are but little children, without strength, power or wisdom to guide ourselves, yet we are of God. The life that is within us is Divine. Even in our childhood we are wiser, stronger, and more able to overcome than all that is against us. The sinner also has another's power within him, that of Satan, but "greater is He that is in you than he that is in the world."

Tuesday, December 19th

1 John 4:13-21

"We love Him, because He first loved us" (v.19).

A KIND of spiritual "Oneupmanship" suggests that we should love God for Himself alone and not for anything that He has done. This is clearly impossible on two counts. Firstly, just as a child recognises love only when it is demonstrated by its parents, so our sin-scarred eyes can see the love of God only when He acts towards us. Secondly, it is impossible to stop love reaching out and pouring itself upon us. God is a loving God, a giving God. To ask Him to stop giving so that I can refine my little love for Him is impossible. His love for me ignites the flame of my love for Him.

Wednesday, December 20th

1 John 5:1-12

"Who is he that overcometh the world?" (v.5).

TO take this question on its own suggests that we have this ability in our strength, but only the complete text gives the answer. As we believe that Jesus is the Son of God we can be more than conquerors. We are not riding in the lists against Satan. We are rejoicing in our Champion who has gone to battle carrying our colours and has been victorious. His victory has become ours. We rejoice in it and triumph over Satan by it. "This is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith."

Thursday, December 21st

1 John 5:13-21

"And if we know that He hear us, whatsoever we ask, we know that we have" (v.15).

IN prayer, it is getting into touch with Christ that counts. Often what we call unanswered prayers are those that have not fulfilled the Bible way of asking. We must not ask amiss. We must not ask out of His will. We must not ask with sin between us. If we have confidence, however, He will answer.

Since the introduction of S.T.D. on the telephone my greatest problem is getting through to the person to whom I want to speak. When I am through, I usually know that he will grant my request. It is getting through that counts.

2 John 1:1-13

"That we receive a full reward" (v.8).

JOHN tells the elect lady and her children to look to themselves that they lose nothing, but that they may receive a full reward. In Christ we have everything for our journey here below, enough to receive a full reward in glory. Our watchfulness ensures that we do not lose any of that full reward that Christ has promised to those who love and follow him. Christ makes me a custodian of His treasures. May I lose nothing!

Saturday, December 23rd

3 John 1:1-15

"Well-beloved Gaius" (v.1).

NOTICE the contrast in the three characters mentioned in this brief book. Shallow, self-esteeming Diotrophes wanted to be at the top of his own little tree. Well reported Demetrius had a good report of the Word as well. Shining even more clearly was soul-prospering Gaius, who walked in the truth. Thank God for the Gaiuses in every assembly. They may not be noticed, but they consistently go on with God, walking in the truth.

Sunday, December 24th

Matthew 1:1-25

"He shall save His people from their sins" (v.21).

WE often hasten by the genealogy at the beginning of Matthew to get to the stable at Bethlehem. Pause and see who comes in the lineage of Christ. Some are great men, some are obscure. Some names bring back stories of infamy and shame. Some link in foreigners and outcasts, like Ruth. All these are in the family tree of the Saviour, because the Last of that family would be great enough to save His people from their sins. His own lineage was a picture of all those who come to Him and find that He, Christ, the Son of David, can save.

The Minister and his Message

by A. S. F. Horne

Pastor of Elim Pentecostal Church, Ipswich

IN considering the Christian's strength, I sought to find the answer to an important question.

If this is an age of increased intelligence, must it, as a consequence, be one of diminished reverence for God and man?

I see no reason why a warm heart and a cultivated intellect cannot exist in the same person. I do not believe that ignorance is the mother of devotion. I believe that a seraph's understanding can harmonise with a seraph's heart.

How delightful to see a man of science allured from all his studies by the attractions of the cross to fall in love with Jesus and His redeeming mercy and resolve at once and for ever to consecrate his talents to the service of Christ.

Drink in the fulness of the inspiration of the cross and no power on earth or in hell will be able to prevent us from rushing to the rescue of perishing, blood-bought souls. Under this inspiration we shall fearlessly encounter the fiercest opposition and proceed in our work amid the most discouraging circumstances. No sacrifice will be considered too great, no effort too exhaustive, in endeavouring to aid the triumphs of the Saviour's cross.

This inspiration accounts for the zeal, the diligence, the heroism of Christians of primitive times. Under its influence, they could not be inactive, whatever dangers threatened them or whatever sacrifices became necessary to the prosecution of their work. On they went from town to town and from country to country, possessed of quenchless ardour and indomitable courage.

It made them stern in rebuking sin, impervious to reproach and suffering, bold, enduring and self-sacrificing. They swept like a resistless tornado across islands, continents and seas demolishing the temples of idolatry and establishing the worship of the "one true God". So mighty were their doings and so great their successes, that their bitterest enemies recognised them as those who "turned the world upside down".

Do not think that such achievements and triumphs have been restricted to the apostolic age. We believe in being baptised in the Holy Spirit and with fire, thus to be prepared to advance the Saviour's triumph in a far more effective manner than is often seen in persons professing godliness. May God baptise more and more in the Holy Spirit and with fire, so that more will have the power and the will to serve God.

Live in deep sympathy with the Spirit. Then we may confidently anticipate a career of usefulness for God. Let us hand down to future generations such a love and reverence for God and souls that Elim will become a movement that will bless the world until Jesus comes again.

Book Review

Family Prayers, published by Scripture Union. Price 50p, postage and packing 8p extra.

THIS useful book is not quite what the title suggests. It does not contain page after page of prayers, from which most Pentecostal people would fight shy. Here we have a short paragraph based on a text of Scripture taken from a suggested passage for each day of the year. The family is in view, so themes are intended to interest various age groups. The prayers are brief. As the Introduction says, "A Family Prayers reading shouldn't last longer than it takes the eggs to boil for breakfast!" was the comment passed when the issuing of this series was discussed.

You may find this book an advantage if only to avoid the awful danger of turning a brief breakfast prayer into the kind of prayer which you might offer at the church prayer meeting. Here at least we should be our most natural selves and use simple language. This book helps in this. The use of the Revised Standard Version adds further interest.

A Message from our President

IT is my privilege to greet you warmly in the name of our Lord. We are so pleased that you are interested to read this special number of our official organ and we trust that you will find it of interest and help.

Incidentally, we publish THE ELIM EVANGEL weekly and, if you do not already have a regular copy, you can easily arrange for this by contacting the Minister of your nearest Elim Pentecostal Church or by writing to us at the address shown on the left of this page. We will be pleased to hear from you.

You may like to know that we publish a series of pamphlets under the heading, "Why?" which deal with aspects of Christian faith and practice. Details and copies may be obtained as for the EVANGEL.

We happily publicise our church as "The Church with the friendly Welcome". We like to feel that this is so. Our services are characterised by friendliness, informality, good singing and excellent fellowship. Members of our congregations are always pleased to welcome new friends. We feel that the standards of friendship and comradeship set by our Lord and Saviour and by the Early Church are normal for the Christian Church. We are "saved to serve", which means that knowing and loving Jesus Christ as our Saviour imposes on us the glad privilege and duty of saying and meaning, "Your servants for Christ's sake!" The Pastors of our churches are always pleased to hear of those to whom they can minister, whether it be by way of prayer in our services, pastoral visitation or counselling, or training of children in spiritual things through Sunday school and youth activities of which we have many.

We declare that the most relevant Figure in world history is the Lord Jesus Christ. God sent His Son, Jesus, to be the Saviour, the Redeemer of the world. There are many wonderful truths which derive from this. Our preachers seek to proclaim them from our pulpits by the help and guidance of the Holy Spirit in simple, understandable language and with practical application. We have become well known because we highlight four aspects of Christ's ministry, though we are well aware that these four are not by any means the full story. We preach Jesus Christ the Saviour, the Healer of the body, the Baptist in the Holy Spirit and the coming King. In a torn and troubled world these marvellous revelations challenge, thrill, bless and move us. Join us in fellowship. We will be pleased to have your company.

T.W. WALKER.

Evangelism with a capital "E"

by James T. Bradley (Secretary-General)

The spontaneity of this passion for souls, the ever-present urge, may be gauged from W. Ronald Jones's experience, when, at a recent wedding in the Elim Pentecostal Church, City Temple, Bristol, he felt led to make an appeal for people in the congregation to come to Christ and twenty responded. Mr. Jones recently opened another Elim Pentecostal Church at Weston-Super-Mare.

Other Evangelists, Pastors and laymen, have recently opened Elim Pentecostal churches. Our policy of assigning ministers to conduct campaigns in already established churches in some twenty towns and cities each year is part of our evangelistic drive. Not too long ago we met a group of fourteen to sixteen Pentecostals in the home of one of our members. They want to become an Elim Church. Already they have begun evangelising and in a local hall have held three evangelistic rallies with an attendance of at least 240 at one of these.

Our policy is to establish a Pentecostal witness in every town, village and hamlet in the British Isles.

Evangelism, the winning of the lost for Christ, has priority in all our churches. Every activity of church life is directed ultimately to this end. By youth groups, Sunday schools, tract distribution, personal witness, door-to-door visitation, preaching, children's campaigns, youth camps and evangelistic campaigns, we seek to win the lost for Christ.

In July 1972, a great united Pentecostal youth march of witness took place in Birmingham, climaxed by about 5,600 young people of Elim and Assemblies of God crowding into Birmingham's Bingley Hall.

We believe that men are eternally lost apart from faith in Jesus Christ and that our primary duty is to rescue them from eternal destruction. The object of the state is to make citizens comfortable, healthy, and satisfied; the Church's object goes beyond

"My life was changed!"

Fl. Lt. David J. Stuart

TWENTY-TWO years ago the Holy Spirit convinced me of my need of the Saviour, that my sins had to be forgiven, and that I had personally to respond to the work that God had wrought in Christ on Calvary's cross. I took that step forward to meet God and He saved my by His matchless grace!

The next sixteen years saw a downhill slide in my spiritual life as I indulged in worldly pleasures during my Royal Air Force career as a jet pilot. However, God in His great goodness recovered the wandering sheep and brought me back to the fold, whence none shall pluck him from His hand. Now, after six years in the Pentecostal movement, I can testify that the grass is NOT greener on the other side, but that God gives us richly all things to enjoy (1 Timothy 6:17) and that true happiness is found in Him. A marvellous wife and three lovely children are not the least of His blessings!

I finished with the service last year, having completed my engagement, and left, not because I had any conscience about serving in the armed forces, rather the reverse, but, for domestic reasons, under the guiding hand of God. In point of fact, it was during the last few years, when my faith was probably strongest, that Satan harassed me most concerning the Christian ethics of my vocation. It was one of the ways that worldly compatriots chose to throw my faith in my face, but it was a bitter experience to be reprimanded from time to time by other "soldiers" of Jesus Christ. However, I derived much comfort from the knowledge that Jesus Himself found greater faith in a Roman Army Officer than in all Israel (Matthew 8:10) and also baptised another with the Holy Ghost (Acts 10:44). He's doing the same sort of thing today.

I am still flying, but in a very different mode. I finished up in the Royal Air Force training pilots to become instructors on supersonic jets, but now, at the other end of the scale, I'm training ab initio students on small single and twin-engined piston aircraft. God is faithful, and the One who kept me safely through years of flying high speed jets, still keeps me in the hollow of His hand. What may appear to some to be a hazardous occupation (even to me at times!) is still a very satisfying one, and I believe that if we are in the will of God, we can claim all His precious promises, including Psalms 91:7 and 121:8.

I have found that to put Christ first in all things brings untold blessing and also that, as we give to Him, He gives to us in good measure (Luke 6:38). I have proved God and discovered that His love reaches farther than the spiritual alone; it touches also the physical and material realms.

The students whom I train are from many different countries and will eventually fly in many of the world's leading airlines, but they all have one basic need, whether they be Moslem, Greek Orthodox, Roman Catholic or Atheist — that is, the need of the soul; a need that can be met only in Jesus Christ through His atoning sacrifice on Calvary.

Expansion!

PETERBOROUGH. In September 1971 a pioneer Crusade was conducted in the Town Hall and resulted in some 200 decisions for Christ. A church building came on the market. After considerable negotiation we effected a purchase and it now houses an Elim congregation of between forty and fifty on a Sunday evening. A Sunday school has also been established.

WESTON-SUPER-MARE. In Autumn, 1971 three Presbytery Rallies were held in the town and they formed the prelude to the launching of a campaign in April 1972. The outcome has been the founding of a new Elim Pentecostal Church of most encouraging numbers. The people worship in a hired hall at the present time, but there are hopes of obtaining more permanent premises. Sunday evening attendances are in the seventy region.

EVESHAM. This church was commenced as a house prayer meeting and has developed into a congregation of approaching forty on Sunday evenings. They meet in a hired hall and have established a Sunday school. The work has been strengthened recently by the conducting of a tent crusade held on the Meadow.

SUNDERLAND. A pioneer crusade was held in the Polytechnic in July 1971 and between 300 and 400 decisions were registered. A Church of England Hall was purchased. Much work had to be done to make it habitable, but now it provides a splendid home for the new Elim congregation which numbers about eighty on Sunday evenings. A Sunday school and children's works are functioning and local outreach is planned.

SOUTH SHIELDS. It was in April 1972 that the Bollingbroke halls were hired for a pioneer crusade. There was a great response to the gospel and several notable healings were recorded. The halls of a disused church have been taken over and an Elim congregation of about ninety gathers Sunday by Sunday. A Sunday school has also been established.

ANTRIM. Amid the sad troubles of Ulster we are pleased to report that a new work has been opened in this county capital. The congregation is meeting in a hired hall.

EPPING. A nucleus of believers is now gathering in an ancillary room attached to the Epping Halls where the campaign was held and follow-up work is being concentrated upon.

BROADSTAIRS. The campaign is just concluding as this article goes to print. The congregation will worship in a church newly acquired from the Methodists.

TESTIMONY TIME

by Yvonne Knight

SOME time in early September I became very depressed for no apparent reason. In this frame of mind the Devil had an open door and attacked my mind with a most terrible fear, which haunted me every waking hour. No matter what I did I couldn't get rid of it. I got in such a state I could not cope. I knew that this experience was not from God; 2 Timothy 1:7 confirmed this.

On Sunday, September 17th I did not know how I could get to church. I felt so desperate. I determined to go in weakness like the woman with the issue of blood. Weak as she was, she went knowing that if she touched only the hem of Jesus' garment, she would be made whole.

I went, weak in body and mind, and asked the Lord simply that, if I didn't have the faith to receive deliverance, that He would give it to me, faith to reach out and to touch Him.

I went to the front as James 5:14 exhorts. Ministers and brethren laid hands on me and prayed. As they did, I felt the power of God go right from my head to my feet and I had immediate deliverance from my fear. I've heard many times of healing, but I have never experienced it myself just like this. Surely I can now say from experience, "Jesus Christ the same yesterday, and today, and for ever".

Since writing this, I have received a letter from my mother-in-law in New Zealand, telling of her experience as she was praying for us on Saturday, September 16th. Through a vision, God made her aware that we were in desperate need. She, her husband and others prayed specifically for us that weekend. What an encouragement to know God lays our burdens on the hearts of others! "Great is the Lord, and greatly to be praised."

10 reasons why Elim exists

by Glyn L. Taylor

Pastor of Elim Pentecostal Church, Leyton

BELIEVE it or believe it not, but Elim really did exist!

Amid the desert wilderness of Sinai, it was at an oasis called Elim that the children of Israel found rest and refreshment.

Today, thousands of people in many countries have cause to thank God that Elim still exists. Did I say exists? No, Elim lives through the dynamic power of the Holy Spirit and is part of the fastest growing church in the world.

Elim exists INITIALLY because of God. Without doubt, it was God who raised up Elim to be a spearhead of New Testament evangelism, bringing the message of full salvation to the masses. Today, Elim is strengthened by, and marches forward in, the knowledge that God is with us of a truth.

Elim exists HISTORICALLY because of the supernatural ministry of its founder, Principal George Jeffreys. Conscious of God's leading, he conducted revival and Divine healing crusades in the largest public halls in Britain. Tremendous scenes of revival were evidenced. Thousands were saved, healed of diseases, baptized in the Holy Ghost with signs following (Acts 2:4). After more than half a century, evangelism is still the burning passion in Elim!

Elim exists EVANGELICALLY! New, virile, Pentecostal churches are established annually through pioneer crusades. On a local level, each church seeks to evangelize through every department be it the church, Sunday school, various youth branches or sisterhood, open air meetings and visitation bands. Elim's message is for all people by all means!

Elim exists DOCTRINALLY to preach the whole counsel of God, presenting truth in a balanced, forthright manner. Elim teaches that Jesus Christ is the Saviour of the soul, the Healer of the body, the Baptizer in the Holy Ghost and the Coming King.

Elim exists SOCIALLY to care for people in need, to care for you. The sick, the lonely, the aged, the bereaved, the imprisoned, the outcast... people of all ages are helped through the work of local churches and their pastors. Elim readily accepts the social implications of its message.

Elim exists INTERNATIONALLY. Yes, Elim is world-wide because the commission of Christ is global. The Elim Missionary Society effectively brings Christ to the nations. Fifty missionaries evangelize nine countries in churches, Bible schools, presses, education and medical centres and also by means of literature distribution and missionary radio.

Elim exists CONTEMPORARILY, spreading light in a sin-darkened and troubled world. With the present-day outpouring of the Holy Spirit in the historic churches, one of Elim's most vital roles is to present Bible-based teaching and guidance to those who are coming into the Pentecostal baptism.

Elim exists DISPENSATIONALLY too! It was the prophet Joel who wrote "... And it shall come to pass afterward, that I will pour out my spirit upon all flesh" (Joel 2:28; Acts 2:17). The world-wide Pentecostal movement is one of the many signs of the times that tell us that we are living in the days immediately prior to the Second Coming of Christ (Acts 1:11).

Elim exists LOCALLY through the faithful service and the support of pastor and people — support in praying, in attending services, in tithing, in working, in evangelizing, but above all in living godly lives before all people. Bible standards are Elim standards.

Elim exists and here is the crux of the matter: Elim exists PERSONALLY for you and yours. Visit your local Elim Pentecostal Church this Sunday. You will be assured of a warm welcome. The hearty singing will thrill you; the faithful preaching of God's word will inspire you!

Why does Elim exist?... we invite you to come and find out for yourself.
P.S. Bring the family too!

"Others seek to serve their generation"

Principal, Elim Bible College

G. Canty (centre, left), a member of the faculty, G.W. Gilpin (principal) and students pictured at the 1972 Elim Conference.

"SMILE, JESUS LOVES YOU!" is a truism and a charming thought, but it is not the full answer to the complex problems of our age.

It suggests an antidote for the sickness and depression of society and is readily grasped by those who are in search of a panacea.

Reactions among youth to boredom and frustration vary. Some are for completely opting out of responsibility and seeking happiness in a nomad kind of existence. Others hopefully jump on the bandwagon of popular, promising projects which draw considerable support by gimmicks and garbs. Others seek to serve their generation by serious study and preparation, involving not only an understanding of our faith, but how best to relate it to the present human situation.

We are specially interested in the third group. The incidence of the number of teachers, social workers, artisans, graduates, undergraduates, clerical workers, nurses and businessmen applying for admission to Elim Bible College challenges us to do all we can to make it possible for these fine young people to escape from frustration and careerism for its own sake. There is here a tremendous totality of education and experience that can be of great value in the affairs of the Kingdom of God.

Academic qualifications are important, particularly in a society where opportunity has made it possible for such numbers of young people to be educated. One cannot ignore or hope to cope with it from any lower level, even given the advantage of spiritual experience and endowment.

On the other hand, there are unequalled values in

The World at your Door

by Peter Griffiths

Elim Missionary, Rhodesia

I had returned home from a second term on the mission field to find that the mission fields of the world had come to me!

Here I was studying in the heart of London and in class with a Chinese school inspector from Hong Kong, a teacher training college lecturer from Tonga, a psychologist from Korea, a university lecturer from Papua, New Guinea, and a priest from Italy! Other students in the group of nineteen on this particular course came from Uganda, Nigeria, Sierra Leone, Venezuela, Rhodesia, Mexico, Singapore and Egypt — what an opportunity for world evangelism!

As I talked with these and other overseas students studying at the University of London Institute of Education, I realised more than ever the opportunities there are for world evangelism right here on our door step.

Recently I heard Loren Cunningham of Youth With A Mission tell of the vision God has given him of world evangelism through a city. He quoted Acts 2:5: "Now there were dwelling in Jerusalem devout men from every nation under heaven", and pointed out that, in God's strategy and economy, He poured out His Spirit when people of nations throughout the world were gathered in a city. This year the greatest international gathering since the world began took place at Munich for the Olympic Games. Youth With A Mission, directing 1,000 young Christians were there to grasp this opportunity of world evangelism through a city.

In towns and cities throughout this country there is a growing number of foreigners living, studying or visiting, people from "missionary" countries who are decidedly easier to reach here than if they were at home. They speak English. The cultural, family and religious ties, which are such a barrier to reaching them with the Gospel in their home lands, have been weakened or broken yet, by and large, they are being neglected, as "familiarity breeds contempt".

Earlier this year, the Christian Union to which I belonged arranged with British Rail a Saturday excursion for overseas students. There were 112 students in the party with the few Christians strategically placed in compartments throughout the train. We were able to talk about Jesus to a doctor from Colombia, a teacher from Turkey, a theologian from Greece and a professor from Japan, among others.

Peter Griffiths with his wife and family

So many overseas people coming to this country are untouched by the Gospel and are sometimes virtually untouchable by missionaries back in their own countries.

I spent an hour explaining the Gospel to a university lecturer from Chile one lunch time. She described herself as a middle-class intellectual. Although she was nominally Roman Catholic, she seemed devoid of any understanding of the Gospel and had apparently not come into contact with missionary enterprise or evangelistic outreach of any sort.

She was similar to the Israeli who sat for an hour over coffee as we went through the Old Testament idea of sacrifice leading to its culmination in Christ. She had never seen it like that before and was gripped by the Gospel which had been kept from her by her strict Jewish orthodox upbringing.

There is still a crying need for those of us who have the message to go overseas to live and work among those without a knowledge of Christ, but for the vast majority of Christians who will never leave the shores of Britain, there may be opportunities for world evangelism all around us for, gathered in the cities of this nation, are devout people from every nation under heaven!

They need Christ!

Supernatural Power in

It's a Super-tonic!

THIS is the expert judgement on the SST Concorde. Orders are being placed for the product of the entente cordiale between Aerospatiale France and the British Aircraft Corporation. B.O.A.C. is to sign an order for five at a total estimated cost of £115 million.

The supersonic has arrived! The power age has come!

Take a look at Concorde's performance compared to the sub-sonic. Speed, the basic commodity sold by air transport, gives the Concorde the advantage of having twice as much of it to sell. London — New York takes 3½ hours compared to subsonic 7 hours, Los Angeles — Tokyo 6¼ hours compared to 13 hours, London — Sydney 15 hours compared to 26¼. "Faster than the sun" claim its joint designers and builders.

Sensational! Supertonic! Revolutionary!

It reminds us of PENTECOST. The charismatic revival sweeping the Church today is ample evidence that God's answer to modern, sub-standard, ineffective Christian testimony is the sonic boom of the Holy Ghost.

Old . . .

The Early Church knew what it was to be supernaturally charged with the power of God. Commanded by the risen Lord Jesus to tarry in Jerusalem to await the promise of the Father, they continued with one accord in prayer and supplication. The day of Pentecost was one of spiritual revolution — a sound from heaven, a rushing mighty wind, cloven tongues like as of fire, and they were all filled with the Holy Ghost beginning to speak in tongues as the Spirit gave them utterance. Ordinary, frail, timid, fearful believers received the dynamic of the Holy Ghost and boldly preached everywhere, energised by the super-plus of the Spirit, who confirmed the Word with signs following.

They turned their world upside down. "Before the first generation had passed", we read, "there was scarcely a nation of the then known world where the joyful sound had not been published, and where it had not won its trophies of grace."

. . . yet ever New!

This glorious Baptism of the Holy Spirit, this breath of God, was not a once-for-all experience. On

Supersonic Age

On the very day of Pentecost itself, Peter, referring to the phenomenon of this Baptism, assured his hearers that the promise covers all believers of all ages. A new wave of glory is flooding the Church in this twentieth Century. Christians of all denominations are stirring under a new out-breathing of Pentecostal renewal. Aware that world evangelism requires the miraculous impetus of the Holy Spirit, hungry souls are seeking and receiving the old-time power.

Pentecost is not noise, but power unto service! What would be the use of an SST Concorde having a frequency above the audibility range of the human ear, or travelling faster than the 1,087 feet per second of sound if at the end of it all there was nothing but a super-chronic earache? In the same way that the decision on Concorde ensures the future development of supersonic aircraft, so the Baptism in the Holy Ghost opens up a realm of spiritual experience hitherto unknown in the believer's life.

It is a personal experience with a practical expression.

The charge to every individual disciple is to be filled with the Spirit.

No amount of individual talent, organisation or personal efficiency can replace the fire, freedom and freshness of the Holy Ghost Baptism. Thus filled, the ministry of the Church is supercharged with passion for souls, programmes of outreach are formulated and Christians go everywhere fulfilling the powerful fundamental of soul-winning — the preaching of the Word in the demonstration and power of the Holy Ghost!

How to receive the Baptism in the Holy Spirit

by A. A. Biddle

Pastor of Elim Pentecostal Church, Portsmouth

THE Baptism in the Holy Spirit is a vital experience for all believers. This is emphasised when one realises what tremendous issues flow from that experience. Think of one or two: power or authority in our witness; the exercise of supernatural Gifts; the rushing rivers of living waters. All these and more result from the Baptism.

The subject of our title, then, is surely the cry of all who love the Lord and want to serve Him effectively. The answer to that request can only be given if we go back to the 120 who received on the Day of Pentecost and discover how they received.

Let me point out first of all the variations in personality among them. You don't have to be any particular type in order to receive more easily than any other type. Peter was volatile. John was self-conscious. James was cautious. Mary was gentle. Thomas was stubborn. But they ALL needed the Baptism and they ALL received the experience, not only of the inrushing power, but also of the outflowing vocal speaking in tongues. Personality is neither a help nor a hindrance. The point is that you can receive whoever you are and whatever your make-up.

Let it be pointed out, however, that they had a spirit of EXPECTANCY. In Luke 24:49 Jesus told them that He would send the promised Holy Spirit upon them if they would "tarry...until" they received. They did just that. They tarried expecting to receive. This is an essential attitude to receiving any blessing from the Lord, but especially that of receiving the Baptism. If we all had a stronger spirit of expectation we would get more and more from the Lord. The words of the simple chorus contain a profound truth:

Expect a miracle every day,

Expect a miracle when you pray,

IF YOU EXPECT IT

God will find a way,

To perform a miracle for you each day.

They exercised FAITH. Jesus said: "I send the PROMISE of My Father upon you". The promises of God are obtained by an act of faith and faith is a must for receiving the Baptism. Again Peter said in Acts 2:39 "the promise is unto YOU". The promise is for you. It is your birthright. Then claim it and make it yours!

They had PRAISING hearts. What did those 120 do during the tarrying time? Luke 24:53 gives the answer — "and were continually in the temple, praising and blessing God". How can you expect to open your mouth in tongues if you don't open that same mouth in hearty praise?

They had a SURRENDERED mind. In Acts 2 there were the mighty wind and cloven tongues of fire. What a supernatural, awe-inspiring time it must have been to be in the centre of all that! Then they were "FILLED" and they were so surrendered to the Holy Spirit that "THEY" spoke in tongues when He wanted them to do so. They were so abandoned to the Holy Spirit that "THEY" were willing for Him to give or do anything with them. "THEY" let go and let the Holy Spirit have His way in and through them!

"THEY" received — there is the pattern on the Day of Pentecost — if you are prepared to follow the pattern you will receive too. The promise is unto YOU!

The Pastor of your local Elim Pentecostal Church would love to meet you and to pray with you for this mighty blessing.

We've got something to sing about!

writes David Woodfield

Crusade pianist, Pastor of Newcastle-upon-Tyne Church, Camp Commandant

WE found the place all right: it was crowded and it looked good. We set up, tuned up, stood up. The first chord sounded from the piano.

It was also the last one! That night the piano finally decided to stage a protest. Tea-time dances it could manage, evening sing-songs weren't too bad, even a classical recital emerged from time to time, but gospel music was the last straw that broke our piano's heart. It simply, but quite definitely, collapsed.

We nearly did as well! That night, however, over twenty young people responded to a gospel appeal.

Such are the hazards and such are the joys of musical evangelism!

From the singing of the Tabernacle choir, through the psalms of David, the plainsong of medieval monks, the glories of Handel, the depths of Bach, the simplicity of Sankey, the popularity of folk-type singing, music has been a medium through which men have praised and presented the glories of their God. Times change — so do styles. The message does not!

The age of the transistor is the age of pop music. Young people love music: their kind of music. Wherever there are young people there is music.

Jesus was a friendly person. He spent time with people. He would have been at home in the modern scene. He is relevant to young people. They love Him when they meet Him. Jesus said, "Go!" That's why we go — to places where the young folk are.

Let's visit a few places and listen in.

Introductions were over — a ripple of applause, a few notes on the piano — and in we swung with, "I'm on the happy side of life" followed by, "My God is real". A snappy presentation of the real Jesus followed — and it was all over. Two songs and two minutes preaching — was it worth it? Well over 500 fellows and girls were introduced to Jesus in their school assembly that morning.

Lots of noise, lots of smoke, lots of kids — it's an old pub converted into a coffee bar. Ray walked in, listened to the group, walked out again. About a mile down the road he turned back. He walked in again. When he next walked out, he was a brand new person inside. In the smoke, in the noise, there was God. Ray hadn't been in a church since his christening!

My ears came under a decibelic attack of rock (music that is!) and my eyes were invaded by probing strobe lighting. A city night club with a sympathetic management and a cynical audience completed the scene. The girl singer was good; she was also a Christian. For half an hour every night for a week she sang about Jesus. Some folk who had never heard before listened to the best news in the world.

Many others have heard as well — in church coffee bars, in concert halls, in street meetings, in secular discotheques, Jesus has brought new life and a new song to hundreds of folk.

Yes, we have got something to sing about and we don't intend to keep it to ourselves!

spiritual experiences and a knowledge of God. In the past, these have sometimes been ignored or written down in favour of the academic.

Our vision includes encouragement to furnish the mind to the fullest extent of our facilities, but more particularly the relating of that knowledge to the needs around. Horizons can be raised, involvement can sharpen the edge of witness and guidance towards avenues of service can both challenge and thrill. All are important with us and, when the two or three years training is completed, there is no greater compensation than to see the erstwhile teacher or artisan grasp the handles of the plough of Christian service and start off up the field to cut their particular furrow with skill and dogged dedication.

G. W. and Mrs. Gilpin

"It happened to me!"

by Ron Jones

Pastor of the City Temple, Bristol

Have you ever been shocked? I expect so . . . about the press, about the government and most certainly about other people. Haven't we all? But right now I mean, have you ever been shocked about YOURSELF?

I have! Let me tell you about it. I was brought up in a quite normal, "honest-to-goodness" respectable home. My parents went to church most Sundays and I just had to go along with them. It was reasonably bearable, that is until someone told me that I WAS A SINNER!

Truth to tell, he wasn't just talking to me. There were crowds of other folk listening to him, but as far as I was concerned, they were not even there. That preacher had said that I WAS A SINNER and it shook me rigid! He didn't stop at that, but proceeded to prove his point by quotations from the Bible, like — Romans 3:23; "All have sinned and come short of God's glorious ideal." and James 5:17; "Remember, too, that knowing what is right to do, and then not doing it, is sin."

He seemed to be able to draw on an unending supply of similar statements, but those two were enough to shock me into thinking about my life and, as I did so, I discovered that he was absolutely right.

I was a sinner on both counts. I had fallen very short of what God must have expected of me and I had certainly not always done what I knew to be right.

By the way, I'm just looking at that verse again, "ALL have sinned" — ALL! That's you as well as me. Shocking, isn't it?

He then proceeded to show with equal clarity that ALL SIN MUST BE PUNISHED. Look at Romans 6:23; "The wages of sin is death". It could only mean one thing . . . the consequence of sin is death — moral death, mental death, physical death and spiritual death. This is staggering, because if we receive the deserved penalty of our sin and rebellion against God, ALL of us must spend eternity banished from Him and all that is clean and wholesome.

Well, that's it then; there is no hope for any of us! But, thank God, that old grey-haired preacher had not finished; his voice resounded around that large Methodist central hall in Swansea: "JESUS CHRIST HAS PAID THE PENALTY FOR ALL YOUR SIN". Acts 14:12; 2 Corinthians 5:21; John 3:16 were all Bible verses that adequately proved his point, but the one that really settled the issue for me was Romans 5:8: "God showed His great love for us by sending Christ to die for us, while we were still sinners." Jesus Christ had paid my penalty! So that's what Calvary and Good Friday were all about! It is not just a date in history; it really was Jesus facing up to the consequences of my sin and paying its penalty once and for all. It all clicked into place. Look at Romans 6:23 once again; "The wages of sin is death, BUT THE GIFT OF GOD IS ETERNAL LIFE THROUGH JESUS CHRIST OUR LORD" Wonderful!

Jesus had not only faced the death part of the issue for me, but was now offering me LIFE . . . ETERNAL LIFE and as A FREE GIFT AT THAT! I just could not refuse that! WELL, you wouldn't want to miss an offer like that either, would you?

You can receive this gift right now . . . BUT ONLY AS YOU RECEIVE JESUS CHRIST INTO YOUR LIFE.

Different people talk about this experience in different ways. My old preacher just said, "Who will receive Jesus into their life?" I simply said, "I will". Dr. Billy Graham asks, "Who will commit their life to Jesus Christ?" and many thousands of people have.

I'm just asking, "Who among my readers will accept Jesus as the only One who can forgive sin and give life with a real purpose to everyone who will put their trust in Him?" I can guarantee that it works. It's too good for you to miss.

We would like to pray for you and send you some helpful literature. If you wish this, please complete the following slip and post it to Elim Pentecostal Church Headquarters, P.O. Box 38, Cheltenham, Glos.

I realise that I have sinned and that only by repenting of my sin and putting my trust in Jesus Christ can I receive forgiveness and the gift of eternal life. This I now gladly do. Please pray for me and send me free literature.

Vision West Africa

David and Margaret Mills,
Elim missionaries, share with us their thrilling outreach

GHANA! Gold Coast!

Her gold deposits are not as rich as when they were first discovered, but the opportunities for workers in the Gospel of Jesus Christ are fathomless. Let us consider some statistics . . .

Ghana covers an area of 92,100 square miles. It has a population of 7½ million. To the North you will find a sparsely populated area where the people are poor. The South is thickly populated and more prosperous. Ghana is surrounded by French-speaking West African States with a total population over 20,000,000.

What are we doing about the opportunity presented? We mean the body of Christians under the banner of "The Church of Pentecost", with whom Elim works in this area. In Ghana there are 121 full-time workers, in Togo 16, in Dahomey 6, in Upper Volta 1 and in Ivory Coast 5. The total number of assemblies covering the whole of Ghana is 1,160. You will see from the map that most of the work is done among the southern peoples; the northern regions have only a few scattered churches. The main reason for this is the language difficulty. There are four main languages, but in the North each small community has its own language. Strides are being made into the northern regions. The work there is very difficult as the people are mainly pagan.

Our own particular work is with the Refresher Courses held in Kumasi. Already four courses have been held where one or sometimes two pastors from each region in Ghana have come for a one month's course. During each course 145 hours of lectures are held. So far fifty pastors have completed the course. Great has been our rejoicing as, on returning to their churches, the brethren have reported that the lectures put into action have brought results.

Sunday school work is one of our main targets. Lectures on this subject are given during the Refresher Courses and new Sunday schools are being opened as the ministers take up the challenge. Training of Sunday school teachers is our great concern and prayer and planning are taking place to find ways of doing this.

Radio work is a new venture. A committee has been formed and potential script writers and broadcasters are being selected from among the pastors as they pass through the Refresher Courses.

Everywhere you look you find opportunities to preach Christ in Ghana. There are no restrictions — at present. The Government and the House of Chiefs — politics and culture — welcome the man with the Gospel. May the people of Ghana, Britain — the world, truly come to fear the Lord, the beginning of wisdom, which Job says "cannot be gotten with gold . . . cannot be valued with gold."

Christ is the answer — everywhere!

Changed!

by Tony Copeland

"Therefore if any man be in Christ, he is a new creature: old things are passed away; behold, all things are become new."

2 Corinthians 5:17

IN the world in which we live many young people are searching for identity, reality and a purpose for living. In this age of material wealth and scientific advancement, man is still searching for real answers to life.

Many young people are doing all kinds of things to find these answers. Many are seeking the answers through drugs, but are finding that this is not the way. The answers can be found in Jesus Christ.

When I was twenty-one years of age, I was addicted to morphine. I found that man had nothing to offer me in my hopeless condition. I had always been a rebellious, dissatisfied person.

When I was fifteen I left school and at the same time left home, looking for excitement and adventure. This led me eventually to such places as police stations, probation offices, court rooms, etc., for various offences. It wasn't that I was a criminal, I simply found illegal things exciting.

By the time I was nineteen I was getting fed up with this kind of life. I had done nearly all the things which young people do for kicks. I seemed to have everything that any person should be satisfied with — nice clothes, lots of girls, adequate finances, sports car — but I still wasn't happy inside.

Then drugs came along and, being open to any new experience, I gladly experimented. At first, it was a bit of pot and a few pills occasionally. Within a few months I was getting "pilled-up" every weekend. Before very much longer, I was selling pills to others.

I now had a new set of friends, all drug takers, into whose circles I was readily accepted. Most addicts and drug users have an immense ability to accept others of their own kind — they're all in the same boat, after all. Moving around within these circles got me involved more deeply than ever. I saw hardened addicts frantically "fixing" drugs to stay even normal. I thought that I'd never stoop that low, but the inevitable day came along and I tried one injection.

Narcotic drugs are different from others in that they turn everything off; they put you into your own warm, cosy world into which nothing can penetrate. I began using this kind of drug more and more often, thinking that addiction could never happen to me; after all, wasn't I more clever than all those others?

Of course I wasn't and I quickly began to deteriorate. I had been psychologically dependent upon drugs generally, but now my very being craved morphine. I really hadn't bargained for this. Without a fix for more than a few hours was what I can only describe as hell on earth; every single cell of my body screamed out for the drug which they had become used to enjoying.

I had to get to a doctor. When I did, he put me on a legal prescription for drugs daily. Over the next few months I saw psychiatrists, sociologists and doctors, who tried to offer me help, but they had nothing to offer. They didn't seem to realise that drugs were just a symptom of some deeper problem.

During my drug experience, I had several brushes with the police. The third time I appeared in court for drug offences, a probation officer suggested that I be sent to a rehabilitation centre rather than to prison. The bench agreed and chose what they called a religious place called, "Life for the World".

The people there loved me as a person and this had a profound effect on me, because, when I had been on the drug scene, there was no love at all. All the people who try to help see you as a cold, clinical case or a particular type of person. But this was something real. Within two weeks I had heard the gospel, confessed my own sins and received Jesus Christ into my life.

That was the beginning of my new life with the Lord Jesus Christ and since then the Lord has blessed and taught me so much. I know that only Jesus Christ has given me freedom and true satisfaction and I wish now to devote my life to Him and His work that others, too, might catch a glimpse of Him and so experience that ultimate knowledge of God's love and forgiveness.

(The writer has now entered Bible college for training).

The Christian Mother

THE Bible is a well balanced book. In the Old Testament we have a detailed character sketch of a God-fearing woman in Proverbs 31 and in the New Testament we find a development and a deeper concept of the same theme. I refer to the lovely portrayal of a godly mother and the influence of Christian doctrine in her home to be found in the Second Epistle of John.

This letter, written by the aged apostle, gives us a three point outline of a truly Christian home. John was writing to the Elect Lady and it is not my purpose to discuss the title or its implications, but just to say that here was a Christian mother, possibly a widow, who was greatly respected and loved by fellow-believers.

We must realise that this lady was obviously a devout, active member of the local fellowship of believers. Loved and respected by all, she drew her inspiration for life and conduct from the teaching she received. Thus she was a power in the home. It would seem that she was responsible for the beliefs of the home and their practical application. So we read that the children of this Elect Lady were beloved by all and that they were consistent Christians, walking in the truth of God.

Here is an example and a challenge to all mothers, myself included. It brought joy to John the Apostle to find this family walking in the way of the Lord and it certainly was so because of the teaching and prayer of the mother. Don't leave it all to the Sunday school teacher or the minister, but, mother, use your power and love in the best of all ways, to lead your family in the paths of truth and righteousness.

I would like to suggest that there is clear evidence of the personal diligence of the family in spiritual matters. It was not just left to Mum, but, as the Apostle John addresses his words to the whole family, it would seem that they all applied themselves to his teachings and were willing to heed his instructions. He warns them to "look to yourselves", and "Love one another", and "Walk in His commandments" — how lovely to have this inspiring example of a Christian household with a whole-hearted desire to serve the Lord! It is not my purpose to enter into the details of the dangerous errors of gnosticism which were invading the Church in the time of John, but this false doctrine certainly caused havoc and so a stern injunction is given in verses 10 and 11 to maintain purity of doctrine in the home.

We too must be on our guard today for there are certainly as many strange, evil cults and shades of half truth in this century. Mormonism, Jehovah's Witnesses, Christian Science, Spiritism, modernism in all its insidious forms and the resurgence of mystic cults and transcendental meditation which appear so attractive to our student population must never be allowed to invade our homes. Mum and Dad may be considered fundamental and stick-in-the-mud, old-fashioned "squares", but the faith once delivered to the saints — the doctrine of Christ — must be supreme in the truly Christian home and it should be safeguarded against those who would come and propagate confusing and unscriptural doctrines.

John's loving human personality shines through at the end of his letter. He has so much more to share with them that he longs to visit this family of the Elect Lady. To meet and speak face to face is his ambition and he is confident that it will be a time of mutual rejoicing: "our joy shall be full". I must draw the conclusion that a tip-top Christian home is a place of real joy and happiness and as such attracts others to share in the secret of that joy and the delights of the sweet fellowship it offers.

If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness.

I John 1:9

The Age of Restoration

"I will restore. . . afterward I will pour out My Spirit upon all flesh. . . I will shew wonders in the heavens and in the earth" (Joel 2:25,28,30).

by John G. Cooper

Pastor of Elim Pentecostal Church, Caerphilly

MANY of the great truths of the Word of God were lost during the period called the Dark Ages, when the traditions of men replaced the teachings of Holy Scripture.

During this period there were small groups of true Christians who experienced in a limited measure the blessings and power of God.

In Joel, we see a Divine principle that God will restore. There can be no doubt that it is the will and intention of God Almighty at this end-time to restore the Gifts of the Holy Ghost to His Church, so that Jesus Christ our Lord might take to Himself at His Coming, a virgin Bride, pure, holy, and clothed with the garments of His righteousness, authority, and power. Since Martin Luther, God has restored to His Church lost truth. At the beginning of the twentieth century, the Church began rapidly to return to its former apostolic position.

One such truth was the doctrine of Divine Healing. The restoration of this truth, with others, was a factor in the raising up the Pentecostal Movement. A host of true men of God, such as George and Stephen Jeffreys, Dr. Charles Price, Smith Wigglesworth, and others, caught again the vision that their God was a healing God.

By revelation, they understood that He not only promised a glorious tomorrow, but also deliverance for today. The voice of the Eternal God seemed to cry from the pages of the sacred Book. . . "I am the Lord your Healer" (Exodus 15:26).

Has He not always been a healing God? Naaman's leprosy (2 Kings 5:14,15), Jeroboam's withered hand (1 Kings 13:6), even the raising of the dead — the Shunammite's son by Elisha (2 Kings 4:33-35), show that He has.

Jesus came healing and delivering. The lame, the blind, the deaf, the tormented, were completely delivered and made whole by His mighty power.

The Scriptures are full of the healing acts and the healing commands of God, e.g. "The power of the Lord was present to heal them" (Luke 5:13). The Scripture assures us. . . "I am the Lord, I change not". Unchangeable. . . that was the revelation that gripped the hearts of the fathers of restored Pentecost! If He is the same, they reasoned, then will He not do exactly what He did 2,000 and 4,000 years ago? They turned eagerly to the Scriptures to see if their Lord had left commandments, and to see His will concerning healing the sick.

They found that His command was constant — to the twelve, to the seventy, to the Early Church, "Heal the sick" He declared (Mark 10:8). "In My name. . . they shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover" (Mark 16:17,18). The Apostles obeyed their Lord, and the result is found in Acts 5:14-16: "And they were healed every one". Paul raised Eutychus from the dead (Acts 20:9,10), just as Elisha had raised the lad. . . The Apostles found that He was unchangeable, and the early fathers of "Pentecost Restored" found that He was unchangeable, and we too, obeying His commands, can find that He is just the same. . . the healing and compassionate Lord.

God heals for two main reasons. Firstly, to confirm the Word (Mark 16:20). Some suggest that this is His only motive, a cold, calculated healing to confirm spiritual truth. There are moments in the Word when the healing was performed to secure attention for the "truth preached", which led to a harvest of souls, but on many other occasions, the only motive for the healing was the pure love and compassion of Christ toward men, women, and babes, whose bodies were twisted, torn, broken, and tormented, and whose minds were snapping with the oppression of demonic power. On these occasions, He yearned only to release them from the grip of suffering. Christ demanded, almost with anger, that this daughter of Abraham, whom Satan had bound for eighteen years, be loosed from this bond. Christ makes it plain that the reason for healing was simply to loose the woman from her awful condition. Over and over, the New Testament states that it was the compassion of Christ Jesus that was the motive for healing (Matthew 9:36). In Mark 1:41 the leper was healed, because Christ had simple love and compassion.

In our generation, God has given special gifts of healing and miracles to men, and the wonders of this age have not been surpassed even by the ministry of the apostles. Even though there are men with special gifts (1 Corinthians 12:4-10), the healing of the sick is not limited to a chosen few. The Bible states that believers (Mark 16) praying in faith (James 5) can also see the sick healed. Granville Tyler, our visitation deacon, saw a girl, who was very deaf, mightily healed, while the hearing-aid salesman was in the home. He had just told her that she was even beyond the help of a hearing-aid. A non-believer, deaf in both ears, so deaf that his two aids had become useless, phoned one of our members, to tell her excitedly that he was healed, after one prayer service. My church Elder prayed with me over a woman who the doctor declared would not see the night out, after a terrible cerebral haemorrhage. She was wonderfully healed, instantly. A dying child was prayed for, after I had been invited by unsaved and desperate parents. She was healed and the unsaved parents gave glory to a healing God.

A young woman I prayed for in the 1950's and who was instantly healed of diabetes, still has the doctor's certificate and confirmed it to my face when I met her twelve years later. These are the workings of God in simple, normal Church life which is repeated in our Churches.

Not special men, but ordinary men believe in a great healing God. What then does healing do today? It confirms the Word of Truth that is preached. It reveals that Jesus Christ is not dead, but is working through the life of His Church. He still lives and has the same loving concern and care and the same mighty compassion that He had while upon the earth during His ministry.

Is He a healing God? The Bible says (Luke 6:19): "And the whole multitude sought to touch Him: for there went virtue out of Him, and He healed them all."

Perhaps we could join with Nebuchadnezzar and say, "I thought it good to shew the signs and wonders that the high God hath wrought towards me. HOW GREAT ARE HIS SIGNS! and HOW MIGHTY ARE HIS WONDERS!" (Daniel 4:2,3).

Testimony Time

— by Mrs. Olive Towers —

IT is with praise and thanksgiving that I testify to a wonderful answer to prayer.

While visiting friends on April 27th last, I was savagely attacked by a large Afghan Hound, which badly bit the left side of my face and my nose. I had to have eight stitches in my face. It looked as though I would be terribly disfigured.

From the moment of the attack, however, I felt the wonderful power of God take hold of me and uphold me. Even as I lay in hospital being stitched I felt calm and peaceful, although my friends were very shocked at my injuries.

When I went to church on the following Sunday morning Pastor I.R. Hall was horrified at my appearance and prayed specially for me after the opening hymn. At the end of the service I went out for anointing for healing and amazingly my face began to heal, so much so that within six weeks when the President, Pastor T.W. Walker, visited the Ryde church where I worship, there was scarcely a mark on my face. Now, after about five months, there is no sign that anything has happened to me.

I do praise God for His healing power and for the love and prayers of the members of our Church. Hallelujah! To God be the glory!

environment and physical welfare to the salvation of never-dying souls. We believe that mankind must be saved, else, no matter how favoured their station in this life, they are lost for eternity.

The photographs of the Trafalgar Square and the Royal Albert Hall crowds accompanying this article show part of Elim's programme of continuous evangelism. Annually the Elim Movement invades the Royal Albert Hall and Trafalgar Square and has done so for nearly half a century, but every week in every Elim Pentecostal Church there is a continuous programme of evangelism. Every activity on several days every week is directed to winning the lost for Christ. The evangelism in the Royal Albert Hall and Trafalgar Square is part of that same programme of evangelism our Sunday school teachers, youth workers, Pastors and Evangelists and our members, constrained by the Holy Spirit, carry on week by week. The Elim Pentecostal Church was born in evangelism (the name of its first organised group was the Elim Evangelistic Band), it was born for evangelism and the third generation of Elim Pentecostals — our present young people — is as zealous to win the lost as were those early pioneers. We seek a continuous outpouring of the Spirit, for He and He alone can maintain in us the spiritual fire needed to maintain our love for lost mankind.

"I never realised that it could be so wonderful!"

by Len Magee

Minister of Elim Pentecostal Church, Lane End, High Wycombe.

HAVING been lifted out of the stupor of my sin into the light of Christ's love and healing, I was in no way aware of what the future might hold. I suppose that I thought I'd done everything, having wrung the last drops of "pleasure" out of drugs, visited nineteen different countries, and tasted a multitude of the world's costly pleasures. These are now bad memories for, although I didn't envisage an uneventful life as a Christian, I had no idea it would be like THIS!

Christ saved me one night in my bedroom, when I was under the influence of drugs. As I was reading Genesis chapter 27, I saw myself in Esau's anguish and dilemma, and I cried out to God for Him to save me. I received mercy whereas Esau didn't. I also inherited his blessing. "And by thy SWORD shalt thou live and shalt SERVE thy brother," said Genesis 27:40. What a blessing!

The Christian life among many things is a life of ADVENTURE, and being in service for Christ is absolutely wonderful. I've been privileged to travel and to visit places from Glasgow's Barlinnie prison to Chelsea Science College, and everywhere God is moving like a mighty ocean about to break forth. The opportunities and potential in a young Christian's life are — well, heaven's not the limit.

Then there's the tremendous joy of personal work — entering the lives of normal everyday, needy folk and ministering Christ and standing back and watching Him work. When I see bodies healed, hard hearts melted, and tears of joy and repentance, then something happens to me which can only be compared to a blast-off at Cape Kennedy. I'm really amazed how such a simple Gospel does such a profound work.

I can only describe true Christian fellowship as being BEAUTIFUL! I love it. Especially those times when the presence of God seems to permeate every part of our conversation and being. We linger and hesitate, reluctant to leave — surely a preview of glory, for fellowship with each other is fellowship with Jesus.

Above all, I never realised that HE could be so wonderful. Jesus is an ocean of joy and, as He fashions my heart for the future, He sounds a string now and then to see how His work has progressed. I get this great football-sized lump of ecstasy welling up within and it's more than I can contain. The Holy Spirit effects this by simply pointing to and revealing Jesus. That's really what my life is all about now — pointing to Jesus! When I do this, He takes care of everything else.

When I was first converted, folk at work said to me, "It'll wear off." Perhaps they thought I was a member of the church at Ephesus. Well, it didn't wear off. Quite the contrary! For it's not only what we are saved FROM that thrills me, but what we are saved FOR.

This is no negative, aimless, dull, grey existence, but an expressive and abundant life. It's not pottage and fodder, but milk and honey and I aim to get my spoon in! How about you?

"FOR behold I bring you good tidings of great joy" was the well-known message of the angel at the birth of our Lord Jesus Christ. Now there's a thought!

The disc played by the compere of the radio programme summed up the modern attitude: "Enjoy yourself, it's later than you think." Enjoy yourself; that's the thing.

A label in a toy shop bore the words: "Games and Pastimes".
Pastimes — is that the idea? Are we here to find ways to pass the time away? Doesn't it go quickly enough?

Enjoyment occupies our attention very closely. The Department of Trade and Industry could supply statistics to show that the pursuit of nostalgia, happiness, sudden riches, the multiple means of seeking enjoyment, cost us a pretty penny.

Are we a happy generation? Though we can find many ways of indulging ourselves, do we know real joy? Is this a contented, relaxed, joy-filled era? What do you think?

If you think it unworthy even to consider joy in life — some people regard joy and happiness as by-products of living — then think about whether we are getting into life, as well as out of it, the real fulfilment or which life was intended.

Christ did not use idle words, so that when He said something about joy, He meant it. He declared: "These things have I spoken unto you, that My joy might remain in you, and that joy might be full." As if to make sure we got the message, He repeated the formula: "These things I speak in the world that they might have my joy fulfilled in themselves."

Many people would think that church is the very last place to go to in order to find joy. We tend to associate the calling-in of a minister with sorrow, illness, and bereavement. We think of black clothes and mistake outward solemnity for sadness. Does Christ bring real joy?

A lady in Bradford some thirty years ago was terribly disfigured by cancer. She lived day and night in the unpleasant company of racking pain. Drugs had ceased to be of much help. She endured torture in almost every nerve and fibre. Yet people from near and far in that area went to that house to see that lady. What brought them — a sense of duty or social nicety? Never! That poor twisted body contained a truly happy, really joyful spirit. To visit her was to receive a benediction; to hear her talk so simply and lovingly was to witness a psalm in life.

Consider which is joy — escapism, expensive indulgence, pastimes, intoxication, or could it be the reward of a quiet faith in the heart?

Joy when all others are cheering is all very well, but the lonely hour brings its miserable reaction. The Christian is a realist. He knows that there are troubles, woes, trials. He realises that life has its deep, fundamental challenges. He knows very well that there are failure and sin in the human heart, but he has Christ!

Jesus came to bring peace even in war, calm even in the storm, joy even in sorrow, practical, durable joy despite outward circumstances and even inadequacies. In receiving Him and serving Him, we find His life, eternal life.

Mary the Mother of Jesus

MARY the mother of Jesus stands singularly apart from all other women in history. No other woman has been so revered and honoured. Admiration mixed with love for her pays no regard to time, class or race, because she has become the embodiment of all that is pure and noble in womanhood. To this end art, music and literature have praised her. She is portrayed on canvas and in stained-glass windows in the world's most magnificent cathedrals. Sculptors have carved her image in marble, stone, bronze and wood. Poets in rapturous verse have raised her to the highest pinnacle of any woman in history. Yet Mary never conjectured such external and fading glories. Her dedicated life could be described in one simple sentence: "She gave herself".

From the moment she is introduced to the scene of time in a few fleeting words, until she fades out in apparent obscurity, Mary reveals her willingness to obey the Word of God and her complete confidence in the fulfilment of it.

She was likely a teenager or in her early twenties at the time of the conception, which she accepted in faith and resignation, for when the angel Gabriel visited her to inform her that she would be the mother of the Saviour (Luke 1:26-38), her reply was "Behold the handmaid of the Lord; be it unto me according to thy word", or as Moffatt translates it: "I am here to serve the Lord" and Phillips: "I belong to the Lord body and soul, let it happen as you say". Definitely, but with delicate courtesy, Gabriel had explained the incarnation to the astonished maid (Luke 1:35). Bishop Hackett gives this explanation: "Upon the word of the salutation of the angel and by the ear of Mary that heard the word, between those two alone He was made man, and they were unto Him like as a father and a mother".

Mary full of faith visits her cousin-Elizabeth and there she magnifies her God and Saviour (Luke 1:46-55). The personal pronouns express her own rich relationship with God. The song pouring from her full heart divulges her deep, abundant spiritual experience. Mary was well acquainted with the Old Testament, the psalms, the song of Hannah and the faith of Abraham.

Abraham is called the patriarch of faith, so Mary is the matriarch of faith. Observe the similarity between the two:

1. Abraham believed the Word of God (Romans 4:3); Mary believed the Word of God (Luke 1:38).

by
Mrs G. M.
Gorton

2. Abraham was accounted righteous (Romans 4:3);
Mary was counted blessed (Luke 1:28,45).
3. Abraham offered his boy (Genesis 22:2-3);
Mary offered her body (Luke:48).
4. Abraham gave glory to God (Romans 4:20);
Mary gave glory to God (Luke 1:46).

Mary was a woman gifted with great wisdom and spiritual discernment (Luke 1:19). "Ponder" means "to cast together" (Y.L.T.). She treasured in her mind the promises and prophecies given by Gabriel, Simeon and Anna concerning her baby, Jesus. In her later years, when she lived in the home of John the beloved disciple, and where probably Luke frequently visited her, she would muse upon the past and consider the prophecies relating to the reign of Israel's Messiah and rejoice in that she was the vehicle chosen for His arrival into the world.

Amazingly few references are given to her in Scripture which is rather surprising, seeing that Rahab the harlot is even mentioned in the great picture gallery of faith (Hebrews 11), whereas holy, virtuous Mary is left out, but this is clearly the purpose of God. He foresaw the propagation of an awful heresy, of Mary being elevated to the status of the "queen of heaven" and worshipped as the "mother of God". Mary, unobtrusive, never presuming, is content to remain in the background. At the cross she is a pathetic, yet noble figure, enduring loneliness and grief in fortitude and faith. Her whole attitude has comforted grief-stricken mothers of each succeeding generation since. She is not even among the other Marys on that resurrection morning and no record is given of how she felt or reacted when she knew that her Son had arisen. The last short scene of her is when she was with the 120 gathered in the upper room. How long she lived and the manner of her death are unknown. This is not important, for she still lives on as the world's most beautiful example of motherhood.

An Unbelievable Story

"NO ROOM" (Luke 2:7)

by A. Wilson Irish Superintendent

DURING the past four years the people in Northern Ireland have passed through times of terrible trouble, intimidation, and death. As I have travelled during the past months and told of some of these things that have happened here to people living in quieter realms they have listened with astonishment and unbelief.

The most unbelievable story is not about things that have happened and are still happening in the North of Ireland, terrible as they are, but about the Lord Jesus who was born 2,000 years ago.

Poor Mary! I imagine that she was a young girl, maybe in her 'teens, when Jesus was born. Did ever a woman come to the hour of travail in more distressing circumstances? She was away from home. Caesar Augustus had decreed "that all the world should be taxed . . . every one to his own city". So Joseph and Mary went from the city of Nazareth, to Bethlehem, the city of David, to register. How strange it was that they had to come just at this time when Mary's Child was so near to birth. Did they understand why?

God was about to fulfill His word. In Micah 5:2 declares: "But thou, Bethlehem Ephratah, though thou be little among the thousands of Judah, yet out of thee shall He come forth unto Me that is to be ruler in Israel; whose goings forth have been from old, from everlasting." Caesar gave the decree and Joseph and Mary found themselves in Bethlehem, so that the Saviour might be born there and so that this verse of Scripture might be fulfilled.

Women sometimes have strange fears and forebodings before the birth of a child. It is part of the curse which fell on womanhood. This was to be Mary's firstborn. Her mother was not at hand nor were any of the godly women of the community who would know what to do. There is no record of a doctor or a midwife being in attendance. If only her cousin Elizabeth, who had had such an experience just six months before, had been present.

Only Joseph was with her. Men seem clumsy enough at the best in such circumstances and Joseph at this time was not her husband. How desperately alone Mary must have felt. In Mary's hour of travail, when she slipped down into the valley of the shadows, her bed was nothing but straw in a stable, and, when her Baby was born, she herself, with trembling yet willing fingers, wrapped her Babe in swaddling clothes and laid Him in a manger, "because there was no room in the inn".

They had no room for Jesus

The world had no quarrel with Joseph and Mary, and the world has still no quarrel with them. Words not appreciated by them are often spoken in praise and worship of them. This world has a quarrel with Jesus Christ.

It is not meaningless that Christ was born in a stable and laid in a manger. If God had millions of the Roman world to register for taxation at a certain time so that one verse of Scripture should be fulfilled and His Son should be born in Bethlehem, then we may be sure that every detail surrounding this whole event has a weight of meaning. When there was no room for them in the inn, it was only a token that this world had no room for Jesus.

The death of Christ on the cross revealed the awful wickedness of the human heart as nothing else could. Jesus was hated, despised, betrayed, denied, scourged, spat upon, crowned with thorns, given vinegar and gall, nailed to the cross, mocked while He died, then pierced with a spear: what sinners we are! Christ rejected by the priests, and rulers, hated by the Pharisees, jeered by the multitudes, crucified by all: what a revelation of the heart of man! All this was revealed at the cross, but just as surely it was symbolized when there was no room for the Saviour to be born in a decent home.

When did Jesus come to know that the world did not want Him?

We cannot fathom all the mystery of divinity, of incarnate God in human flesh. We do not know how much of His infinite wisdom Christ left with the Father along with His robes of glory. How soon did the Baby Jesus know all that went on about Him? Read John 2:25; Luke 2:49. None can know when He came to know that he was the very Son of God, Creator, Saviour. These matters belong to the holy treasury of God where human feet have never trod.

As soon as Jesus knew anything He must have known that the world did not want Him. He was born more for death than for life.

How soon did He hear from the lips of His mother the story of Herod killing the babies in the hope of killing Him? How soon did He know of those scribes and chief priests, knowing all about His birth from the Old Testament, yet not willing to travel those few miles to Bethlehem to see the Saviour?

There is no room for Jesus anywhere among men.

There was no room for Jesus in the inn at Bethlehem. There was no room for Him permanently anywhere else as He wandered up and down the land of His birth. "Foxes have holes and the birds of the air have nests but the Son of Man hath not where to lay His head" (Matthew 8:20). When "every man went to his own home" Jesus went to the mount of Olives (John 7:53; 8:1). There was no room for the anointed Son of God in His own synagogue in the village of Nazareth. They hated Him and sought to kill Him. There was no room for Him in Gadara (Matthew 8:34). After He had wrought this great blessing to the country in general and to the man in particular "they besought Him that He would depart out of their country". There was no room for Him in Jerusalem for "they took up stones to cast at Him"

(John 8:59). There was no room for Him in the whole world. Herod, Pilate, the chief priests, the scribes, the Pharisees, the Sadducees, the common people and the Roman soldiers all agreed together that He must die.

Men begrudged Jesus all that He ever had.

In Bethlehem He was denied a place to be born. Herod begrudged Him His kingly title. Nazareth begrudged Him His fame. The Pharisees begrudged Him His power and the homage of sinners. Simon the Pharisee begrudged Him the tears and kisses on His feet. Judas Iscariot begrudged Him the sweet perfume of the box of ointment. The Pharisees begrudged Him the cries of little children. They even begrudged Him the quiet hour of prayer in the garden and broke it up with their torches, swords and staves. Even in His death the senseless malice of a wicked race of men had no room for Jesus. The rulers begrudged Him His name "King of the Jews". They even begrudged Him His clothes in the hour of His shame and stripped Him, seamless robe and all. They begrudged Him even a drink of water as in His dying agony He cried, "I thirst". They even begrudged His poor, tired body the peace that death brought, for they pierced it with a spear. When He rose from the dead, they begrudged Him even this proof that He was the Son of God, by giving money to the soldiers to tell lies.

Today men begrudge Him His miracles, His virgin birth, His bodily resurrection. Great God, turn the hearts of men to love the Saviour who died for them!

Have you room for Jesus or have you also crowded Him out of your heart? Have you time or room to trust Him, to serve Him, to read His Word, to pray?

The Certainty of coming Glory

by J. Alexander Wright

FOLLOWING the evidence (8:12-17), and the expectation of coming glory (vv.18-27), we end this great doctrinal section with the certainty of coming glory (vv.28-30).

"And we know that all things work together for good" (v.28). The abiding certainties of the Christian faith are shown in the "we knows" of the New Testament. From Bible records and from inward witness and conviction we know that "God makes everything turn out for the best" (Sconfield's trans.). If we believe this, there will be an end to all our complaining.

The Authorised Version makes "all things" the subject of the sentence; other versions make God, who causes all things so to work, the subject, not "blind cause" of itself, but God, in action and interaction, providentially directing the lives of those who have responded to His call, and who, by their love for Him give evidential proof of this. God's plan is beneficent ("good"), inclusive ("all"), and harmonious, ("together").

Foreknowledge, predestination, calling, justification, glorification (vv.29,30) summarize God's plan for His own. God foreknows what all men will do, but does not predetermine it, else we are but automatons. Predestination is not to heaven or to hell, nor is it for the unregenerate, but for his own, and it is found "in Christ". His own are predestinated to full-grown sonship (Ephesians 1:5) and this includes the glorification of the body (Colossians 1:18). "First-born" there relates to the new creation, whereas "only begotten" (John 3:16) relates to God's unique Son. Note that v.30 is in the past tense and think on the innumerable multitude of Old and New Testament saints already in the glory (Revelation 7:9).

The remaining verses (31-39) form a triumphant song-theme: "From Condemnation to Glory". The seven-fold interrogative, "What shall we say?" (v.31), is answered by the posing of seven further questions which are unanswered because they are unanswerable. This ushers in a picture of the great Assize, what Ian MacPherson, in a fine sermon, entitles, "The interrupted Trial". It is a farce of a trial really, for the Judge is already on the side of the accused and if God, all-wise and all-powerful, be "for" us, then who can be against us?

"Thou didst not spare Thine only Son" (v.32). This vivid expression, "only Son", points to the infinite difference between Him and "the sons" and echoes Abraham and Isaac on Mount Moriah. God "spared not the old world" (2 Peter 2:5), "spared not the angels that sinned" (2 Peter 2:4), "spared not" His chosen Israel (Romans 11:21), nor did He spare His own Son. There was no mitigation of His sufferings: the full weight of sin's judgment fell upon Him. "It pleased the Lord to bruise Him; He hath put Him to grief." (Isaiah 53:10). If God has already given us His best, "how can He fail to lavish upon us all He has to give?" (N.E.B.). Dr. D.M. Baillie says that we might better read this phrase "give us all things" as "freely forgive us all", and points to the same word as it is translated in 2 Corinthians 2:7,10; 12:13; Colossians 2:13; 3:13. The picture of the great Assize in the context suggests it, too; the language is forensic. Here we are, erstwhile sinners at the Bar of God, the Judge of all. Here are the demands of Judgment: "Who aught to my charge shall lay?" Silence reigns throughout the Court; there is no charge, for there is no one to charge! The Judge has become our Advocate, as has also the Attorney, Jesus Christ, nor is there a jailer in sight! God is for us, Christ is for us, and the Holy Spirit is for us (v.26) — blessed Trinity! Doubtless Paul was thinking of Isaiah chapter 50 when he wrote this.

From the High Court of Heaven we descend to earth and look at the blows of circumstance, the opposition that comes from men and things. What a terrifying army Paul marshals, and they are all against us. In seven-fold might they come: tribulation, distress, persecution, famine, nakedness, peril, and the sword. Their object is to sever the umbilical cord

The Christmas Star

Words and drawing
by Sheila Price

MRS. Brown came into the sitting-room carrying a box of decorations which she had saved from last Christmas.

"Are you going to help me trim the tree?" she asked.

"Oh yes," answered Brian and Carol excitedly, and they sat down on the floor to sort through the trimmings, while Mrs. Brown helped her husband to secure the tree in the large pot near the window.

Carol handed her father some coloured lights and he arranged them over the tree, while Brian decorated the branches with tinsel, baubles and little lanterns. In no time at all, the tree was trimmed.

"All we need now," said Mr. Brown, "is a star for the top."

"There's no star in the box, daddy," said Carol.

"Perhaps we threw it out last year," said Mr. Brown, "I remember it had got very discoloured and bent."

"Never mind, I'll make another," said Mrs. Brown. "I'll cut out the shape in cardboard and then stick some kitchen foil on it." She got out her scissors and soon made a big silver star which Mr. Brown fixed to the top of the tree.

"The Christmas tree looks prettier with a star, doesn't it?" said Carol.

"Yes," said Mrs. Brown, "and the star played a very important part in the first Christmas, for it led the Wise Men to Jesus. These men were, as their name suggests, wise. They were astrologers."

"What does that mean, daddy?" asked Brian.

"Well," said Mr. Brown, "they studied the stars. When they saw this bright new star appear in the sky they knew that it must be a special one, for they had seen nothing like it before. They were fascinated by it. It was so brilliant. When it started to move across the sky, they began to follow it. The star never disappeared from their sight, but shone brightly day after day, guiding them to Bethlehem, until it led them to the cattle-shed in which Jesus was born."

"What a wonderful star!" exclaimed Brian.

"Yes," said Mr. Brown. "And we can all be like that star. We can shine brightly for Jesus, and lead others to the Saviour."

College Christmas Column

by G. Wesley Gilpin Principal

I AM writing this while sitting in a session of the Evangelical Missionary Alliance annual conference which is being convened at High Leigh, Hoddesdon. The theme of the conference is COMMUNICATIONS, with special emphasis on Christian radio and literature. The world as a field of evangelism is represented by delegates from missionary societies and workers from almost all parts of the world. In this situation I am reflecting on the part played and the work done by our own Elim Bible College in the colossal task of world evangelism.

The British base is still the backbone of overseas outreach and one of the heartening things shown in our annual report is that ten to twelve young men each year move out from here to fill the gaps in ministerial ranks caused by the opening of new churches and the retirement of older ministers. Currently thirty two men are training to perpetuate this ministry.

As I write I am listening to Donald David who until recently was leader of Evangelical Literature Fellowship of India. He is a colleague of Henry Joseph, our man in Madras, who is the Principal of Maranatha Bible Training Institute. This, in turn, is an associate college with Elim Bible College and is training and sending out into the villages of India some twenty young men annually and using our correspondence courses translated into Tamil and Hindi. David Mills, Principal of the Bible College in Ghana, has based his courses on our British college and his programme of refresher courses for our associates in the Church of Pentecost, which has over 1,200 churches, is going on apace. World pressure is on: some 180,000 pass into eternity each twenty-four hours and situations such as exist in Uganda occur almost weekly. We are "letting down the ropes" that will enable rescue operations to continue even in the most dangerous situations.

In our Capel recording studio, regular programmes are prepared for home and overseas broadcasts and at present, in co-operation with the T.T.T. programme, cassettes are being prepared for issue to gospel and study groups on our various overseas fields.

From Finland, Switzerland, Sweden, Germany, France, Italy, Peru, China, Japan and Yugoslavia, a class of some thirty are studying English. On returning home, many will offer themselves to overseas boards for service in other lands. These indirect links have in recent times taken us to Afghanistan, Ethiopia, Japan, Thailand and Taiwan.

The week-end and vacation conference groups which rendezvous at Capel have reported blessing in a wide field. Some twenty young people with a Baptist group received the Baptism of the Holy Spirit during a day seminar of ministry and prayer. Another group that convened an evangelistic weekend reported twenty young people making commitment to Christ. The June Bible week saw 1,000 people nightly gather in the marquee under the ministry of the Word of God.

We send Christmas and New Year greetings to all our friends and prayer partners and express sincere thanks to resident and visiting tutors in both the Theology and language schools.

THE LETTER TO THE ROMANS—from page 6 of His love which binds us to Him. Then come the forces of the universe, the things beyond human control, in sevenfold might, death, king of terrors and terror of kings, life, more to be feared than life sometimes, angels, principalities and powers, strange, mysterious fallen hosts of heaven, spiritual wickednesses in heavenly places, servants of Satan, who ever seek our destruction, things present, and things to come (and who knows what they may be? The headsman's axe faced Paul!), height or depth, possibly astrological terms, since people then believed (as folk still do!) that the stars affected human destiny, and all other conceivable opposition. "In all these . . . we are more than conquerors" — one word in the Greek: "super-conquerors" — "through Him that loved us". This takes us back to the cross, from whence all victory comes, and so ends the great triumphant song.

(We thank Mr. Wright for this series. We will take up the series again in 1973 with "The Dispensational" — chapters 9–11. EDITOR.)

"WE wish you a merry Christmas" was the greeting in song when I answered a ring at the front door from two thirteen-year-olds, some six weeks prior to Christmas Day. The season had started. Father Christmas was already parading the big stores in the West End, crowds jostled on the pavements, mesmerised and attracted by the lighted windows. Christmas cards began to arrive from distant lands. The bonanza feared no inflation as the masses or the millions poured money into the tills.

Are not these some of the signs of a modern Christmas?

The first Christmas must have been so different. The signs, like the event, were God's and not ours. If we can free ourselves from the maelstrom of the season's onslaught and free ourselves from the dazzle and the glare, and look carefully enough, we can still see THE SIGNS. A quiet heart can find them in spite of the traffic, the television, the fuss that passes for pleasure, and the din that saves us from our thoughts.

The first SIGN was a SONG: "Glory to God in highest heaven and on earth His peace for men on whom His favour rests." This song ushered in that first Christmas.

Far away in the East, God's second SIGN was seen: A STAR. Months later the star had lead the wise ones to Bethlehem of Judea. They were of a different race. None of the actors in the Christmas drama had a white or Western skin. These travellers from afar formed a strange contrast to the Jewish shepherds huddled in their cloaks against the edge of the wind on the rocky hillside. It might well have been a night like a thousand other nights, part of the unchanging round of the seasons until the angel came and then the song.

There was another SIGN, a sign for all. "This is your sign," spake the angel as he appeared to the shepherds; "you will find a baby, lying all wrapped up, in a manger." The stable was the third sign, the greatest of the three, because it speaks of sacrifice, which is the gift of love. The promise to the shepherds of the Babe in the manger was that there was a Saviour, a Deliverer! The story began at Christmas with a Baby in a manger whose earthly life terminated at Calvary with a body broken on a cross. At this Christmas amid all our family joys, fun, fellowship and care for others who may well be within your reach, remember others who need your care.

The song, the star, the stable are some of the signs of our inheritance. They are our signs, because they are signs of Christ. Jesus is ours this Christmas, if He is ours at all. He shares our humanity and will some day be ours as well.

*And our eyes at last shall see Him
Through His own redeeming love
For that Child, so dear and gentle
Is our Lord in heaven above.*

*Not in that poor lowly stable
With the oxen standing by
We shall see Him: but in heaven
Set at God's right hand on high.*

Make this your special carol. Share the thrill of this beautiful children's carol written by Mrs. C.F. Alexander. Never has the gospel story been told to children more attractively than in "Once in royal David's city". Include another immortal hymn by the same writer, "There is a green hill far away".

*Sleep in your manger, tiny Child
Lulled by your mother's song,
Linger beside the ox and the ass
For the way is hard and long.
And Mary does not yet foresee
The cruelty of Calvary.*

*Laugh in your manger, lovely Child,
Over your head a star.
Hold out your hands for gold and spice,
Presents brought from afar.
For Mary does not yet foresee
The bitterness of Calvary.*

*Cry in your manger, little Child,
Your tears are easy now,
And tears enough will wash your feet
But none will soothe your brow.
And Mary does not yet foresee
The mystery of Calvary.*

*Grow from your manger, precious Child
Our lives are fraught with care,
And eagerly we wait to learn
The blessings of your prayer.
Though Mary does not yet foresee
The triumph of your Calvary.*

Why God did not send His Son

by David J. Ayling Pastor of Ulster Temple, Belfast

"For God sent not His Son into the world" (John 3:17).

HOW disconcerting it is to think of God being among us. A false sense of humility coupled with a real sense of our sin make us want God to be near enough to us in trouble, but not too near, thank you!

The Greeks had gods of their own. They placed the most uncomfortable of them high up on mount Olympus; only those with failings and follies like themselves did they suggest should come down and mingle among men. The wonder of the Incarnation is that the true God, with all His blazing purity, came and dwelt among us!

No wonder the world still echoes with the sound of the slammed door of the hostelry at Bethlehem! We don't like God as close as that. He makes us feel uncomfortable.

Then why did He come — to disturb our comfortable sinning, to remind us of our waywardness, to humble the world into subjection before His cross? Let us put the world on trial before history and angels for its reception of Christ and try to discover the truth of the Incarnation.

Let the prosecuting angel speak first

What a simple case he has to prove — to show that Christ's coming condemns the world. Consider how He was treated. John's Gospel does not record the event of His birth, but it notes the reactions of men to that event. He suggests that there are three human reactions to Christ among us: He was the light and the darkness did not understand Him (John 1:5); He was in the world and the world did not know Him (1:10); He came unto His own and they did not want Him (1:11). Did ever any world store up for itself such judgment?

Consider His reception: no royal birth-chamber — just a stable; no adoring subjects — just a few dirty shepherds and simple-looking sages. Why heaven does better than that any day — and they were supposed to be greeting their King! Already jealous hands reach out for the infant Christ to destroy Him and God must intervene to save His Son from blind jealousy. Condemn this world!

Consider His Revelation. He came to show God, to reveal peace, to lead to righteousness and truth, but look what men did with that revelation. They did not want God, so they slew Him. They did not want peace, so they have fought about it ever since. They despised righteousness and made it insipid and despicable. They turned truth into a lie. What judgment this world deserves!

Consider His redemption. What need is there of further witnesses to condemn this world? See what they did to Him at Calvary. Jury of angels consider! We know why they killed Him — not because He contested that little kingdom out of all the planets He had made, not because He upset their feudal system, but because He was God . . . and they didn't want Him!

Consider His memory. How do they think of Him now? A few reverence His name, but what of the world at large? How do they recollect Him? They date history after Him, call on Him in national emergencies, open Parliament and court session with His name, but they make a holiday out of the date of His murder. His resurrection is just an excuse for a trip to the seaside. His birthday is often just a drinking spree. His greatest Gift has been replaced by Santa Claus. Angels and men of the eternal jury . . . this world deserves to die!

The prosecution's case is unanswerable, but someone must plead in our world's defence. Which among the all knowing beings of eternity could say a word that would stay that flaming sword of judgment?

There is only one voice raised in our defence. There stands before the Judgment Seat of God One clothed in seamless dress with wounded hands and feet who says, "I speak for the world." It is the Saviour who should condemn us who pleads on our behalf. Let the defending Saviour speak.

There is one text in the Book on which our whole defence rests. "For God sent not His Son into the world to condemn the world; but that the world through Him might be saved." (John 3:17). He did not come to condemn us. Listen to our Counsel's defence.

Look again at Bethlehem. See those humble shepherds and wise men. It is true that they did not really know what it was all about and that many simply passed by, but all who come must come in like simple faith, leave outside the stable door their wisdom and their sheep and bow in reverence before the mystery of the Incarnation.

Look again at Galilee, where He preached the revelation of God. See those humble fisherfolk, that tax-collector, that Thomas struggling with his doubts. Do not say that His work was in vain. There is a Magdalene restored, a demoniac healed, Lazarus raised. Do not say that it was all in vain. All that the prosecution may say about blindness and sin is true, but He came to save them. Already there are some who have seen the real reason for Bethlehem and down through the centuries history has added to their number.

Look again at Calvary. If there is one reason why God has not judged the world for our reception of His Son, it is because of the priceless worth of that blood shed on that centre cross. The penitent tears of a million million souls have brought them liberty here.

He did not come to judge the world,

He did not come to blame,

He did not only come to seek

It was to save He came.

And when we call Him Saviour,

We call Him by His name!

Look again at History. What of the untold numbers who still come in heart to Bethlehem at Christmas, who come, not following the star of the east, or the angels' song, but who make their way via Calvary? What of that scene that John the Apostle saw, when thousands cried, "Worthy is the Lamb that was slain!"?

The case for the defence rests . . . upon the blood of the cross!

There was silence in the courts of heaven as the angels pondered over so great salvation, when suddenly they started singing, and they have been singing ever since: "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men!"

At Christmas God broke through from the other side. This is why Jesus came. Bethlehem was the Divine bridgehead in God's conquest of an enemy-occupied planet. From that small, sacred spot, the Gospel reaches out to assault the powers of darkness in every quarter of the globe. Only to the devil and his minions is Bethlehem considered an alien invasion. To us Christ comes as the great Liberator.

All hail, Emmanuel!

Thoughts from the Book of Genesis

5 "Walking with God" (Genesis 5:22)

by F. Lavender

ENOCH was not a hermit, living in solitude so that he might be alone with God; he was a family man who needed to provide for the daily needs of his family. Evidently the birth of his son, Methuselah sparked off a crisis in Enoch's spiritual life. The world had already become desperately wicked and corrupt and it seems that, when his son was born, Enoch was made aware of the coming Divine judgment. So he named his son "Methuselah", a name with prophetic meaning, to warn men to repent of sin. For Enoch, the birth of his son began a close walk of fellowship with God in separation from the wickedness around him, a walk that led to his being taken from earth to heaven without dying.

The Lord is calling us to close, constant fellowship with Himself, not to forsake our responsibilities in order to be alone with Him, but to walk with Him in our everyday family and business affairs. We live in perilous days when the wickedness of man is increasing dreadfully. Just as Enoch was made aware of coming judgment, so we see on every hand the fulfilment of the signs foretold in God's Word which show that judgment on this world is near. Like Enoch, we should allow these things to bring us into a close walk with God, separated from the allurements and attractions of this doomed age, living for the glory of God and the salvation of sinners. The Lord Jesus is coming soon to take the Church to Himself. When He comes may we be found blameless, walking in holiness with Him.

Paul's View of the Incarnation

by

L. E. Lambert

SOME modern writers say that the importance of the incarnation has been exaggerated. To support this idea they say that Paul hardly ever mentions it. This reveals a very scant knowledge of Paul's writings. Read again Philippians chapter 2. Look again at the verses in Galatians. Paul magnificently reveals the immense glory of Christ's coming.

THE PUNCTUALITY OF THE INCARNATION.

"When the fulness of the time was come" — That great preacher Ian Mcpherson has pointed out that God is always punctual. At the right moment, Christ went to Calvary: His hour had come. Many times before that they had sought to kill Him, but His hour had not yet come.

The Holy Spirit came at the moment of God's ordaining: "When the day of Pentecost was fully come" (Acts 2:1). There is a day in the calendar of God which is chronicled for the Second Coming of Jesus.

At the right moment Jesus was born in Bethlehem.

Some think that He should have come sooner. Four thousand years had elapsed since the first messianic promise. Jesus told His disciples that many kings and prophets had desired to see what they saw. They died in faith not having received the promise.

Some think that He came too early. "Look at all the modern means of communication," they say, "like printing, radio, television. He could have spoken to the world." A children's hymn says: "How I wish that His hands had been placed on my head, that His arms had been thrown around me." Bernard Shaw said that Christ came 2,000 years too soon.

Paul will have none of this. Christ came at the right moment, right for man and right for God. It was a time of a world empire, of a world language. "The season in which Christ was sent forth," says Burkitt in his famous Notes of the New Testament, "was not in the beginning of time, nor the end of time, but in the fulness of time. He came not in the beginning of time that He might excite His people's affections. He stayed not until the end of time, lest their faith might have failed."

We often think that He has failed or forgotten us. Maybe we have prayed long for some special request. We expect God to answer when we specify. There is a timing in God's dealings with us, as well as His will. At the right moment He will come to you.

THE PLAN OF THE INCARNATION

It was premeditated: "God sent forth His Son". It was in response to the loving Father's wish that Jesus came. Bethlehem was no afterthought, God trying to salvage something out of the wreck of humanity. Christ was slain before the foundation of the world. We hardly know when this was, but "In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth". Even before He flung the stars into space, before He drew up the design of this beautiful world, however, there was a cross in the heart of God.

How it operated: "Made of a woman". Some of us in our rebound from mariolatry ignore the virgin mother. We must not adore her, but neither must we ignore her. God always works with mankind. Whether in farming the land, evangelising the world, or bringing His Firstbegotten in the world, it is always "Immanuel, God WITH us". The Calvinist says, "It's up to God." The Arminian says, "It's up to us." They are both right. God chooses the weak things to confound the mighty. How glad we are, too, that there are two sides to Christ Jesus: humanity and divinity, perfect man and perfect God.

What it necessitated: "made under the law". All the rigorous requirements of God's Holy Law were fully met in Christ. If He had failed in one, He would have been guilty of all, but, thank God, in Him was no sin. He did no sin. He was tempted in all points like as are we, yet without sin. The Prince of this world came and found nothing wrong in Jesus. We have a perfect Saviour. He has become the end of the Law to them that believe in Him. We are accepted in the perfect Son of God. From His birth He never failed. This is God's Son in whom He is well pleased.

THE PURPOSE OF THE INCARNATION

So glorious and grand is God in His dealing through His Son, that there are at least ten reasons why Jesus came. In this Scripture we are discussing what Paul saw, which simply adds to the glory already revealed and confirms and complements it.

Some feel that Christ came as a great teacher, or moral leader, or great prophet. He was all these, but more, so much more.

He came to redeem us from sin: "to redeem them that were under the law". He came to redeem us, to buy us back, to pay the price for our salvation, to satisfy the righteous demands of eternal Justice. He is our Redeemer; our Divine Kinsman has come. He is able and willing to pay the price. Of all the things that thrill you this Christmas, be thrilled to know that He came to redeem. We are bought with a price, not gold or silver, but the blood of Jesus. This is why He came, and this is what He did. The cradle led to the cross. His mission was Golgotha. Before He left the Ivory Palaces, He knew that He would hang on a tree and be cursed.

He came to receive us as sons: "that we might receive the adoption of sons". He came to establish a new relationship. We were the children of wrath even as others, but now we are the sons of God. This was made possible because He came. He became the Son of Man that we might become the sons of God. He entered the human family that we might enter the Divine family. He came out of eternity into time, that we might enter eternity.

He came to release the Spirit: "Because ye are sons, God hath sent forth the Spirit." Because of this new relationship, we can now receive the blessed gift of the Holy Spirit. We can obtain power, We can speak in tongues. We can magnify God in liberty, freedom and joy. . . because He came!

Advent Musings

by Michael W. Carr, B.Sc.

Pastor of our King's Heath, Birmingham, Church

GOD looked upon the virginity of earth to find a womb's cradle for His Son and espied within the foresight of eternity a simple maiden, destined for immortality. Her life given over, saturated and submerged in divine favour, was brought to the point of mothering God's Son. Encompassed by a mighty over-shadowing, producing more than man, but truly man, content to join the good God with mere dust, she held in hand divinity and tucked His infant frame in swaddling folds, a royal Boy with care of troubled souls laid at His feet, while snuggling in a cradle rude. Acknowledging in prostrate form the hope of man, the overwhelming undergirding act of love, this miracle stills the mind, touches faith, speaks of grace and fills the soul with wonder.

Simple shepherds watched the midnight shadow turn to throbbing glory. The temple sheep, their constant care, were lost before the Seraph's rising song, an anthem of celestial praise that filled the sky. With quickened step the shepherds came to where He lay in stabled straw, ignored by earth, their values misspent, misplaced and misshapen by iniquity, but praised by men who recognised the only Lamb. They knelt together, brute beast and common man, in silent adoration and shared a welcome in the audience chamber of the King.

Wisdom's gaze upturned to seek among the diadem of heaven a star to lead to life's ascending Source and kneel within its cleansing ray. Their eastern science proclaimed the Monarch of the planets that brought the Word to mingle with the universal sigh of sin, to light the dingy inns of life with God's Shekinah fire.

The barren wastes they tracked were but a step to glory. Their earthly gifts were poor tokens of symbolic love, but greater far, the seeking, searching hearts that found a waiting God. Their minds of ancient lore probed the starry orbits for news of coming grandeur, an immortal form in mortal garb to herald an unfathomed, unending era of bliss. Time passed, swallowed in decay, smothered in fading glory. Empires crumbled, monarchs died, life continued, hearts waited, peace beckoned, and God stood in the shadows. All continued from the beginning, unhurried, unhindered. The grinding of ceaseless days taunted every prophet's hope. Man's salvation appeared no nearer. God's message stood clothed in rods of law that beat the stooping backs of ageing generations; its penalty just, its judgments sure.

The wailing of stricken souls echoed Eden's lament, innocence died, sin reigned, spirits bowed in eternal conflict, bound by forgeless iron, captured by self and sin. Their plea for One beyond the tinge of time to send the light of never-ending day, a brilliance within the soul to shine away the senseless shame of sinful ways. They sobbed through groaning nights of empty wanderings, that marked for ever upon the falling years the mocking of a ruined soul, imprinted by the Devil's stamp upon the fabric of life, one brand that only blood could remove. The priceless, peerless panacea made vital by divine exertion, made victory in unworthy hearts. The wearied prayer for better things that mercy would descend and walk with legs of God upon the Broadway of all unlovely scenes. The universal sign brought down a Sign, a Son, a Sovereign, a Saviour.

For all who look for Him He shall come and turn the bitter sweet.

The Spirit of Christmas

DURING the Christmas Season, Charles Dickens will be referred to many times as a relater of Christmas stories. His created spirits which eventually brought about the "conversion" of Scrooge will be theatrically and rhetorically reproduced in the hope that the spirit of Christmas will be brought into being.

These convivial, artificial occasions are not representative of the true spirit of Christmas. Perhaps the non-Christian factions of our land receive some kind of egotistical stimulation because they are happy in trying to produce goodwill among the people, but what a shocking assessment this is of those nominal Christians who conform to such thinking. It is all a sop to consciences which superficially believe that Jesus the Son of God was born 2,000 years ago, but which refuse to accept the disciplines of His teachings, so it is right for them to eat, drink and be merry on the occasion of His birthday, but not right to be reminded that He came to save His people from their sins!

We should be happy during the Christmas celebrations, but it is essential that Jesus should be the central Figure of the season. The true Spirit of Christmas is hovering around; the sensitive, holy, Divine Third Person of the Trinity is also present. He has been evident at all the major occasions of Bible history and never more so than at the conception and birth of Jesus. The real spirit of Christmas is the Holy Ghost and He will be emphasising the deity of the Lord Jesus and producing life for those who need it.

Christmas is a time when we allow the supernatural involvement in the affairs of the world to thrill us. We sing of angels and the Annunciation. Shepherds and wise men intrigue us because they saw heavenly beings proclaiming and guiding, directing them to the Baby of Bethlehem. Yet associated with the glory, the excitement, the joys, the quiet ministry of the Holy Spirit, so essential for the accomplishment of God's plan of salvation, is almost unrecognised as a Divine agent.

The Word became flesh! This materialisation of the promises of God through the prophets arose through the processes of Holy Ghost intervention upsetting the natural order and giving to the world the Son of God. Once the Spirit possessed Mary, "She was found to be with child" and her experience through the ministry of the Spirit and her very submission to His authority enabled salvation to come to the world. She and her betrothed sought to question the motives, because of the feared stigma, but their eventual surrender gave us the Divine Redeemer. The Angel Gabriel told Mary, "The Holy Ghost shall come upon thee, and the power of the Highest shall overshadow thee: therefore that holy thing which shall be born of thee shall be called the Son of God." She responded, "Behold the handmaid of the Lord; be it unto me according to thy word". This was absolute surrender to the will of God. Immediately in her being there began to be the embryo of the Life and Light of men.

Since the immaculate conception, God has been pleased to give to the Church the person of the Holy Spirit and a baptism of such magnitude that participants in the blessings receive within themselves the life and light of the Eternal. A stipulation attending this experience is that "ye shall be witnesses unto me", that the radiation of the power of God shall be emitted into the world. Dare we believe that the same Holy Spirit which came upon Mary and gave us Christmas can also give us life, causing Christ to be born in the hearts of men? It is a stupendous thought, but Peter's Epistle (2 Peter 1:3,4) suggests that, as we have been recipients of the gift of Divine power, so we are partakers of Divine nature and John 1:12 states positively that, as we receive Him, so we receive power to become the sons of God. There is a wonderful influence, therefore, which produces in the hearts of believers that which was originally conceived by God before the foundation of the world, prophesied by men who were prompted by the Holy Spirit and eventually came to fruition at the birth of Jesus in Bethlehem.

The Spirit of Christmas will be anxious for His rightful place in your festivities this year and the greatest, finest thing that could happen among you is that someone should be born of God because you have allowed the glory of the Lord to fill your souls. This power of the Holy Spirit will guide you from amazing revelations of heavenly majesty into the very presence of Christ. All the glories of angels cannot receive a son of God, but the anointing of the Holy Spirit will produce and reproduce new believers until eternity scintillates with the brilliance of the Sons of God.

This glorious vision will take us from the moment

Keeping Christmas

I MUST confess that I approach Christmas with mixed feelings this year. Gladness is there because of the simple pleasure it brings, the presents and the surprises, the good fare and general cosiness and sparkle it adds to life, yet I feel sad because in so many places no true Christmas can exist.

In an affluent society, only a travesty of Christmas is known, for the true meaning of the Nativity is obscured by commercialism, unnecessary spending and a whirl of pleasure-seeking. I have yet to discover what connection there is between Christmas and bazaars, dances, pantomines, banquets and bottle parties. I feel even more saddened when I contemplate the poverty, famine and war, the unjust imprisonment and oppression throughout the world. When I look across the Irish Sea, the hatred and bloodshed tear at my heart. If only the Christmas message could break through into this unhappy world!

On Christmas Eve, may our prayer be like that of the late Peter Marshall. His wife, Catherine, remembers his praying, "O, God, why can't more people, all of us, open our hearts to the wonderful spirit abroad in the world tonight, not just on Christmas, but on every day? What a happy place this old earth could be if, O God, if only we would keep Christmas the whole year through."

The implications concerning the keeping of Christmas need to be re-stated, for we are often so busy with non-essentials that we forget the essence of the season, which is that of giving not getting, caring instead of contempt, hospitality in place of hostility and peace and goodwill obliterating war and hate.

I share with you a poem written by Dr. E.N. Stevens of Worthing:

*If the angels appeared in their glory
To the shepherds on Cissbury Down,
And if strangers, like Joseph and Mary,
Should come wearily into town.
Would they wander through street and through garden
And go knocking at many a door*

*Where they "didn't take mothers with children",
And most certainly not if they're poor?.*

*Would the housewife say, with a shake of her head,
"I can't possibly take a young mother
If the hospital hasn't a bed."*

*Would the baby be born in a lorry
Or some shed at the back of the town,
If the angels appeared in their glory,
To the shepherds on Cissbury Down?*

In his now famous Christmas sermon, the late Peter Marshall said, "I thank God for Christmas. Would that it lasted all year. For on Christmas Eve and Christmas Day, all the world is a better place and men and women are more lovable. Love itself seeps into every heart and miracles happen. When Christmas doesn't make your heart swell up until it nearly bursts and fill your eyes with tears and make you all soft and warm inside then you'll know that something inside you is dead."

Let us decide this year really to keep Christmas, not in the sense of spending or observing Christmas, but in the sense of retaining Christmas, that is keeping its wonderful message and its joyful inspiration in our hearts and expressing it in our deeds the whole year through. Begin by asking the Lord Jesus into our hearts. The gracious words of old William Law have a special appeal to all empty, longing souls: "When the first spark of a desire after God arises in thy soul, cherish it with all thy care. It will lead thee to the birth of Jesus, not in a stable at Bethlehem but in thy soul." when Christ is born in us, through the periods of trial and temptation, and through the crushings and crucifixions. The Spirit of Him that raised up Jesus from the dead will quicken our mortal bodies. His Spirit dwelling in us will bring about the miracle of life and we shall live on in eternity. This is not a once a year experience, but the true Spirit of Christmas in our everyday life. As we think on these things, our hearts warm within us and the spiritual glow takes us on into endless life.

Christmas - Pagan or Christian?

by L. Martin

IT is widely believed that Christmas is really a pagan festival which was adopted by the Church when Christianity became the official religion of Rome. This idea is used by Jehovah's Witnesses and others to claim that any person or Church observing Christmas is really worshipping Satan. They claim to speak with the authority of the Bible by saying that the Bible does not tell us the date of the Nativity, that it could not have been in the winter and that the Bible does not tell us, or give us permission, to celebrate it.

In Haggai, chapter 2 is a promise to the Jews of a surpassing blessing, the date of its commencement being stressed no less than three times — the twenty-fourth day of the ninth month. The promise was unfulfilled by the time of Judas Maccabeus, so, to ensure that the prophecy did not go by default, he chose this date to rededicate the Temple after it had been defiled by Antiochus Epiphanes.

The occasion was celebrated with great rejoicing and festivity, lamps being lit and singing and dancing to musical instruments taking place in the streets. This is the feast of the Dedication, referred to in John 10:22, which Jesus attended and which is stated to have been in the winter. The ninth month is also shown to be in the winter in Jeremiah 36:22. The occasion is still celebrated by the Jews to this day and is called "Chanukah" or "The Festival of Lights".

After the rebuilding of Jerusalem, the Jews were scrupulous to avoid any suggestion of paganism. Judas Maccabeus was the champion of Jehovah against Grecian paganism. Any festival inaugurated by the Jews at this period, and especially under the auspices of Judas Maccabeus, is therefore beyond suspicion. Since Jesus Himself celebrated this festival, it must have had His approval and is given Divine authority as an occasion for festivity.

Judas Maccabeus was from about 163–160 B.C. The promise of the great Blessing had not by then been fulfilled and, in view of the tragic history of the Jews since that date, it is evident that the Dedication was not the true fulfilment of the prophecy. We have to look elsewhere for the fulfilment or accept that the promise was not honoured.

The ninth month in the Jewish calendar is Kislev, which corresponds roughly with December. The Jewish calendar varies with the moon, with the result that Kislev varies from a week or two earlier to a week or two later than December, the average incidence of the twenty-fourth day of the ninth month, Kislev, corresponding with the twenty-fourth of December, Christmas Eve.

We thus see that the promise to Haggai must have been the promise of the Nativity, that the date corresponds with Christmas Eve, that it was and is in the winter, and that it carries the authority of Jesus as an occasion for festivity.

Joseph, earthly guardian of Jesus

by W. G. Mullan Pastor of our Townsend Street, Belfast, Church

IT was a mistake for Mary to say to the twelve year old Jesus, "Thy father and I have sought Thee, sorrowing". Jesus had no earthly father, yet Mary's mistake also reveals her appreciation of Joseph's care and attention for the boy. Public opinion, too, must have recognised his genuine concern, for they supposed him to be the father of Jesus (Luke 3:23). Moreover, this Child, though aware of His heavenly Father's business, must have had reason to respect His earthly guardian, as He went down to Nazareth and was subject to Joseph and Mary (Luke 2:51).

We can glean from Scripture some indications as to the character of this man whom God chose and separated by angelic visitation for such an important task.

Joseph is first introduced as a man engaged to be married. He was a just man (Matthew 1:19), upright before God and men. He never forgot the noble line from whence he had sprung (Luke 2:4), and, though the riches of a king's son had never been his, he had the heart of one. His spiritual stature could be described in words applied to his forefather, King Hezekiah, "He did that which was right in the sight of the Lord, according to all that David his father had done." (2 Chronicles 29:2).

With this character of integrity there was conjoined an honourable tenderness. News of Mary's apparent faithlessness reached him. Her trip to the hill country of Judea at the season in question must have increased suspicion. Many a genuine soul, loving deeply and just as deeply wounded, would have reacted with bitter resentment hastily executed. Joseph pondered his predicament. Integrity demanded Mary's banishment but grace decided on private censure lest she be made a public scandal. We would do well to imitate Joseph's deliberations, "lest the daughters of the Philistines rejoice"; love still covers a multitude of sins. His disturbed train of thought was dramatically interrupted by the angel of the Lord. "Fear not," he was told, and there was revealed to him the wonder of Mary's conception. He now realised his unique position and God's command was promptly obeyed as soon as he awakened. "Fear not," was a necessary encouragement as he stepped out on the path that God had chosen. Never again would he be fully accepted and understood among men. The spiteful, scurrilous tongues would wag. The hardships of flight and enforced alienation would be his. Danger would be constant. God had said, "Fear not", however, and faithfulness to God mattered more than the fear of man. Joseph determined that no such earthly snare would fetter him.

This devout, rugged hero of faith was fully committed to his calling, yet seemingly without the deep, meditative pondering so characteristic of some. He wonderingly heard the revelations and prophecies concerning Jesus, but it is recorded only of Mary that she kept and pondered these things in her heart. Perhaps in later years, it was this thought that prompted the criticising leaders to say of the young Teacher from Nazareth, "Is not this the son of the carpenter?" and "Whence hath this man letters?" Though deep meditation does not seem to have been one of Joseph's gifts, his tenderness was revealed when he sorrowed at losing the boy Jesus and in his seeming failure in his God appointed task.

Considering the lowly birth of our Saviour and the sacrifice of the poor offered at His presentation, we are left in no doubt as to Joseph's poverty in life. Through this, however, there shone a noble character. Riches could never compensate for integrity and uprightness. Position could never replace tenderness for others' feelings and failures. Wordly success would be incapable of satisfying. Determined faithfulness to the will of God was coupled with deep concern lest the holy Charge be jeopardized by personal carelessness.

Our Lord Jesus, perfectly filling the heavenly High Priesthood, was acquainted with all the sorrows and trials of life. One of these appears from Scriptural references to have been the death of His earthly guardian. This great man followed in the steps of his illustrious forefathers: he saw the beginning of the promise but not its fulfillment. He died in faith and his testimony swells the cloud of witnesses surrounding and challenging us.

Matthew 2:1-12

"And thou Bethlehem, in the land of Juda, art not the least among the princes of Juda" (v.6).

BETHLEHEM — the very name strikes the chords of memory for everyone who has ever been a child, for on this day we celebrate the birth of the Saviour. The bells of Bethlehem ring afresh in the hearts of all who believe. The place now is always associated with David's greater Son, yet, such was the greatness of Christ, that, even before he was born, Bethlehem was the noted place where he should come. We associate Stratford with Shakespeare and Wordsworth with his beloved Lake District after they have been there, but the wonder of the Christ is that, even before He came, His fame had given the town a lustre that would shine throughout all time. Christ is unique; He invested a poor town in the hill country of Judah with a new glory just with the thought that He was coming there. This is the miracle of Christmas.

Tuesday, December 26th

Matthew 2:13-23

"Herod . . . was exceeding wroth" (v.16)

SO quickly starts the open battle between the Royal Seed and the serpent. Until this time, Satan has been trying to prevent the coming of the Christ-child. The angelic announcement of His birth, brings the first of many attacks on the life of Christ to prevent His getting to Calvary, but the masterful planning of God is more than equal to the plotting of Satan. See how carefully the path of the Baby Christ is directed step by step to Egypt and back again. Can He not guide us as well?

Wednesday, December 27th

Psalm 77:1-20

"My sore in the night . . . my song in the night"

(vv.2, 6).

DAVID'S sleeplessness could give place to one of two alternatives. In our troubles we are conscious only of our sores in the night, the aching, chafing of our spirits that fill the soul with melancholy. David remembered, however, that there were other ways of passing a sleepless night: "I call to remembrance my song in the night". If you want to graduate from sores to songs, then take the three paths of remembrance in vv.10, 11. A pearl begins as an irritation in the oyster. Many a song started as a sore. "Out of my stony griefs, Bethel I'll raise".

Thursday, December 28th

Psalm 78:1-20

"Whose spirit was not stedfast with God" (v.8).

THE psalmist goes down to the heart of the trouble before laying out the failure of Israel. The cause of their dilemma was that their spirit was not stedfast. Many a boat has foundered because something was not securely held down in the hold. When their spirit was not stedfast, then their heart was not right; this led to their being a stubborn, rebellious generation. In the Christian warfare of Ephesians Chapter 6 we are not called upon to take the offensive. It will be enough to win the battle if at the end we are still standing: "Having done all . . . to stand"!

Friday, December 29th

Psalm 78:21-55

"And limited the Holy One of Israel" (v.41).

WE limit God when we circumscribe Him in our minds, when we imagine that anything beyond us is beyond Him, when beyond even this we set a limit beyond which we cannot imagine God going, simply because we cannot imagine anything further. How God must be impatient when we have badly worked out plans of how we expect God to answer our prayers, when He is anxious to break in with a breathtaking demonstration of His ability far beyond our little ideas. To ask God to open our eyes is a request to see enough of God to be able to ask enough of Him.

Saturday, December 30th

Psalm 78:56-72

"From following the ewes . . . He brought him . . . to feed His people" (v.71).

GOD'S training-ground for great things is always in obscurity. Moses, David, Paul, are among many who were taken by God to lonely places to learn His lessons away from the glare of publicity. If God cannot trust you with the sheepfolds you cannot expect to become His leader. Prove yourself there, however, and God can promote you. There is no instant success in Christian service, no quick way to blessing. If you would be used of God, let Him take you to His desert to follow the sheep. There will be a double proving: you will prove God; eventually God will prove you.

Sunday, December 31st

Psalm 81:1-16

"Open thy mouth wide and I will fill it." (v.10).

HAVE you ever paused in awe by a skylark's nest in the grass? Let your shadow pass over the chicks warm within and immediately they open up like a bunch of crocuses. They are all mouth: Nature and providence have ordained that they can open their mouths wide so that no particle can be lost. This is the picture the psalmist is thinking of: let but the shadow of God pass by and let our lives open to his blessing. Often our complaints of lack are simply due to our unwillingness to be ready to receive. May this dawning new year bring us to the blessing we seek!

(We thank David J. Ayling for his notes and announce that our writer for the next quarter will be Ronald A. Gull, one of our missionaries in the Transvaal, South Africa. Editor)

What The Star Forthtells

"We have seen His star in the east" (Matthew 2:2).

A THOUSAND years before Christ was born a song-writer was inspired to write a new lyric about babies and stars. The theme was not by any means a new one even then, but the way he put it makes you stop and think. You can read the original script in Psalm 8.

I wonder what inspired him? Could it have been a broken night with one of the children crying? Even Bible babies had teething problems! At any rate, David's thoughts wove a crying baby and the silent majesty of the stars into a common theme — the glory and the grace of God: "Who hast set Thy glory above the heavens. Out of the mouth of babes and sucklings hast thou ordained strength".

What have eighteen inches of crying baby and the incredible distances of the far-flung constellations in common? Surely they can show only how small and insignificant man is? "No," says David, "more than that. They show how good God is and how important man is to God." Man is made in God's image and therefore he is more valuable in God's sight than anything else in the universe. That crying baby can do what nothing else in the cosmos can do. It can learn to know God, to love Him, serve Him and sing His praises. It is unique. This is why God is mindful of him and visits him.

A baby and a star are the Christmas theme, too. The star that the wise men saw was specially the work of God's fingers, to use the psalmist's phrase, but it was a star with a difference. Other stars prompted the question, "How can God possibly be concerned with man?" This one answered it; He is concerned, and what is more, He has come into our midst.

This realisation moved the wise men from their distant observatory to the palace of Herod: "We have

by
John Lancaster

President-Elect

seen his star in the east, and are come to worship Him." Theirs was not the pursuit of some vague philosophical idea, but the quest for a God who had entered history in terms of flesh and blood. This moved the aged Zacharias to sing, "Blessed be the Lord God of Israel: for he hath visited and redeemed his people" (Luke 1:68) and it inspired the multitude to conclude that "God hath visited his people" following the raising of the son of the widow of Nain (Luke 7:16).

The Christmas star forthtells that God is mindful of men and has visited them. It leads to a Babe in whom God has indeed "perfected strength". In Him dwells the fulness of the Godhead bodily and of that fulness have all we received, and grace for grace. In Him are hidden all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge and He is made unto us wisdom, and righteousness, and sanctification, and redemption. In a humanity as vulnerable as the straw on which He lies is brittle, God concentrated all His might. It is a humanity that will go hungry and thirsty, grow tired and feel pain, loneliness and heartbreak, but within it lies a Divinity that finds its source in the eternal light of God's own Being beyond the limit of the farthest star, and in that sublime combination of humanity and Deity lies the answer to the deepest need of the human heart.

"We have seen his star!" It tells us that God is concerned, that God has come down into our situation. It leads us to One who loved us and gave Himself for us. It assured us that sin can be forgiven and cleansed away. It points the way back to God. It invites us to come. It calls us to bow at His feet in worship.

There is no star now, no stable, no manger, no Baby; Christ Himself is here with us still. In Him God has centred all things; to Him God calls us now. Let us seek Him today. Let us bring all our need to Him today. Let us kneel before Him in worship and open the treasures of our personalities and our possessions and give Him everything today.

Those who follow the star must come to worship.

"A HAPPY NEW YEAR!" is the greeting and we certainly express this wish to all our readers. May we know a wonderful outpouring of the Spirit in 1973.

We have longed and prayed for revival for so long.

Many feel that there are excellent signs of an awakening. We pray and trust that God will grant us the "floods upon the dry ground" in the coming year.

We would remind you of our WEEK OF PRAYER on JANUARY 7th - 14th, 1973. No doubt you will already be involved in the local arrangements for special times of prayer, but we would seek to enlist the prayer support of all our readers in their individual devotions.

There are still many towns and villages in the United Kingdom without a Pentecostal witness. Many would agree that the smaller towns and large villages are often spiritual wildernesses. In many there is a background of evangelical witness, but with the encroachments of modernism and the closing down of many village chapels the effective outreach of the Gospel depends on a few individuals.

The amazing thing is that smaller places often produce good churches, both numerically and spiritually. Our own Fellowship can instance districts which are insignificant in population when compared with large cities, but there are virile assemblies there.

We would make a special plea that, as we go into 1973, we shall pray work and give that real forward strides will be made in the work of establishing a Pentecostal witness in every town, village and hamlet.

I recall visiting a lonely house on the foothills of the North York moors. Callers were very few indeed, but the Mormons and the Jehovah's Witnesses went there regularly. The village chapels were all redundant, but the purveyors of error did not regard their message as irrelevant. Whenever I collect the mail from our local G.P.O. I feel rebuked because The Christian Science Monitor is always there, provided free of charge by the local group. They are zealous in getting their paper into many local centres.

We believe that we have been privileged to receive the revelation of the one true Gospel. We know that it works. May our happy New Year be truly happy in our seeing many new centres of witness opened for Pentecost!

Church Reports

BARRY

Pastor: G.R. Knight

FROM the commencement of the ladies' weekend it was evident that God was going to bless. The speaker, Mrs. Roberts from Dowlais, ministered with power and conviction.

The service on Monday evening was a rally when we were pleased to welcome friends from neighbouring churches. The ministry in song of Mrs. Close and Mrs. Woods and Mrs. Thomas was much appreciated. Members of the fellowship took part at each service which were convened by Mrs. Y. Knight and Mrs. E. Higgs.

The visit of Pastor F. R. Barnes for a series of meetings on the Second Advent warmed the hearts of all as God's servant expounded the Word of God reminding us once more how near to this event we are.

E. HIGGS

DARLINGTON

Pastor: G.J. Fearn

OUR missionary festival was anticipated with great enthusiasm and expectancy. On previous occasions we have been blessed by visiting missionaries, but this was to be our first, full missionary weekend. As Pastor David C. Lewis (late of India) came into our midst, there was that wonderful affinity that left us in no doubt that "God was in the business".

We cannot boast of large numbers attending our missionary festival, but we know that as our brother ministered so ably to us something of the missionary vision was imparted to the hearts of the believers. His compassionate appeal to pray through for India's national pastors, and to uphold and encourage them in every way possible has left us with a deep sense of our responsibility. We were made to see that the only answer to India's great need is travelling, prevailing prayer.

Since coming to Darlington our Pastor and his dear wife have endeared themselves to all our hearts. They were a real inspiration to us as they laboured in preparation for this event.

Busy, anxious mums toiled as they fashioned national costumes for their little ones. A special decorated float travelling through the main streets must surely have told the residents of Darlington that Elim is here to stay.

The catering effort excelled as our sisters saw to it that we were fed from a bountiful supply.

Our aged sister Chambers, beloved of the whole church, chose to celebrate her ninetieth birthday at this time, showing her great enthusiasm by standing to let us all know the reason of the hope within her.

As our meetings drew to a close with slides of India's great spiritual need, our hearts stirred within us. May God grant us all a Divine sense of priorities so that the vision imparted to us may grow!

R. PITTAWAY

MONAGHAN

Pastor: H. Allister

IT was a cold, wet, windy day when the standard of the Kingdom of God and in particular that branch of it known as the Elim Pentecostal Church was hoisted higher in Eire. On Saturday, November 11th a new Elim Pentecostal Church building was opened in Monaghan, where the Elim work commenced in 1915. The building is a credit to those who planned and laboured in the raising of it. As it is situated on a main road in the town, its illuminated sign will be a constant testimony to our message to those who pass.

The opening ceremony was performed by the pastor, H. Allister, following a brief service conducted by Pastor A. Wilson, the Irish Superintendent, at which Pastor W.J. Martin declared in his own inimitable style the glorious gospel of saving grace for the preaching of which the church had been erected.

In the services which followed the opening of the church, acknowledgement of and thanks to God for the ministry of many who had pioneered the work, including Mr. Hollinger, W.J. Martin, G.J. Jefferys, to name but a few, were recorded. The ministry of Pastors A. R. T. Whittall, J. T. Bradley (Secretary-General) and J. Harris was anointed of God, and was a fitting seal for such a wonderful occasion.

This church is in a town very near the border between Ulster and Eire. The courage of the Lord's people in Ireland in these troublesome days is inspiring. Let us pray that this outpost will become a centre of salvation to the needy multitudes in the area and that this church will be but the first of a number of buildings to be established in Eire. Elim has a unique opportunity among Pentecostal people to reach this land. The government authorities demand that organisations must be established for fifty years before they can erect buildings for worship and Elim has this opportunity as we alone among Pentecostals can meet this stipulation. May God use our movement to bring the gospel to this nation.

JOHN C. SMYTH

NEWCASTLE, Co. Down.

ON Sunday morning, November 12th, Mr. William Teer, the church leader of our Church at Newcastle, Co. Down, passed to be with Christ. Mr. Teer was a faithful man of God, a very consistent and dependable leader. For the past twelve years, he laboured faithfully in the Church for the Lord whom he loved. His witness in the town of Newcastle was beyond reproach. All who knew him spoke with the highest respect of his Christian life. He will be sadly missed and to his family and the church we extend our deepest sympathy. The funeral was conducted by Pastor A. Wilson (Irish Superintendent), assisted by Pastors D.J. Ayling, W. Holohan, and A.R.T. Whittall. The local Baptist minister and the Rector of Dundonald parish church also paid their tributes.

A. WILSON

AS OTHERS SEE US

The Secretary of our Braintree Church sent us a feature from Braintree and Witham Times. He tells us that the reporter, John Thompson, indicated that he wrote as a visitor attending for the first time. The following is an abridged version of Mr. Thompson's comments. Our Church Secretary, Mr. K. Pillinger, reports that they have received one testimony of Divine healing and that similar services are planned each month. We can no doubt learn from seeing ourselves as others see us.

Waiting for the Man

THE lady in the violet hat sang: "Just one touch as He moves along." The organ hummed to the height of its power making clicking noises.

A little red-haired girl dropped her red hymn-book, her hand flying to her mouth in surprise. The soloist finished the song and walked off the platform. The organ whispered one final, clinging chord. It was 7 p.m. inside the small redbrick known as the ELIM church.

Rev. Paul Atkinson stood up; above him on the wall there was a motto: OUR GOD WHOM WE SERVE IS ABLE TO DELIVER. It stood out clearly on the pale emulsion.

The divine healing service was minutes old. The doorman tapped me on the shoulder. "There are two waiting for healing," he said. He gave my arm a squeeze and backed towards the door.

Mr. Atkinson introduced an elderly woman in a dark blue hat. She was going to give witness.

Long ago, she had been ill. "In 1943, this was," she said brightly. Unconscious for a fortnight. The doctor had told her: "Oh, you must go to hospital". And she did — on her birthday.

Mr. Atkinson sat behind her. His hands were clasped on his lap and his eyes were shut. "The doctor told me I had twenty four hours to live and they told Pastor Greaves and he said, Oh He doesn't want her to go like that, he said. We'll have a special prayer meeting."

Then came a vision: "I was in an underground room. There was a hammock let down from the ceiling, with beautiful cords hanging down from it. I was too weak to get into the hammock, but I believe Pastor Greaves put me in it. I heard a voice saying I am the resurrection and the life."

"Yes," whispered one of the fifty-seven mouths in the small, square room. "Yes," whispered another. The witnessing had been an emotional involvement for each listener.

"Do these healings last?" asked Mr. Atkinson. A smile spread across his young face. "Well, there's the proof!"

"Sin brings disease," said Mr. Atkinson weightily. Then in a louder voice: "Sickness is the work of physical death in the body." He repeated the line in a whisper, clenching his right fist. "And it's the result of. . . sin!"

Mr. Atkinson is a great speaker. But not for him the Elmer Gantry mystique, the holy-rollers, harangue. It's easy to believe a man who believes what he's saying.

"He's made it possible for us to believe — Oh yes!

"He said He was the healer. . . the great physician!" The air vibrated with the power of Mr. Atkinson's perfectly modulated delivery. "He promised to heal, and he can heal you tonight!"

The people waited. The room was already warm the plastic chairs comfortable. Two blonde-haired girls, ribbons in their hair, glanced at each other, and allowed two careful side-long smiles to appear. They were quite happy with the situation.

"This is NOT faith healing," Mr. Atkinson was saying, "that's why we've made it very clear in our advertising. This is Divine healing.

And the days of miracles, he said, had not passed and weren't going to, either. If there had been one little titter, one agnostic snort. . . but there wasn't.

Mr. Atkinson's voice delivered more balm: "I don't know how He's going to do it, but He's going to do it. . . tonight!"

"Now we'll sing a hymn — hymn 732!" Those fifty-seven people could certainly sing, but it was Mr. Atkinson's voice which sliced through the heavy air with the most force. The doorman squeezed my shoulder, pointed at my open hymn-book and nodded meaningfully.

After the hymn, Mr. Atkinson quietly asked any ill people to come up to the front of the room. There was no need, he said, to be afraid. "If you really believe," he smiled, "you can be healed."

There was no immediate movement. The organist fingered out a quiet pulse, but the lady pianist and the elderly violinist sat still.

Finally, a tall man wearing charcoal grey stood, walked forward and sat in one of the empty seats in the front row.

A young woman in a blue suit rose, tripped to the front and sat next to the violinist. Then another man walked up. Two more women.

Mr. Atkinson smiled. "I would like everybody to bow in prayer tonight. If God exists at all, He is a big God!"

There was a feeling of expectancy, a dreamlike sense of awareness; an awareness — a strong one — that something was expected. Mr. Atkinson called the three church wardens forward in a quiet voice. He bent down and spoke to one of the women in the front row, his words inaudible. The woman rose. The minister put his right hand on her head and held one of her arms with his left hand. The wardens laid their hands on her.

Mr. Atkinson's voice quivered at the height of its power. "In the name of Jesus, we ask You to touch this sister!"

The woman's knees buckled for an instant, but she was safe.

Mr. Atkinson moved on. The wardens moved on, their heads bowed. "You can be cured if you really believe," he said. "It may be instantaneous. It might take three days. Or three weeks, but if you really believe, you can be cured."

The violinist laid down his instrument carefully and stood. He, too, hoped.

Another woman was helped to her feet. Mr. Atkinson's emotion poured forth. It was — could only be — sincerely motivated.

The room was warmer, the people even more relaxed. They looked around calmly as Mr. Atkinson worked.

The divine healing was over suddenly. Nobody had shouted: "It worked!" and sprinted out into the foggy night. The feeling of calm remained. The violinist picked up his instrument. There were clicking noises from the electric organ.

They sang hymn 732. And, when the music was over — "Goodnight, God bless you all! Don't rush out before you have got one of these leaflets."

I got one later, "Why Divine Healing?" it said on the cover. Inside, there was an article: God and your Health, by a Mr. George Canty.

"It's very humbling," said Mr. Atkinson in the back room after the service. He's a young, well-dressed man and you know he means it. "And I have to remember that without the Lord Jesus Christ I couldn't stand up in front of all those people, not without His power and His presence."

He had pleaded, exhorted fifty-seven people for an hour and a half, fifty-seven people in a small redbrick, and that is where they wanted to be. Their emotions had been stirred. They had sung, gasped. And you know they meant it. They had been waiting for the Man.

ON PAUL

by James T. Bradley

Secretary-General

SAUL of Tarsus, afterwards Paul the Apostle, a unique man, made so by God to be an example and an inspiration to all who should come after him!

The record of his uniqueness is set for us in his letter to Timothy in the words, "This is a faithful saying, and worthy of all acceptance, that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners; of whom I am chief. Howbeit for this cause I obtained mercy, that in me first Jesus Christ might show forth all longsuffering, for a pattern to them which should hereafter believe on him to life everlasting." Paul's uniqueness as, among all men, the best unconverted man, then, following his encounter with his Lord on the Damascus road, the blinding, yet infinitely illuminating, revelation to him of his true moral condition as among all men the worst of sinners, followed by the Spirit-inspired confession to his being the first among the foremost of Jesus' followers, is brought to us in a few searching sentences, first from his letter to the Philippians, second from his first letter to Timothy, and then from his second letter to the Corinthians. To the Philippians he wrote, "If any other man thinketh that he hath whereof he might truth in the flesh, I more. . ." (3:4-6) — the "best" sinner! To Timothy he wrote, "Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners; of whom I am chief." Having had his eyes opened he now recognised himself as the worst of sinners. To the Corinthians he wrote, "But by the grace of God I am what I am: and His grace which was bestowed upon me was not in vain; but I laboured more abundantly than they all: yet not I, but the grace of God which was with me." (1 Corinthians 15:10) — the foremost in the first rank of Jesus' followers. These statements, inspired as they are by the Holy Spirit, warrant no modification; they constitute a unique introduction to a unique man; they show in one man, for our learning, the infinity of the corruption of the human heart apart from Jesus, the infinity of God's mercy, and the infinity of God's grace.

The character of Paul's dedication, revealed in the seemingly incidental reference to his manual labour, still being undertaken by him even after some thirty years of preaching, startles us by its revelation of sheer capacity and willingness for hard work. He had spent three years in and around Ephesus so that "All they which dwelt in Asia heard the word of the Lord Jesus" (Acts 19:10). Speaking later to the elders of the Ephesian church, Paul is able to state, "I have coveted no man's silver or gold or apparel. Yea, ye yourselves know that these hands have ministered unto my necessities, and them that were with me. I have showed you all things, how that so labouring ye ought to support the weak, and to remember the words of the Lord Jesus, how He said, — It is more blessed to give than to receive" (Acts 20:35). The words we have put in italic convey the abandon of his dedication: "these hands" have ministered. . .

Paul's declaration "I am crucified with Christ" has more in it than meets the eye. Paul's "old man" was crucified of course, as he wrote to the Romans, "Knowing this that our old man is crucified with [Christ] that the body of sin might be destroyed, that henceforth we should not serve sin". Here is the excision from the personality of "the sin that dwelleth in us" that biased us against good and towards evil (Romans 6:6, Colossians 2:11,12). "Gone, gone, gone, gone, yes my sins are gone," excised, cut away by the operation of God.

Paul's old life was also crucified. As Israel was separated from Egypt by the Red Sea, so Paul's new life was separated from his old life by the interposition of the cross, as he expresses it, "But God forbid that I should glory, save in the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ, by whom the world is crucified unto me, and I unto the world" (Galatians 2:20).

The cross of Jesus stood between him and the world and between his new life and his old life, the separation was complete from the moment of his conversion.

But there was more to it than even this. We accept quite readily that our sins are blotted out, that our past is done away. We do not accept so readily that in the "I" that was crucified was also involved the nailing to the cross of the very talents, abilities and gifts that made Paul so successful a scholar, theologian and leader in Israel, and so doughty an antagonist of the Early Church. His natural education had to be and was nailed to the cross — crucified, dead and buried. "And I", he wrote to the Corinthians, "when I came to you came not with excellency of . . . wisdom" (1 Corinthians 2:1). It was so marvellous, this excellency of wisdom. It had brought him to the very pinnacle of fame among his own people, but it had been, because it had to be, crucified, and was dead and buried; even his great abilities had been tainted by sin.

His natural eloquence had to be and was nailed to the cross; dead and buried. "And I, when I came to you came not with excellency of speech." "My speech and my preaching were not with enticing words of man's wisdom . . ." (1 Corinthians 2:4). "His speech," said the Corinthians, "was contemptible"; nevertheless they had been brought to Christ through the use of that very speech.

The acceptableness of his personality was nailed to the cross — crucified, dead and buried. "His bodily presence," they said, "was weak." Anything of the flesh, Paul learned, got in the way of the message of the cross. "For Christ," he wrote, "sent me not to baptise, but to evangelise; not with wisdom of words lest the cross of Christ should be robbed of its content." The content of the cross is the very crystallisation of God's love, of His power and wisdom, of His mercy and grace. Let us beware lest anything of us be interposed between the sinner and the cross. Our very eloquence, our own skill, cleverness, ability, the very charm of the participants in a programme, the very brilliance of their performance can get between the cross and the sinner, and rob the cross of its content. They must be crucified, dead and buried, if God wishes their resurrection, well and good; they will be resurrected in the power of the Spirit, as was our Lord.

What Moses was to Israel, Paul may be considered to have been to the Church. They, with our Lord, were prepared to make the supreme sacrifice of themselves for those whom they sought to win, Moses and Paul, not only by their willingness, if necessary, to die, but to be banished from God for ever.

Moses, in order that he might save Israel from destruction, even though God promised that He would carry on His purpose through Moses and make of him a great nation, so zealous was he for the glory of God and His name, so concerned for God's own people, interceded to the very uttermost, ". . . blot me I pray thee, out of Thy book which Thou hast written." And Paul, in his overwhelming love for his own nation, appeals to the honesty of his conviction, witnessed to by his conscience and by the Holy Spirit "that he could wish himself accursed from Christ for his kinsmen according to the flesh." Could love and passion for men's redemption have gone further than this? Unique men, made so by God for our encouragement and inspiration!

It is a curious thing that the chosen of God, the apostles, should have had to bear the brunt of Satanic antagonism. The Corinthians, according to Paul's words of burning eloquence, were having the best of both worlds apparently. With the prospect of eternal bliss they also enjoyed present prosperity in worldly things. But the apostles were "always delivered unto death for Jesus' sake; that the life of Jesus might be manifest in those who believed." The shepherd, not the sheep, must suffer hardship, inconvenience and death if need be. The leader, not the follower, is the one who has to pay the price in blood and tears, toil and sweat, sacrifice and self-abnegation. If he does not, not only will he fail, but those whom he seeks to save, to lead, to shepherd, will fail and fall.

So Paul wrote to the Galatians, "My little children, of whom I travail in birth again, until Christ be formed in you" (Galatians 4:19). In addition to the things that were without: hunger, physical danger and betrayal by false brethren; spiritual conflict for the Church (Colossians 2:1), constant prayer (1 Thessalonians 3:10), humility (Acts 20:19), many tears (Acts 20:19,31), were the price of soulwinning to Paul. Paul's language is dramatic, but he does not dramatise, when he writes about his constant contact with death: "death worketh in us, but life in you, as it is written: for thy sake we are killed all the day long; we are accounted as sheep for the slaughter."

But we must admit that Luke in writing the record of Paul's adventures for Christ "plays it cool." In keeping with the general tenor of Bible writing he does not seek dramatic effect; he does not need to, the events speak for themselves. Yet how different would be our recording today! Only Paul's references to his sufferings for Christ in 2 Corinthians 11 give us a hint that in Acts the half has not been told. Among other tribulations and sufferings, the record of his being shipwrecked five times, three times beaten with rods, five times scourged by the Jews, presents us with his living crucifixion, his willing delivering himself over to death that others might live — the most touching and stirring record of Christian biography imagineable. His prayers, his tears, his love, his concern for men and women move our hearts. Thank God the record has been left to us; it has been left for our example who are at the end of this dispensation. No wonder he was able to write a few months,

Priorities for 1973

by Ramon Hunston

District Superintendent, Welsh Presbytery

THE closing of one year and the beginning of another year is a time for re-evaluation. In looking back over 1972 it is necessary to ask what we have accomplished. At the dawn of 1973 the consideration of our priorities is of paramount importance. There are many calls upon us, ministers, churches and our Movement. In the twentieth century situation, it is possible to become so involved that we lose spiritual impetus in the morass of details.

What have we accomplished in our personal witness, in our local church programme or in our Movement policy? This is the key to our future, for one fundamental factor stands out: WE ACCOMPLISH WHAT WE EMPHASISE! It is vital, then, for 1973 to evaluate our emphasis.

When looking into the New Testament for the pattern of a living, vibrant church, it is inspiring to trace the emphases of the Early Church. What was uppermost in their mind and of first principle in their programme was the secret of New Testament accomplishment.

They emphasised their Purpose

The Christians in the book of Acts lived and breathed evangelism. The Apostles remembered their calling. Jesus had said, "I will make you fishers of men". They lived by their commission: "As the Father hath sent me, even so send I you". This passion was communicated to the believers.

Evangelism was their emphasis. They helped in the social problems that arose in their day and the care of the churches at times weighed heavily on them, but nothing was allowed to take priority over evangelism. Note the growth of the Church in the Acts: "The Lord added daily" (2:47); "believers were the more added to the Lord... multitudes" (5:14); "the number of the disciples multiplied in Jerusalem greatly" (6:7); "Then had the churches rest throughout all Judea and Galilee, and... were multiplied" (9:31); "the word of the Lord grew and multiplied" (12:24); "the churches... increased in number daily" (16:5). This phenomenal growth was because they were prepared to realise their Pentecostal purpose: "Ye shall receive power... ye shall be witnesses".

Evangelism was a passion with the believers in the New Testament Church. Even in persecution they went everywhere preaching. The momentum of those pioneer days continued for some considerable time so that in the fourth century, Jerome could record that water baptism was the ordination of the laity to the work of God. Christian living and evangelism were synonymous. It is significant in the Bible narrative that not only did the church numbers grow, but also the number of the churches!

They emphasised their Power

This attitude is crystallised by Peter after the healing of the lame man when he stated that the power was of God (Acts 3:12-16) and by Paul's declaration to the Corinthian Church (1 Corinthians 2:1-5).

Their evangelism was powerful and life-transforming because it recognised the supernatural as normal in their experiences. The Pentecostal blessing was the expected endowment of every believer and was taught as such. The Early Church, no doubt, had their plans and programmes, but, running through like a living flame, was the Holy Spirit's power: "It seemed good to the Holy Ghost and to us".

They emphasised their Potential

In the New Testament situation, the Church's resources were meagre. They had no large funds, no far-reaching influence politically or religiously, yet they turned the world upside down. When evaluating their situation, they recognised that, through the power of God, their impact could be far beyond their natural resources. The potential of a man, a church or a Movement, motivated and empowered by the Holy Spirit cannot be measured.

The Pentecostal church today can make a colossal impact on our society and the time is right! God is

Thoughts from the Book of Genesis

6 The Longsuffering of God (Genesis 6:3).

by F. Lavender

THE justice of God would have been vindicated by a swift, overwhelming visitation of anger that would have destroyed the vile generation in which Noah lived, yet, so amazing is His longsuffering, that He not only gave men another 120 years in which they might repent, but He also commanded the righteous Noah to proclaim repentance to them and to give clear warning by the building of the Ark. The fact that in the end only Noah's immediate family was saved only makes the longsuffering of God the more remarkable.

As you think of the sin and vileness that is all around us, do you ever wonder why God does not bring immediate destruction on our age? I have heard people say: "I don't know why God allows such horrible things! Why doesn't He wipe them all out?" There is no doubt that mankind is worthy of the visitation of Divine wrath, yet still His longsuffering waits, offering repentance and salvation to men and women.

I have to confess that, if the judgment of God had fallen when Christians of an earlier generation were asking: "Why doesn't God send judgment?", then I, too, would have been eternally shut out of God's presence, and so would many who read these words. Perhaps judgment is being restrained to allow a loved-one of yours, a neighbour, workmate or friend, to have opportunity to repent and be saved. While the longsuffering of God is still waiting and restraining deserved judgment, let us give ourselves earnestly, urgently and lovingly to the task of giving the Good News of Jesus Christ to men and women. When we see folk returning to Christ we will understand why God still waits patiently.

Children's Corner

On Display

Words and drawing by Sheila Price

"What shall we buy with the money grandmother gave us?" asked Brian.

"I don't know," said Carol. "Let's ask mummy if we may look around the shops."

"Yes, you can go to the shops," said Mrs. Brown, "but remember to keep to the pavement, won't you?"

The children walked along, looking in all the shop windows as they passed. "Here's the sweet shop," said Carol. "I shall go in and buy a bar of chocolate for mummy."

"And I'll get a packet of peppermints for daddy," said Brian. "He likes the very hot ones!"

When the children reached the corner of the street, they noticed Mr. Jones, the fruiterer, placing some boxes outside his shop. "Hello, Mr. Jones," said Brian. "What are you doing with the boxes?"

"I am going to fill them with fruit," said Mr. Jones, "as I do every morning."

"Why put them outside, Mr. Jones?" asked Carol.

"Well," said Mr. Jones, "people can see the fruit better if it is displayed outside!"

Mr. Jones gave the fruit a good shine with a cloth before placing it neatly in the boxes. Soon all the boxes were filled and outside the shop was an attractive display of apples, oranges, pears and bananas.

Our Saviour and Friend wants us to show to others His wonderful love, joy, peace and grace, the Fruit of the Spirit. We are attracted to the nice, juicy oranges and pears on display in a fruit shop and we can attract others to the Saviour by displaying the Fruit of His Spirit in our lives.

PRIORITIES FOR 1973—from page 8

beginning to pour out His Spirit both abroad and in our own land in a manner that we could not envisage a few years ago. The potential of the smallest church is tremendous in the Pentecostal enduement. "If God be for us" is the stimulus to the realisation of our potential.

Looking forward into 1973, with all its opportunities, let us take a fresh look at what we emphasise. What occupies most time in our 1973 church programme? What predominates on our Presbytery agendas? The answer to such queries will determine our progress in 1973 for WE ACCOMPLISH WHAT WE EMPHASISE!

The Field Superintendent's

THE NEW IN THE '72 NEWS

by R. B. Chapman

DURING the year which is now closing, we have seen much that is new in our field of service and it is a real joy to review the position for you, our readers.

NEW PASTORATES. In 1972 no less than fifty brethren have taken up fresh appointments in our movement. You may try to appreciate all that this involves in the uprooting of home, the dislocation of schooling, the adjustment to changed circumstances and different personalities, and the responsibility of engagement in unknown fields of labour. Perhaps you will be kind enough to remember in your prayers all those, whether they be pastors or the flocks, who are involved in these necessary upheavals for the continuance of the work of the Kingdom.

NEW PASTORS. Since last January no less than twenty-three new personalities have entered the ranks of our ministry, either in a full-time or in an honorary capacity. Several of these have graduated through our own college, others have been trained in other seminaries and some have joined us from other spheres of service. Among these we have the following brethren whom we welcome as co-workers: J.A. Austin, I. Bilby, S. Blake, L. Bowring, N.C. Broomhead, E.A. Cole, R. Cotter, G.J. Fearn, J.K. Gardiner, E. Gaudion, B. Grist, J.A. Hamilton, R.K. Harvey, G. Hawes, B. Killick, L. Magee, O. Morgan, T.B.D. Ritchie, R. Smith, C.H. Thomas, S. Tunney, S.J. Ward, and G.S. Wyborn. May God bless the sincere efforts of every one of these labourers and use them in the winning of souls.

NEW ORDINANDS. This year at our very special Ordination Service at Clapham, eight probationers, in the persons of M.J. Baker, D. Beresford, E.T. Carter, A.L. Hawkes, M. Jones, R.T. McDonald, M.E. Sherwood and B.H. Tween, were ordained to the ministry. We trust that a unique anointing of the Holy Spirit will rest in a particular way upon these, His servants.

NEW CHURCHES. We express our gratitude to God and our thanks to those faithful workers who have made it possible for new territories to be opened up and new congregations to be established. A pioneer effort in the sadly disrupted province of Ulster has resulted in the establishing of a church in Antrim. A crusade in Broadstairs has enabled us to unfurl the Elim banner in this area of Kent where we now occupy a disused Methodist Chapel. A similar effort in Essex has produced a nucleus of believers seeking for the full blessing of the Holy Ghost in Epping. Local initiative by the Exeter church has resulted in the opening of a testimony in Exmouth where a hired hall is used for services. The witness in South Shields, following a Spring crusade, continues to grow with more converts baptised recently and fresh members received into the fellowship. A campaign in Weston-super-Mare, following a series of presbytery rallies, has resulted in the founding of a sound, virile church. As yet a permanent spiritual home has not been procured, but, in spite of the problems and challenges of different hired halls, the testimony continues to prosper. A group of Pentecostals in Burnham-on-Crouch has also decided to become an Elim Church.

Review of the Year

NEW BUILDINGS. During the past twelve months a very considerable building programme has been in operation throughout the Elim work. A few weeks ago a very functional building was opened in the military town of Aldershot. A tremendous amount of the work was carried out by local, voluntary labour in which the minister played a leading part. In Belfast a new road scheme necessitated the demolition of the old, and to our Movement the historic, Melbourne Street Church. As a result of this the Authorities had to reinstate the congregation in a splendid new building situated in close proximity to the old one, but in an equally vulnerable position amid the present troubles. The Bradford Church is now housed in a very modern complex of buildings which include ideal facilities for a play-school which has made the financing of the project viable. In the new town of Harlow, we have been holding services for some years in the British Legion Hall. We were grateful for this accommodation, but it was far from ideal. Now a small but suitable minor hall has been erected and land is available for a church building to be built at a later date. Some excellent Church of England premises came on the market at Leyton, London. Due to a satisfactory sale of the original building, which had severe limitations especially for Sunday school work, it was possible to purchase this church and the congregation has moved happily into this much more suitable home. An unused day school came available in Maghera, Northern Ireland. After certain improvements it has become ideal for the housing of the young church in this country town in troubled County Londonderry which is so much in the sad news these days. In 1915 the Elim work was born in Monaghan. This was before the drawing of the grimly disputed Border. Today Monaghan finds itself South of the Border in Eire, but this has not hindered the maintenance of the Elim witness throughout the years. Now established in a lovely new building, we trust that the work and the witness will be enlarged and empowered. Just as this material goes to print the Essex town of Rayleigh will see a new Elim Church building opened within its boundaries. It will replace the old spiritual home of treasured memories, but we trust that it will see the old in man replaced by the new in Christ. The Assembly at Stockton-on-Tees has gathered for several years in a large house adapted for the holding of services. Through hard work and sacrifice it became possible for a system-built church to be erected on a large housing estate. Already the attendances have increased phenomenally. In Watford, our church has been worshipping out on an estate in a building that was erected nearly twenty years ago. Recently, a Methodist Church, centrally situated in the town, closed down. By planning a development of the old site it became possible to purchase this Church with all its advantageous facilities. Finally, West Bromwich, has seen such a tremendous face-lift and amendment to its previous premises that the old are no longer recognisable. Established in these new surroundings the assembly should make real forward strides. We do not set our affections upon or our confidence in bricks and mortar, but when Jesus Christ selected premises for the first Communion Service He required, "a large, upper room, furnished". Rightly related our places of worship can be used to further the cause for which we stand.

NEW PRESIDENT. From last May we have had a new President, in the person of the Editor of the EVANGEL, T.W. Walker. His abilities are ever at our disposal for use on the Field and we would wish him well as he visits our churches weekend by weekend throughout his year of office.

1973 Challenge

by Leslie Wigglesworth

Secretary, Elim Missionary Society

THE advent of another year does not alter the challenge of the Lord to ourselves and to the world. This has always been declared and man has constantly been referred to the choice between good and evil, blessing and cursing, righteousness and unrighteousness, witnessing or not witnessing, and so on.

There are special challenges relative to this particular year. Christians are conscious of a moving of the Spirit outside the organised denominations and we are challenged inwardly as to why this should be. The Kingdom of God is extending and for this we are happy, but the successes are not always where we are!

The "Third World" is challenging us and, as the nations which have sought so hard for independence now enigmatically link up with other states with a different shade of politics, we wonder how long we shall be able to preach the gospel. Not only are foreigners discredited, but so also is the Word of God and national ministers expect their preaching to be curtailed. So the liberty of independence produces its own chains. How thankful we are that the work of the Holy Spirit cannot be stifled by man's insinuations either in the organised church or in politics.

We received a thrilling, challenging letter from John Prentice writing of the progress of the work around Madras. The authorities want to restrict the importing of foreign currency, thus crippling the work of missions and charitable organisations. The British Government inadvertently helps this objective, because we now have to request official permission for every pound sent abroad. This challenge is a great one, but meanwhile the Holy Spirit continues His work of conversion. John Prentice writes of several hundred decisions, public baptisms in water and baptisms in the Holy Ghost and we rejoice. We must believe that the supply of material necessities will not be restricted by the international attitudes nor by our own limiting of support.

The challenge of the Far East has so grown that world politics affect the preaching of the gospel. New agreements between East and West have completely reversed the safeguards offered to Taiwan, Hong Kong and other countries independent of communism. Again our Western governments aid the encroaching restrictions on the freedom of the Church.

The challenge of radio will be encountered and plans are materialising for regular programmes to be broadcast in Ghana and Brazil. The former will be on the air shortly and it is hoped that the national network will be the medium for emissions. In Brazil local facilities have made it possible for the Londrina Pastor regularly to preach the gospel on the air. We are in touch with men in India who are preparing programmes to be used over Radio Seychelles and a Madras station. In all these enterprises for Jesus the E.W.M.A. plays a great role, for the sisters are providing much needed funds through the Trans-mitting the Truth Project. We are testing the possibilities of using radio to augment the evangelistic efforts of the MacInnes family and national workers. So 1973 will be an exciting year for ether evangelism.

Christian literature, its production and distribution have always been included in the planning of the Society and the New Year will give us new opportunities to extend this already virile project. Existing institutions such as Emmanuel Press and the Ghana productions are already tackling Christian newspapers and tracts, Bible studies, correspondence courses and so on. To augment their programmes, a new press will go into production in Madras. Ambitious nationals with our missionaries will translate books, correspondence courses, Bible studies and every kind of Christian literature into Tamil, Hindu and other India tongues. It is a challenge which we must meet and the Elim Missionary Society and the active auxiliary of the E.W.M.A. are keen to see the passing of a volume of Christian truths into the hands of millions who sit in darkness.

What a varied effort is needed to counter the subtleties of the evil forces in the world. They are powerful and extensive, but our hope is in God and we choose Him, our Lord Jesus, to lead us to sure victories.

BOOK REVIEW

The Best in Life, selections from the ministry of A. Lindsay Glegg, chosen and edited by John L. Fear. Published by Word Books, price 45p, postage and packing 4p extra.

LINDSAY GLEGG, now in his nineties, is a living legend. He is the youngest old man many of us have ever met. See him at functions attracted to and attracting young people. Hear him, especially in Second Advent meetings, his rather light-toned voice taking on new power. Watch his infectious smile as he tells a good story to illustrate his point. Observe him over the years as chairman of nearly everything evangelical.

He has made his mark in countless ways, none more so than that he is perhaps the most frequently quoted evangelical writer without the quoters realising or remembering the source! As this excellent paperback shows, what he wrote in earlier days has become evangelical folklore.

A few unfortunate errors irritate, like "chat" for "that" on page 15 and the omission of "who" (making it "no one believes in Christ") on page 24, but this is otherwise a well-chosen compendium of the writings of the irrepressible Glegg.

It should sell in thousands.

A Lasting Miracle

MRS. Enid Hadfield, now living in Whyall, South Australia, lived in Oxford, England, when evangelist P.S. Brewster conducted a pioneer campaign there. For eight years she suffered from chronic colitis. As she was medically certified as incurable, an additional disability pension was given to her by the Ministry of Pensions.

On April 7th, 1953, Mr. Brewster prayed for Mrs. Hadfield and the Lord instantly healed her. When she realised what God had done for her, Mrs. Hadfield returned her disability pension book stating that it was no longer needed.

She writes that the Ministry of Pensions "replied saying that I could have another medical when I might want the pension back! No need for that!"

Following this miracle, Mrs. Hadfield followed the call of God to leave England and served the Lord for seven years in Peru, before going to Australia.

Mrs. Hadfield comments, "When our Lord does a job, it is perfect."

An Outline

New Things for a New Year

"Behold I make all things new" (Revelation 21:5).

IN a creation blighted and marred by sin it is God's intention to make all things new. He has begun with people, a new people; when they are perfected, He will deal with the physical creation.

1. New Men (2 Corinthians 5:13). "Put on the new man" (Ephesians 4:24).
2. New Pleasures. New wine in new bottles (Matthew 9:17; Acts 2:15).
3. New Tongues (Mark 16:17).
4. New Songs (Psalm 40:3, Revelation 5:9).
5. New Homes (John 14:2,3).

A Poem

The New Year

I AM the New Year, and I come to you pure and unstained, Fresh from the hand of God.
Each day, a precious pearl, to you is given,
That you must string upon the silver-thread of life.
Once strung, can never be unthreaded, but stays
An undying record of your faith and skill.
Each golden minute link you then must weld into the chain of hours

That is no stronger than its weakest link.
Into your hands is given all the wealth and power
To make your life just what you will.
I give to you, free and unstinted, twelve glorious months
Of soothing rain and sunshine golden;
The days for work and rest, the nights for peaceful slumber.
All that I have I give with love unspoken,
All that I ask — you keep the faith unbroken!

J.D. Templeton.

A Quotation

"Till Death Thine endless mercies seal"

A LADY once said to Rev. John Wesley: "Suppose you knew that you were to die tomorrow night at twelve o'clock; how would you spend the intervening time?" "Why", he replied, "just as I intend to spend it now. I should preach this evening at Gloucester and again at five tomorrow morning. After that I should take a ride to Tewkesbury, preach in the afternoon, and meet the society in the evening. I should then repair to my friend Martin's, who expects to entertain me, converse and pray with the family as usual, retire to my room at ten o'clock, commend myself to my heavenly Father, lie down to rest, and wake up in glory."

From T. H. Stevenson

I DO not know whether you will be reading my words in 1972 or 1973. It scarcely matters, as the most noticeable change will be simply a matter of dates.

We are not despondent or depressed when viewing our own lands of Great Britain and N.Ireland. We express the opinion that there seems no obvious reason to suppose that "the new is better than the old", or obversely that the new will not be like "the good old days". From a merely human viewpoint, with the passage of time we conclude with Solomon, that "There is nothing new under the sun". Even as God said to Noah, "While the earth remaineth, seedtime and harvest, and cold and heat, and summer and winter, and day and night shall not cease", so much else both good and bad will not cease.

This is not to say that, if there is no cessation or nothing new, there is no change. Certainly Henry Lyte was of this opinion when he wrote, "Change and decay in all around I see", but, when unsure of all else, he found hope and comfort as he continued, "O, Thou who changest not, abide with me". In that moment he looked beyond the horizon and above the sun to the realm and to the Person of whom James writes: "Every good gift and every perfect gift is from above, and cometh down from the Father of lights, with whom is no variableness, neither shadow of turning. Of His own will begat He us with the word of truth, that we should be a kind of firstfruits of His creatures" (James 1:17,18), inspired and inspiring words as we enter another year. We look above to our Heavenly Father who is perfect. Everything that is from Him above is good and perfect. Everything that is good and perfect is from Him that is above. With God "There is no variation or shadow due to change" (R.S.V.). He wondrously makes us new and changes us; we are born again by the word of truth. A day is coming when our Lord will "make all things new", for we are but "a kind of firstfruits of His creatures".

PRAYER and PRAISE

by F. H. Coleman

AT the season of the year when we celebrate the birth of Christ, our minds go to Israel and to the little town of Bethlehem. Later our thoughts go to Jerusalem, to Herod, the wise men and the presentation of Jesus in the Temple to do for Him after the custom of the Law.

The Bible exhorts us to pray for the peace of Jerusalem, a city which is assuming more importance as the years go by. It is a must in these days. I trust that you have remembered this old, yet new city before the Throne of Grace.

Many of us were privileged to live to see the State of Israel reborn. Next May there will be celebrations to mark the twenty-fifth anniversary of the new State. This can also be a time of great danger for the Israelis. Today it can be the terror of letter bombs, hijacks, hostages, but tomorrow some other fiendish plot may be put into operation. For the May celebration, evil may be scheming death and destruction. We must pray for Israel in these days.

There is a promise of blessing for those who pray for the peace of Jerusalem. Like me, I am sure you like to receive the Lord's blessing. The promised blessing is prosperity, something we all like and want, yet it is possible to prosper and for forces like inflation to eat away what we have gathered in prosperity. We have wages but alas, there are holes in our money-bags and soon so much is lost. Without doubt, this is a promise that the one who prospers will be able to enjoy to the full that which has been gathered in.

Remember to pray for the peace of Jerusalem.

The City Philanthropist

WHEN my husband first left his home town, he was sent by the firm who employed him to live and work in the City of London. His new abode was the firm's hostel in Charterhouse Square and the large warehouse in Cheapside became his place of employment until he entered the Elim ministry. Naturally enough, when viewing on television the scenes of the City of London, when Her Majesty the Queen rode to the Guildhall to attend the Silver Wedding celebration banquet, he recalled the days when he frequented those well-known thoroughfares. As the commentator remarked, Hitler & Co. with their bombs devastated about sixty acres of the ancient city. Neither the hostel nor the firm's premises is standing today.

It was on January 1st, 1932, that my husband commenced as a trainee commercial traveller with the firm of Copestake, Moore & Crompton, Ltd. and discovered that one of the founders of the company had made provision in his will for all young men employees to become members of the City of London Y.M.C.A. in Aldersgate Street and that it was his express wish that they should regularly attend the weekly Bible class. You can imagine how happy my husband was at this arrangement, for, having left the warm fellowship of our newly-formed Elim Church in Sheffield, he was eager for Christian friends and Bible Study. Having a Methodist background, he was thrilled to worship near the very place where John Wesley's heart was "strangely warmed", that hallowed spot where Wesley had his conversion experience.

Who was this George Moore who cared so deeply for the spiritual welfare of the young men employed by the firm he helped to establish? He hailed from the Border country of Scotland, a true countryman and in his youth one of its best wrestlers. He was first a commercial traveller who visited every town of importance in Britain and America. He later rose to be a partner in the firm he served, became a Sheriff of the City of London, was offered a seat in parliament and earned a great reputation as a philanthropist. Although he was not converted until the age of forty-five years, God had spoken to him on at least two occasions, first when he was a frightened, grief-stricken little boy of six on the night after his mother's funeral, and secondly on a Christmas morning when an apprentice in Wigton. After a night of gambling he slipped into bed, but not to sleep, for the carol singers came by and, in his own words, "The sweet music awoke me to a sense of my wrong-doing. I felt overwhelmed with penitence and remorse. I thought of my dear father, and feared that I might break his heart and bring down his grey hairs in sorrow to the grave." He remained in bed all day thinking. "I resolved," he says "to give up card-playing and gambling" and, true to his pledge, he never again touched a card or hazarded a coin. Finally, God showed him that success, popularity and his great acts of generosity could not atone for his sins. With bitter tears, he sought the way of repentance for two years and then the glorious words of John 5:24 brought him from spiritual death to life eternal.

Here is the testimony in his own words: "I am determined for the future not to perplex my mind with seeking for some extraordinary impressions, signs, or tokens of the new birth. I believe the gospel. I love the Lord Jesus Christ. I receive with confidence the promise that 'he that heareth My word, and believeth on Him that sent Me, hath everlasting life, and shall not come into condemnation, but is passed from death unto life.'" George Moore was a transformed man and every New Year's Day he wrote on the fly-leaf of his new pocket book

What I spent I had;

What I saved I lost;

What I gave I have.

As we step out into a New Year may we who are Christ's followers determine to spend and be spent in His service. If you have read my page and do not know George Moore's Saviour, believe His word and accept all its wonderful certainty right now and you will be assured of a happy New Year.

or maybe a few weeks before his martyrdom, "I am now ready to be offered, and the time of my departure is at hand. I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith." (2 Timothy 4:6,7). He had always been offered, always on the altar; death was but the climax of the continual offering, the drink offering poured out to the Lord.

No doubt his whole life was determined by the beautiful words he wrote to a troublesome and recalcitrant Church, "Yes, and I will very gladly spend and be spent for you; though the more I love you, the less I be loved." "I have you in my heart," he could write to another church.

A deacon concerned about the soul of a fellow business man, and baffled by his agnostic arguments, could only exclaim with tears in his eyes, "Man, I can't answer your arguments but I have a great concern for your soul." The business man replied that he had never heard that argument before. Eventually, broken down by love and concern he yielded to Christ. Where reasoning failed, tears and concern won through.

The London Crusader Choir

THE Choir, formed from the ranks of the Elim Crusader Movement in January 1929, now embarks on its forty-fifth year of musical evangelism. The inauguration service was held in the old Clapham Church. Present were Pastors E.J. Phillips, R.E. Darragh and E.C. W. Boulton. Rapid expansion of the Elim evangelistic campaigns in and around London called for a group of dedicated Elim Crusaders who would make themselves available for immediate call for Christian music ministry in an efficient, proficient presentation. The choir's first public appearance was in the Royal Albert Hall on Easter Monday, 1929 and they have been present at every Albert Hall Elim meeting since then.

Early days had their problems and their critics. Competent leadership and dedication and group discipline moulded the unit into a force of musical evangelists who have earned a forefront position for more than four decades in British gospel choral ministry. Every corner of the British Isles has been visited as well as fourteen visits overseas, including Scandinavia, Europe, Eire, Canada and U.S.A. From the ranks of the Choir sixteen of its one-time members serve or have served as full-time missionaries, while others serve as full-time workers in the homeland.

Throughout World War Two the choir never ceased its ministry despite tragic losses. During these sombre years the Crusader choir pioneered Elim's radio (and later T.V.) broadcasting. Their broadcasts now have reached the century and more.

Perhaps one of the greatest challenges of the choir and its founder-leader is the outstanding ministry in British prisons. The number of visits made run well into four figures involving visits to forty and over of H.M. prisons and Borstal Institutions. In June, 1973 the prison ministry will have completed forty years.

The Crusader Choir has never clouded its identity or moved away from its Pentecostal position and is internationally known for their relationship with the Elim Pentecostal Churches of Britain. The choir's first series of gramophone records (on the Elim label) were released in 1934 and recordings have continued to the very latest L.P. record just released, entitled "Souvenirs of Song." Many recordings have been made for and by invitation of the B.B.C. and other networks.

A vast, interesting story could be told of men and women won for Christ. The vanguard of pentecostalism in churches, chapels and cathedrals at home and abroad obtained because of the fulfilment of a vision for dedicated Elim Crusaders to go and tell. Like other areas of Christian activity today we find that "the fields are white unto harvest, but the labourers are few." Opportunities have never been greater, yet young men and women are not offering themselves and their talents for a ministry so varied and challenging. It is our prayer that some reading these illuminating facts will prayerfully consider such open doors for reaching the masses of untouched men and women. Here is a vocation for God in which you may well find your place like those early-day Elim Crusaders who magnificently responded.

*Fired by Love's immortal flame,
Called and consecrated in the Saviour's name,
Carrying the Gospel of redeeming grace,
Shewing paths of freedom to a sin-bound race,
WE ARE TORCHBEARERS!*

Will you help spread the light?

1972 in Retrospect

by Derek J. Green Youth Director, West Yorkshire Presbytery

WHAT are you going to do with your 1972 diary?

You have possibly got a new one now. The old one is useless. Wait a moment! It might not be as useless as you think. God told the prophet Jeremiah (8:6) that He was surprised that no one asked the question, "What have I done?" That would be a good question to ask ourselves before we throw our diaries away and start new ones.

Let's turn a few pages together on the last day of the year and ask ourselves, "What have I done?"

A student could be saved from failing exams if he asked this question early enough.

A businessman could possibly prevent bankruptcy by asking this question.

Many a young person could avoid future disaster by asking this question before going too far.

What have I done in 1972 for myself?

Do the pages of the diary record progress or deterioration in my spiritual life? Have I neglected my soul while catering for my body and mind? Have I deprived myself of God? Have many hours been filled with the things that did not last?

Perhaps we gave ourselves a few religious "pep pills" through the year? The diary reminds us of a convention or two, one or two special occasions when we got fired up, but we notice that the days and weeks slipped by and we missed out on so much. There was often a tennis game instead of the prayer meeting or overtime instead of the Bible study. Almost every day the alarm clock went off just too late to allow for a time with God.

It's a good thing to look back at the diary and see how many empty spaces there are. If we had to give account of what we were doing for much of the year, it would possibly be so trivial that we would have a job to recall it. Remember God says that He is surprised that we don't say more often, "What have I done?" Days soon stretch into weeks and weeks into months and months into years. Time rushes by. What have I done?

What have I done for others?

How many times did we help others? Many people are lonely and a visit, a little help, a lift to church in the car would have gone a long way, but the occasions were all too rare.

I wonder how many pages of our diary record winning a soul for Christ, or even trying to, by engaging in some aspect of witness?

Many a Christian mother would have welcomed the opportunity of getting out to a meeting if you had offered to baby sit for an evening.

What have I done for God?

Have I made the most of my life for God?

Have I developed my talents to serve Him?

Have I given Him my love?

Has my time been used in His service?

Have I been a good steward of my money?

Have I systematically given at least a tenth of my income to God's work?

What have I done in 1972?

Now might be a good time to fill in a few commitments for 1973 before the pages get filled with things that don't really matter.

R.A. Gull

Monday, January 1st, 1973 Philippians 1:1-11
"Being confident . . . because I have you in my heart" (vv.6,7).

PAUL displays a confidence in the early missionary outreach to heathen Europe because he had them in his heart. A strange reason for confidence is this! Is it strange, however, to believe in the power of Spirit-breathed prayer, God-given love (v.8), Christ-centred preaching?

Ought we not to share this confidence in our respective spheres as we face the open door of 1973? God give us hearts that are large enough to embrace the people to whom we are called (Acts 16:9,10), to cling with confidence to the conviction that God is able to complete what He has already begun.

Tuesday, January 2nd Philippians 1:12-18
"But I would ye should understand" (v.12).

WHAT blessed understanding is this! In an age of knowledge that is often bereft of understanding, Lord, help us to understand, to be understanding and to be understood.

Paul, with that anointed understanding, saw through the confused situation outlined here to the essential fact: "Christ is preached" (v.18), and he rejoiced.

Lord, grant to us that understanding that lends to mere knowledge of facts, that greater depth of insight and feeling.

Wednesday, January 3rd Philippians 1:19-26
"To remain in the flesh is more necessary on your account" (v.24, R.S.V.).

PAUL had more than one account to balance before God. He was always ready to debit his own personal account to bring the others into credit balance.

After a brief hesitation (v.23), Paul makes the down payment in the currency of conviction: "That your rejoicing may be more abundant" (v.26). Jesus, that great Settler of accounts, said, "I am come that they might have life . . . more abundantly."

Lord, grant me the desire and ability to keep each account in my care in abundant credit.

Thursday, January 4th Philippians 1:27-30; 2:1-4
"As it becometh the gospel of Christ" (v.27).
WHEN Paul pleads for conduct that matches creed, it is surely no accident that he demands first in the evidence of God's power, unity of spirit, mind, and purpose.

In a world of rebellion and mutual distrust, God grant us that harmony among ourselves as proof to us of our salvation and as evidence to others of their impending perdition.

Friday, January 5th Philippians 2:5-11
"Let this mind be in you" (v.5).

"HE HIMSELF": note carefully the threefold repetition of those words and let this mind be in you which was also in Christ Jesus.

Without reputation or rights, yet with great responsibility — how foreign is this to the spirit of man, but how dear to the mind of Christ! Do we dare to let such a mind loose in our lives? Dare we indeed do otherwise?

"Wherefore God" says v.9. God ever keeps His side of the "bargain".

Saturday, January 6th Philippians 2:12-18
"Without murmurings and disputings" (v.14).

LET us never stoop to use these bloodied weapons of the world. Paul, writing in a totalitarian state on its way to social suicide, and with the rich experience of one who "turned the world upside down", recommends a better way. He tells us to cultivate consciences as to the will and pleasure of God, then, from lives that are clean, to hold forth the Word of life.

God grant that we may know the joy that comes from such a service of faith.

Sunday, January 7th Philippians 2:19-30
"For I have no man like-minded, who will naturally care for your state" (v.20).

DID it all come naturally to Timothy? Almost certainly it did not. It was most assuredly that new nature, that supernatural feeling imparted to him, that Christ-reflecting nature that had displaced his own. Lord, give me, too, Your own nature in exchange for my own, for I, too, can bear burdens, share problems, and care for the souls of others.

"I supposed it necessary to send to you . . . he that ministered to my wants." (v.25). As Paul displayed that same nature, even so, Lord, may I.

FOLLOWING THE PLAN

Manager of Grenehurst Press

A review of the progress of Grenehurst Press during 1972

WE review the past year in gratitude to God for all that has been accomplished through Grenehurst Press. Thousands of leaflets bearing either the message of salvation or conveying instruction to Christians have been printed and despatched. This year has also seen the production of our first paperback, which we trust, under the blessing of God, will be the forerunner of many others. Our greatest achievement, of course, is the production of the ELIM EVANGEL, which we took over with the September 23rd edition.

There are moments of challenge that come to us in life and, when they come, we must respond. We may not feel completely prepared and we may not be as confident as we sound, but, if opportunity for service knocks on the door, we must open that door and go through.

There may be many pointers to the times of God, but, when the hour strikes, the clanging will be decisive. Thus it was on this occasion. Then faith swung into operation. Nobody suggested any difficulty or mentioned any hypothetical problem. All concerned had evidently come to see that this was what God wanted done and were therefore prepared to give it their prayerful support.

I had every confidence that those who are working with me at the Press would do their utmost to make the project a success. Though it has meant working long hours, sometimes late into the night, as had been expected, it has been done to the glory of God and without complaint.

The Editor has certainly put us on our mettle. Had we run late in production at any time we could not have resorted to the excuse of having received late copy - it has always been well on time.

Recently, mainly for the production of the EVANGEL, we purchased a Hobson finishing machine. As you can see from the photograph, it is a long, slender machine and is temporarily occupying the despatch room at Headquarters until our new premises are ready. The flat printed pages of the EVANGEL are stacked in their respective hoppers on one end of the machine and the completed EVANGELS are taken off at the opposite end. We all share a deep satisfaction as the completed magazines pile up at the delivery end ready to carry their message of encouragement and inspiration to thousands of Christians in this country and overseas.

You will be interested to hear that an extension at the rear of Headquarters Offices is being built in which to house the Press. You can see from the photograph that the walls are almost roof high. We are expecting the building, complete with darkroom, studio, office and machine-room, to be ready early in the new year. These are exciting days for us all and we are eager to see the completion of the building and to hear the rhythm of the machinery.

We want the Press to make a worthwhile contribution to the salvation of men and women. Please join in prayer to this end. We dare not miss our opportunity to evangelise through the printed page.
